Y. M. C. A. DIRECTORS REPLY TO CRITICISM OF J. A. M'GAUGHEY

Issue Statement Following Charges That Association Neglects Work.

Other Branches of Work Are Uplifting If Not Purely Religious.

Disbursements for the Years 1910 and 1911 Are Compared.

In reply to the recent criticism of the Young Men's Christian association in which it has been charged that the attention paid to the religious end of the work here is insufficient, the board of directors of the association this morning issued a signed statement of its policies in regard to the conduct of the work here.

The substance of the statement is that the directors have been in the past and intend to be in the future, governed by sound business principles in the administration of the association. They also believe that the branches of the association work which are not essentially religous in their tendencies are still uplifting, and are the most valuable possible means of bringing men under influences which make a religious appeal possible.

The statement contains no comparison of the amounts spent for religous and other branches of the work. The total amount to be spent during the present year will be over $62,000, of which $6,000 is to be raised by popular subscription.

The statement in full is as follows:

"The Young Men's Christian association, as its name implies, is essentially and primarily a religious organization.

"The local association has undertaken a big work in this community. A few years ago it went before the people of the city and asked for a large sum of money for the purpose of broadening its work. The people responded quickly and liberally.

"The association now has a plant

MILL CITY MAN IS RACING DEATH

F. L. Gray Returning From Europe to Bedside of His Son.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—In a race against death, Frederick L. Gray, head of a Minneapolis manufacturing company, is on a train bound from New York City to the bedside of his son, Martin, in this city. Mr. Gray sailed for Europe on the Lusitania July 19. A day or so later the boy, while diving in Lake Calhoun, struck a dredge heap. His neck was broken. Paralyzed from his head down, the lad clung to life, to the surprise of physicians and surgeons.

The father was reached by cable. Turning back, he arrived in New York yesterday on the steamer George Washington. He is due to arrive in Minneapolis tonight. The boy is conscious and maintains that he will recover, but physicians say there is no hope for him.

WATTERSON OR UNIT PLAN

Editor Wants to Know Whether He Is "Dead and Damned."

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 15.—Delegates from all parts of Kentucky to the Democratic state platform convention to be held here this afternoon, must decide for Henry Watterson, who is leading the fight against the extension of the county unit law, or for the county unit and against Watterson.

The editor of the Courier Journal, himself a delegate from this district, today threw down the gauntlet. He referred to opposition to Former Governor Beckham when that candidate for senator defeated Former Governor McCreary at a state primary to nominate, and declared the same influences he fought then now seek to extend the county unit law and eventually bring about prohibition.

Watterson States Issue.

"But," he said, "the plan to repudiate and humiliate me, merely because I am a Democrat, well within his right and his duty as a Democratic journalist, leaves me no alternative than to appeal to you and the party with the facts and to have my sentence and conviction, if you so decree, executed with your eyes wide open, so that I may know, and all men may

SAYS BERLIN WILL ACCEPT PEACE PACT

COUNT VON BERNSTORFF, German Ambassador to the United States.

"BREED WAR, NOT PEACE"

Senate Committee So Reports on Arbitration Treaties.

German Willingness to Enter Pact Told By Ambassador.

Washington, Aug. 15.—The arbitration treaties with Great Britain and France, recently sent to the senate by President Taft, are characterized by the senate committee on foreign relations as "breeders of war and not of peace" in a written report presented to the senate today. The report was prepared by Senator Lodge of Massachusetts.

Germany Is Willing.

Germany has accepted the general principles for an arbitration treaty with the United States as laid down in a tentative outline of the convention submitted by Secretary of State Knox to Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, several weeks ago.

This was indefinitely learned today at the conclusion of a conference between the secretary and the ambassador.

NEGRO WANTS NO SOCIAL EQUALITY

Denver, Colo., Aug. 15.—"The negro does not ask for social equality," declared Dr. William J. Tomkins, a negro physician of Kansas City, replying yesterday to an address of welcome by Governor Shafroth to the delegates to the National Negro Educational congress.

"We abhor the mere expression of social equality as the average white man sees it," Dr. Thomkins said. "We ask no special favors, but we do ask for a square deal to make opportunities to men. The negro is here to stay. He and the white men are tied together by location, by education, by language, by custom and by blood. They cannot be separated if they would."

Negroes Are Fleeing From Other Towns in That State.

Durant, Okla., Aug. 15.—All was quiet in Durant today following a night of wild excitement. Many members of an armed posse of 500 men, who met a midnight freight train which a negro mob had boarded at Atoka, Okla., remained on guard all night. Nearly $200 worth of ammunition was sold here last night.

More than half the negro population of Caddo, Okla., has fled from there and others are leaving. Colbert, Okla., also reports a large exodus of negroes.

RUSBY TELLS OF CONTRACT

Dr. Baldwin Says Chief Merely Copied Methods of Wilson.

Washington, Aug. 15.—Dr. Henry H. Rusby, dean of the New York college of pharmacy, whose employment as a government drug expert at $1,600 a year has brought criticism and threatened dismissal upon Dr. H. W. Wiley, chief of the bureau of chemistry of the department of agriculture, and his associates, testified today before the house committee which is investigating the matter.

"Are you connected with the government service?" asked Representative Floyd.

"I have been," said Dr. Rusby; "but I don't know whether I am now or not."

"Have you had any notice of dismissal given you?"

Pay Is Held Up.

"No, but I have not received any salary lately and my expense accounts are all held up," said Dr. Rusby.

Dr. Rusby said that he received $20

POPE PIUS IS "NO WORSE"

Sisters Are Tricked By Reporter Who Sought Latest News.

Rome, Aug. 15.—The cool air of the early morning helped to freshen the pope, who appeared to be no worse than yesterday. Prof. Marchiafava, the consulting doctor at the Vatican, explained that the pontiff's restlessness during the night was due perhaps to the fact that he had slept longer than usual yesterday afternoon. Moreover, the restlessness might be described as impatience at an invalid life, which is really a symptom of convalescence.

An incident amusing to some, but annoying to the sisters of the pope, is related today. The sisters, who have been besieged by newspaper men and photographers, have become unapproachable to those wishing information regarding the pontiff's condition for public use. Late yesterday a reporter disguised as an inspector for the gas company entered their home, and after examining the meter and the pipes, humbly inquired about the holy father.

Told the Inspector.

The sisters, mistaking the man for a devout individual anxious for the pontiff's health, answered candidly. A few hours later they were chagrined to see every word they had spoken published in the Gironale Di Italia.

This morning a genuine clerk from the gas company's office, who had not read the Gironale Di Italia, visited the home of the sisters in the regular performance of his duty. No sooner had he explained his mission than he was overwhelmed by a torrent of Venetian remonstrances. The unhappy clerk was at a loss to know how he had given offense.

METERS STOP BIG WASTE OF CITY WATER

Semi-Annual Report Shows Large Gain in Cash Receipts.

Statistics Also Show Economy in Consumption of Gas.

The receipts of the water and light department show an increase of $10,195.74, or nearly 11 per cent, for the first six months of the present year as compared with the first six months of last year, according to the semi-annual report of the board of water and light commissioners, submitted to the council last evening.

The amount of water pumped also shows a gain of 3½ per cent for the same period. The reason given for the increase of the cash received over the amount of water pumped is the installation of meters. The report says that they are being put in about the city at the approximate rate of 1,000 per year. Which shows that the use of the meters brings the city more money than the flat rate.

Gas consumption showed an increase of 8,977,733 cubic feet or 7 per cent, coming in May, June and July. Statistics of the department showed that although the department had 839 more customers in December, 1910 than in December, 1909, there was less gas consumed, the comparative consumptions of families in several districts showing that economy was practiced.

The total receipts of the department for the first six months of this year are given as $258,274.01 and the total

RUNAWAY HEIRESS AND HER HUSBAND

MR. AND MRS. "JACK" GERAGHTY.

Springfield, Mass., Aug. 15.—Mr. and Mrs. John Edward Paul Geraghty, the Newport couple, who eloped and were married in Central Village, Conn., last week, were remarried in this city today by Rev. Father M. A. Kelley of the Roman Catholic cathedral of St. Michael. Mrs. Joseph Harris, a cousin of Geraghty, and her husband, were the only witnesses of the ceremony, which was performed at the parish house. Mrs. Geraghty sent the following letter, from here, to her mother, Mrs. Amos Tuck French:

"Dear Mamma: I am very sorry that I have caused you all this worry, but I will never regret marrying Jack to the last day of my life. I love him better than anything in the world and I would rather live in a dog kennel with him than in a palace with some society fool.

"I do not see that I have done anything to ask forgiveness for. I have just married a man I love and I hope you will look at it in the same light as I do. Your devoted daughter, JULIA GERAGHTY.

GOVERNOR FOSS' SON WINS WESTERN BRIDE.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 15.—Governor Eugene N. Foss left today for San Francisco to attend the wedding of his son, Benjamin Foss, and Miss Dorothea Chapman. The governor was accompanied by Mrs. Foss, their daughters, the Misses Helen and Esther, and son, Noble Foss. He expects to return Aug. 31.

URGES "FREE JUDICIARY"

Says "Majority of the People" Cannot Always Be Trusted.

New Mexico's Hopes Are Dashed Because Linked With Arizona.

Washington, Aug. 15.—President Taft, in a special message to the house of representatives today, vetoed the joint resolution providing for the admission of New Mexico and Arizona to statehood. His reason for exercising the executive power of veto was based on his thorough disapproval of the recall of judges clause in the Arizona constitution.

The fact that New Mexico's statehood was bound up with that of Arizona meted out to her the same fate, and neither territory can come into the union at this time unless friends of the joint resolution in congress can muster the two-thirds vote necessary to pass the resolution over the president's veto. This may be attempted.

No Sparing of Words.

The president did not spare words in condemning the recall features of the Arizona constitution which, he said, would compel judges to make their decisions "under legalized terrorism." The recall provision would operate against all elective officers of Arizona, including both county and state judges. When 25 per cent of the voters of the previous election petitioned for a special election to remove an official such an election would be compulsory.

"This provision of the Arizona constitution," the president says, "in its application to county and state judges, seems to me so pernicious in its effect, so destructive of independence in the judiciary, so likely to subject the rights of the individual to

WILL SAVE $9,000,000

Wants to Abolish Weight Basis of Payments to Railroads.

Washington, Aug. 15.—Radical readjustment of the methods of computing the pay of railways for transporting the mails, which will effect an annual saving of approximately $9,000,000 was recommended to congress today by Postmaster General Hitchcock.

Mr. Hitchcock proposes to effect such saving by paying the railroads on the basis of cost with 6 per cent profit. The plan provides that all railways shall report annually to the postmaster general the expenses incurred in carrying the mails, in order that the department may determine the cost to the railways and a fair rate of profit.

Abandon Old System.

The method of fixing railway mail pay in accordance with weights has proved expensive and unsatisfactory, and it is proposed to abandon it entirely, says Mr. Hitchcock. He suggests the substitution of the method of fixing compensation in accordance with the amount of space required in cars for the distribution and carriage of the mails, making proper allowance for the extent and frequency of the service performed.

Mr. Hitchcock sends to congress with his report, which was made in response to an act passed in 1909, a draft of a bill, which, if enacted, would carry the new plan into effect. He urgently recommends its passage. The postmaster general's recommendations are based on the investigations of a committee from his department.

WANTS CONGRESS TO QUIT AUG. 22

Penrose Introduces Resolution — Cummins and Bristow Object.

Washington, Aug. 15.—Adjournment of the present session of congress Aug 22 at 4 p. m. is provided for in a concurrent resolution offered today by Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania, chairman of the finance committee.

The resolution was referred to the committee on appropriations after Senators Cummins and Bristow had declared that they would oppose vigorously the adjournment of congress until other tariff schedules, particularly steel and sugar, had been taken up and disposed of.

JAPANESE VOLCANO IS IN ERUPTION

Tokio, Japan, Aug. 15.—Asamh-Yama, the volcano on the island of Hondo, was in eruption this morning. A large party of foreigners who were stopping at Karuizawa Shin, a popular resort nearby, ascended the mountain during the night and narrowly escaped the fumes from the crater. Two or three of the party were injured by falling stones.

Several Japanese students are missing and it is feared that they were in the vicinity when the eruption occurred. The volcano has been active for three months.

WILD RIOTING IN LIVERPOOL

Three Thousand Troops, Infantry and Cavalry, in City.

Mob During Strike Stands Against Soldiers' Bayonets.

London, Aug. 15.—Liverpool, the storm center of the strike which is menacing the trade of Great Britain, was under arms today.

In addition to her own police and reinforcements from the surrounding cities, 3,000 troops of infantry and cavalry under Gen. Mackinnon Wood were quartered in the city. These troops, as was shown during the riots of the early morning, were prepared to back up the police with force of arms in maintaining order.

The riot in Great Homer street, while not directly connected with the strike, has had a good effect in its outcome, as the rowdy element was subdued. The trouble began when a constable arrested a man for having assaulted a woman. Roughs rescued the prisoner from the officer and police reserves who were hurriedly called could not control the mob, which vented its fury in wrecking the shops of the neighborhood.

Defied Soldiers' Bayonets.

RESPECT FOR HOLY NAME

Duluth Has Branch of Organization Which Is Foe of Profanity.

Seeks to Suppress Cursing, Swearing and All Immoral Speech.

The cathedral branch of the Holy Name society, a national organization of Catholics for the suppression of profanity, held its first regular meeting in the Christian Brothers' school hall last evening.

Rev. H. A. Floyd, pastor of the cathedral, was the speaker. He outlined the purpose of the society, which is the suppression of cursing, swearing and immoral forms of speech, and pointed out that a national organization containing thousands of members can be a great power for good in the nation and in each city in which it has branches.

The Holy Name society was organized in the cathedral parish a short time ago under the direction of Rt. Rev. Bishop McGolrick, who is deeply interested in the work of the organization. It already has a good membership among the men of the parish and additional members are being recruited rapidly.

The Holy Name society had its inception in the East a few years ago, the clergy of the church enthusiastically lending its support to the movement, which was readily taken up by the laity. The society aims not only to promote purity of speech among its members but to have them influence others by example in moral speech and by discouragement of profanity. It regards profanity as a national curse and seeks to wipe it out, at least as far as a large portion of the population is concerned.

The cathedral society will hold monthly meetings and short talks will be given by members of the clergy and lay members of the society. The next meeting will be held Sept. 11.

The oppressive weather prevalent in Duluth today is the result of excessive humidity rather than extremely high temperatures. The day started with the mercury several points higher than usual and the men at the weather bureau expected that the 90 mark might be reached by noon, with cooler weather due tonight. Clouds covered the sun to some extent, however, and the breeze kept the temperature down so that 85 was the top notch up to 1 o'clock, and probably for the day, as easterly winds are expected to bring the temperature down materially during the late afternoon and evening.

Last night was an unusually warm night for Duluth, 66 being the lowest point reached.

IS KILLED BY ENGINE

Was Picking Weeds From Roadbed and Did Not Hear Cars.

Matt Mackowiak, aged 55, a section hand, was run over and instantly killed by the in-bound Fond du Lac passenger train in the Northern Pacific yards at Seventy-first avenue west at 9:30 o'clock this morning.

After the train had passed over him, Mackowiak's body was left an unrecognizable mass. Hands, feet, arms and legs were cut into pieces, the head severed from the torso and the skull split open. The sight was a revolting one. Undertaker Richter & Bellmeur picked up the body and brought it to their morgue, 425 Central avenue.

Mackowiak was engaged in pulling up weeds from the right-of-way and had his back to the oncoming train, No. 72. The engineer, according to those who saw the accident, whistled several times, but the man evidently did not hear it. The rest of the crew, who were separated from him a few rods, also tried to warn him of the approaching train.

Mackowiak turned just as the engine was on him but before he could jump, he was under the wheels. The engineer did not succeed in stopping the locomotive until the passenger coaches had all passed over his body.

Mackowiak was a married man but did not live with his wife, domestic trouble having separated them a few years ago. His wife and four children who survive him live on Highland street, West Duluth. Mackowiak boarded at the home of his brother, Nick Mackowiak, 2324 West Sixth street. Besides his brother in Duluth, he is also survived by a sister, living in Poland. Mackowiak came to Duluth fifteen years ago and prior to his employment since last spring on the section, he worked as a janitor in some of the downtown office buildings.

The funeral will be held tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock from the Polish Catholic church, Twenty-fourth avenue west and Fifth street with interment in the Polish Catholic cemetery.

THIS TIME IT WILL BE BATTLE TO THE DEATH.

This time, it is for blood! The ball teams of the Methodists and Presbyterians of West Duluth are after each other's scalps. The teams will again meet on the Fifty-second avenue grounds tomorrow evening. Carl Nelson will hurl for the Calvin coterie, while the followers of Wesley will use B. N. Wheeler or Stanley Gilpin on the mound. The teams are old rivals.

First Weekly Dance.

The first of a series of dances to be given under the auspices of the Fairmont-Tiger Football club, will take place tomorrow evening at Wade's hall, Central avenue and Ramsey street. HEARING TO BE RESUMED

Council Committee Will Continue Probe of "Paving Scandal."

No Further Charges Filed—Figures on All Contracts Now Available.

Tomorrow morning at 9:30 o'clock the council committee which has been investigating the "paving scandal" will resume its sessions at the city hall. Further interesting developments are expected.

The first two days of the hearings were devoted largely to the charges made by Contractor Hugh Steele, who brought on the investigation by his letter which declared that had he accepted $1,000 from "Paddy" McDonnell not to bid on the Fourth street paving job, he would still be in good standing in the city hall. A. G. Osman, another contractor, was on the stand for a time, as were City Engineer T. F. McGilvray, Former Assistant City Attorney E. M. Morgan and P. McDonnell.

Numerous contracts were mentioned in which it was claimed that the specifications had not been complied with. Other charges were made relative to efficiency of city employes. An adjournment of ten days was taken to give Attorney Crassweller an opportunity to go through the testimony. When the sessions open tomorrow the figures of all these various contracts are expected to be available. This will eliminate guess work and enable the committee to expedite the investigation and to conduct it upon more orderly and definite lines.

As far as can be learned no further charges have been submitted to any member of the committee. A member of a hillside club said that the improvement organizations will not prefer charges against the water and light department. He said that specific charges in writing against the department are now on file in the city hall, and that if the committee desires to make a complete investigation, those charges can easily be secured from the city clerk.

NEW BOAT IS A CERTAINTY

Extra Vessel Will Be Placed on Chicago-Duluth Run.

General Manager of Company Makes Definite Announcement of Plans.

The contract for the new steel steamer for the Chicago & Duluth Transportation company, to be ready for the opening of the passenger season next year, will be let on Sept. 1, and the successful bidder will be instructed to rush the boat to completion so that it will be ready by June 1.

J. W. Prindiville, general manager of the company, is in Duluth from Chicago, and stated that all the plans have been completed and that the figures are expected within a few days from shipbuilders.

The vessel will be 350 feet long and fifty feet beam, having a passenger capacity of 400. It will be of solid steel, with 194 large staterooms and six parlors. Throughout it will be finished exactly as the Minnesota, which the company put into service last June.

The vessel will be equipped with all the modern apparatus of passenger vessels, including a wireless outfit. The run will be made from Chicago on the same schedule as that of the Minnesota now, leaving Chicago on Saturday and arriving in Duluth on Tuesday, leaving on the return trip that evening. The Minnesota will be placed on a run leaving Chicago on Wednesday and arriving here on Saturday.

The company is not trying to turn out a boat for speed, and the time the new boat is supposed to make is from sixteen to eighteen miles per hour. She will have a refrigerator much larger than that on the Minnesota, and will carry fresh meats, dairy products, eggs and other perishable goods. Mr. Prindiville also stated that the company will make extensive repairs to the Minnesota this winter, and especially in the line of enlarging the refrigerator.

New Names Chosen.

The cost of the boat is estimated at over $600,000. No name has been selected for her, but Mr. Prindiville stated that some name with the prefix "Minne" will be chosen. Applications have been made for the changing of the names of the steamers Alva and William H. Gratwick No. 1, both of which belong to this company, the former to be known as the Minnetonka and the latter the Minnkahta.

The new vessel will be much larger than the Minnesota, which is but 288 feet long and 41 feet beam, with a passenger capacity of only 300. With the addition of this vessel on the run between Chicago and Duluth the traffic will be fairly well taken care of next year.

"We have enjoyed a big business this season," said Mr. Prindiville, "both in the passenger and freight lines. The passenger business has been enormous, and we have turned away almost as many as we have accommodated. I believe if we had had another boat this year we could have had her filled all the time. In the package freight business we have done as well as last year, if not better.

"In the passenger business we have not been able to take care of the Duluth people, for the books were filled up in Chicago. Nearly every ticket we sold was for a through passage, very few being taken up at ports along the lakes.

"The people of Chicago, and in fact of all Illinois and Indiana, are demanding transportation along the Superior and Michigan route, and the traffic each year can be expected to increase greatly."

HARVESTER TO BE ENROLLED HERE

The Harvester, the new freighter now being completed for the Wisconsin Steel company, the lake representatives of the International Harvester company, by the American Shipbuilding company at Lorain, will be enrolled in Duluth, and Capt. Joseph Sellwood will be the local agent for the vessel.

The new boat is 545 feet long and has a capacity of about 10,000 tons. It is of solid steel, being built along the Isherwood system. There are but three Isherwood vessels on the Great Lakes, the others being the W. P. Palmer of the Pittsburg Steamship company, and the Quincy Shaw of the Hanna fleet.

The new type of vessel is constructed along the longitudinal frame instead of the transverse, and it is claimed by the inventor that such a ship is far superior to the old type, as they are not as easily broken if in a collision. The cost of construction is said to be less, and a gain is made in the carrying ability, it is said.

The Harvester was launched on July 15, and it is expected that it will be ready for sailing in a few days. It will take out temporary papers at the lower lake port, and upon arrival in Duluth will be enrolled.

CANADIAN BOAT ARRIVES AT GARY.

Gary, Ind., Aug. 15.—The Canadian steamer Yorkton, fresh from the shipyard at Sunderland, England, loaded a cargo of billets at the Steel company's dock for delivery at Montreal, taking about 1,600 tons at Gary, completing her cargo at South Chicago.

The ship is owned by the Matthews Steamship company at Toronto, and the Gary cargo is the first she has loaded on the Great Lakes. After completion in the English shipyard the Yorkton brought a cargo of brick across to Montreal on her maiden trip. From there she came directly to Gary without cargo.

The new boat is a fine exhibit of the work of British shipyards. Although built for carrying freight only, the dining room is finished in mahogany. The officers' quarters are commodious and well furnished and all are finished in hardwood. The boat is especially designed for the handling of steel and other course freight, the deck being supported by heavy beams so that no posts are required in the hold to interfere with the work of loading machinery.

The Yorkton is commanded by Capt. Jere Cavanaugh, an old-time lake mariner. She is of the largest size possible to pass through the locks of the St. Lawrence river rapids, measuring 250 feet long, 43 feet wide and 19 feet deep. The registered tonnage of the steamer is 1,136, but she can carry 2,400 tons of cargo on a draft of fourteen feet, the deepest draft of water in the locks.

The Poor Man's Light

A few days ago a working-man and regular customer of the Duluth-Edison Electric Company, after paying his electric light bill for July, came into the General Manager's office and said:

"Say, all the electric light I used in my home last month cost me TWO CENTS A DAY. And I used all I wanted, too. We were not particularly saving of it; we burned four or five lights every night. I don't believe a municipal plant could beat that, eh?"

This company's rate for electric light in the homes of Duluth is 8 cents per kilowatt-hour. The average rate charged in the 160 leading American cities is 10.9 cents (nearly 3 cents higher than in Duluth). In a few cities the rate is 16 cents, or just double what it is here.

There are five or six municipal plants in the country whose rates are as low as our rate; but almost without exception those plants exact a minimum charge of from $1.00 to $2.00 a month. This is true also of practically all the other electric companies in America whose rates are as low as ours (there are only 12 such companies in the country). A minimum monthly charge is made by most electric plants because every electric lighting company loses money on its short-hour consumers.

The actual cost to this company of serving each residence customer in Duluth with electric light is more than $18.00 a year. Yet our receipts from all our residence customers for electric light average only $12.00 a year. We make no minimum charge.

We serve 2,505 customers whose bills for the summer six months total only $3.00.

We serve 2,215 customers whose yearly bills total $8, or less.

We serve 2,070 customers whose yearly bills total from $8 to $12.

We serve 6,120 customers whose yearly bills total $18, or less.

At the present rate of 8 cents per kwh., we light every one of those 6,120 of the homes of Duluth at a loss. And that loss is only made up by the volume of revenue from all the rest of our 13,000 customers.

Yet, we maintain this low rate in order to make Electric Light in Duluth THE POOR MAN'S LIGHT.

Right now in Duluth, Electric Light IS THE POOR MAN'S LIGHT. And there are not half a dozen other cities of Duluth's size in the world where this is true.

If we get a new street lighting contract, at only $45 an arc lamp a year, which is $18.89 LESS ON EVERY LAMP than the average cost of the street lighting by all the leading municipal plants in the United States, we shall give every lighting customer the further benefit of FREE renewals of all carbon and gem filament lamps (up to 32 c. p.).

Over 100 Representatives of Duluth Firms to Make Trip.

The committee in charge of the trade excursion of the Duluth jobbers and manufacturers into Soo line territory is busy making arrangements for the trip, which will begin next Tuesday and continue for three days.

Fully 100 representatives of Duluth houses are expected to make the trip. The sentiment of many of the houses was obtained before the excursion was definitely decided upon and the opinions received by the wholesalers' committee of the Commercial club were so favorable that it was certain the trip would be a success.

Over fifty small towns will be visited and stops of from ten to forty minutes made at the different places. One night will be spent at Bemidji and the other at Alexandria. The Soo line will place a special train at the disposal of the Duluth excursionists and the travelers will live in the train during the three days.

The people in the different towns to be visited are taking kindly to the excursion. Expressions received from patrons of Duluth houses insure a hearty welcome at the different towns, and the Duluth people believe that great good will come out of the excursion through acquaintances made and friendly relations strengthened.

WARD COUNTY FAIR WILL BE BIG EVENT.

Minot, N. D., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Officials of the Ward County Fair association are laying plans for the holding of the biggest fair and exposition that has ever been held in the western section of the state, Sept. 18 to 20. The Ward County association decided on the late fair dates this year in order to gain as complete a display of the county's products as was possible, and it is believed that the plan will be immensely successful, as farmers are already taking deep interest in the event and are preparing to exhibit.

Several new buildings will be erected on the fair grounds during the next few weeks, thus affording ample facilities in which to take care of the exhibits that are expected.

PATRONIZING A HOME ACADEMY

Duluth People Recognize Advantages Offered By University School.

The University school will open its eighth year in Duluth, Sept. 5.

The prospects for a large attendance are the best in its history. The new arrangement made by Mr. Heppert to have an advisory board which will act with him in all matters pertaining to the school, seems to convince the public that this school will do better work and give greater satisfaction to its patrons than it has done before. The principal of the school points with pride to the fact that in almost every case where he had had the older children of a patron in his school, when the younger ones of the family reach the school age, they are also enrolled as pupils.

A number of children who have been away at school the past year will this year attend the University school, which shows that the citizens of Duluth are aware of the school advantages to be obtained at home.

Others besides the board who are interested in its success and whose children will be numbered among its pupils, are: T. D. Merrill, R. B. Whitesides, James Ferguson, John Jenswold, Mr. Farrell, George Lounsberry, Mr. Nelmeyer, Mr. German, Mr. Lindahl, Mr. Bridgeman, Maj. Sebenius, Dr. Walker, Mr. Naufts, R. B. Knox and Carl Luster, and a number of others. With such patrons as these, another institution established in Duluth has been placed upon a successful working basis.

THE EVENING STORY

THE TANGLED COIL

By Jane Harris.

"It's a mighty risky business is diving," confessed the manager of a wrecking company. A diver can't have too many brains; for it's a careful man's job. The risky fellows don't last long, and either don't get out at all, or, if they do, they're so frightened that their nerve is gone, and they're never any good again. Yet sometimes even a careful man is liable to be caught.

On one occasion I was called to save what I could from a ship which had been wrecked on a group of ledges. I reached the spot just as a gale was rising. Among divers it had a bad name, for it was a jumble of peaked rocks, some close to the surface, others far below, criss-crossed with valleys through which ran strong submarine currents, varying with the rise and fall of a fifteen-foot tide. Fortunately, however, the ship lay in a calm aisle between two reefs in about eight fathoms; so I expected to be able to strip her without very much trouble.

A diver's time runs into money fast. The tide was falling, and I wanted to do everything I could before it got too rough to work. So I hurried on my dress. The captain and part owner was there, too. What he cared for particularly was a small safe in his cabin, containing all his papers and money. It was my first year alone, so I felt more like taking risks than I might now. Soon I dropped overboard. It was a dark day, and I had my electric lamp. Down I sank through the dark green water, my lantern shedding a dim light. Presently I saw the ship plump under me, resting on her keel and starboard side. Suddenly out of the blackness where my feet were pointed grew a mass like a big bird's nest. It was the wire rigging, twisted and tangled and wound up in every way you can think of.

I jerked my life quickly, and stopped. A little more, and I should have gone into the tangle feet first, and perhaps got caught so that I could never have extricated myself. My men hauled me up, and shifted the boat a trifle, and I went down again. This time I alighted on the slanting quarter deck, just aft of the cabin. The end of the bird's nest overhung the open companionway threateningly. As my lantern shone into it, it seemed like a bunch of petrified snakes. I didn't half like the idea of going down into that gloomy, uninviting hole, but a diver must take some chances. Grasping one of the loops with both hands I gave it a shake; but it seemed firm as the deck on which I stood. So I decided to go below. Throwing my lantern ray into the companion I picked my way cautiously down the slimy steps.

The door at the bottom stood open. The cabin was in a sorry mess, everything that would float being, of course, hard up against the ceiling. I crossed the floor, and presently stood in the captain's room.

How dark and lonesome and creepy it was! All the tales I had ever heard about cuttlefish and other sea monsters ran through my mind. A premonition of danger came to me, but I shook it off as foolish.

There was the safe close to the captain's desk. The key was in the lock, but the door, rusted by the water, would not open till I tapped it with my hatchet. Then it turned on its hinges, and I stooped to peer inside.

Suddenly I became conscious of a grating, a rubbing on the roof of the cabin over my head. An odd, inexplicable dread struck a panic into me. Instinct told me something was wrong. I must get out. No man ever lifted lead shoes faster than I did the next thirty seconds.

I had just reached the foot of the stairs when athwart the twilight that streamed down the companionway, vying with my lantern, fell a shadow. Then over the opening shot a mass of black hands and arms. The devil fish had come to life.

At once I realized what had occurred. The undercurrent, increasing with the ebb, had set the mass in motion. Presently it would cover the entire door. If I had only been half a minute sooner!

Up the stairs I hurried. There was still a little space when I reached the top step, but it was narrowing, narrowing. I plunged forward, almost decided to attempt a leap through, but stopped just in time. The wire weighed tons. If it jammed me against the casing, it would crack me like an egg shell.

A new horror seized me as I shrank back. My hose, my life line! The two slender bonds that linked me with the upper air, the only things that made it possible for me to be there at all, lay on the dock at the mercy of that moving coil.

Steadily, irresistibly, it surged back and forth. It caught my lines, it drew them taut, dragging me forward to my knees, almost pulling me head foremost into the tangle outside the doorway; then it relaxed, and I stood up. Again and again the same thing happened. This could not last. It was the first time I had ever really felt afraid under water. But I had the sense to keep cool. If a diver loses his head he's gone. I could neither send nor receive any signals.

I knew that my men in the boat must suspect something was wrong, for they could feel the lines move. But I could neither send nor receive any signals.

The coil leaped back, and pinned me against the casing. One sharp, ugly end punched my side. Another caught my head as in a vice, and squeezed it till my helmet crunched; only a little more, and it would have given way.

I got back, excited, panting. My effort had tangled my life line still worse. The next pull almost snatched me out into the coil. I couldn't stand that. I must cut, or it might finish me. With my hatchet I severed one of the two links that bound me to life, and the hose alone was left. The wire was shifting; it was moving further across the door. I should die miserably unless I gained my freedom at once.

Then the loop moved, leaving my hose free; and unexpectedly I saw a chance. Suffocation was not far away, and I had no time to waste.

Did you ever crawl under a barbed wire fence? If so, you'll understand something about how I felt, dreading every minute to have a sharp point catch and stop me. Only my fence was moving, while yours was still; and your life didn't hang on getting through, but mine did.

A strand brushed my shoulder. I flattened myself, and wriggled on. I never knew before that I could make myself so thin. The air was frightful. For a moment I lay there in the dark on that cold, slimy deck, with the wire swaying over me in the strong undertow, and the air getting worse every second. Then I staggered to my feet, and gave the signal on the hose to be pulled up.

When a diver finds that his air supply is cut off, the best thing he can do is to smash his glass with his hatchet and let the water into his helmet. When he can't hold his breath any longer, he'll have to fill his lungs with water and become insensible. But you can roll pure water out of a man, while you can't roll out poisoned air.

I shattered my glass, and in rushed the cold brine. Then I seized my hose with both hands, praying that the couplings mightn't start off, and held on tight. Up, up I went, the water gushing in round my face and body. All depended on the men above, on them and the hose. I had done everything I could. They were pulling me as fast as they dared.

Up, up, up! Would the threads hold? My life hung on them. At last I could keep my breath no longer. I opened my mouth, and in rushed the water. I choked, I strangled, but through it all I remembered that I must hold on to that hose. And I did, to the last second of consciousness. Then everything grew dark and dreamy and quiet, and I went very far away.

When I recovered my senses I was in the boat, my armor was off, and they were rolling the water out of my lungs. The couplings had held, and my fingers had grasped the hose so tightly that they had been obliged to pry them off. In two or three hours I was myself again.

"Not for all the money in my safe shall you again go down," said the captain. "I will lose my gold. It shall not be bought with your life." I didn't care to make another try that morning. But I had the tug drop a grappling into the wire, and twitch the whole mass a hundred rods away to a place where it could wallow without doing any harm. That afternoon, before the storm broke, I put the contents of the safe in the captain's hands.

DON'T BE UNREASONABLE

If You Neglect the Care of the Scalp You Should Not Expect Beautiful Hair.

The hair is more exposed and hence more liable to accumulate dust and dirt than any other portion of the body.

In spite of this the hair receives, as a rule, the least attention and no real effort is made to keep it healthy.

If the dandruff germ is allowed to work unmolested and the scalp becomes crusted with dirt accumulations, one may expect the hair to die and fall out. There is no cause for surprise in this phenomenon; it is natural and happens in every instance where the care of the hair and scalp is overlooked.

The one sure remedy which prevents the loss of hair and permits a healthy, luxuriant growth is found in Newbro's Herpicide.

The dandruff germ cannot live on a head to which Herpicide is regularly applied. The germ dies. The hair ceases to fall. The terrible itching stops almost instantly.

That is what Newbro's Herpicide does.

NO OFFICIAL ACTION YET

Regents Have Not Announced Selection of Greysolon Site.

Neither the Greysolon Farms company nor anybody else in Duluth has received official notification of the action of the board of regents of the state university on the site for the proposed demonstration farm school in Duluth. Until the regents' proposition is presented to the Greysolon Farms company officially, officers of the company will be unable to say whether it will be accepted.

It is not expected that there will be any hitch over the price to be paid. The land, with taxes for over two years added to the original price, stands the Greysolon Farms company more than the $50 an acre the regents are said to be willing to pay, but the members of the Greysolon Farms company are deeply interested in the school as a means of demonstrating the agricultural possibilities of this section of the state, and they will very likely waive price considerations in order that the state may obtain the site selected as the best for the school.

Although the site was decided upon at the meeting of the regents the day before they came to Northern Minnesota last week, they made no overtures to the Greysolon Farms company while they were in Duluth, so it is presumed they intend to submit their proposition in writing. Whether the other conditions which it is said the board will impose will be as easy to get around as the price remains to be seen when the proposition is submitted.

There is some question as to what the board of regents is considering for the lake shore. Unofficial reports say that the members of the board look favorably on a plan for having a demonstration farm, similar to other demonstration farms throughout the state, on a site about four miles west of Lester park. Just what the board's plans in that respect are will probably be made known when official announcement is made by the regents.

The question of a site for the demonstration farm school has been hanging fire since the legislature appropriated $65,000 for the school at the last session. The members of the board of regents have made two trips to Duluth; experts from the agricultural school of the university have made soil surveys of the different sites offered; Dean Woods has looked over the ground carefully on several occasions, and it is understood that the final recommendation of the experts was that the Greysolon Farms site was the best suited for the purposes of the school.

STATE LAW VS. CHARTER

One Allows Health Officer Fees and Other Forbids Accepting Them.

Commissioner's Salary Is $1,200 Yearly and Fees About $700.

Duluth health commissioners for years past have been getting fees in addition to their salaries, which is in violation of the city charter but in compliance with the state law.

Those familiar with the situation state that the fees will run from $500 to $700 a year, while the salary is $1,200 per year.

According to the state law the health commissioner is able to collect 25 cents for each birth and death certificate which he certifies to the county auditor. As the population of the city increases the totals of these fees grow in proportion. Last year it is estimated that they amounted to approximately $700.

As far as can be learned the health commissioner is the only official of the city who has received any fees since the charter went into effect over ten years ago. The practice is strictly prohibited by the charter, the language of which is very plain, stating that no city officer shall receive any fee, gift, or reward of any kind except his salary.

But it is said that the health commissioners for years back have been collecting these fees in addition to their salary, doing so by virtue of the state laws. The matter came to the attention of the city council last night when Alfred Le Richeux, who has been auditing the city books, made his report. He gave it as his opinion that the state law take precedence over the charter and that the health commissioner or clerk is entitled to 25 cents for each death and birth which he certifies to the county.

Mr. Le Richeux suggested that the city attorney be called upon for an opinion. Inquiry this morning brought out the fact that a former city attorney, who was in office at the time the charter was adopted, had ruled on the matter, holding that the health commissioner could collect the fees under the state law.

GOOD OUTLOOK FOR FALL TRADE

Joseph Gidding Returns From Buying Trip to New York.

Joseph Gidding of J. M. Gidding & Co., has returned to Duluth from New York, where he acted with his brothers, B. A. Nathaniel and J. M. Gidding, and assistant buyers, in selecting fall merchandise for the big Gidding stores in Duluth, New York and Cincinnati.

Mr. Gidding says that the clouds have passed from the business sky and the outlook for the fall trade is bright. The Gidding company has had no hesitancy in placing large orders for its three stores, anticipating a big fall trade in making selections and ordering merchandise.

Mr. Gidding says that the styles for the fall trade will prove alluring. Not only in women's apparel, but in misses' and children's wear, the styles are such as to be favorably received by the public.

Novelties in candlesticks have been introduced by the Japanese for bungalows. They are called floor lanterns, and stand from three to six feet high and are picturesque and practical. The candle is enclosed in a beautiful deep globe and as the candle is a large one it burns a long time. They are handsome for porches, or for dining rooms. With these lights and golden grain belt beers, a very pretty evening lunch can be arranged and one that will be talked about. Try them now. RAILROADS NEW LINES BY JAN. 1

Soo and Canadian Northern Will Both Complete Operations This Year.

Before this year ends, Duluth will have added to her list of railroads two new lines, one from the north, bringing Winnipeg several miles nearer the Head of the Lakes than before, and the other to the south, connecting Duluth with the Twin Cities by what is claimed will be the shortest route.

There is also a rumor of a new fast train on the Northern Pacific to the Twin Cities, but this cannot be confirmed.

The former line is the Canadian Northern, which, according to H. T. Hazen, chief engineer, will be ready to operate the trains over its line by Nov. 1, and the other is the Soo Line, which is now constructing the line from Frederic, Wis., to the main line, three miles east of Iorea and about fifteen miles west of Superior.

The work on the Canadian Northern is progressing rapidly, the rails between Shortline Park and Virginia having practically been laid, and only the distance between the former point and Duluth being left. The work to be done on that line is the erecting of steel bridges over streets in West Duluth and the laying of rails.

On the Soo Line the work of grading is almost finished and everything is in readiness for the laying of the steel. This will require considerable time, but it is said that the road will be finished so that within a few months the road will be serviceable for working trains and freight, but not for passenger trains until about Jan. 1.

These roads will add much to the building up of Duluth, and bringing it into closer touch with the world, for the trains to be put into service will be fast and modern. Both companies have the reputation, in the railroad world, of being young and aggressive.

TRAINLOAD OF WORKERS

A special train of twelve coaches arrived in the city yesterday over the Northwestern line, with about 800 men, en route for Western Canada, where they will work in the harvest fields. The regular Northwestern train also brought two additional cars of laborers.

These men come through Chicago from Eastern Canada to be employed in the fields. Many of them will remain there, taking up permanent positions or purchasing land of their own.

They were taken to Winnipeg over the Duluth, Missabe & Northern as far as Virginia and thence over the Canadian Northern. This is the fourth large train load of men to be taken over these routes to the Western fields, and it is said that others will follow next Monday.

HOWARD ELLIOT MAKES PROTEST

Northern Pacific Head Wants "Closed Season" for Railway Legislation.

Portland, Or., Aug. 15.—Aroused over agitation against railroads, and particularly over the outcome of the Spokane rate case, Howard Elliott, president of the Northern Pacific, has entered a protest to present and future legislation affecting railways as dangerous to the country.

As a result of the recent decisions Elliott, who had accepted an invitation to address the Oregon Development league meeting at Astoria, Or., today telegraphed it would be impossible for him to come as rate matters would hold him in conference with officials of roads affected until the matter was settled.

Louis W. Hill, president of the Great Northern, who also had accepted an invitation to come west and in fact was on his way here, was called back to St. Paul for the same reason which kept Elliott here.

The telegram follows:

Elliott's Telegram.

"C. C. Chapman, secretary Oregon Development league, Portland, Or., referring to your letter July 22, and my answer July 31, it is a great personal regret to me that complications here resulting from the Spokane rate case prevent my going west at the present time. We are in consultation about what to do in regard to this matter and I feel that I cannot be absent from headquarters until we come to some conclusion.

"It is too bad that so much time and attention of some of us, who are doing our honest best to advance the welfare of the country, is taken up by investigations and litigations. It would seem to me that in our country we could advance farther and faster if we had a 'closed season' for legislation If we could have no more new laws for the next five years, I believe your state would go ahead more rapidly than any of us imagine. With renewed wishes for success of your meeting which celebrates such an important event in the history of Oregon.

"Howard Elliott."

CANADIAN PACIFIC HAS $11,873,242 SURPLUS.

Montreal, Aug. 15.—The directors of the Canadian Pacific Railway company, meeting here yesterday, declared a dividend of 2 per cent on the preferred stock and 2½ per cent on the common stock for the quarter ended June 30. Gross earnings of the railway and steamship lines for the last financial year were $104,167,808 and net earnings were $36,699,078. After paying of all dividends for the year, a surplus of $11,873,242 is carried forward.

NO CONCESSIONS BY SOUTHERN PACIFIC.

NEW SUPERIOR STREET BLOCK

Five Story Building Planned; Three Story Addition to Store Building.

W. A. Hunt, architect, is now preparing plans for a five story building to be erected on the site of the old structures now occupied by the California Wine house, at 19 West Superior street and The Model Clothing Co. at 17 West Superior street. The building is to be a modern fireproof structure and will be occupied when completed by a large retail firm.

Plans are also being prepared in Mr. Hunt's office for a three story addition on the Stack & Co. building at 21 and 23 West Superior street. It is probable that both these structures will be well under way during the present building season.

POLICE AUTO WILL NOT BE LABELED

Other City Cars Will Be Lettered for Identification.

The Franklin tourning car of the police department will not be decorated with the legend, "City of Duluth," as will the other machines owned by the city. The reason given is that it would seriously interfere with its usefulness.

It is stated that frequently it is desirable not to attract undue attention when engaged on police duty, and that were the name put on the car it would always attract a crowd if there should happen to be people in the vicinity. The others, however, will be labeled with the name of the city as announced by the mayor.

Following the edict that the cars must not be used for "joy rides" the drivers have even been unable to use them to go to their homes at the noon hour. They must stable them and then walk to their residences, or to the restaurant, the same as the rest of the public who cannot afford the luxury of an automobile.

TOGO GOES SIGHT-SEEING.

Gets Bird's-Eye View of New York and Goes to Brooklyn.

New York, Aug. 15. — Admiral Togo had a comparatively quiet day. His interest in America's largest city is intense and today he asked for another bird's-eye view of it from the top of the Metropolitan tower. After this Admiral Togo planned to visit the Brooklyn navy yards. Late this evening he will be a guest at the press club.

Admiral Count Togo spoke in his native tongue last night at the luncheon given jointly by the Japanese society and the Peace Society of New York. He gave his first expression here on the subject of international relationship, saying:

Sone in Bladder Removed Without Surgical Operation

In the Spring of 1904, I was confined to my bed with kidney trouble and thought that I would never recover. I took a lot of medicine but did not realize any benefit from anything. I finally saw Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root advertisement and sent for a sample bottle and thought the sample bottle helped me, so I bought more of the medicine from my Druggist, and after using a few bottles discharged a very large stone from my bladder.

After passing this stone my health was very much improved and I have been able to continue my business without any serious sickness.

ON THE IRON RANGES

PARTY HOST IS ROBBED

Hibbing Austrian, Celebrating His Departure for Europe, Loses Money.

Three Masked Men Break in on Festivities Spoiling Host's Plans.

Hibbing, Minn., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—While the police have not been notified, it became known today that a daring piece of highway robbery was pulled off in the French location at Hibbing, about three-quarters of a mile from town last Thursday night in which the host at a farewell party was held up by three masked men and relieved of $580 which he planned spending on a European trip.

Seven Guests Present.

The name of the host, who is an Austrian, cannot be learned and those who were at the party, seven, are not disposed to talk for publication but enough has leaked out to justify the belief that the affair was pulled off. None of the party speak English and it is difficult to get the facts. It is said the host expected to leave in a few days for his old home in Austria and had $580 on his person in cash. He was entertaining his friends and all "went merry as a marriage bell" until three masked men burst into the room armed with a rifle and pistols and leveling their weapons at the host, told him to hand over the money. He reluctantly complied and the holdups vanished, none of the guests of the evening interfering. It is hardly necessary to state that the proposed European trip has been abandoned. The police claim to know nothing of the affair, claiming no complaint has been made to them, but it is expected an investigation will be made now that the story is printed.

SAUTEK HEARS FROM GOTHAM

New York Police Verify His Fears About His Wife and Son.

Hibbing, Minn., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Steve Sautek today received a telegram from the New York police department in reply to his message sent yesterday afternoon asking for particulars about the Hibbing woman and her son asphyxiated by illuminating gas in a New York hotel, which verified his fears they were his wife and son.

The dispatch gave the name Sara Sautek and Iva Sautek, which he says are correct. Sautek sent another message today making inquiry as to the disposition of the bodies. He is at a loss to account for the tragedy on any other theory than that his wife being unfamiliar with gas blew it out. He says there was no reason for her taking the lives of herself and son. She had steamer tickets for the two to Austria and they were to have sailed today.

GRAND RAPIDS' REVENGE.

Grand Rapids, Minn., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—The ball game played at Marble Sunday between the Grand Rapids Juniors and the Marble Juniors was a heartrending affair, one team being entirely at the mercy of the other. Grand Rapids won by a score of 10 to 0.

Some weeks ago the Grand Rapids Juniors went to Marble, and the Marble boys did it all over them.

Whaling and Erskine were the battery for the Rapids. Whaling fanned fifteen men and allowed but four hits. Gravery, the star Marble pitcher, struck out only seven of the Rapids boys, allowing five hits. The Rapids played errorless ball, and went at it in a manner which showed their determination to win this game.

GRAND RAPIDS NEW CHURCH BELL BLESSED.

Grand Rapids, Minn., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—A very pretty rite was observed at the new St. Joseph's Catholic church Sunday when the fine, large new bell, which will be put up in the belfry of the church, was blessed.

A large crowd was in attendance to witness the ceremony, conducted by Rev. Fr. Buechler, pastor of the church. The imposing ceremony of baptising and blessing the new bell was performed with all pomp and honor to the occasion. An improvised choir rendered a number of very pretty hymns.

After the blessing of the bell Rev. Fr. Buechler delivered a brief but very interesting sermon, having for his theme the ceremony which had just been performed, and he gave his audience some very interesting and instructive data relating to the same. Afterward those assembled there were given an opportunity to ring the bell, it being the only time, as Fr. Buechler stated, that the public would have that privilege.

BODY FOUND HAS BEEN IDENTIFIED

Anton Berg Died of Pneumonia Walking From Aurora to Bass Lake.

Aurora, Minn., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—The body found beside the track a half mile west of Aurora last Friday night has been identified as that of Anton Berg, who has been employed in various of the camps about Aurora. The inquest held by Deputy Coroner B. Christianson, assisted by Dr. E. Darrow, developed the fact that death had resulted from pneumonia.

Berg was known to have started to walk to Aurora from Bass Lake several days before his body was found. He was not feeling well at the time and it is thought that he became overcome before reaching town. No relatives could be found and the body was buried at Aurora.

VERY FINE ROAD IS BEING BUILT

Highway Between Hibbing and Chisholm to Be First Class.

Hibbing, Minn., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—A rock crusher is in operation on the new Chisholm road, about half way between that village and Hibbing. It is intended that the crusher will be in operation until enough material has been crushed for the completion of the two and a quarter miles of the new road, which is all that will be built by the township commissioners this year.

The two and a quarter miles of the five and a half miles which connects Hibbing with Chisholm will be in the nature of an experiment. Next year it is expected that the new road will be entirely completed. The new connection between the two places, which extends out the county road past the French location and almost to the county fair grounds before it turns, was necessitated by reason of the viaduct over the Sellers' approach, and on the present Chisholm road, being soon done away with for the Buffalo-Susquehanna mine stripping purposes.

The crusher is turning out fifty tons of crushed rock, about two inches square, per day. A dozen men are employed and there are five teams at the locality hauling the crushed rock to the road. After it has been spread across the twenty-eight-foot road an upper layer of gravel will be spread over it and the whole surface thoroughly rolled with a heavy roller.

When it is completed the new Chisholm road will be one of the very best in St. Louis county.

POUNDMASTER OF HIBBING FINED

Hibbing, Minn., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Robert Casmey, poundmaster, was fined $10 and costs, amounting to $13.50, in Judge Brady's court for assaulting Frank Thompson, head of a band of gypsies, in Morrisey's saloon last Thursday.

Casmey had Thompson's son and another gypsy boy, named Frank Migul, arrested on the preceding night on the charge of attempting to hold up himself and wife on the Chisholm road. After a hearing the gypsies were discharged, as stated in The Herald. Casmey is said to have then started to hunt up Thompson. He found him in the saloon and attacked him. The swearing out of the assault warrant was the outcome.

The poundmaster has announced his intention of appealing the case to a higher court.

Negaunee, Mich., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Irving J. Carmichael, son of James Carmichael, a former resident of Negaunee, who has been in the employ of the Vermilion Iron Department company for some years as superintendent of a property near Tower, Minn., has resigned.

CARMINE SACCO UNDER ARREST

Alleged Slayer of Virginia Italian Caught at Paine's Siding.

Virginia, Minn., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Deputy Sheriff Mollan yesterday afternoon captured Carmine Sacco, the seventh man taken in connection with the murder of Caesaro Bonaco here Sunday evening during a row over a poker game. Not all of the men in jail are accused of the crime, some being held as witnesses.

It is believed Sacco was the ringleader, and the authorities feel gratified over his arrest. He was caught at Paine's landing, about forty miles south of here, after the police had been given a tip by a conductor that he had been seen in that locality, as stated in Monday's Herald. Sacco claims he came from Chicago a week ago. Assistant County Attorney Edward Boyle is working on the case, and a hearing may be had today to try and fatnom the affair. The coroner's jury found that Bonaco came to his death from a gunshot wound presumably fired by Sacco.

The men detained are: Carmine Sacco, accused of the crime; Antoine Vritanio, Nick Coslango, Sam Tomino, Frank Maropi, Lima Maroni and Domic Pellaggio.

Hibbing Suspect Released.

Hibbing, Minn., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Chief of Police Pete Wring last night released from custody a suspect he had arrested in connection with the murder of an Italian in Hibbing. The suspect was taken into custody when the police were notified to be on the lookout for Carmine Sizi, wanted for the crime and as soon as the chief heard of Sacco's arrest he released the suspect, whose name is not known.

HEAVILY FINED FOR WILD SHOTS

Hibbing Man Who Shot Recklessly Pays $105.75 Into Treasury.

Hibbing, Minn., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—The village treasury was increased $104.75 today, when Frank Lankman paid that amount over after being fined $100 and costs by Judge Brady on the charge of carelessly discharging firearms.

He was arrested by Officer Dougherty of the Oliver force at the Leetonia. The officer said Lankman was shooting a shot gun in the woods near town, at birds, and some of the shot came near the officer, who arrested him.

FAIR GROUND CROPS THRIVE.

Plantings Made at Hibbing Fair Grounds Doing Well.

Hibbing, Minn., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—The directors of the St. Louis county fair this spring planted a large tract of the ground in the race track oval at the fair grounds in potatoes, alfalfa, oats, barley and rye. The result attained thus far is encouraging. Next year it is expected that crops representative of St. Louis county, both in quality and quantity, will be grown.

Although the grains have not attained much growth this season and are too scanty to insure even a fair crop, the potato plants have done remarkably well and some tubers of more than ordinary size were gathered at the place this morning. It is also expected to obtain some first-class seeds for distribution this fall from the place.

An Old Soldier's Tonic

Every old soldier needs a tonic. For that matter there are few, if any, men, women or children, of any age, who do not need a nerve building and blood purifying tonic every once in a while.

To those who are run down, nervous, tired all the time, can't sleep, can't eat, can't work, have kidney, liver or stomach trouble, constant headaches, rheumatism, or any nervous blood disorder, Make-Man Tablets should prove a ready relief. A free trial is sent on request by the Make-Man Tablet Co., Dept. 16, Chicago. They are sold at 50c per box, and recommended by A. E. Swedberg, White Swan Drug Co., 3 East Superior St., also 2015 West Superior St.

Here is a letter from an old soldier who has used Make-Man Tablets and gladly recommends them to his comrades:

"I have given Make-Man Tablets a thorough trial and am convinced it is a wonderful medicine and does what it is recommended to do. I feel like a new person and would recommend it to any one, especially whose system is run down. It helped my Catarrh and Rheumatism very much."

WM. H. TAYLOR, P. O. Box 55, National Soldiers' Home.

Go to your nearest druggist today and get a box of Make-Man Tablets. If he hasn't them on hand he will get them for you.

MAKING READY FOR AVIATORS

Hibbing, Minn., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—"Either today or tomorrow the county board of fair commissioners will hold a meeting and the several different committees to handle the coming St. Louis county fair will be appointed," said President Joseph Cox. "We mean business this year and if any of those committees do not do their rightful share of the work and take care of the end intrusted to them, they shall be relieved of further duty and outsiders chosen to act for them as committeemen.

"The judges of the exhibits and the racing events will not be chosen until after the fair is in progress and undoubtedly several of them will be outside parties."

Work was begun this morning in clearing a space 450 by 30 feet inside the race track oval, extending from east to west as the starting field for the Wright biplane, which is to make daily flights. The contract is Iron clad and Aviator McGoey of Grand Forks will assuredly make at least one flight through the air during the four days of the fair's existence.

IRWIN REFUSES TO BE RECALLED

Two Harbors Alderman Ordered From Seat Finally Complies.

Two Harbors, Minn., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Alderman Irwin, the Socialist, recently recalled by the special election and superseded by Alfred L. Johnson, entered the council room last night and took his accustomed seat as though nothing had happened. President Effe ordered him to retire because another had been chosen. Irwin retorted that he had an injunction to prevent Johnson taking his seat until the special election that chose Johnson could be passed upon by the district court and he would not quit. The president, angered at Irwin's action, declined to preside and left the room. Irwin, rather than prevent the meeting being held, then left his seat, and the president returned and public business went on.

The special election was held on July 25 and the case is expected to come up before Judge Cant in Duluth today, the question to be decided being whether the election was legal or illegal.

MINES ARE BEING TIMBERED AGAIN

Eveleth, Minn., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—A large crew of men is retimbering the No. 6 shaft of the Adams mine. They recently completed the Spruce mine shafts retimbering work. The timber men are working under the direction of Capt. I. Isaacson, who is one of the oldest mining men in this vicinity.

Four drills are working near Wolf near the Haenke farm and many holes are being sunk. It is expected by those in charge that many valuable bodies of ore will be reached.

BAND HELPS MEMBER.

Chisholm Musicians Give Benefit for Unfortunate One.

Chisholm, Minn., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—One of the most enjoyable affairs of the present season, was the ball given at Bergeron's rink, Friday evening, as a benefit to Charles Johnson, a member of the Oliver band, who has had a great deal of sickness in his family and is comparatively an invalid himself.

The Oliver orchestra of six pieces furnished the music gratis and when all incidentals were settled, Mr. Johnson was presented with $51. Mr. Johnson wishes to express to the people of Chisholm his heartfelt appreciation of their kindness to him.

Eveleth, Minn., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Nick Watress was arrested late yesterday afternoon at his boarding house in the Adams location and lodged in the city jail on a charge of assault and battery, preferred against him by his wife. She also claims he threatened her life and that they have had many quarrels. He spent the night in the jail, not being given any bonds. He is employed at the Adams mine and will be given a hearing today.

Make Progress on Walk.

Eveleth, Minn., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Contractor Charles A. Rutty and his men are making very good progress on the new 6,450-foot walk from Carrie avenue to the Leonidas location, which when completed, will give the location residents easy access to the city. Lights will be installed along the walk and travel made safe in the evening. The present walk is being built by the city council and Nichols township, but the new walk to be built from the Leonidas walk to the new Canadian Northern depot, two miles away, will be constructed at the expense of the township board.

May Sue Brewery Agent.

Eveleth, Minn., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—The case against H. Champeau, a brewery agent, charged with assaulting A. Lavigne, assistant street commissioner, was dismissed yesterday by Judge Nell McInnis in municipal court, but the case may be taken to a higher court and Champeau sued for damage as Lavigne is said to be consulting with a Duluth attorney.

the scene the soldiers were at once made the targets of bricks, bottles and other missiles hurled from roofs and windows of nearby buildings. Several soldiers and police received serious wounds. A bayonet charge was ordered and when this failed to clear the streets an order to fire into the air was given. Two volleys were discharged over the heads of the rioters with great moral effect.

A number of the rioters were wounded by bayonet charges, but none was hit by bullets. Many of the mob were arrested.

This forenoon things were somewhat quieter. The response to the midnight appeal by the strike committee for a general strike of all transport workers, including the railway men, was not unanimous, and trucks continued to move in the streets under guard, while partial forces were at work on some of the docks. The Cunard steamer Caronia, due to sail from Liverpool for New York today, with other liners, was still in the stream unable to get away.

No Change in London.

There was little change in the situation at London. A few more dock laborers returned to work and the carriers employed by one of the big railway lines resumed their duties. The settlement made with these men was not permanent, and a resumption of the general strike, particularly on the docks, is possible at any moment.

The grievances of the men are not serious compared with those upon which they received concessions from their employers, but the men felt that the moment was opportune to get everything that they wanted.

The number of railway strikers throughout the country increased today, and in some places the passenger service was disorganized.

Three Days' Food on Hand.

At Manchester the streets were as quiet as were those of London last week, all the carters having gone out. The railway strike there spread today, but there was little disturbance of public order. The flour merchants say that the city is within three days of starvation.

The only success won thus far by the employers was at Glasgow, where the street railway strike has collapsed.

Today Premier Asquith held a conference at his office with the other ministers and labor leaders, when the whole question was discussed.

The conference was officially described as "an informal exchange of views as to the present unrest and the possibilities of shortening or preventing industrial disputes."

There was also a conference between the ministers and representatives of the employers' associations interested in the great staple trades.

Trouble Over Soldiers.

The employment of soldiers, while heartily approved by the Unionist party, threatens to involve the government in a warm conflict with their own supporters. The Laborites and the ultra-Radicals are totally opposed to lending military assistance to the police in quelling riots, and curiously, the only support accorded Home Secretary Churchill when he announced in the house of commons yesterday that a brigade of troops had been ordered to Liverpool, came from the opposition benches.

At Shippers' Risk.

New York, Aug. 15.—Local offices of the trans-Atlantic steamship companies and forwarding agents have been advised to cut down the receipt of consignments to the barest limits, on account of the labor disturbances in England. For this reason the campania, sailing tomorrow, and the Cedric, which leaves Thursday, will have light loads. No new orders are to be taken here except at the shippers' risk. The chances are that the goods will be brought back to this port.

Forwarding agents and exporters here have informed their correspondents at Buffalo and other main points that consignments should be detained if possible; but in the majority of cases shippers decided that it was too late to stop carriage and took the chances of having their shipments returned or hoped that the strike would be over by the time they reached the other side.

Economy Shown.

"In relation to the gain of the gas business, the following facts should be considered:

"Last December the gas supplied was 1,685,930 feet less than that of the previous December, notwithstanding the fact that there were 839 more consumers. Several districts were taken and comparative consumptions of the families therein showed a systematic falling off, or economy. The two following months the consumption was practically the same as that of the previous year, so that the increase shown was the increase of the last three months only.

"The increased percentage of water rates over the increased percentage of water pumped is the results, I believe, of the installation of meters, which are being steadily installed at the rate of about 1,000 each year.

KEEP BABY HEALTHY IN SUMMER

It is easier to keep some children in health in winter than in summer. And yet it is very important that the child should be strong and well during the hot weather. In the first place, a very little ill is liable to develop into a large one in summer because of the germs in milk, water and many kinds of food. You should be especially careful not to allow your children to become irregular in their stools during the heated term. The best relief you can give it, and the surest permanent cure, is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, the guaranteed laxative tonic. It is exactly suited to the needs of children because it is gentle and mild in action, absolutely pure and free from narcotics, pleasant to take, and yet it does its work promptly and efficiently. Thousands of mothers keep it constantly in the house against emergencies, and as a bottle costs only 50 cents or $1.00, and can be conveniently obtained of any druggist, no family should be without it. If you are one who has never tried Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and would like to do so before buying it in the regular way, you can obtain a FREE BOTTLE by sending your address to

ALDERMEN ALL AFTER SHARE OF PARK BONDS

Present Needs of Various Wards in Spending the Funds.

Unanimously Authorize Issue for Adding to City Park System.

The city council unanimously authorized the board of park commissioners to issue $50,000 of park bonds last evening. The vote was preceded by a lengthy discussion in which many of the aldermen and three members of the park board participated.

The aldermen from the different wards, and particularly in the western section of the city, asked that the board bear their several constituencies in mind when spending money for parks and playgrounds. They were told by the park board representatives that all parts of the city have been given consideration; that the board has planned for an extensive, unified park system, and that every district cannot be given attention at the same time.

Luther Mendenhall, president of the board, explained that it has always been the policy of the board to spend the money received from the bond sales in the acquisition of additional property. He said that the board is planning to secure park property for the far western sections a year hence, and advocated the extension of Fairmont park to the bay, where a swimming pool could be installed.

Bishop McGolrick asserted that the board is trying to meet the wants of all the people. He said that Duluth has not yet reached the class of Minneapolis, where hundreds of thousands of dollars are being spent for park improvements, but that the board is doing the best possible with the funds at its disposal.

Want Every Gorge.

John Jenswold, Jr., said that a magnificent park system, such as is being given to this city, is the best asset which any city can have. He hoped to see the local park system extended to Fond du Lac, taking in every gorge running to the bay.

Alderman Krueger stated that New Duluth residents have been paying taxes for a long time and are entitled to something in the way of a park or a playground. Alderman Scott declared that when new divisions are opened a part of them should be dedicated for park purposes. Alderman Gibson believed that Oneota should have a park or a playground. Alderman Wharton expressed confidence in the park board and said that the members of the board know more of what is necessary than the members of the council or any other body of men in Duluth. Alderman Curren said that although part of the Fourth ward is known as Park Point, he wished to call attention to the board that it is not all park.

Alderman William Bernard made a plea for the working people. He couldn't see where they derived any benefit from the considerable sums expended on expensive bridges and boulevards at the Snively road, and that as far as the laboring classes are concerned, that money was practically wasted. Alderman MacDonell said that the Fifth ward, which is the heaviest taxpayer in the city, has no parks. Alderman Bergstrom asked that Central park, located on the hillside above the Point of Rocks, be improved. Alderman Barnes thought that more park property and playgrounds should be secured in the Eighth ward. He did not think that it was getting park property in proportion to the taxes which it is paying.

NO MONEY AUTOMOBILE

City Has a Machine and No Cash to Pay For It.

Board Shies at Awarding "$1,000 Letter" Contract for Third Time.

The city is in the position of the man who mortgaged his house to buy an automobile.

City Comptroller W. S. McCormick notified the council last evening that there is not enough money available to pay for the automobile which was ordered by the council for the city engineering department. The cost of the machine was $1,880. He said that it has been turned over to the city and that he has informed the men who made the sale of the condition of the city treasury. In preparing his estimate for the budget for the coming year he has included a sum to meet this obligation.

The board of public works reported back to the council on the improvement of West Fifth street between Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth avenues. It was the changing of the award of this contract which called forth the "$1,000 letter" of Hugh Steele. The board said that it has already awarded the contract twice, once for a combined cement curb and gutter and once for a rough stone gutter, and that as it cannot improve upon either of them, it is willing to abide by the instructions of the council in the matter.

* * *

The board of public works was directed to make an investigation of the lower end of the Lake avenue viaduct to determine what causes the jarring of adjacent buildings when street cars and other vehicles cross it and to take the necessary steps to remedy the condition.

* * *

The board of public works was directed to readvertise for bids for moving the Lakeside fire hall to the site recently purchased by the city. A new fire hall is being built and the old struture will be used as a toolhouse. No bids were received when they were asked for recently.

* * *

The street railway company was directed to extend its line from its present terminus on Raleigh street, down Sixty-third avenue west to the bay front. The committee reported that a considerable number of people will be benefited by the extension.

* * *

Th board of fire commissioners was directed to advertise for bids for the construction of two tanks of 15,000 gallons each to be erected at Gary, and to award the contract subject to the approval of the council. The situation at Gary has been investigated by the fire commissioners and it was found that the property in that vicinity should be given protection. There is an engine stationed at New Duluth, but as there is no water available at Gary at present, it is practically useless. It is not believed that any expense will be incurred in getting the property, as it will either be donated or one of the streets will be used.

* * *

The council accepted an invitation to participate in the annual Labor day parade. The carriages will probably be at the city hall at 9:30 o'clock.

* * *

The bonds of J. J. Moran, recently elected justice of the peace at West Duluth, were approved.

* * *

The engineer asked that he be authorized to hire three additional inspectors and an axman to help take care of city improvements the balance of the season.

* * *

The board of water and light commissioners was directed to turn on the water at the drinking fountain at Lake avenue and Superior street.

The board of public works was authorized to expend $114.93 to pay for the balance due for rebuilding the dock at the foot of Fifth avenue west, which was destroyed by fire which broke out in the lower end of that wholesale district several weeks ago.

* * *

The water and light board submitted its semi-annual report and Alfred Le Richieux reported upon his audit of the city's books for last year.

STATE IS AFTER MILEAGE RETURNS

Has Paid $14,000 Excess for Transportation of Militia.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 15.—Minnesota in all probability will recover from the several railroads in the state, which have during the past two years transported state troops to the annual encampment at an excess of 1 cent a mile, approximately $14,000, according to Attorney General Simpson.

Before the 2-cent rate became effective the roads used to transport the troops at 1 cent a mile, but when the 2-cent fare law was passed the roads made the state pay the same price for taking troops to camp as was paid by others persons. The legislature passed a bill ordering the roads to carry the troops at a cent a mile, but the roads refused and the state paid the full amount, half to be returned, until the matter could be tested in the courts. The suit is still pending, but now that the roads have gone back to the 3-cent fare Mr. Simpson made an effort to settle the matter out of court and he believes he will be successful.

Talked With Officials.

The attorney general went to Chicago last Thursday to confer with the officials of the St. Paul road, and after consulting with Third Vice President J. W. Hiland a tentative promise was made that the matter would be taken up with President A. J. Earling and an agreement probably would be reached by which the road would return approximately $7,000, which is its share of the total amount. The other $7,000 will be returned by the Great Northern, Northern Pacific, Omaha and Minneapolis & St. Louis.

No Husband Unless She Can Keep House.

Christiana, Norway, Aug. 15.—Woman's suffrage has not altered woman's sphere in Norway. A bill has been introduced into the Norwegian parliament providing that no marriage shall be performed unless the prospective bride has previously obtained a certificate attesting a satisfactory knowledge of cooking, laundry and dressmaking. There is a good chance of it becoming a law.

GRANDDAUGHTER FOR JAMES J. HILL.

New York, Aug. 15.—Again the stork has visited the Hotel Plaza. This time he left a granddaughter for James J. Hill, chairman of the board of directors and builder of the Great Northern railroad.

A girl was born to Mrs. Anson M. Beard on last Friday, but no announcement of the event was made until it became known that Mr. and Mrs. Beard had received a telegram of congratulation from Mr. Hill. Mr. and Mrs. Beard, who have a town house at 47 East Sixty-eighth street, have been making their home at the Plaza for several months. Before her marriage, April 2, 1902, she was Miss Ruth Hill.

Count Matsukata attended the wedding as the personal representative of the emperor of Japan. Archbishop Ireland officiated. The wedding was at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James J. Hill in St. Paul.

LAW LIMITS SIZE OF HATS IN CHURCH.

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 15.—A bill making it a misdemeanor for a woman to wear in church a hat more than two feet wide, has been introduced in the Georgia legislature by State Senator Edwards. It was referred to the committee on sanitation and bylaws.

PERKINS HAS BIG PLANS.

Wants Association to Develop Business Policy.

New York, Aug. 15.—George W. Perkins, former partner of J. P. Morgan & Co., who testified last week at the congressional steel inquiry, has authorized the following statement:

"Newspaper editorials and numerous letters I have received seem to show a widespread interest in the country's immediate need of a constructive business policy.

"Men in public life in Washington last week expressed the thought that perhaps the time had arrived to look broadly into the business questions before the country.

"The time would seem to be ripe for some sort of a national co-operative movement to develop, at least to some degree, the views of our people on the problems which confront us and their bearing upon wage earners, investors and consumers as well as our domestic and foreign trade. How best to form some such co-operative association is being made the subject of correspondence.

"I am so deeply interested in this and kindred questions that, in order to give to them even more time than I contemplated when I retired from the banking business last January, it is my intention, as soon as possible to disassociate myself from still other of my business connections."

ACCUSED OF MURDER.

Marinette County Woman Alleged to Have Slain Husband.

Marinette, Wis., Aug. 15.—Mrs. Mary Wetelewski, aged 46, is in jail here charged with the murder of her husband, a resident of Pound, Marinette county, last Wednesday. A death certificate had been issued, but the sheriff became suspicious and had a postmortem examination had. It disclosed that Wetelewsky's skull was badly crushed, as though by a powerful weapon. The woman maintains that her husband while drunk, fell downstairs and received fatal injuries. The dead man's head will be used as an exhibit in the trial.

NO DEFENSE OFFERED

By State in Minneapolis "Seven Senators" Bill Hearing.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 15.—No evidence was introduced by the state yesterday in its defense of the "seven senators" bill before Judge W. E. Hale in the Hennepin district court. The contention of the state is that the records of the legislature are such that they need no defense and Alex L. Janes, assistant attorney general, says he has nothing to introduce.

After George Selover, counsel for the plaintiff, Representative Charles Fowler, had placed Secretary of State Schmahl, Oscar Arneson, chief clerk of the house; J. J. Rice, his second assistant, and Senator W. S. Dwinnell on the stand, he declared he "rested." Judge Hale told him when he got done "resting" to go ahead, the state having no testimony. Mr. Selover then launched into his arguments through which he got half way last night. The case probably will be completed today.

THE FARM SCHOOL SITE.

The report in The Herald of last evening that the board of regents had selected the Greysolon Farms site as the location of the Duluth farm school indicates that the regents have chosen wisely. The land involved is admirably situated for the purpose, and it is as nearly typical as any of the sites proposed.

Besides, the fact that a site has been selected is important in itself, because it means that it will be possible now to get speedy action toward the clearing of the land and the construction of the buildings so that actual demonstration and educational work can be begun next year. The appropriation for the farm school is not available until next year, but doubtless arrangements can be made to anticipate it with the present use of private capital to be reimbursed when the appropriation is available.

The operation of this school will be watched with keen interest. It is a departure from the usual order of things, being an ingenious combination of the agricultural school and the demonstration farm, and this will be the first of its kind established in this state. On its face, it seems likely to be more practical and profitable than either the agricultural school or the demonstration farm, since it will combine the useful features of both while eliminating the complexities and large expenses of the former.

The legislature acted wisely in locating this school in Duluth, and credit is due the St. Louis county delegation and to Charles P. Craig and A. B. Hostetter for their work in putting through the bill providing for it.

WHERE IS DULUTH'S POSTAL BANK?

When the fourth assistant postmaster general was in St. Paul some time ago he told the folks that Duluth was going to be one of the first postoffices of the first class to get a postal savings bank.

That was months ago, and still Duluth has no postal bank.

In the meantime, postal banks have been established in New York, Chicago, St. Louis and Boston, where they took in $110,000 in the first five days; and yesterday it was announced that postal banks would be established immediately in ten more cities—Pittsburg, Detroit, Buffalo, San Francisco, Cincinnati, Kansas City, Seattle, Indianapolis, Denver and Portland, Or.

Perhaps we put more reliance in the promise of the fourth assistant postmaster general than we should. He may have meant well enough, but was not able to deliver the goods. Before it gets down to him there is the postmaster general, the first assistant postmaster general, the second assistant postmaster general and the third assistant postmaster general.

Maybe Duluth's postal savings bank got sidetracked somewhere along that formidable list of functionaries.

But anyway, Duluth is going to get a postal bank sometime. The postmaster general, who is the king pin of the lot, says that ultimately every postoffice will get one, and that clearly includes Duluth.

TO WHAT END?

For many years this country has maintained high protective duties on wool and wool products.

What is known as "Schedule K" of the Aldrich-Payne tariff has had its sister schedules in every tariff bill passed since the war.

Always wool has been highly protected. Always the wool schedule has been the keystone of the protective system. Always those who would vote for high wool duties have been able to get, from the system that controled the dispensation of the tariff special privilege, favors for their own sections. Always those who refused to vote for high wool duties have been denied the tariff favors they sought for the special interests of their own districts—though it is to be admitted that there have been few such instances.

Meanwhile, the people paid. They paid not only for the wool special privilege, but for the countless other special privileges with which the system bought the perfected wool schedule. They paid in dearer clothing, dearer bed clothes, dearer everything they needed to clothe, feed, warm and house themselves. And as the price of wool clothing rose, the quality of wool clothing declined.

And to what end?

The Saturday Evening Post makes this question pertinent by showing that the report of the census bureau on sheep proves that the total number of sheep and lambs in the United States has not increased in the last decade, and that the number of wool-producing sheep has slightly decreased. "In the North Atlantic division," says the Post, "the decrease is a million head, or forty per cent. In the South there has been a decrease. In the North Central division the number has remained stationary. In the Far West there has been an increase of a million head, three-quarters of which occurred in Montana."

"The association which speaks for ninety-seven per cent of the leading clothing manufacturers of the United States," continues the Post, "has declared that, under the beneficent operations of Schedule K, woolen clothes worn by the American people have deteriorated fully one-third in weight, though the price has materially advanced. Wool senators declare we must endure Schedule K, with its duties of more than ninety per cent on manufactures of wool, in order to foster the sheep industry. During the last decade prices of sheep and wool were high—but the sheep industry refused to be fostered. It expanded in Montana, where there was a vast area of cheap unimproved land. Almost everywhere else it stood still or receded. The total number of farms in the United States reporting sheep decreased in the decade by one hundred and fifty-five thousand, or twenty per cent. In the South Central division, where crop values increased one hundred and eleven per cent, the number of farms reporting sheep dropped forty-four thousand.

"What is it that Schedule K's ninety per cent duties are really fostering?

"Who furnishes the fleece for this shearing?"

The Post does not answer its questions, because it is not necessary. Everybody knows that Schedule K is fostering the woolen trust, and that the people furnish the fleece for the trust's shearing.

Nobody has denied that it has been enormously expensive to the consumers to maintain the Republican system of high protection. It has been justified by a claim that good results more than balance the expense. What is to be said in its behalf when the census reports show that there have been no results except the expense?

And the president of the United States, who has said that Schedule K is indefensible, is reported to be about to veto a bill moderating the enormity of Schedule K's oppressions. It will be interesting indeed to hear his justification of that act.

THE PRICE OF COAL.

There is a coal dealer in Buffalo who is franker than most. Interviewed by the Buffalo News the other day about the price of coal, he said: "I have no more to do with it than the man in the moon. The list of prices is sent here from Philadelphia and I have to follow it. I have nothing to do with fixing the prices."

That the coal business is different from most other retail lines in that prices are fixed for the retailers instead of by them has been generally suspected by the most obtuse. The curious coincidence that coal of a given grade costs the same no matter what dealer you buy it from must have impressed itself upon most people. Some have suspected a combination between retailers, but that doesn't go deep enough. The retailers in a given community might combine to fix prices, but that would'nt account for the fact that coal in all other near-by communities costs exactly the same except as freight rates make a difference. That might lead to the inference that there is a state-wide combination of retailers were it not for the fact that the situation is the same across state boundaries.

So fixed is this situation that it has become commonplace. Coal goes up, but never comes down. Its price is fixed by those who are interested solely in getting the utmost possible profits out of it. The needs of the multitudes that require coal to warm themselves, to cook their food and to operate their factories are not considered in the least.

And every pound of this coal at one time was common property. It was created for humanity, and it belonged to the people. They let private interests get control of it, and now they are paying the penalty.

It is worth while occasionally to turn some of these commonplaces inside out and upside down so as to get a new angle of vision upon them. In this case it is worth while because it reveals the enormity of a situation under which selfish private interests control the supply and dictate the prices of a commodity which every human being needs, and under which the common interests of the many receive no consideration whatever.

What is to be done about it? Not much, perhaps. Perhaps a great deal. For one thing, in such circumstances it seems rather ridiculous to keep tariff duties on coal, when that means simply adding so much to the profits of a monopoly. For another, it seems not only absurd but wicked to let what remaining supplies of coal the people own slip into the hands of private interests. That is what Pinchot and Garfield and Roosevelt have been talking about when they opposed letting Morgan and the Guggenheims acquire for a song the rich coal deposits of Alaska.

But if the people have the courage and the will, they might do more than take the duties off coal and preserve for the common good the remaining public supplies of coal. They might regulate the corporations engaged in the mining, shipping and sale of coal.

They might even, at a pinch, condemn for public uses all privately owned coal fields and operate them for the common good.

FLYING.

Blase Chicago sat up and took notice yesterday when Aviator Atwood arrived in his airship after a trip from St. Louis to Chicago, a distance of 286 miles. He made it in ten hours and fourteen minutes including two stops, or five hours and forty-three minutes actual flying time.

Atwood proposes to keep on to Boston, and he hopes to make the trip from St. Louis to that city within seven days.

As a help to your choice between passenger trains and flying machines when you travel next, it may be worth while to examine this feat. Atwood said that he did the trip in three hours and twelve minutes less than the scheduled time for express trains; but apparently he did not count his stops in making this statement. Counting stops he traveled less than thirty miles an hour.

A passenger train traveling at the rate of fifty miles an hour—by no means an impracticable rate—would make the 286 miles from St. Louis to Chicago in almost exactly the same time that Atwood made it in without counting stops.

The advantage in time of the airship over the passenger train is not so great thus far, therefore, as to warrant anybody in throwing away his mileage book. The airship trip is doubtless more exhilarating, and unquestionably it is not dusty, as railroad trips are likely to be at this season.

The balance is so nice, therefore, that the choice between aviation and prosaic passenger train is largely a matter of choice—with most people likely to choose the train.

TAFT AND THE TARIFF

By SAVOYARD.

I believe William H. Taft is the best president the Republican party has given the country during its entire history, though it is true that had Abraham Lincoln lived to defeat the devilry of Stevens, Butler, Wade, Chandler, and their fellow-hyenas in the days of Southern reconstruction, he would have approved himself the best president of his party. Mr. Taft is the first Republican president who is also national in the full sense of the term, the first Republican to regard the South as a full sister in the Union. He appointed three Southerners—all Democrats—to the supreme bench, two of them former Confederate soldiers. Nor is that all, for one of those Confederates is chief justice of that tribunal.

Unfortunately, Mr. Taft was not bred to statecraft. He is a lawyer first and his place was the bench. He is the poorest of politicians and the purest of patriots. There is no guile in him and he will practice no deception to obtain the greatest advantage. Had he been fortunate to possess the political experience of William McKinley, his administration would have been one of the most satisfactory in our history. Every president should first take a whirl in one or both houses of congress. His experience in congress would have made a superb president of William R. Morrison.

When Taft became president he knew absolutely nothing about the tariff. He was a protectionist because he was a Republican, and he was a Republican because his father before him had been a Whig and then a Republican. Consequently, the president depended on Aldrich and Smoot in the senate and Payne and Dalzell in the house to revise the tariff. He expected them to revise it down and was persuaded by them that it was revised down. They deceived him, but they could not deceive the country, and the consequence was the signal Democratic victory of 1910.

The Democrats planned a popgun campaign and put a deal of protection in the wool schedule. The bill went to the senate, where the insurgents injected into it a lot more of protection, and no doubt the conference will compromise between the two and send the bill to the president. It is a poor revision, but such as it is it is better than the Payne-Aldrich monstrosity.

Before this letter is printed, Mr. Taft will have the bill for his approval or veto.

If the president shall veto the bill it will destroy him politically. He is on record as saying that Schedule K—which is wool—of the Payne-Aldrich tariff is indefensible. The late Jonathan P. Dolliver brought tens of thousands of Republicans to look on Schedule K as a monstrosity and his speeches against it, as able as the senate has heard in fifty years, filled fifty seats of the present house with Democrats. The country is enraged against Schedule K, and while the wool bill of this congress is nothing like an adequate revision, such as the country intends to have, yet it is a revision in the right direction, and it would be the most unpopular thing Mr. Taft could possibly do to veto this Underwood-La Follette measure that simply bristles with protection but is a revision down.

The excuse is the tariff board, and the tariff board is a humbug. There again the president was fooled by the standpatters. The board was created to delay tariff revision. It was appointed to do in a few months what it is impossible to do at all. Mr. Redfield made that plain. One of its secretaries, who is presumed to be busy finding out something to instruct congress, is busy writing letters to standpat newspapers in eulogy of a high protective tariff, and when the board makes report, if it ever does, it will be an absolutely worthless document that congress will give not the slightest heed.

The fact of the business is that an immense majority of the American people are grimly resolved to be rid of every purely protective feature of the tariff. On the tariff question Massachusetts is Democratic, so are New York and New Jersey. Ohio is almighty doubtful and Indiana is Democratic. Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, and Nebraska are all doubtful with Democratic leanings, and Woodrow Wilson or Judson Harmon can get more electoral votes out of the last named states and Ohio too than any Republican from Taft down. I grant that if the race issue were not a perennial threat at the South, several states in that section would be very doubtful if not lost to us. Certainly Louisiana is a protection state, and so is Florida. North Carolina and Alabama are nearly so. Many communities in Texas are clamoring for protection, and the same is true of Old Virginia, and Tennessee. Maryland is also bitten by the tarantula.

But thanks to the madness of the Republican party of forty years ago, the South is solidly Democratic, not so much because it wants to be, but because it has to be. It would be a grand stroke of politics if the Republican party should discover the decency, the patriotism, and the wisdom to repeal the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments. It would be worth at least forty seats in congress from the South for the G. O. P., and something more than half a dozen senators; but at the South are Bailey, Martin, Simmons, Clarke of Arkansas and others, and they are valuable Republican assets.

Can it be possible that Taft will veto the wool bill? If he does the Democrats and insurgents in congress have no election but to feed him on such measures until the frost kisses the forests in mid October.

THE OPEN COURT

(Readers of The Herald are invited to make free use of this column to express their ideas about the topics of general interest, but discussions of sectarian religious differences are barred. Letters should not exceed 300 words—the shorter the better. They must be written on one side of the paper only, and they must be accompanied in every case by the name and address of the writer, though these need not be published. A signed letter is always more effective, however.)

WHAT IS A BUSHEL?

To the Editor of The Herald:

As a matter of general interest to your readers will you not publish a list of various articles of produce and their weights per bushel as fixed by the statutes of Minnesota. Many of these articles are now sold by retailers by the peck or bushel at far less than their legal weights, especially onions, potatoes and apples.

AN OLD SUBSCRIBER.

Duluth, Aug. 13.

Section 2728 of the Revised Laws of Minnesota gives the standard weights per bushel as follows: "In contracts for the sale of any of the following articles, unless a contrary intention appears, the term "bushel" shall mean the number of pounds avoirdupois herein stated:

"Corn in ear, 70; beans, peas, wheat, clover seed, and Irish potatoes, 60; broomcorn seed and sorghum seed, 57; shelled corn and rye, 56; sweet potatoes, 55; onions and rutabagas, 52; buckwheat, hemp seed, rape seed, beets and green apples, 50; barley, millet, and Hungarian grass seed, 48; carrots and timothy seed, 45; blueberries and parsnips, 42; currants and gooseberries, 40; cranberries, 36; oats, 32; dried apples and dried peaches, 28; charcoal, 20; blue grass, orchard grass and redtop seed, 14; plaster hair, unwashed, 8; plaster hair, washed, 4; coal, 80, but if sold by the ton the weight shall be 2,000 pounds; lime, 80, but if sold by the barrel the weight shall be 200 pounds.

"Whoever, in buying, shall take any greater number of pounds or cubic feet to the bushel, ton, or cord, as the case may be, than is herein allowed, or in selling, shall give any less number, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor."

THAT MOTOR BOAT RACE.

Your sporting writer said in last night's paper that he thought the Minneapolis boys who brought the Minnetonka up here should have stayed over and given Mr. Schell another race. Permit me to call your attention to the fact that such a proceeding would find no precedent in sporting annals. It is not at all sportsmanlike to demand another race under those circumstances. The thing to do is to put Mr. Schell and his boat on a flat car (or perhaps get a little more money and let Dick ride on a passenger train) and send them down to Minnetonka and let him try to get that lost trophy back again. That Minnetonka crowd, if they had lost the race, would have packed up their little old boat and gone home and built another one, and hoped for better luck next time. They were a good lot of sports, and they had a mighty good boat, and they ran her in splendid shape, and if the Schell boat had not met with the mishap, which comes to even the best of them, the race would have been the most spectacular ever seen in the West, for both boats are whirlwinds, and they were both handled by experts at the racing game.

So kindly spank your sporting writer for me (I would do it myself if he wasn't so dinged muscular looking), and for the sake of the racing game here, and in justice to the bunch of real sports who brought their boat up here to compete in our race, give them credit for their beautiful, speedy boat, and for the splendid race they ran—and won. Sincerely yours,

DAVID HENRY DAY.

Duluth, Aug. 15.

STERLING CHAMPION OF PEOPLE APPRECIATED.

To the Editor of The Herald:

In these days of political treachery and betrayer of the people's rights, it is comforting and reassuring to observe the battle for the proletariat waged by that sterling champion of the toiling masses, Alderman Krueger of New Duluth.

When the minds of men are surfeited by the complex problems of disorganized political government, they may turn to study the simple individualism of this man.

When the eyes of men are wearied by headlines flaming with chromatic crime in business and political service, they may pause to visualize the purity of this soul gleaming in its pristine beauty from its Rock of Ages, indestructible as the precipices of Gibraltar.

When the senses of men are bewildered by false doctrines and their feet are led astray by prophets of evil, they may seek the sweet repose of the sylvan glades or vine-clad hills of New Duluth; they may point the faltering Tribies toward that mighty voice of Krueger, that will be to them as a beacon of fire by night and a column of smoke by day, leading them from the wilderness.

Behold this man, gentle reader. I saw him last night in the arena. 'Twas in the council chamber and his voice thundered that the children of New Duluth might have playgrounds. Picture to yourself the misery of that suburb. In my frenzied fancy, Mr. Editor, I can see the agony on mothers' faces, I can sense the anguish that grips their hearts as with bated breaths they feverishly watch the onrushing muley cows and children laughingly scattering to safety or circling as matadors about mild bovines, chewing cuds complacently.

I can see strong men pale and women faint as children, fiercely struggling, compete for honors in a thorny raspberry patch. The heart stops (but not for long) when the dangers that menace the welfare of children in New Duluth are analyzed, held up to view, understood.

From the swirling waters of the muddy St. Louis, where the terrible hell-diver devours minnows ferociously to the scurried crags of Proctor, where monster belching fire and smoke plunge madly over steel, the little children of Duluth's Arcady squat in terror and misery, affrighted at these horrendous manifestations of the commercial juggernaut.

Let us give New Duluth playgrounds, Mr. Editor. Let us do this thing and do it at once for Mr. Krueger will soon be running for re-election.

ONE OF THE TOILING MASSES.

Strike at Mammoth Cave.

Chicago Inter Ocean: The Amalgamated Association of Mammoth Cave guides, with a membership of six, has struck. As a consequence, the management is in sore straits, and the public that wants to go through the great natural wonder has to content itself with a look at the anterior orifice.

What makes the strike unusually embarrassing for the management is the circumstances that the six guides are the only men who know the cave. They have been guiding for about twenty years, and hence know every nook and corner and danger along the whole course. But as they had no apprentices, nobody else does.

This little fact may account for their willingness to see the cave manager undertake to run the concern with non-union labor. Unlike most unions, they positively welcome the suggestion. The management has nothing to fear in the way of picketing or attempts to interfere with its business, if what is reported of the striking guides is true.

But nonunion labor, in spite of the apparently favorable conditions, is strangely backward in the vicinity of Mammoth Cave. It seems to feel that the danger of stepping off into "the bottomless pit," or Echo river, or some of the other attractions of the cave, or of getting lost amid the forest of stalactites and stalagmites and never getting back again, makes the job on the whole a most undesirable one.

In the meantime, the cave business, which, if we remember correctly, ranked third in the list of Kentucky's principal occupations at the last census, is absolutely going to ruin. Day after day the management is compelled to decline to fill orders. The clientelo of this once flourishing concern is rapidly disbanding.

Finding it impossible to secure what they want in the cave line, people are no doubt turning their attention to Niagara Falls, Yosemite valley, Yellowstone park, the Grand Canyon of the Colorado and other institutions which are not suffering from labor troubles. There is really no estimating the number of thrills and shivers and "ohs!" and "how wonderfuls!" that Kentucky will lose this year on account of the interruption in the cave business.

No Insulting Men There.

London Chronicle: In savage countries a strange woman may travel without insult. Mrs. Mary Gaunt, who is Mrs. Lindsay-Miller, has just come back from a journey about West Africa. She has been through Ashanti, far beyond Kumasi, and most of the time with nobody who could talk any language she understood. A woman alone. But among gentlemen. As soon as you get beyond the missionary area you find the real gentleman, who is clean and honorable, and—you can leave all your belongings outside your tent. They are safe. And the Englishwoman is safe. Mrs. Gaunt is going to write a book about that woman's journey through the savage country, where every man is a gentleman.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Discrimination.

Cambridge Independent Press: The jobbers, wholesalers and those who can afford to travel frequently purchase and travel on the mileage book plan at 2 cents a mile and those who once in a while have to travel have to pay 3 cents a mile. It doesn't cost the railway more to carry one person than another and if it can afford to carry one person at 2 cents a mile it can afford to carry all at that rate. The legislature should refer to the people for approval the abolition of the gross earnings tax and tax the railroads the same as all other property is taxed and the people would thereby save in taxes what the increase in the passenger rate amounts to.

The Master Mind.

Cambridge North Star: The daily papers report that Senator E. E. Smith has returned from his vacation in the East. Things will run more smoothly at the capitol from now on.

Satan Never Rests.

Austin Transcript: Many of the large city churches are closed for the summer? Have you heard of the dives or other evil resorts closing for summer? Satan takes no vacations.

Very Much, Indeed.

St. Cloud Times: Hammond for governor! No! No! He would not stand to be touted at pink peas and other small functions, and that is about what the governor's position amounts to in these these piping times of peace.—Mankato Free Press.

Yes with an Eberhart for governor. But with a Hammond governor it would be different.

The Wrong Tactics.

Madison Independent Press: Radical criticism of Mr. Taft will in no way help Mr. La Follette in his effort to secure the Republican nomination for the presidency next year. Mr. Taft's course hasn't been what those who voted for him had a right to expect, but abuse from a man who wants his job will not help that man in the getting of it.

Away, of Course.

Mankato Free Press: Representative Fred Stevens predicts that next year Governor Eberhart will have a walkaway. Which way?

Nothing But Discrimination.

Litchfield Independent: The preachers have been given a rate of 1½ cents a mile as fare on the railroads of this state the roads having done this voluntarily, notwithstanding their contention, upheid by Judge Sanborn, that a rate of 2 cents is confiscatory. The railroads do not seem satisfied unless they can discriminate between persons and between towns. The railroad system of this country is permeated with the rankest and most unjust discriminations in favor of one set of patrons and one set of towns and localities and against other persons and places.

No Show For a Poor Man.

Madison Western Guard: The railroads can afford to carry you for 2 cents a mile if you can afford to own a mileage book. The poor man can not afford to invest money in a mileage book, hence he gets the worst of it, as usual. The only way to enjoy special privileges is to be rich.

True Enough.

Austin Transcript: The announcement from Washington that the rural mail carriers are to receive an advance of $100 a year is very gratifying to all who know of their exposure in all kinds of weather and the expense of keeping up teams and vehicles. No branch of the postal service is more deserving.

A Busy Season Coming.

Cambridge North Star: For an off year there is a good deal of politics in the air. The next convention will be the most interesting ever held in Minnesota and we predict that the shores will be strewn with wrecks and busted "barls."

GERMANS MAY LOCATE HERE

A. H. Krieger Interested in Colonization of St. Louis County Lands.

Experts From Across the Sea Impressed With Fertility of Land.

Efforts are being made by A. H. Krieger of this city to induce a number of expert agriculturalists of Germany to locate in St. Louis county, and members of the party who have come to the United States and have looked over the lands here are impressed with the richness of the soil.

Mr. Krieger, who is well acquainted with many of these agriculturalists, is using his influence to have them select the St. Louis county lands, and he believes that they are thoroughly convinced that the best lands available are here. He states that they came to America first through the efforts of Indiana people, who want them to settle near La Porte, but since they have come here they are making extensive investigations before making their final decision. Members of the colony have visited in all parts of the United States and in Western Canada, and have taken all the facts at their command, including soil surveys.

They have been seriously considering the purchase of lands in the Eastern states with the view of reclaiming the old farms, but they are hesitating because they realize the importance of the fresh soil and its many possibilities.

The lands in Northern Minnesota, they believe from their observations, are far superior to those of the Eastern states, and they believe that the production of one acre here will equal from three to five acres in the East. They were especially impressed with the berries that can be raised in St. Louis county.

These men are connected with agricultural schools of Germany, and are experts in their line. Should they come here, they would not go into the farming business with the view of raising the coarser produce, but would devote their attention to the development of the fancy goods, and the cultivation of flowers. In Germany they have spent most of the time in producing flowers, especially roses, and they have furnished Europe with its best roses.

A party of these German agriculturalists is expected here by Mr. Krieger the last part of this month or early in September, when he will go over the situation with them more thoroughly, and he believes that he can convince them of the value of Northern Minnesota lands.

SOCIALIST LYCEUM BUREAU

Planned at Milwaukee Socialist-Democratic Meet to Spread Ideas.

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 15.—The inauguration of a national Socialist lyceum bureau, was discussed by L. F. Kattersold of Chicago at the closing meeting of the national conference of Social Democratic officials Monday. He told of the effort that might be made through the bureau to more firmly organize the party in the United States by concentrated action by the Socialists' newspapers to gain subscribers and members to the party. A vote indorsing the project was taken by the conference.

A resolution was passed asking that the national executive committee be instructed to call the next conference just before the national convention next summer.

A resolution was adopted for the formation of a central information bureau that could be used to keep all locals in the country informed as to what was going on in the ranks of the party.

Harry E. Briggs, commissioner of public works, addressed the meeting in the afternoon on "Public Works Department and Its Functions." W. E. Leiserson, secretary of the Wisconsin commission for the unemployed discussed the "unemployed problem" and Mrs. Victor L. Berger, wife of Congressman Berger told of her work as a member of the Milwaukee school board.

ASTOR'S NEW BRIDE TO BE ECONOMICAL.

New York, Aug. 15.—It is the opinion of some Fifth avenue modistes that Miss Madeline Force, the young fiancee of Col. John Jacob Astor, is to be very economical in the arrangements for her wedding trousseau. She and Col. Astor drove in a taxicab to five shops yesterday afternoon, where the young woman made it plain that $1,000 would be the limit of expenditure for her wedding finery.

In contrast to the $20,000 which a society girl is said to have spent on her trousseau recently, including $2,500 for a single gown, it was said that Miss Force objected to a $250 creation which one modiste showed her, and found one at a shop further on which pleased her just as well for $100.

SHRINERS AT FOND DU LAC

Good Program of Amusements—Tugs of War Features.

That local Shriners are as capable of entertaining themselves as they are of entertaining others is being demonstrated today, for they are having a gay time at Fond du Lac on their annual outing. The party, several hundred strong, left this morning at 9 o'clock on the steamer Columbia, and will be back at 6 o'clock this evening. Many others went up during the day in launches.

The program of sports was one of the most interesting ever prepared by any local organization, and consisted of eighteen events, among them being tugs of war, one between the married and unmarried Shriners, and another between married and unmarried women. For each event a suitable prize was awarded.

BRYAN WILL NAME "RIGHT MAN" LATER

Says He Is Looking Up All He Can Find Out About Candidates.

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 15.—"I intend to devote all my time from now one until the nomination to finding out things about the candidates for the Democratic nomination for president," said William J. Bryan to a large audience here yesterday.

"I know all the leading men of the party, those who hindered and those who have helped it. When the time comes to name the man for the candidacy I will not be silent."

Mr. Bryan was the guest of the Jefferson club of Columbus at a big rally and barbecue. He was particularly elated at the news which came from Lincoln, Neb., to the effect that he is a grandfather again. His son, William, is the father of a second daughter.

Governor Harmon was invited to the rally, but he sent word that he would be in his summer home in Michigan on a vacation. Mr. Bryan refrained from mentioning the governor in any of his interviews or speech.

Will Tell All He Knows.
"I am going to give the Democratic party all the information I possess about the campaign so they can choose the right man for the head of the ticket," said Mr. Bryan.

"I am not going to mention individuals now, the country has many available men. Recently I mentioned some of the men I believed to be tolerable as political candidates, and I am as glad as I was then that the Democracy is so fortunate to have so many."

The men whom Mr. Bryan mentioned some time ago did not include Governor Harmon.

"I intend to devote my time to driving plutocracy from the throne and putting the right man in the right seat.

"I shall find out everything I can about the candidates between now and convention time and will tell all to the people as I learn more and more about them. I haven't a friend in the United States whom I would reward at the expense of my party or my country."

DISFIGURING ECZEMA CURED IN 2 WEEKS

Blisters Broke and Formed Scabs. Nose Covered with Them. Very Itchy. Used Cuticura Remedies. Now Hasn't a Single Mark.

"My nephew first showed signs of eczema on the middle finger, and it came out like a blister. His mother thought he had gotten a burn in some way unknown to her, and she treated it as such. He must have rubbed his face with that hand, as it then broke out on his nose the same way. When the blisters broke, they shrivelled up and formed scabs. His nose was covered with scabs, and it was very itchy. He was badly disfigured with unsightly scabs. At first, his nose was sore, and it gradually became worse so his mother took him to the doctor. He gave her some preparation, and told her to rub the scabs off every day, and anoint the affected part with the medicine he gave her.

"The man must have been insane, as that was extreme torture to the child who was only two years old at the time, and that was two years ago. Well, we decided that that treatment would have to end. I suggested Cuticura Ointment and they bought it and put it on freely every day for two weeks. He had the eczema for four weeks altogether, but was getting gradually worse until they used the Cuticura Remedies, and he was cured in two weeks. He most certainly would have been scarred with the other treatment, but now he hasn't a single mark. Cuticura Remedies cured him in two weeks, and now we always keep them in the house." (Signed) Miss Ida Slavin, 283 South Fifth St., Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 4, 1911.

For more than a generation the Cuticura Remedies have afforded the most economical treatment for affections of the skin and scalp of infants, children and adults. A cake of Cuticura Soap (25c.) and a box of Cuticura Ointment (50c.) are often sufficient. Although sold throughout the world, a liberal sample of each, with 32-p. book on the skin, will be sent free, on application to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. 13A, Boston.

TWO FATALLY HURT IN CINCINNATI FIRE.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Aug. 15.—Fatal injury to two firemen, slight hurts to four park employes, and a loss estimated at $250,000, were the results of a fire which started in the kitchen of the clubhouse at Chester park, an amusement resort, last night.

The flames spread from the park to the lumber yards adjoining, and there Capt. Herman Flacke, 65 years old, a veteran of the Cincinnati fire department, and W. Gerne, 25 years old, met injuries which are expected to result in their death. Flacke was overcome by the heat and Gerne received a fracture of the skull when a pile of lumber fell upon him.

None of the other injured persons were seriously hurt.

The flagship Bear, sailing homeward after a three months' cruise of approximately 10,000 miles, reports by wireless that there is no ice in Bering sea nor along the shores of Alaska or Siberia. Such a condition has not been observed for several years.

SAYS BOY MURDERER IS WHOLLY RATIONAL.

New York, Aug. 15.—Paul Geidel, the youthful slayer of William H. Jackson, the broker, suffers from no mental ailment, but is sane and rational, in the opinion of James A. Cleary, his counsel. Mr. Cleary added that he based his belief upon information given him by an alienist who examined the bellboy in his cell for three hours recently. If the alienist so reported formally, Mr. Cleary said, there would be no application for a lunacy commission, as had been contemplated.

Des Moines, Iowa, Aug. 15.—Peter Juhl, alias John Lewis, who was captured at St. Paul, is wanted by the authorities of Polk county here on the charge of safe blowing in connection with the attempted hold-up of the Polk county treasury on the night of March 31 last.

ISSUE TWO PAPERS FROM SAME PLANT

Merging Grand Forks Publications Will Effect Many Changes.

Grand Forks, N. D., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—In the announcement that was made this morning by George B. Winship of his retirement from the head of the Grand Forks Daily Herald, a publication which he founded thirty-two years ago, is seen the culmination of the biggest newspaper deal ever launched and successfully carried through in the state of North Dakota. The deal in question provides for the organization of a company of capitalists, largely Grand Forks residents, who purchased the Grand Forks Herald and the Grand Forks Evening Times, continuing the two newspapers from a single plant. While an entirely new company has been launched it is in reality a purchase of the Herald through the work of those interested in the Evening Times. J. D. Bacon of this city, president of the Times Publishing company, being the leader in the consolidation movement. No formal announcement has been made yet of the organization of the new company, and such announcement probably will not be made until the organization has been perfected.

Both to Be Republican.
Under the new organization the two newspapers will be Republican in policy, and as Mr. Winship in his farewell editorial this morning puts it, the policy will be fair to all factions and to all parties.

There is naturally a great deal of speculation at the manner of reorganization of the two papers to suit the new arrangement, but no announcement on that score has been made, nor is there anything definite as to the course that will be pursued.

In the purchase of the Grand Forks Herald, it is understood that $125,000 changes hands, while in the purchase of the Grand Forks Times, $91,000 is the amount that is said to have been paid, making a total deal that calls for $216,000 in finances. The Times has been in existence since Jan. 1, 1906.

GEORGIA ANTI-LIQUOR BILL NOT VOTED ON.

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 15.—An attempt to extend Georgia's anti-liquor statutes at the present session of the legislature ended in failure. The Typlans bill, prohibiting for the sale of beverages containing more than one-half of one per cent alcohol and aimed primarily at the traffic in near beer, was killed by a house committee. Thus the sale of beer will continue for at least one year more, as the remaining days of the assembly will be taken up with privileged business and no new bill can be introduced.

Deceased was a graduate of the Luther L. Wright high school of Ironwood in the class of 1900. He was 30 years of age and lived at home with his parents Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Boylington, and three sisters and one brother, Agnes, Georgia, Bessie and James. Mr. Boyington was a contractor in Hurley and very well known in both Hurley and Ironwood. The funeral will be held at the home on Wednesday afternoon with interment in the Hurley cemetery. Rev. G. M. Tourteloff of the First Presbyterian church of Ironwood will conduct the services.

Mr. de Canolle is extensively interested in railroads in South America, and while here he has been the guest of W. A. Smith, special agent of the Great Northern. MILWAUKEE BEER DEAL

Reported There of Sale of Big Breweries Interests.

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 15.—It is reported that the controlling interest of the Independent Milwaukee brewery has passed into the hands of Milwaukee Brewery company officials.

Rumor has it that during the last few months agents of the Milwaukee Brewing company have secured sufficient Independent brewery stock to give the Milwaukee company control of the Independent brewery at any time they may wish.

William Gutknecht, Jr., one of the big owners of stock in the Independent company, admitted yesterday that he sold his stock recently to Gustav G Gehrz, attorney for the Milwaukee Brewing company. Mr. Gutknecht said he understood the stock was purchased for members of the Milwaukee brewery.

The same rumor says that other stockholders have been approached and their stock has been transferred to the control of the Milwaukee company.

NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST

BIG EVENT OF SESSION

When State Lawmakers Deadlocked All Night Over "Seven Senators" Bill.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Opening the attack on the so-called "seven senators" bill, in the Hennepin county district court, has recalled to a number of persons in the state capitol the all-night session of the senate when Duxbury of Houston county and Boyle of St. Louis yanked the upper branch of the legislature into a deadlock, and Lieutenant Governor Gordon faced the most critical moment in his career as presiding officer.

Senators Duxbury, Moonan, Haycraft and one or two others had hauled the steam roller out and the big machine was impatiently chugging, eager to roll over and upon the minority who opposed the measure. The country delegates with but few exceptions, had lined up ready to annihilate any opposition that appeared. That the bill would carry was conceded. It had been denounced as the most dastardly piece of legislation ever enacted in the Minnesota senate, but its denunciation brought only grins from the authors.

Boyle Invokes Rule.

It was then that Senator Boyle invoked the rule requiring all members except those excused, to be in their seats. Senator Gunderson was absent—not excused. Governor Gordon ruled that his presence might be required and that a two-thirds vote would be necessary to suspend the rules. The majority didn't have them. Senator Duxbury insisted that a majority might take this action and appealed from the ruling of the chair. Before the vote could be put however, a chorus of "No's!" burst from all sections of the senate chamber and much dismayed. Duxbury withdrew his motion and apologized for making it. Then the senate settled down to what appeared to be an all night's session.

From the minority the clamor had come that the bill had been improperly brought over to the senate from the house, that when the house adjourned a motion to reconsider the bill was pending. It was also urged that it was not properly engrossed. Lieut. Governor Gordon stood "pat" however, that the bill had come in proper form and he had no alternative than to present it for action.

Steam Roller Again Used.

Senator Gunderson was found along about midnight, and the steam roller again wheeled into line. Then it was discovered that Senator Wilson had disappeared. The sergeant-at-arms was dispatched to Minneapolis in a taxicab to find him, and again the senate prepared to nap. During all this time, however, Senator Boyle was pleading with the senate to go on with other business. He agreed to allow any bill but the seven-senators bill to be taken up while effort was being made to bring in the absentees. But Duxbury and Moonan refused and insisted that it was Boyle and not them, tying up the deliberations of the body. At 3 o'clock in the morning, with Senator Wilson still absent, Duxbury and his followers, worn out, agreed to adjourn till daylight, or until 9:30 o'clock. "Jimmie" Boyle had fought them to a stand-still that night, anyway. The first thing when the senate re-convened in the morning, however, the bill was railroaded through. The second round of the battle is now being waged in Minneapolis, and regardless of which side wins, the case will be carried to the supreme court for a final determination.

It is known that after that memorable all night's fight, when the bill was finally passed, members of both factions went to Lieutenant Governor Gordon and commended him for his rulings of the night before. They admired his "backbone," they said, in standing pat.

"WILD MAN" RAMPANT.

Strange Undressed Individual Reported on Conderay Reservation.

Conderay, Wis., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Blueberry pickers report having seen a "wild man" in a large blueberry marsh near Chief lake on the Conderay Indian reservation near here. They claim the man wears no clothes and carries a hand satchel which is supposed to contain a large sum of money. His hair and whiskers are long and unkempt. He carries a large club and refuses to let any one come near him. He lives principally on wild berries and nuts, and goes to the Chippewa river for water. When fed raw meat he ate it ravenously like a wild animal. The affair has caused much excitement and the authorities are investigating.

HAZEN CHARGES NOT RETURNED

Simpson Declines to Do as Governor Eberhart Asked.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—The request made by Governor Eberhart of George T. Simpson, attorney general, that he return to Viggo Peterson, chairman of the Beltrami board of county commissioners, the charges preferred against Sheriff Hazen, will be ignored. Neither will copies of the affidavits sent the chief executive by the commissioner be made. The incident is closed, Mr. Simpson says, for the time at least.

"I don't care to discuss the situation," Mr. Simpson said. "The matter has been referred to this department, and if there is politics or an effort to move dismissal of an officer on behalf of Mayor Dumas of Cass Lake, I propose knowing it. I shall keep the papers for the present."

Has Caused Friction.

More unpleasantness has developed in the state capitol over these charges than over any other small incident of recent date. The inference has been drawn from some source that removal of Sheriff Hazen was being attempted in order to name a successor more friendly to Mayor Dumas of Cass Lake, charged with incendiarism. The sheriff will select the panel of jurymen who will of necessity handle the Dumas charges.

Friction between the attorney general's department and that of the secretary of state was also noted yesterday when arguments on the "Seven Senator" bill were taken up in the Hennepin county district court. Mr. Simpson did not go near the courthouse, but sent Alex Janes, one of his assistants, to handle the case.

CLOQUET MAN IS DECLARED CRAZY

Charles Edmonson Loses His Mind Brooding Over Unfortunate Investments.

Carlton, Minn., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Charles Edmonson was brought over here from Cloquet on Saturday on a complaint charging insanity. He was examined Monday, and the findings of the board of insanity commissioners committed him to the insane asylum at Fergus Falls, whither he was taken by the sheriff. Mr. Edmonson has been an active business man of the lumber city for several years. Not long since he received a payment of $36,000 for his share of a mining property up on the range. He has of late, however, been engaged in the real estate business there, and was not meeting with the success he had hoped for, and it is thought the business reverses have weighed on his mind of late with the result that it became unbalanced.

CARLTON COUNTY DISTRICT COURT

Judge Dibell Decides Divorce Suit and Hears Other Matters.

Carlton, Minn., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Judge Homer B. Dibell opened an adjourned term of district court here yesterday, to decide on some cases left over from the April term. The first one passed upon was that of a divorce case brought by William F. Brockman against Alice Brockman. The parties reside at Barnum and were married in 1899. The ground for the action was desertion. A decree was granted.

The second case was one to quiet title to a piece of land at Barnum, brought by Augusta Goodell against August Prescott. The finding was for the plaintiff.

Following this was a suit brought to quiet title by Charles R. Stal against the St. Paul & Duluth Railway company, involving a piece of land near Barnum. The court found for the plaintiff.

Then came the case of Andrew D. Anderson, a moving contractor of Duluth, against Walter L. Case and John White. Plaintiff asked for $700 for moving a house at Scanlon. The original contract called for the removal of twenty houses. The houses were all moved, and Walter L. Case paid his half, but White demurred, alleging that in moving the buildings the contractor had damaged them so as to make them unfit for use, and would not pay for the last five, leaving a balance unpaid of $700. Quite a number of witnesses were made use of, and the judge took the matter under consideration. Court is in session again today.

WILLIAMS AND DIVIDE AGREE

Old and New North Dakota Counties About Settle Their Differences.

Williston, N. D., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—The difficulties of long standing between Williams county and the new county of Divide have been settled by the payment by Williams to Divide of $26,000. Several actions in the Williams county district court involving the questions have been dismissed.

The county commissioners of Williams and Divide have yet to make some agreement with reference to the distribution and allowance of the cost of property improvements, a question that very likely will cause considerable trouble, as it has always proved a knotty one in other counties where new counties have been lodged.

UNIQUE CHARACTER GONE.

"Foul-Mouthed" Bill Jones, Known in Bismarck, Dead.

Bismarck, N. D., Aug. 15.—News has reached here of the finding of the body of "Foul-Mouthed Bill Jones" in Yellowstone park. It is supposed that he became lost last winter and was frozen to death.

Where is the old-timer of Bismarck or Medora of thirty years ago who does not remember "Bill Jones?" Jones was a man of limited education, but had a ready and wonderful amount of repartee and a warm heart. In the early '70s he was a soldier in the regular army at Fort Pembina, from which post he deserted, and traveled up the Red river to where Fargo is now located, where he joined the surveying party of the Northern Pacific and came over the country to Bismarck, where he lived some years. He at one time drove the mail wagon from Bismarck to Fort Stevenson.

Some thirty years ago he drifted to the Little Missouri country, where he followed hunting and working on ranches. For two terms he served as sheriff of Billings county. He left there some ten years ago for the Yellowstone park, in which country he remained until his death.

To distinguish him from another "Bill Jones," he was called "Foul-Mouthed Bill Jones."

AFTER MORE MONEY.

Additional Suits for Inheritance Taxes Threatened.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 15.—Suits for the collection of more than $600,000 due the state of Minnesota in inheritance taxes are being prepared by Attorney General Simpson and within the course of the next few weeks will be filed. It is the expectation of the attorney general to bring into the state treasury the greatest sum from this source the commonwealth has known, not excepting two years ago when collections caused officials to consider the advisability of levying no taxes at all.

During the past two years inheritance taxes collected have aggregated approximately $500,000 annually. If the usual amount is collected from residents who die and leave valuable estates, the sum collected from non-residents this year probably will make the total far in excess of any sums received heretofore. The actions Mr. Simpson is getting ready to institute now are for obtaining inheritance taxes on railroad stocks and other Minnesota corporations. One suit will reach as far as Alaska, where a valuable mine is operated as a Minnesota corporation.

The last session of the legislature placed the collection of the inheritance taxes in the attorney general's department. For the greater part, the tax is 5 per cent.

CARLTON OFFICIALS QUIT.

Mayor and Recorder Resign Because They Cannot Fulfill Duties.

Carlton, Minn., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mayor H. S. Lord and Recorder James McFarland have resigned their positions on the city council, giving as their reasons that the duties of the offices taks up so much of their time that it interferes with their private business. It is understood that ex-Sheriff Alfred H. Lee, now engaged in the grain and feed business here, has been appointed as recorder, while so far a successor to the mayor has not been decided upon. As there are many contemplated improvements to be made here the coming year in the way of concrete sidewalks, water and sewer and other utilities, it is hoped that a progressive man will be secured to carry out the program of the outgoing mayor.

DAKOTA BRIEFS

Ambrose, N. D.—Experiments demonstrating that alfalfa can be grown in Divide county are being carried out near this city by Ole N. Gilbertson. His present crop of alfalfa stands about fifteen inches high, while the roots have taken a firm hold. Even the hot dry weather of July failed to have any damaging effect to this crop.

Jamestown, N. D.—Road improvement sentiment that was created in this county when the North Dakota Good Roads association held its annual meeting here has been beneficial in considerable work on the main roads leading out of this city to various sections of the county. Camden, N. D.—After undergoing an operation for goitre at Rugby on Thursday and apparently making good progress towards recovery Minnie Laird passed away Friday evening in one of her spells of nervous trouble, having been unconscious for twenty minutes. Grand Forks, N. D.—J. Neal Dow, for some time manager of the Hotel Dacotah, was an arrival in the city Saturday evening from the South, where he has been for the past few months. Mr. Dow is much improved in health as a result of the change in climate. He expects to visit for a short time with friends in this city.

Minot, N. D.—Chicken shooting in North Dakota, the season for which opens Sept. 7, promises to be exceptionally good, according to reports received by State Game Warden E. H. Stenvick of Minot. The warm sunshiny days of May and June were ideal for hatching and conditions have been excellent during the entire summer.

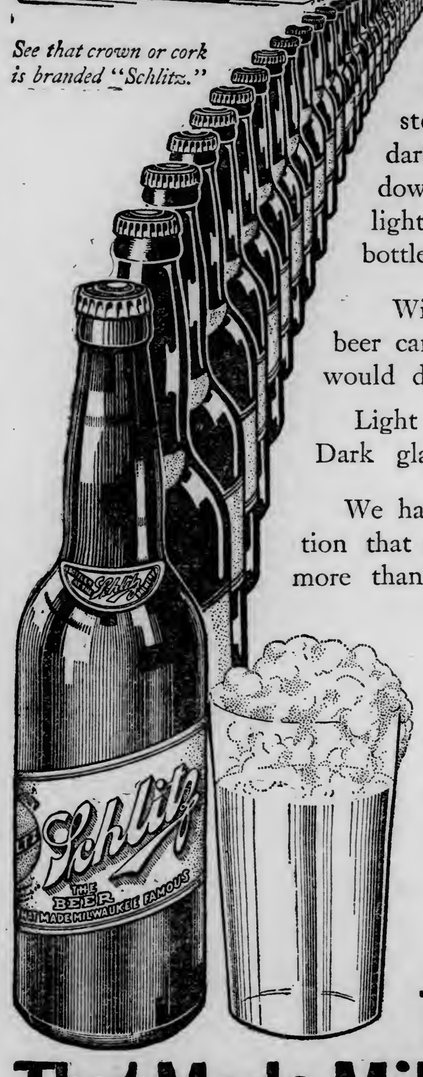
See that crown or cork is branded "Schlitz."



Schlitz is brewed in the dark—stored for months in glass lined steel enameled tanks—bottled in darkened rooms where even the window shades are drawn to exclude the light—then sent to you in brown bottles.

Without all of these precautions, no beer can be healthful, and who knowingly would drink beer that was not.

We have adopted every idea, every invention that could aid to this end. Today, more than half the cost of our brewing is spent to make and keep Schlitz beer pure.

If you knew what we know about beer, you would ask for "Schlitz—Schlitz in Brown Bottles."

HEALTHY MOTHERS

Unless the mother aids nature in its pre-natal work the crisis finds her system unequal to the demands made upon it, and she is often left with weakened health or chronic ailments. No remedy is so truly a help to nature as Mother's Friend, and no expectant mother should fail to use it. It relieves the pain and discomfort caused by the strain on the ligaments, makes pliant and elastic those fibres and muscles which nature is expanding, prevents numbness of limbs, and soothes the inflammation of breast glands. The system being thus prepared by Mother's Friend dispels the fear that the crisis may not be safely met. Mother's Friend assures a speedy and complete recovery for the mother, and she is left a healthy woman to enjoy the rearing of her child. Mother's Friend is sold at drug stores. CHILD FALLS FROM ATTIC

Drops Twenty-five Feet to Concrete, But Escapes Death.

Three-year-old Gladys Hertegun, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ole Hertegun of 2209 West Second street, fell twenty-five feet from an attic window at home yesterday afternoon, miraculously escaping death.

The child alighted on a cement sidewalk. In falling the force of the crash was probably broken when the girl struck the porch. She sustained a broken left leg and other less severe injuries.

The girl was playing with three other children in the attic. Her attention was attracted to the street and in looking out the window, she lost her balance.

TYPHOID CAUSED BY DRINKING WELL WATER.

Is the water taken from the wells in the vicinity of Twenty-sixth avenue west and Railroad street, conducive to the spread of typhoid and unfit for drinking purposes?

Dr. O. A. Oredson, a West end physician, who has been treating cases of typhoid fever in families using this water, blames the water for the appearance of the disease.

Every year, according to the doctor, there are cases of typhoid in this vicinity. The drinking water comes from wells which are sunk through the slab fill below the level of the bay and it is thought that much sewerage drains into them.

FITCH PLAY AT THE LYCEUM

Forbes Stock Company Presents "The City" in Splendid Style.

Duluth this week has an opportunity to witness a production of Clyde Fitch's last play, "The City" by the Forbes Stock company that is well worth all the praise which can be given to the producers. "The City" is a play which might be easily turned to the poorest melodrama with a very little crude acting but the company producing it this week keeps it well away from any suggestion of this kind and do justice to Mr. Fitch's work in every way.

For the first time since the company has played here, Mr. Forbes may perhaps be said to take second honors. Mr. Forbes occupies a central and prominent position in the cast, and handles it with his usual taste and skill but in the minds of most of the audience last night, Edwin Brandt, playing the part of the "dope fiend," carried off first honors. Mr. Brandt's presentation of the part on a week's work is little short of marvelous and he won rounds of applause from the audience last night playing the part of the thoroughly degenerate natural son of the leading citizen of Middleburg, a characterization which would ordinarily have been a very thankless one.

The removal of the Rand family to the city of New York on the death of its head, and the resulting effect on the characters of its members form the theme of the play. George D. Rand Jr., son of the former leading citizen of the village of Middleburg carries on his father's somewhat questionable business schemes on a larger scale, in the city, with great success. He becomes prominent and is about to be nominated for governor of the state. Knowing of the identity of Hannack, the dope fiend, and his relation to his family he feels bound to do something for him, and keeps him in his employ. Hannack meets Rand's sister, his own half sister, and they are secretly married. The great scene of the play comes in the second act when Rand learns of this marriage, and, throwing his political ambitions to the winds angrily sends his sister from the room and informs Hannack of his identity and his real relations to the girl he has just married.

The dope fiend, his nerves undermined by the drug, breaks down but angrily denies the story. Rand then threatens to tell his sister if Hannack does not leave. He refuses, and Rand calls in the girl to tell her the awful truth. Just as he is about to tell her, Hannack draws a gun and shoots her. The situation is a tense one, and might easily be spoiled, but Mr Brandt's splendid work makes it one of the most impressive bits of stage realism that the company has ever offered here.

Frederick Van Rensselaer is on the stage only a short time as the financial king of Middleburg, but he makes himself an important feature of the play during that time. Nesta De Becker as the wilful sister who involves the family in tragedy has the heaviest of the women's parts and her presentation is perfectly adequate. Jane Stewart plays Eleanor Varhees, the girl who stands by young Rand in his troubles, does exceedingly well, and Florence Coventry handles the difficult part of Mrs. Rand, mother of the afflicted family, in perfect style. Lolita Lamb has the somewhat thankless part of an elder daughter, married to a dissipated rake, who nearly involves the family in another scandal, and Robert Le Sueur plays the aforesaid rake satisfactorily. Westropp Saunders, Ray Phillips, Perry Golden, W. S. Donovan and Lillian Mart are all good in their work this week.

Amusement Notes.

Ethlynne Bradford, who with William H. Macart, is presenting a one-act comedy, entitled "A Legitimate Hold-Up," at the Orpheum this week, bears a striking resemblance to Maxine Elliott. Indeed, she looks more like that far famed beauty than does the latter's sister, Gertrude Elliott. Her eyes, mouth, nose, and the contour of her face are identical with those of Miss Elliott, and she has quite frequently been mistaken for that well known star. While upon a train traveling from New York to Boston Miss Bradford had just settled herself comfortably in the chair car, when a handsomely attired woman approached her and said: "I trust that you will pardon me, but I cannot help telling you how much I enjoyed your performance Saturday afternoon. My son and I made a special trip from Bryn Mawr, where we live, to see you. I think you are doing the best work of your career in your present play. No matter what our views may be of the play, I am proud of having had the privilege of a chat with you, Miss Elliott." And then she was gone in a jiffy, leaving Miss Bradford nonplussed. For a moment she couldn't make the connection, but finally she burst into a fit of laughter. She had been listening to the praises of Maxine Elliott and had been discussing the play, "Myself—Bettina," in which the latter starred last season, and had been mistaken for Maxine.

MISS ETHLYNNE BRADFORD.

Miss Nellie Brewster, who is appearing in a musical playlet at the Empress this week, is one of the youngest stars before the public. Miss Brewster has been before the public but a little over three years, but in that time she has met with wonderful success. Miss Brewster is the daughter of an Iowa newspaper man, who realizing his daughter's musical talent, sent her to New York to have her voice cultivated. After being in New York for a short time Miss Brewster secured an engagement to appear at one of the clubs and while appearing there, she was heard by Richard Carley, who immediately engaged her to appear as the star in "Mary's Lamb." After her engagement with Mr. Carle, Miss Brewster appeared in one of Gus Edward's productions, "The Night Birds." After this engagement Miss Brewster became ambitious and purchased outright from Claire Kummer her present vehicle, "In Love," so that she is now manager, actor and prima donna, all in one. "In Love" is proving a big hit at the Empress this week and is voted one of the daintiest pieces ever presented at the Empress.

Entries are being handed in every day at the Auditorium box office for the big roller skating tournament that starts next Monday evening. The very best skaters in this city will compete and in addition to the interest that is being taken by the skaters, their friends are also taking a great deal of interest, and it is certain that the balconies of the big building will be crowded with spectators. There will be no skating Thursday evening, because of the wrestling match, but this evening and tomorrow evening there will be the usual complete programs, with the big electric military band organ, the sciopticon, throwing its brilliant flood of light, and the special feature numbers.

SIX CHICAGO LOCKUPS ARE FOUND INSANITARY.

Schuettler accompanied a committee representing the Chicago Association of Commerce on a tour of inspection through the city's police stations yesterday. Six stations visited were declared to be unsatisfactory and unfit for use, while several of the new buildings were found to be in good condition.

MENOMINEE COUNTY TO IMPROVE ROADS.

"WHIZ" HAS STRUCK THE TOWN

The "Whizzers" Are "Whizzing" Through the City Until Everyone Is Getting the "Whiz" Habit.

The "Whiz" man is here distributing "Whiz" Tags. Did you get one? If not, better look out for he is "Whizzing" around the town leaving a "Whiz" tag in every home and wherever he goes he makes a noise like "Whiz."

Look out for this "Whiz" tag. Take it to your dealer with 5c and get a full size 10c can of "Whiz."

The "Whiz" man says he wants to put a "Whiz" tag into every home in Duluth and he is taking this means to do it.

What's "Whiz"? Why, it's soap. A new, soft, creamy soap that grabs the dirt.

It's the natural enemy of dirt. "Whiz" and dirt come to blows every time they meet and "Whiz" always wears the championship belt.

"Whiz" is the best stuff the mechanic ever used for his hands. It gets down into the pores and cracks of the skin and drags the dirt out bodily without injuring the skin.

It takes off stains which nothing else can touch. You can dip your hands in a tar barrel or smear them over with printer's ink, axel grease, shoe polish, then try "Whiz" on them and "Presto!" that quick—off comes the dirt.

That's not all it is good for though—it beats anything you ever saw for household scouring purposes. Keep a can on your kitchen sink and another on your wash stand in the bathroom and you will be surprised to see how many little uses you will find for "Whiz" and how the "Whiz" habit will grow on you. "Whiz" will get a steady job in your home after you once give it a trial.

Don't wait for your neighbor to tell you how good it is but look out for this "Whiz" man and he sure and get hold of that "Whiz" tag and take it to your dealer with 5c for a can of "Whiz."

Another thing—there's a premium coupon packed with each can of "Whiz." You can get genuine Rogers Silverware with these coupons.

WEARY WAIT NEARLY OVER

Fond du Lac Lands Will Be Opened for Filing Next Week.

The weary wait before the land office in the local federal building is almost over, and a week from today the corridor which has been the sheltering place for fifty-six men and women who are anxious to become owners of land in the Fond du Lac Indian reservation, will be cleared for the first time since the last of June.

At 9 o'clock next Tuesday the land will be opened to settlement or filing, and already there are fifty-seven who are anxious to file, one having entered the flock this morning. More are expected to join the line before the date of filing, and many more have declared their intention of settling on the land at the time of opening.

While the places have been taken mostly by men, they have had some friends, their wives or children take care of the places during the day as they went out to work or to the reservation to look over the land before filing.

On Aug. 22 there will be openings at two places in Minnesota, one at Duluth and the other at Cass Lake. Here there are 8,884.39 acres of land to be thrown open to the public, while at Cass Lake there are 82,220.08 acres, making a total of 91,104.47 acres. All the land is cut-over land, and is said to be excellent for agricultural purposes. More lands will be opened at a later date, after the timber has been removed.

Peter Marshalf, of West Duluth, is the first man in line. Others in the line are: Onne Kalton, Karl Jaloner, Superior; William D. Johnson, Cloquet; John Johnson, Brookston; Oscar Berglund, West Duluth; Siren Sale, Oscar Reum, Superior; Rigard Laurilla, Matt Lind, Duluth; B. Lano, William Koppi, John Helmaki, Superior; Frank Brander, Duluth, William Sirren, William Brangstrom, Superior; Frank Jarvu, Duluth; Hans Sibold, Louis Mattson, Charles Walberg, Cloquet; Oscar Gladder, Reservation; John Olila, Floodwood; Mrs. Edith Wood, Brookston; Miss Hanna Jokimake, Cloquet; Miss Helen Piiranen, Duluth; John Biirainen, Congo; V. W. Rock, Poupore; Miss Margaret McCarthy, St. Paul; Fred Steffins, Brookston; Ernest Gustafson, Mrs. Nellie Wilson, John Kalli, Fred Mader, George Hearth and Charles Brander.

PRESIDENT GOMEZ'S SON IN PISTOL DUEL.

Havana, Aug. 15.—Miguel Gomez, a son of President Gomez, and Congressman Armando Andres, editor of El Dia, an anti-administration newspaper, the principals in last night's impromptu pistol duel, were arrested early today.

The exchange of bullets took place at the Cafe Cosmopolita, adjoining the Hotel Inglaterra, the most fashionable section of the city. Both men emptied their revolvers, but neither the principals nor spectators were wounded. Gomez today broke down and weeping confessed he had attempted to assassinate Andres in revenge for the latter's editorial attacks on his father and himself.

Few Arrests in Duluth.
The police court grist this morning was the smallest that it has been for many months. But two persons were entered on the docket. The case against one was dismissed, and the other got a suspended sentence for drunkenness. The police business has been unusually quiet recently, and all the grists have been smaller than the average.

CASE IS TEST OF RECALL

Two Harbors Aldermanic Contestants Have Hearing Before Judge Cant.

Socialists Exercised Recall Provision—Its Validity Is Questioned.

Two hearings are on before Judge W. A. Cant in district court this afternoon on the Two Harbors aldermanic mix up. One is on the mandamus brought by Alfred L. ohnson, the newly elected alderman, against the city clerk to compel him to issue to Johnson a certificate of election. The other is on the restraining order secured by H. J. Irwin, the old alderman, to prevent Johnson from interfering with him in the duties of his office.

Irwin was the original Socialist candidate at Two Harbors for alderman-at-large. He was elected but failed to live up to his election promises in regard to the management of the water and light department. The Socialists then availed themselves of the recall provision in the Two Harbors city charter. The validity of this provision, which was included in the charter before the passage of the state law permitting such recalls is in question. This is the first case involving the recall which has been tried in the state.

Values Decline on Continued Liquidation—Undertone Is Weak.

The copper market went downward today. There was heavy selling on the part of tired holders. The undertone was weak. There was an early bulge when shorts ran to cover, but on the upturn the market was flooded with selling orders. Moroccan news was more disturbing and contributed to the decline. Labor troubles in the United Kingdom are unsettling the markets abroad and demoralizing business. A Mempils bank failed, contributing to the weak undertone. The failure was due, it is said, to peculations by the president.

Martin W. Littleton is pushing a substitute measure for the anti-trust law that is favorably regarded by business interests.

The president of a New York owned copper producing company, who is likewise the president of a large railroad and is a man of large affairs, says: "I have only been in the mining business a few years, but I am disgusted that the men who control this giant industry do not take the bull by the horns and combine properties, even in the face of government attitude toward large corporations. I believe that this is a combination which would meet the government sanction, even though its effect would advance prices, for at present it is the foreigners who are getting the greater benefit from the production and sale of our copper, for which the mines are not getting an adequate return."

On the 2,400-foot level of the Edith May vein at the North Butte property, drifting, it is understood, has been discontinued, as the level which is being driven to the westward has reached a point beyond the winze from the 2,200 to the 2,300, and to which connection will be made. By making this connection through the 2,200-foot level it will give ample ventilation on the 2,400 and enable the management to drive ahead to the west fault plane. According to the last accounts from the property, the drift where stopped exposed a very good face of ore, which is encouraging for the resumption of work on this level. It is expected that the work of making the connection from the 2,400 to 2,300 will take approximately a month's time.

The Giroux will sink all five compartments of the big shaft from the 1,400 to 1,800-foot levels at this time instead of first sinking two compartments and then raising the other three, as was first intended.

DAVIS WINS FROM CLARK

Duluthian's Victory Is Feature in Morning Play at Oatka.

Dinwiddie Springs Surprise By Easy Defeat of Kennedy.

Easily the feature of the morning's play of the second day of the state tennis tournament was the match between Burt Clark of Minneapolis and N. F. Davis of this city. Davis won in straight sets by the scores of 6-4 and 6-2, and in doing so was forced to show some of the best tennis that has been shown at the tournament so far.

Davis did some excellent back court work, frequently bringing applause from the interested gallery of spectators by his hard drives. His return was sharper, more accurate and cleaner than Clark's, and several times during the match Davis made some remarkably well placed returns of hard drives from his opponent.

Several times during the match Clark seemed to be playing off form and made several misses of comparatively easy shots. But this does not mean that Davis won because Clark was playing off form. Davis played some of the best tennis that has been seen at the tournament, and the honor of being the first Duluth player to go into the third round was earned by strong and consistent playing.

Max Washburn was the other Duluth player going into the third round as a result of the play of this morning. Washburn defeated LeBree 7-5 and 6-2, showing some flashes of very good tennis.

Walter Amundson had little trouble in beating LeSure in straight sets. LeSure was erratic and lost point after point by driving the ball out of the court. There was never any doubt of the outcome.

Trafford Jayne defeated Weinhagen, 6-1, 6-2, Weinhagen previous to this surprising some of the followers of form in the tournament by taking two sets from Ralph Davis by the same scores.

One of the surprises of the morning play was the rather easy defeat of Walter Kennedy by Dinwiddie. Kenned·· was defeated in straight games by the scores of 6-1 and 6-3 and failed to show the formor speed of his opponent.

Armstrong had little trouble with Walter Fraker, winning 6-3 and 6-1. Not in the least to disparage the younger player, who is really playing his first games outside of the younger set, it is true that Armstrong, generally looked upon as the winner of the tournament, did not have to extend himself to win the game.

Several times during the contest he used his break ball and the younger player was generally puzzled as to where to play for the serve or how to return it. Armstrong didn't let out much and it is very safe to say that he will show a great deal more as he works down to the finals and meets some of the class of the tournament.

As was the case yesterday there has been little or no delay in the play and the games are being played without any hitch. Few delays are holding up the progress of the tournament, and the officials are earning many bouquets.

They wish to emphasize the fact that all spectators are welcomo whether boat club members or not. No admission is charged.

RAIN INTERFERES WITH RACES

Feature Event of Meet Is a $10,000 Stake for 2:15 Trotters.

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 15.—Rain today caused the postponement of the first day's program of the first national breeders' race meeting which was to have started this afternoon.

The feature event for the week will be the Hoster-Columbus $10,000 stake for 2:15 trotters. There are nineteen horses entered in this event. Other big races this week are the stock farm futurity for trotters and pacers and the Hartman $5,000 stake for 2:13 class pacers. Among the stables entered for both weeks of racing are the Geers, McDonald, Murphy, Cox, MacMahon, McDavitt and Andrews.

SAYS FORCE DOES NOT BACK UP HIS UMPIRES.

Hibbing, Minn., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Umpire William E. Lyman, late of the Minny league, is back in Hibbing, having been released by President Frank Force the latter part of last week from further service in the Minny.

Lyman said: "I consider the Minny a fast league and containing some rattling good players, but the fact that President Force will collect no fines from the players when they are fined by the umpires works against us. All we can do is to bench them, and as a rule they care little for that.

"But I guess I am moro to blame for my treatment at their hands than any one else for I wasn't strict enough and allowed them to bullyrag me to a certain extent."

Lyman says that the last series he umpired was in Superior when the Eau Claire old time "Cream Puffs" met Superior. He paid his respects to Joe Killian, the manager of the Winona Pirates, by saying: "I got along fairly well with Killian and in Superior at that. Any umpire who can get along with Joe is certainly 'going some'."

IRON RIVER DEFEATED KENNY-ANKER TEAM.

To the Sporting Editor of The Herald:

We notice a paragraph in this morning's edition of the News-Tribune to the effect that the Kenney-Anker team defeated our team, 3 to 1, and in contradiction of this statement we offer the following figures submitted by our official scorer, Edward Bousely and which correspond exactly with those of their scorer.

We occasionally lose a game ourselves but we are always willing to let the result stand, and when we win we are always glad to acknowledge the good points of our opposing team.

Score by innings:

Summaries: Hits—Off James, 4; off Delborn, 12. Strike outs—By James, 7; by Delborn, 8. Bases on balls—Off James, 0; off Delborn, 3. Errors—By Iron River, 4; by Kenney-Anker, 9. Sacrifice hits—Iron River, 5; Kenney-Anker, 1. Two base hits—Iron River, 2; Kenney-Anker, 0. Three base hits—Iron River, 1; Kenney-Anker, 0.

If necessary, we can make affidavit as to the correctness of the above. Yours very truly,

HARRY H. BUTTS,
Secretary, Iron River Baseball association.

PROTEST TO PRESIDENT ON FREE LIST BILL.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 15.—President Taft has been asked by leather goods manufacturers of the Northwest to veto the farmers' free list bill. Five manufacturers of St. Paul, three of Minneapolis and two of Duluth have written him urging the veto. They declare that they would not oppose manufactured leather goods going on the free list if the different items used in making manufactured goods also were on it.

"With the tariff still on twine, hardware, machinery and other things used in the manufacture of our goods, it would be unfair to place our products on the free list," a St. Paul dealer said.

TAKING OUT THEIR WIRES

Duluth Stock Brokers Are Forced to Cut Down Expenses.

The good old days of the copper market in Duluth apparently have passed. The trading has dwindled to such proportions that only the big houses can afford to maintain wire service. The smaller houses which formerly "made" the market but which were regulated by the advent of the Duluth Stock Exchange, have had difficult sledding lately. The dullness here is similar to that in the East only it is more noticeable.

The wires of Lewis H. Merritt & Co., McFadden & O'Leary, and N. S. Mitchell & Co., have been withdrawn. The wires of Martin Rosendahl & Co., and the American Security Co., were withdrawn some time ago. Several brokers have quit business, entirely.

On the other hand Paine, Webber & Co., has installed another wire which provides a rapid service for Eveleth, Minn. The outside wires of this firm, Gay & Sturgis, Piper, Johnson & Case and B. E. Baker are all that remain of the dozen or more wires that formerly reached this town from outside markets.

The strict rules of outside markets practically prevent the "looping" of wires into several offices.

The only score of the game resulted through a wild pitch by Short in the first inning. Score:

PENNANT MAY HANG ON SERIES JUST OPENING

The most important series that has been played in the Minnesota-Wisconsin league will start this afternoon at Winona, the Pirates and Red Legs lining up for a four-game battle that will go far toward deciding the pennant.

It is generally admitted around the circuit that the pennant lies between the strong Winona team and the swell minor league aggregation that President Somers has gathered together for the edification of the fans on the other side of the bay.

At the present time the Millianites haven't anything on the Taylorites; and as a matter of stern and unrelenting fact, the Head of the Lakes aggregation has been playing the best baseball in the league during the past month. The Superior team has a right royal chance for the flag.

Fans on this side of the bay are rooting for the success of the Superior team in the important series that starts this afternoon. One of the first things the bugs will look for in the baseball extras, is the score of the Superior-Winona game.

Winona got a beautiful trimming on the last trip to the Head of the Lakes. The Pirates won but one game in Superior and were given a fine trimming on this side of the bay. If Superior can go into the enemy's camp and break even or win the larger part of the series, it will give the players confidence and will go a very long way toward determining the result of the race, that at the present time is a very pretty one between the two leaders.

The Sox have third place cinched so far in the race, though a slip means that Eau Claire is going to cut in on the rail and take the running in behind the leaders.

With the Sox apparently out of the race for the pennant, the fans on this side of the bay are tooting for the other head of the lake teams. If we can't win we will be darn glad to see the Superior (no joke) team cop the bunting.

Superior came fast all the way last season. With any kind of an even break in the luck Artie O'Dea would have nailed the gonfalon to the mast at Ilslop park. With such a grand minor league organization as Superior has at the present time, it is going to be awfully hard to keep it out of first place.

Leastwise, here's luck to Superior, and hoping that the old town team makes a clean sweep of the series with the Pirates, or at least takes three out of the four games.

PILAKOFF, FINNISH LION, WILL APPEAR IN DULUTH THURSDAY

Thursday evening the lovers of wrestling will have the opportunity of seeing one of the strongest men in the world and a man who, though in the United States but one year, has made a reputation as one of the leading wrestlers of the country. This man is the giant Pilakoff, the Finnish Lion, an athlete remarkable in physique and his wonderful strength.

Born in the little village of Viro, a part of Finland, where the language is partly Russian and partly Finnish, the parents of Pilakoff took the boy to Finland, where he remained until he began his travels over the countries of Europe.

It is a strange coincidence that Hackenschmidt, the Russian Lion, and an athlete famous the world over as perhaps the strongest man in the world, was born in this same little far away village. Pilakoff, called in Europe, Pilakoff the great, and known in many of the countries across the sea as one of the strongest men in the world, knew Hackenschmidt as a boy, and as a matter of fact learned the Graeco-Roman wrestling science in one of the numerous Russian schools of wrestling, as the great Russian also learned the mat science in Russia.

When 9 years of age Pilakoff was taken by his parents to Wilpuri, Finland. When Pilakoff was but 17 years of age he won third prize in one of the big wrestling tournaments that are so popular on the other side of the Atlantic, and he has been wrestling ever since that time. Today the giant is 26 years of age.

Last season marked the first appearance of Pilakoff in this country. He wrestled in New York, Newark, N. J., Boston and all of the leading cities of the East, making his American appearance under the management of the well known promotor of sports, John P. Dunn. So successful was the first American season of the big Finnish giant, that the various newspapers of the East spoke highly of his ability and scores of flattering accounts of his wrestling ability appeared.

Local managers were in communication with Pilakoff's manager last season with the idea of having the Finnish giant wrestle one big match in this city. He was so busy, however, that he did not get up into the Northwest. Pilakoff plans to make his home here the coming winter, and with that idea in view will bring his wife to this city and in the future will make Duluth his home.

The coming of Pilakoff to Duluth means that this city will have a wrestler ranking with the very best men in the country, and an athlete who can meet the best men in the world and give the fans some of the best matches that have ever been staged in the West.

Thursday evening at the Auditorium the big man will wrestle John Soderlund, styled the champion Finnish wrestler of Minnesota. This match will give the wrestling fans of this city an opportunity to see if the giant Pilakoff is as good as the people in the various Eastern cities where he has wrestled believe he is.

In addition to his wrestling match, the Finnish Lion will give his exhibition of strength. Like Hackenschmidt, Pilakoff is one of the strongest men in the world, and the exhibition of strength is an exhibition that Pilakoff has given in Europe at the head of his own troupe of strong men and acrobats.

Officials of the Greater Duluth Athletic club have concluded negotiations for the matching of Pilakoff and the winner of the Hackenschmidt-Gotch match, and also, in the event of Gama coming to this country, the sensational East Indian whirlwind, considered a marvel of strength and endurance and speed, will also be seen here.

Mandan Clean-Up Day.

Mandan, N. D., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—One of the features that will be inaugurated by the newly organized Mandan Automobile club is the "clean up" day, the day to be devoted to the cleaning of the roads of all rock and obstructions of any kind. Tomorrow, if weather conditions are favorable, it is expected that a number of the club members will be sent out to do some road work, covering the highways leading into the city.

The local club also looks with favor on the question of constructing an automobile road in an easterly and westerly direction across the county, using the cash derived from the automobile tax for that work.

GIVE DICK SCHELL A RETURN CONTEST

In answer to the somewhat lengthy and learned criticism in the morning paper regarding the statement that it might be good sportsmanship for the owner of the Minnetonka to give Dick Schell another race, it might be stated that good sportsmanship is a matter broad in its application. If the Minneapolis people prefer to leave the Head of the Lakes with so flimsy a victory to stand on, well and good; but a victory that was won when the fastest boat at the Head of the Lakes was actually in the race, would be really something to boast of.

Since Mr. Schell offered to pay the expenses incident to the stay in this city pending the second race, the excuse of the expenses will hardly hold good. Also since A. C. Bennett has stated that he can run away from the D. B. C., surely he would have nothing to fear from another race. Of course, if business prevented him staying here, that is a valid excuse, but it is to be hoped he will come again.

It wasn't a race at all Saturday. In suggesting that another contest be arranged, the thought that the people of this city would be delighted with a real race, something that they have not had the opportunity of witnessing th's season, has weight.

Most every good sportsman would be glad to give another race to Mr. Schell. There may be some fine ethics that have been overlooked, but everyday sportsmanship is a grinning creature, easy to approach and exceedingly good natured. That's the kind we are acquainted with, not this irritable and touchy creature that the capricious critic speaks of.

Omaha, Neb., Aug. 15.—The first day's play in the preliminary round of the trans-Mississippi Golf association's tournament resulted in some of the lowest scores ever recorded for the tourney.

With 133 pair in the first flight, it required nearly the entire day to finish the first eighteen holes and the scores turned in indicated the lowest qualifying scores ever played in a trans-Mississippi tournament. Nine men turned in scores below 80 and those below 85 were more than forty. This indicates a qualifying score of about 170.

STATE TENNIS TOURNAMENT IS NOW NARROWING DOWN TO REAL "CLASS"

Weak Players Have Been Eliminated in First and Preliminary Rounds.

Wheeler in Third Round—Joe Armstrong Playing in Rare Form.

J. H. Wheeler of St. Paul was the star in yesterday's play for the state singles title on the Oatka courts, going into the third round by playing three matches and winning all of them, Dr. G. H. Jones, Fred Elston and George Stillman going down to defeat before the saintly city tennis expert.

All of the Duluth men were hopelessly outclassed and Wheeler took his matches by big margins. He is playing in fine form and at the present outlook it is likely that he will make a strong bid for his old title.

One of the best matches in the afternoon play at the court was that between Colton and N. F. Davis, Davis winning 6-4, 6-3. A fast, hard, quick-dropping lawford that is about as pretty a stroke as any seen during the present tournament, with careful, heady, placing contributed to Davis' victory, and Colton helped to his own defeat with erratic work trying to smash lobs to the back line.

On Denny Delghton's withdrawal of his entry, T. A. Gall offered himself up as a cheerful sacrifice in Deighton's place to face Joe Armstrong of St. Paul in the preliminary round and the university star played with the Duluth man for a couple of sets in which Gall's points were few and far between. Armstrong was not pressed anywhere and won 6-0, 6-0, but he was working in perfect form and showed that he was the master of a wonderful service.

E. I. Shepard of Winona, one of the men who will later appear in the special singles, won two matches during the day, defeating Wright and Graff of Duluth. Graff put up a hard fight for honors and captured one set but the Winona man pulled out in the third set and won 6-2, 5-7, 6-0.

During the early afternoon Max Washburn won his first match of the tournament from De Witt, pulling out a victory 6-4, 6-3. Herman La Bree won a hard match from Ed Ingalls 7-5, 6-4. Becher and Chinnick of Duluth played the closest match of the day, Becher winning in straight sets 8-6, 8-6.

Games Played Rapidly.

Under the drying effect of yesterday's hot sun the courts are rapidly rounding into shape and for the matches played yesterday afternoon were nearly ideal. Matches were played off rapidly all day and all the games in the preliminary round are now out of the way.

This morning's play was scheduled to complete the first round.

With most of the "easy" matches gone, some great fights should be witnessed on the courts today and tomorrow in the singles. A fair gallery watched play yesterday afternoon and this promises to increase daily as the final matches draw near. A commodious bleacher has been erected at the north end of the courts and there are also benches along the sides to accommodate the spectators.

The accompanying tables give the play complete up to the games this morning.

TALKS ON HEALTH OF MEN

Discussion By the Doctors of The Progressive Medical Association.

Eczema and Skin Diseases As a Class Are the Subjects of Interest and Research.

Eczema and the whole train of skin diseases as a class have been discussed repeatedly and very widely among members of the medical profession. The medical journals are filled, almost every issue, with articles upon this subject, yet there probably is not today a subject upon which authorities and specialists in these diseases disagree more widely than they do upon this particular class.

At a meeting of the doctors of The Progressive Medical Association, recently held in their Duluth offices, No. 1 West Superior Street, this subject was the principal point of discussion, and some very interesting data and information was brought out. It appears that it has been the experience of these doctors to try all methods which the medical authorities recommended: Some cases have been cured, but few stayed cured; in short, they found they were as unsuccessful in the cure of eczema and skin diseases, and all such obstinate diseases generally, as all the rest of the doctors. They finally had to give up their method of "following," and to throw their energies more thoroughly into the work of research. For years they have studied and worked, and have prosecuted their research, digging down to the very root of this class of diseases.

"The cause is not in the skin at all," they say! These skin diseases are nothing else than an outward manifestation of an abnormal condition inside the body. The whole system is sick—such a man may feel perfectly well—and any external eruption, a group of pimples, patches, scaly or hornlike appearance of the skin, weeping, eczematous distress of itching, the maddening itch of pruritisani (at the rectum)—any or all of these mean only the outbreak of constitutional disorders, troubles through which the nerves, blood vessels and the epidermis or outer surface of the skin are made to suffer.

The primary cause may have been constipation, the inhaling of gas for long periods, or of air foul with dust, handling furs, or the taking of wrong foods and drinks; it may have been one of a hundred causes. The results vary. Some get nervous and in poor health; others grow fat and may not experience any pain whatever. This is only for the time being, however, for like all diseases skin troubles will in the end produce a destructive effect on the health of any man. For all these troubles, and for our neglect of them, we have to pay with years of sweet life.

This was the object of their research: to discover the causes of this class of ills, to unravel their workings upon the inner system of mankind, as well as to study their outward manifestation, and to find an effective method for treatment and cure. They have been successful; for more than five years now the doctors of this association have practiced their own specific method for these diseases, and they find that in all these years they did not have a single case of eczema or other skin disease which ever returned after they had pronounced it cured. In speaking of the success of their special treatment, the doctors had to admit that the principal trouble was with the patient not being a "patient." "He is always impatient," one of the doctors said. "He always has the old idea that any disease can be easily cured, thinks it is only in the skin' and consequently very easy. He does not realize that the entire surface of his body, that all the skin is the terminal of millions of tiny nerve endings—cells and intimately connected with the main nervous system, on to the spinal cord and brain—and that his trouble is more deeply seated than the surface. Unless the unfortunate patient places himself in the hands of a competent specialist who has all the necessary apparatus, and a thorough knowledge of the trouble itself, he will not be cured and he cannot hope to be cured. Among our patients there are some who tell us they have taken all different kinds of 'patent' medicines ever advertised. One of them tells us of having doctored with fourteen different physicians, while another states that he had the attention of not less than 22 doctors, all of whom did their 'very best,' but he was unable to get cured until he came to us. Our success in treating this man was due to the fact that we did not treat his troubles externally only, we had to begin at the deepseated root of his trouble. We clean out and clear up the whole system, and throw out from the blood all its poisons and impurities. We have to bring the liver, the kidneys, the bladder, the stomach and the rectum into a normal and healthy condition. That's the first step we have to fit them for their several duties of carrying off the poisons and waste matter; otherwise these poisons and waste matter float in the blood. They have to make their exit somewhere; they attempt to make their exit through the pores of the skin; they irritate it, and set up an inflammation, and an irritating skin disease, sometimes painful, is the result.

"Our experience of over twenty years, of 1,004 cases of skin troubles, including those that we have treated since the perfection of our new method, has taught us that our method of treating these diseases is the right one, because it has resulted in a cure in every instance. Think of that," the doctor said. "a cure in every instance! True, the cures are not effected quickly, for the very reason that it takes time to readjust all the organs that are at fault, to get them all working together in harmony again, and to heal all the tiny diseased cells of the skin. In other words, we have to make our patient healthy in every respect before we can cure him of eczema, or of any other skin trouble in the long train of diseases of that class."

FOUR DAYS' CONVENTION

Pure food laws, their enforcement and conflicts between state and federal laws will be subjects of thorough discussion at the annual meeting of the Association of State and National Food and Dairy Departments, which will be held here for four days beginning next Monday.

It is expected that every state in the Union, as well as the national government, will be represented at the meeting, which will be the most important held in Duluth this year.

The sessions of the convention will be held at the Commercial club, and the club, city officials and officers of the Minnesota food and dairy department will co-operate in entertaining the visitors. An automobile trip around the boulevard, a steamboat ride around the harbor and other entertainment features have been arranged.

The meeting will open Monday morning at 10 o'clock with addresses of welcome on behalf of the state by Governor Eberhart and on behalf of the city by Mayor Cullum. The response will be made by R. L. Cochrane, dairy commissioner of Colorado. George L. Flanders of Albany, N. Y., president of the association, will deliver his annual address and appoint the committees at the morning session.

Morning and afternoon meetings will be held on each day of the convention. The program consists of papers by members of the association, followed by general discussions. The evenings will be given over to entertainment features.

know, that I am dead and damned and buried by competent authority and orderly procedure."

The Kentucky law as to local option provides that the county shall be a unit except in counties where there are cities of considerable size. The Republicans, whose candidate for governor is Judge Edward C. O'Rear, member of the court of appeals, declare for the extension to all counties of the unit law. The Democrats, who have named James Bennett McCreary, former governor and former United States senator, for the governorship, postponed until today the making of a platform.

Conference Has Failed.

The county unit is the bone of contention. Few of the delegates came instructed, except to vote solidly, and the candidates, in conference since Sunday, have failed to agree as to the county unit. Mr. McCreary's last word was that the candidates were unwilling to dictate, but believed "the sentiment of the state is in favor of an extension of the county unit law, and would be satisfied if the convention so declared."

Mr. Watterson, who has contended daily against the incorporation in the Democratic platform of a county unit plank, was yesterday named as a member of the resolutions committee. His statement this morning contained the text of the resolutions he announced he would offer and which provide that the Democratic party reiterate its allegiance to local option and denounce the effort to drag into politics a "social, moral and religious question."

By these resolutions he declared, he would stand or fall.

As An Antidote.

Judge O'Rear is avowedly against prohibition, as are the Democratic candidates. It is argued that if both parties pledge themselves to the county unit law, the one plank will neutralize the other and the liquor question will drop out of sight. Mr. Watterson, however, asserts:

"Everywhere else 'county unit' has been the vanguard of prohibition. Admit it within the walls of Democracy and we have a Trojan horse."

Kentucky Democrats are clearly divided both as to the desirability and as to the legality of the county unit law, and a bitter fight is expected.

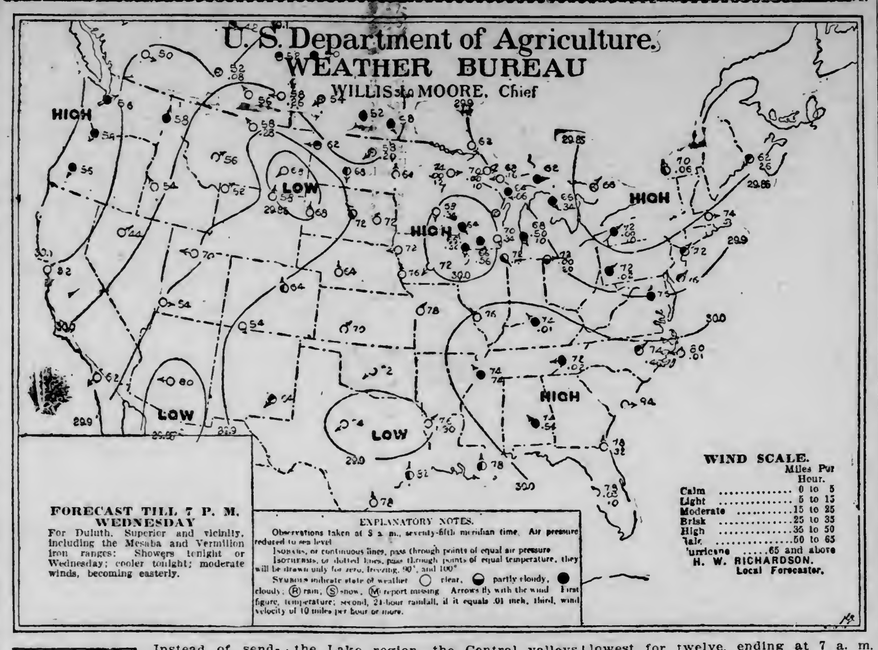
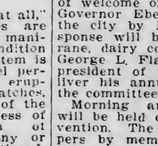
OFFICIAL MAP OF THE WEATHER



RAIN



Instead of sending the promised rain, the weather man has come very near to spoiling Duluth's reputation for coolness. The mercury went to 80 deg. yesterday, and the lowest temperature last night was 66 deg. The thermometer started to perform stunts this morning and registered nearly 90 deg., but the sky clouded over and cooler weather was indicated. The weather man sticks to his showers prediction with "cooler" added for good measure.

The sun rose this morning at 5:05 and it will set at 7:19, giving fourteen hours and fourteen minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"During the last twenty-four hours light to copious showers fell over Eastern Canada, the Lake region, Ohio and Mississippi valleys, Southeastern states, North Dakota and Northern Montana in connection with the depression that extends from Montana southward to Arizona. Warm weather prevails in the Lake region, the Central valleys and Southern states. Local showers are probable at the Head of the Lakes during the ensuing thirty-six hours."

General Forecasts.

Chicago, Aug., 15.—Forecasts for twenty-four hours ending at 7 p. m., Wednesday:

Upper Michigan—Unsettled tonight and Wednesday; cooler tonight in west portion.

Wisconsin—Generally fair weather, except probably thunder showers tonight or Wednesday.

Minnesota—Unsettled, with showers tonight or Wednesday; cooler in north portion tonight.

North Dakota and Montana—Unsettled weather with showers tonight or Wednesday; cooler tonight.

South Dakota—Unsettled weather with probably showers late tonight or Wednesday; cooler Wednesday and in north portion tonight.

Iowa—Generally fair tonight and Wednesday.

Upper Lakes—Light to moderate variable winds. Unsettled tonight and Wednesday with cooler in north portions.

Y. M. C. A. DIRECTORS REPLY TO CRITICISM OF J. A. M'GANHEY

splendidly equipped and valued at over $200,000. There are two general branches of the work, the main or central branch, for young men, and the boy's branch, devoted to work for boys. Both branches are under the supervision an control of one board of directors, which consists of twenty members, some of whom are temporarily absent from the city. One half of the number are elected one year and the other half the next year, each member being elected for a term of two years. The directors are elected by the members of the association.

Morality and Religion.

"The experience of all boards or agencies directing Christian activities has demonstrated, beyond the question of a doubt, the correctness of this proposition, namely that instrumentalities which are uplifting in their tendencies, but not essentially religious in themselves, in the strict meaning of the term, are very often most effectively employed by religious organization as a means of bringing men under the influence of, and directing their minds to, that which is essentially religious.

"Hence, the institutional church, with its gymnasium, manual training, educational work and manly, but innocent, forms of amusement, as well as its pulpit.

"For the same reason, the missionary activities of the church are vigorously directed by the church to the education and sending out of physicians and surgeons, teachers for primary and higher schools for secular study and industrial works, as well as preachers of the gospel.

"The church, by thus introducing the institutional feature, and the missionary board, by educating the doctor, teacher and artisan, spends large sums of money and brings upon itself the responsibility of solving financial problems, but they do not thereby depart from their original and primary aim of attracting men to the Christian life. Rather do they thereby gain the opportunity of presenting their cause more effectively.

"It provides for young men lodgings with the maximum of comforts at a minimum of expense to the men.

"It provides a gymanisum with the best equipment possible, within the limits of a wise expenditure.

"It provides an educational department, at which young men who are engaged in making a living by day may attend school at night and help fit themselves for work in chosen lines.

"It provides forms of amusement that ar healthy, innocent and attractive, with the effort to make the same, so far as possible, self sustaining.

"It provides a religious work department which all of these young men may, and which they are earnestly and tactfully invited to, attend.

"It provides a department for boys, separate from that for young men, where they have their own instruction in physical culture, deportment and religion.

More Lodgings Needed.

"As an advance step toward the ultimate goal of its aims, the association, under the direction of the board, is now preparing in its building a number of additional rooms to supply the increasing demand for lodgings for young men of small income, and in so doing, some rooms heretofore used as the board of directors believes, not to the best advantage and not with proper economy of space, in educational and Bible class work, are being taken. The efficiency of the latter work is being thereby in no way curtailed. Rather, it is increased, first, by a wise and economic re-arrangement of ample space for such educational and religious work, and second, by making it possible to bring into the building more young men to be surrounded by its religious influence.

"It is self-evident that no undertaking, whether religious or non-religious, can be carried on successfully without financial considerations proportionate to the size, character and importance of the work to be done. We know of no organization whose purpose is primarily religious, which is not supported, in part at least, by the voluntary offerings of those who are in sympathy with the work for which such organization stands, and this fact must be given due consideration by the board of directors of this association in all that it does.

"At the beginning of each year, (the board having for convenience adopted May 1 as the commencement of its fiscal year), committees appointed from the members of the board to prepare a budget for the ensuing year, and to submit the same to the board of directors for consideration and discussion. This committee has each year been so appointed and has so reported a carefully prepared budget, which has been considered, discussed and adopted, modified or rejected by the board. The total disbursements of the association for the past year, including both branches, was $64,025.72. The proposed budget for the present year contemplates a total expenditure of $62,267.82, of which amount $6,499 is assigned to the boys' branch.

"The board of directors expected to ask the generous people of this community to contribute about $6,500 this year for this work, of which amount about $4,000 is required for the boys' branch alone.

Not Self Sustaining.

"The board believes that the association, if it shall attain its highest aims, should not be wholly self-sustaining, but that, if the time shall come when the people of the community feel that that this is no longer their work, and that there is no longer any call for them to give of their means to its partial support, at that time the work will recede from its highest ideal, and the association will deteriorate to a social and commercial basis.

"In conclusion we desire to say that it is the purpose of this board to administer the affairs of the association with a due regard to sound business principles. This has been the policy of the past. It will be the policy of the future. In so doing, we, who are familiar with the work, the needs and the financial limitations of the institution, shall devote the funds entrusted to our charge to its upbuilding as a religious institution, and we shall exercise our own best judgment in the disbursements of the available funds among the various departments, all of which work together in a common purpose.

the possible tyranny of a popular majority, and, therefore, to be so injurious to the cause of free government, I must disapprove a constitution containing it.

Functions of Courts.

Much of the message was devoted to a discussion of the functions of the courts under the constitution. The president dwelt at considerable length on the necessity for freeing the judiciary as much as possible from politics or popular influence, and, referring to the recall provision, he asked: "Could there be a system more ingeniously devised to subject judges to momentary gusts of popular passion than this?"

The message was received with great interest by the house, largely because of the president's long association with the judiciary.

The message was read to the house amid absolute silence. Then a storm of applause broke from the Republican side. The Democrats remained quiet. The message was referred to the territories committee.

The document in full is as follows:

Text of the Message.

To the house of representatives:

I return herewith, without my approval, House Joint Resolution No. 14, "to admit the Territories of New Mexico and Arizona as states into the Union on an equal footing with the original states."

Congress, by an enabling act approved June 20, 1910, provided for the calling of a constitutional convention in each of these territories, the submission of the constitution, proposed by the convention to the electors of the territory, the approval of the constitution by the president and congress, the proclamation of the fact by the president and the election of state officers.

Both in Arizona and New Mexico conventions have been held, constitutions adopted and ratified by the people and submitted to the president and congress. I have approved the constitution of New Mexico, and so did the house of representatives of the Sixty-first congress. The senate, however, failed to take action upon it.

I have not approved the Arizona constitution, nor have the two houses of congress, except as they have done so by the joint resolution under consideration.

Admission on Condition.

The resolution admits both territories to statehood with their constitutions, on condition that at the time of the election of the state officers, New Mexico shall have submitted to its electors an amendment to its new constitution altering and modifying its provision for future amendments, and on the further condition that Arizona shall submit to its electors at the time of the election of its state officers, a proposed amendment to its constitution by which judicial officers shall be excepted from the section permitting a recall of all elective officers.

If I sign this joint resolution, I do not see how I can escape responsibility for the judicial provisions of the Arizona constitution. The joint resolution admits Arizona with the judicial recall, but requires the submission of the question of its wisdom to the voters. If the majority of the people approves the admission of Arizona with the judicial recall, unless the voters themselves repudiate it.

Terms of Recall.

Under the Arizona constitution all elective officers, and this includes county and state judges, six months after their election, are subject to recall. It is initiated by a petition signed by electors equal to 25 per cent of the total number of votes cast for all candidates for the office at the previous general election, and within five days after the petition is filed the officer may resign. Whether he does or not, an election ensues in which his name, if he does not resign, is placed on the ballot with that of all other candidates.

The petitioners may print on the official ballot 200 words showing their reasons for recalling the officer, and he is permitted to make defense in the same place in 200 words. If the incumbent receives the highest number of votes, he continues in office; if not, he is removed from office and succeeded by the candidate who does receive the highest number.

Calls It Pernicious.

This provision of the Arizona constitution in its application to county and state judges seems to me pernicious in its effect, so destructive of independence in the judiciary, so likely to subject the rights of individuals to the possible tyranny of a popular majority, and, therefore, to be so injurious to the cause of free government that I must disapprove a constitution containing it.

I must withhold my approval from this resolution, if in fact I do not approve it as a matter of governmental policy. Of course a mere difference of opinion as to the wisdom of details in a state constitution ought not to lead me to set up my opinion against that of the people of the territory. It is to be their government, and while the power of congress to withhold or grant statehood is absolute, the people about to constitute a state should generally know better the kind of government and constitution suited to their needs than congress or the legislature; but when such a constitution contains something so destructive of free government as the judicial recall, it should be disapproved.

Purpose of Government.

A government is for the benefit of all the people. We believe that this benefit is best accomplished by popular government, because in the long run each class of individuals is apt to secure better provision for themselves through their own voice in government than through the altrustic interest of others, however intelligent or philantrophic. The wisdom of ages has taught that no government can exist except in accordance with laws, and unless the people under it either obey the laws voluntarily or are made to obey them.

In a popular government the laws are made by the people—not by all the people, but by those supposed and declared to be competent for the purpose, as males over 21 years of age, and not by all of these, but by a majority of them only.

Rights of Minority.

Now, as the government is for all the people, and is not solely for a majority of them, the majority in exercising control either directly or through its agents, is bound to exercise the power for the benefit of the minority as well as the majority. But all have recognized that the majority of the people, unrestrained by law, when aroused and without the sobering effect of deliberation and discussion, may do injustice to the minority or to the individual when the selfish interest of the majority prompts.

Hence arises the necessity for the constitution by which the will of the majority shall be permitted to guide the course of the government only under controlling checks that experience has shown to be necessary to secure for the minority its share of the benefit to the whole people that a popular government is established to bestow. A popular government is not a government of a majority, by a majority for a majority of the people. It is a government of the whole people, by a majority of the whole people under such rules and checks as will secure a wise, just and beneficent government for all the people.

Trusting the People.

It is said you can always trust the people to do justice. If that means all the people, and they all agree, you can.

But ordinarily they do not all agree, and the maxims that you can always trust a majority of the people is laid before me. This is not invariably true; and every limitation imposed by the people upon the power of the majority in the Constitution is an admission that it is not always true. No honest, clear-headed man, however great a lover of popular government, can deny that unbridled expression of the majority of a community, converted hastily into law or action, would sometimes make a government tyrannical and cruel.

In a proper sense, judges are servants of the people—that is, they are doing work which must be done for the government and in the interest of all the people, but it is not work in the doing of which they are to follow the will of the majority except as that is embodied in statutes lawfully enacted according to the Constitutional limitations. They are not popular representatives. On the contrary, to fill their offices properly, they must be independent. They must decide every question which comes before them according to law and justice. If this question is between individuals, they will follow the statute, or the unwritten law if no statute applies, and they take the unwritten law growing out of traditions and custom from previous judicial decision.

Effect of Recall.

By the recall in the Arizona Constitution, it is proposed to give to the majority power to remove arbitrarily and without deliberation any judge who may have the courage to render an unpopular decision.

By the recall, it is proposed to enable a minority of 25 per cent of the voters of the district or state, for no prescribed cause, after the judge has been in office six months, to submit the question of his retention in office to the electorate. The petitioning minority must say on the ballot what they can against him in 200 words, and he must defend as best he can in the same space.

Other candidates are permitted to present themselves and have their names printed on the ballot, so that the recall is not based solely on the records or acts of the judge, but also on the question whether some other and more popular candidate has been found to unseat him. Could there be a system more ingeniously devised to subject judges to momentary gusts of popular passion than this?

We cannot be blind to the fact that often an intelligent and respectable electorate may be so roused upon an issue that it will visit with condemnation the decision of a just judge, though exactly in accord with the law governing the case, merely because it affects unfavorably their contest.

Some Dangerous Cases.

Controversies over elections, labor troubles, racial or religious issues, issues as to the construction or constitutionality of liquor laws, criminal trials of popular or unpopular defendants, the removal of county seats, suits by individuals to maintain their constitutional rights in obstruction of some popular improvement—these and many other cases could be cited in which a majority of a district electorate would be tempted by hasty anger to recall a conscientious judge if the opportunity were open all the time. No period of delay is interposed for the abatement of popular feeling.

The recall is devised to encourage quick action and to lead the people to strike while the iron is hot. The judge is treated as the instrument and servant of a majority of the people and subject to their momentary will, not after a long term in which his qualities as a judge and his character as a man have been subjected to a test of all the varieties of judicial work and duty so as to furnish a proper means of measuring his fitness for continuance in another term.

On the instant of an unpopular ruling, while the spirit of protest has not had time to cool, and even while an appeal may be pending from his ruling in which he may be sustained, he is to be hauled before the electorate as a tribunal, with no judicial hearing, evidence or defense, and thrown out of office and disgraced for life because he had failed, in a single decision, it may be, to satisfy the popular demand.

Chance for Bosses.

Think of the opportunity such a system would give to unscrupulous political bosses in control, as they have been in control, not only of conventions but of elections.

Think of the enormous power of evil given to the sensational, muckraking portion of the press in rousing prejudice against a just judge by false charges and insinuations, the effect of which, in the short period of an election by recall, it would be impossible for him to meet and offset.

Supporters of such a system seem to think that it will work only to the interest of the poor, the humble, the weak and the oppressed; that it will strike down only the judge who is supposed to favor corporations and be affected by the corrupting influence of the rich.

Nothing could be further from the ultimate result.

The motive it would offer to unscrupulous combinations to seek to control policies in order to control the judges is clear.

Who Would Profit.

Those would profit by the recall who have the best opportunity of rousing the majority of the people to action on a sudden impulse. Are they likely to be the wisest or the best people in a community? Do they include those who have money enough to employ the firebrands and slanderers in a community and the stirrers-up of social hate? Would not self-respecting men all hesitate to accept judicial office with such a sword of Damocles hanging over them? What kind of judgment might those on the unpopular side expect from courts whose judges must make their decisions under such legalized terrorism?

The character of the judges would deteriorate to that of trimmers and time-servers, and independent judicial action would be a thing of the past. As the possibilities of such a system pass in review, is it too much to characterize it as one which will destroy the judiciary, its standing and its usefulness?

The argument has been made to justify the judicial recall that it is only carrying out the principles of the election of the judges by the people. The appointment by the legislature is by the report of the minority, and so far as future bias is concerned there is no great difference between the appointment and the election of judges.

Independence of Judiciary.

The independence of the judiciary is secured rather by a fixed term and fixed and irreducible salary. It is true that when the term of judges is for a limited number of years and re-election is necessary, it has been thought and charged sometimes that shortly before election, in cases in which popular interest is excited, judges have leaned in their decision toward the popular side.

Judicial recall is advocated on the ground that it will bring the judges more into sympathy with the popular will and the progress of ideas among the people. It is said that new judges are out of touch with the movement toward a wider democracy and a greater control of governmental agencies in the interest and for the benefit of the people.

The righteous and just course for a judge to pursue is ordinarily fixed by statute or clear principles of law, and the cases in which his judgment may be affected by his political, economic, or social views are infrequent. But even in such cases, judges are not removed from the people's influence.

Influence of Popular Opinion

Surround the judiciary with all the safeguards possible, create judges by appointment, make their tenure for life, forbid diminution of salary during their term, and still it is impossible to prevent the influence of popular opinion from coloring judgments in the long run.

Judges are men, intelligent, sympathetic men, patriotic men, and in those fields of the law in which the personal equation unavoidably plays a part, there will be found a response to sober popular opinion as it chances to meet the exigency of social, political and economic changes. Indeed, this should be so.

It is said that the people of Arizona are to become an independent state when created, and even if we strike out judicial recall now, they can incorporate it in their constitution after statehood.

To this I would answer that in dealing with the courts, which are the cornerstone of good government and in which not only the voters, but the non-voters and non-residents, have a deep interest as a security for their rights of life, liberty and property, no matter what the future action of the state may be, it is necessary for authority, which is primarily responsible for its creation, to assert in no doubtful tones the necessity for an independent and untrammeled judiciary.

a day from the government for the time he worked when first employed. In 1909 this was reduced to $9 a day because the government could not pay more. Later he demanded $500 a day for appearance as an expert in court, but this was refused. The $1,600 a year contract for eighty days work then was made with him. Dr. Rusby said that in reality he worked more than eighty days a year.

"What did you understand you were to do under that contract?"

"I was to do the work the department wanted done," said Dr. Rusby. "As a matter of fact the estimate was much too low to cover the work I am actually doing."

Nine Dollars Too Little.

"Did you have anything to do with making this contract?"

"No, sir," said Dr. Rusby; "I never proposed a contract or asked for $20 a day. I simply told the department that I would be compelled to resign if I had to testify in court at $9, which I received for my other government work. The contract was then made and I had every reason to believe it was entirely proper."

"If Dr. Kebler testified that officials of the bureau of chemistry are prohibited from giving information to members of congress, he lied," declared Solicitor McCabe to the committee today.

When members of the committee objected to such language Mr. McCabe modified the statement to "falsehood," and he finally was induced to withdraw it altogether. Dr. Kebler is Dr. Wiley's assistant.

Former Representative Hepburn of Iowa, attorney for Dr. Wiley, was reprimanded by the committee during the discussion for declaring that the remark was illustrative of the character of the witness."

Like Wilson Contract.

Dr. Baldwin, assistant chief of the bureau of chemistry, who was slated for removal with Dr. Wiley, completed his testimony yesterday and sought to show that the agreement with Dr. Rusby was modeled upon that previously made between Secretary of Agriculture Wilson and members of the Remsen pure food referee board, employed on a similar basis of pay.

Dr. Baldwin declared that a portion of his correspondence which would show this to be a fact had been omitted by the personnel board of the agricultural department when that body made up the charges upon which he was recommended for removal.

Miss Carrie M. Davis, stenographer to Dr. Kebler, chief of the drug division of the bureau of chemistry, testified to the severe examination to which she had been subjected by Solicitor General McCabe and a special agent in the effort to discover whether Dr. Kebler had relations with drug manufacturing companies.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mrs. M. Joyce, housekeeper at the Willard hotel, lost $335 and a diamond ring Sunday while at Minnehaha Falls. Mrs. Joyce carried the valuables in her stocking, and thought they were safe. After she had boarded the car the woman missed the money. She hurried to local police headquarters and reported the loss.

Towner, N. D., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—When charges were laid against him of violating the liquor law, Tolef Solvergud of Mercer, appeared before Judge Burr and surrendered his druggist's permit. MEANS LOSS OF FORTUNE

Decision of Supreme Court Involves Ore Lands Worth $750,000.

One of the decisions just handed down by the state supreme court means the loss of mineral property worth over $140,000 to George L. Chesebrough and William Harrison, to whom Mr. Chesebrough had assigned part of his rights. The decision is a reversal the ruling of Judge Dibell in the case of Longyear and Bennett against Chesebrough, tried two years ago, when the claim of Mr. Chesebrough was sustained.

The case arose when Longyear and Bennett applied to have the title to the land described as lot 5, section 5, township 58, range 15, registered. Chesebrough, with Mr. Harrison acting as his attorney, put in an answer setting up a verbal agreement made by Longyear and Bennett with him, awarding him a three-sixteenths interest in the property as commission earned in negotiating its purchase. This agreement Longyear and Bennett repudiated, alleging that Chesebrough had not been honest in his dealings with them, and had received commission as agent for the seller as well. This Chesebrough denied.

One decision was rendered in favor of Longyear and Bennett but this was subsequently reversed in the district court and Chesebrough was declared entitled to his interest. No finding was made by the court at this time as to whether Chesebrough acted for both sides, but the supreme court in its decision points out that the district court ordered Chesebrough to pay Longyear and Bennett $1,000, the amount of the alleged commission from the seller, before he could secure his property. The real basis for the decision in the appellate court is, however, that the agreement relating to the title to the land, is invalid since never reduced to writing.

The estimated value of the property involved, which is situated near Embarass lake is over $750,000. As the interest which Mr. Chesebrough claimed to be entitled to was three-sixteenths of the property, his share is worth over $140,000.

The recent ruling places the title in Longyear and Bennett, and they will now be entitled to have it registered.

FEAR RACE RIOTS IN PENNSYLVANIA

Coatesville People Dread Reprisals for Burning of Negro.

Coatesville, Pa., Aug. 15.—Despite rumors of outbreaks and possible attacks by negroes, peace reigns in Coatesville and the surrounding country, following the burning on Sunday night of the negro who killed Edgar Rice, special policeman. State police are guarding the town. The troopers arrived here late last night and an additional force came in today to relieve those on duty.

No Arrests Yet.

No arrests in connection with the burning of Walker have been made.

It is said that only about twenty-five men took an active part in the work of avenging Rice's death. A rumor has it that an active participant, fearing a long prison sentence, has volunteered to tell all the names on condition that he will not be prosecuted. The report lacks confirmation.

Richard D. Gibney, a member of the borough council and chairman of the police committee, accuses Chief of Police Umstead of not doing his duty. He charges that the chief had been warned in ample time of the gathering of the mob to lynch Walker, but did not raise a hand to prevent it.

PRINTERS SEEK PLEASURE SPOTS

Typographical Union Delegates Also Listen to Addresses.

San Francisco, Aug. 15.—Delegates to the International Typographical union today are seeking pleasure at many points of interest about San Francisco bay.

In an address before the convention Andrew Furuseth, president of the International Seamen's union, argued cooperation on the part of typographical unions in working for the passage of rigid Asiatic laws.

Other speakers included Charles Hornick of the San Francisco Newspaper Publishers' association; Mayor P. H McCarthy, A. B. Duncan of St. Joseph, Mo., and President Lynch of the typographical union.

The convention unanimously voted to send a telegram to J. J. McNamara and John B. McNamara, accused of complicity in the destruction of the Los Angeles Times plant, assuring them of the support of the union. The resolution was offered by Gus T. Winberg of Minneapolis.

George Koop of Chicago offered an amendment voting $10,000 for the defense of the McNamaras. President Lynch ruled that such an amendment must be presented first to the finance committee. Koop said he would offer it to this committee.

BOY WITNESS IS SURPRISE

Gives Shocking Testimony in Police Court and Withstands Cross-Examination.

Neighborhood Quarrel From West Duluth Aired Before Judge.

Little Johnny Hall, 7 years of age, was the star witness for his mother in police court this morning when she was placed on trial on a charge of disorderly conduct preferred by Etta Jacobs. The trouble is the outcome of a neighborhood difference of long standing, according to the police.

The claim is that Mrs. Hall used uncomplimentary language to Mrs. Jacobs without just provocation. The trouble occurred about two weeks ago when Mrs. Hall passed the home of Ed. Oven, who lives next door. It appears that Mr. Jacobs was there at the time and Mrs. Hall is alleged to have at that time made the statements on which the prosecution is based.

The boy was the most sensational witness who has occupied the stand in the police court room for a long time. Small for his age and with a baby face he repeated more shocking profanity than is generally heard in most of the worst cases which are tried in that court, in which many cases that are not noted for their decency are tried. He gave the testimony on cross examination in response to questions of the prosecuting attorney.

Not only was the boy exceptional for the nature of the statements which he made, but he could not be shaken in his testimony. Different attempts were made to catch him, but every time he was able to explain what he had said. Many an adult witness would have been tangled up by the interrogations which were put to him.

When he finished his testimony his sister was called, but she did not testify, an adjournment being taken until 2 o'clock. The principals all reside at West Duluth.

NEW MANAGER FOR PRODUCE MARKET

George H. Cannon Will Succeed H. A. Hopkins, Who Has Resigned.

George H. Cannon, formerly secretary of the Wilson Fruit company, will succeed H. A. Hopkins, resigned, as manager of the Producers' Co-operative Market association. Mr. Hopkins will take a position with the Fitzsimmons-Palmer company.

Mr. Cannon is thoroughly familiar with local produce market problems and has had a long experience here. He says that there is a big future in store for the co-operative market, and that it can be made an outlet for all the settlers' products and a big help to all concerned. He anticipates doing some car lot business with outside points, especially in potatoes and cabbage.

The market association reports an increasing lot of business. Yesterday's consignments of green vegetables were disposed of before 10 o'clock, which is a record for the local market.

SENATE O. K. ON BADGER INQUIRY

Washington, Aug. 15.—The senate today took further preliminary steps toward investigating the election of Senator Isaac Stephenson of Wisconsin. It is understood the hearings will be begun next fall.

The committee on contingent expenses authorized a favorable report on the resolution of inquiry, thus insuring payment of expenses. The elections committee authorized a sub-committee of five to attend to detail work.

MORE INSURANCE MEN ARE QUIZZED

State Commissioners' Committee Continues Work in Detroit.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 15.—More representatives of companies under investigation will be quizzed today by the special committee selected by the national convention of insurance commissioners to probe the methods of certain industrial insurance concerns doing business in the United States.

The investigation began in Detroit yesterday and was conducted in secret, as the members of the committee say the remainder will be. The committee's report is expected to be ready Thursday or Friday. It is said that something in the nature of a report may be read at the national convention of state insurance commissioners in Milwaukee next week.

In Meeker county, the village of Watkins will undergo a second scrutiny for moneys and credits, and in Murray county, the towns of Holly, Shetek, Lake Sarah, Murray, Moulton and Chanaramble and the village of Carrie, will be reasssessed.

Markham, it is reported, had lost money gambling in a houseboat operated by Aly, Harris and Ledbetter on the Little Wabash river.

REALIZING HITS WHEAT

Longs Take Profits on Bulge and Values Slide Without Support.

Crop Conditions in Canada and Abroad More Favorable—Flour Cheaper.

Duluth Board of Trade, Aug. 15.—Wheat slumped today. Longs who got in the market last week at higher prices took profits liberally and there was little support to values. Flour prices were shaded 10c a barrel, making a reduction of 30c since Saturday. A slight improvement in the flour business was noted.

September wheat dropped 1¾c, December declined 2c. Cash wheat was 1c over September. Durum lost ¾c, oats gained ⅞c, rye was unchanged, barley was the same as yesterday and corn went up ¼c.

Linseed was fairly steady. Bidders appeared toward the close but the market was bare of offerings. September gained 2c, October and November lost 3c. Cash was $2.40 bid.

The market opened excessively weak on stop-loss orders and some selling by leading holders of cash wheat. The market then firmed as shorts covered. Buying was induced by the reports of large sales of cash wheat at Chicago. The visible supply in Europe showed a decrease. The bulls were further encouraged by rains in North Dakota which, they thought, would interfere with field work.

Cables were lower on account of more favorable Russian news. The foreign market was restricted on account of the labor troubles in the United Kingdom. There were general rains in Germany and harvesting reports from the United Kingdom were favorable.

Reports from Canada were optimistic. The weather is favorable and the wheat promises to make a splendid yield in most of the Canadian territory. The thrashing returns from Southern Minnesota are not so favorable although they are scattered. The grade of the new wheat is generally extremely poor. Some samples on local tables did not grade and others were of such poor description that they indicated to traders that the prices of contract grades of wheat this fall may be exceedingly tight. The grain that has come to market thus far is shrunken and contains a heavy mixture of foreign seeds.

Broomhall cabled from Liverpool: "The wheat market opened with a heavy undertone and prices ¾d to ⅞d lower, with prices in America and the closing weakness in Buenos Ayres yesterday. Following the opening there was some covering by shorts on the hot dry weather in Germany and the expectation of a liberal decrease in the visible here and prices advanced ¼d from the opening level. Later realizing again developed and the market became heavy with a lack of support and the advance was lost and more too. Latest advices from our agent report general rains in Germany and very favorable harvesting reports from the United Kingdom and more cheerful outlook in Russia with private advices from there less bullish owing to severity of the strike the local warehouses have been closed and this causes a general depression in business. At 1:30 p. m. the market was weak and ⅞d to 1⅛d lower. Corn after opening ½d lower the market nominally unchanged from the opening. Pressure was due to weakness in America and favorable returns from Russia and Roumania. The European visible supply, this week, 69,820,00 bu, against 71,424,000 bu, thus showing a decrease of 1,604,000 bu for the week, against a decrease of 102,000 bu the previous week. CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Prices Are Depressed By News From Fields and Abroad.

Chicago, Aug. 15.—Lower cables and fair thrashing weather, together with a Winnipeg report that little damage had been done by rust depressed wheat prices a trifle further at the opening today. English grain traders reported the labor situation at Liverpool critical. September opened ¼@⅝c under yesterday at 90⅜c to 90c and steadied around 90¼c.

The market declined sharply later on commission house selling and the close was weak with September closing ½c down at 89⅛c.

Selling of corn was a bit overdone at the opening and shorts covered, holding prices close to last night's level. September opened ¼@⅜c down at 63½c to 63⅝@63¾c and sold back to 64c.

On a demand from shorts oats sold slightly better than yesterday's close. September opened unchanged to ¼c lower at 41 to 40¾c and advanced to 41¼c.

Provisions were dull and lower in sympathy with a decline in hogs. September lard opened 7½c down at $9.00; September ribs 12½c lower at $9.05. There was no early trading in pork.

Cotton Market.

New York, Aug. 15.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 9@12 points and sold 19 to 20 points above the closing figures of last night during the first few minutes in response to higher cables than expected and continued reports of rapid deterioration in crop prospects in the Southwest. English labor troubles, which were regarded as threatening congestion of the crop movement, and probably restricted demand to some extent, were partly offset by the higher cables, and while fluctuations here became some irregular after the advance, the market was very steady and held within 3 or 4 points of the best.

IRREGULAR AT CLOSE

Stock Market Almost Featureless in Last Hour.

Amalgamated Copper Especially Weak at the Finish.

New York, Aug. 15.—Some heaviness was shown by the stock market at the opening with an excess of losses over gains. Union Pacific declined over a point with a 1 point loss in Canadian Pacific. Reading and Atchison also opened lower. There were fractional advances in Great Northern preferred, Pennsylvania, Lehigh Valley and Erie first preferred.

Renewal of selling in Union Pacific again produced an unsettling effect elsewhere and no small part of yesterday's gains was lost. Union Pacific declined to 172⅜, a loss of 1⅝ with concurrent weakness in Southern Pacific. Canadian Pacific sold under yesterday's low, with distinct pressure upon Reading, Northern Pacific, Rock Island, Chesapeake & Ohio and the Fertilizers. Fractional rallies from this level were followed by dullness.

Except for its steadier tendency and increased dullness, the market continued quite featureless for the balance of the early session. Declaration of the usual Standard Oil dividend was of sentimental value, even though such action had been accepted as a foregone conclusion. On the exchange there was a disposition to regard the early declines as resulting from bear operations but in other quarters, the movement was attributed to mild liquidation. Bonds were steady.

The market closed irregular. Aside from a 3½ point decline in Texas, the list was almost featureless in the last hour. Most of the active issues showed fractional losses, but the selling pressure was not renewed until the last few minutes when moderate offerings resulted in further recessions with especial weakness in Amalgamated copper.

SUPERIOR

Successor Named.

H. B. McComb of Milton, Wis., will succeed Prof. A. C. Dineen, who has resigned, as manual training instructor at the Superior normal school. Mr. McComb is a graduate of the Fort Atkinson high school, the Whitewater normal school and the Stout institute. For the past few years he has been in charge of the manual training department at the Stevens Point normal school.

Shop Excursion.

The publicity committee of the Superior Commercial club has arranged for a "shop excursion" to the steel plant. It will be conducted along lines similar to the jaunts taken by the Duluth Commercial members. It is expected that about 500 will take the trip. The trip will be made on the train.

Comply With Law.

Department stores in Superior are already falling into line and are preparing to conform with the newly enacted law, passed by the legislature, requiring that female workers in stores, hotels, restaurants, factories, etc., do not work more than ten hours in any one day. Two of the largest stores, the Bee Hive and Lightbody & Wingate's have decided to close at 8 o'clock Saturday evenings. It is thought that others will follow.

Ready for Rails.

The Soo road will probably commence laying steel on the Superior-Frederic line about Sept. 1. The grading work is well advanced and but for a stretch on the northern end of the line, the work is finished. It will be necessary to build a long bridge over the Nemadji river and another one over the Black river. The completion of the "cut-off" will mean the finishing of the shortest and most direct line between the Head of the Lakes and the Twin Cities.

Governor Names Lyons.

Word comes from Madison that Governor McGovern has appointed Thomas E. Lyons of Superior as one of the delegates to the national convention of tax commissioners, which will be held in Richmond, Pa. Mr. Lyons is a member of the Wisconsin tax commission. Three other delegates will also go from Wisconsin.

Col. Gillis Resigns.

Col. W. R. Gillis last evening tendered his resignation as a member of the board of education at the monthly meeting of the board. Col. Gillis has been a member of the board longer than any other member. He attached no reason to his action. The resignation will probably be accepted by Mayor Crumpton.

The contract for the year's supply of coal in the public schools was let to Finch Bros. Several other routine matters were taken up.

CANADIANS ARE AFTER THE LAND

Minot, N. D., Aug. 15.—Twenty-eight states, besides Canada, were represented at noon today in the registration of lands in the Fort Berthold Indian reservation. The registration at Minot was 2,750 at noon and a stream of homeseekers still is lined up at the registration building. Many former Americans who have proved up claims in Canada are returning to the United States and are registering.

President Halvorsen of the city committee has offered to throw open the city school buildings for sleeping purposes, so great is the rush in the city. An hour's registration this morning snowed as follows:

New Hampshire, 1; Idaho, 1; Kansas, 3; Ohio, 2; Missouri 3; Illinois, 4; West Virginia, 1; Nebraska, 1; Wisconsin, 3; New York, 1; Washington, 2; Saskatchewan, 5; Minnesota, 11; Massachusetts, 2; Iowa, 4; Montana, Virginia, Alabama, Mississippi, Kentucky, Texas, California, Wyoming and Indiana each one.

Approximately 6,000 persons entered their names in the first days registration for land in the drawing last night. Minot lead with 2,421, Bismarck was second with only a score under this number, while Plaza recorded 356, Ryder 280 and Garrison 200.

STATE "JAG FARM" READY YEAR HENCE

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Not until August, 1912, will the haven of refuge for inebriates be ready for inmates at Willmar. According to P. M. Ringdal, chairman of the state board of control, dirt is flying at the "jag farm," but it will be a year before it is finished.

Mr. Ringdal said the "jag farm" will in no way be a penal institution, but a "hospital for inebriates."

ATWOOD READY TO FLY FARTHER

Chicago, Aug., 15.—Harry N. Atwood, the young aviator who made a sensational flight from St. Louis to Chicago yesterday, was up early today, making ready to continue his journey eastward this afternoon.

Atwood was not an entrant in the big aviation meet here, but was promptly adopted by the management when he alighted in Grant park last night. An arrangement was made with him by which he will begin the second lap of his air journey to New York and Boston as the first event of the afternoon program.

He overhauled his Burgess-Wright machine, but found that no weakness had developed. It is probable that he will follow the line of the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern and the New York Central to New York. He expects to spend the night at Elkhart, Ind., about 100 miles east of here.

Today's program calls for a bomb throwing contest for the particular instruction of the military observers. The program also includes prizes for duration of flights, speed, quick climbing, altitude and weight carrying.

Atwood flew the 286 miles from St. Louis to Chicago with only two intermediate stops, and in an actual flying time of 5 hours and 43 minutes.

HAUGEN TO GO FREE.

Representative Steenerson Wires Accused's Fergus Falls Brother.

Washington, Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Representative Steenerson today wired Dr. O. W. M. Haugan of Fergus Falls that the case against his brother would be nolle prossed and that his brother would be completely exonerated. This information was based on a statement made to Steenerson today by the acting prosecuting attorney.

TAFT'S SECOND COUSIN DIES IN MINNEAPOLIS.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Willard Taft Atwater, a second cousin of President Taft, for seventeen years connected with the W. S. Nott company of this city, died today from apoplexy. Prior to his connection with the W. S. Nott company, Mr. Atwater was secretary of the Northwest Standard Oil company. He was 52 years old.

GOVERNOR'S STAFF WILL HAVE OUTING.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—The annual outing of the governor's military staff will be held soon after the close of the state fair. This has been tentatively agreed upon by Governor Eberhart and Adjt. Gen. F. B. Wood.

"It is to be an outing for a rest," Gen. Wood said today. "Hence, I presume it will be more or less negligee. There will be no full dress lounging."

TAFT IS INVITED TO THIEF RIVER FALLS.

Washington, Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—President Taft has received and has under consideration an invitation extended by the Thief River Falls Commercial club to visit that city during his coming Western trip.

WORST DUST STORM SINCE 1886 REPORTED.

Walla Walla, Wash., Aug. 15.—Much property damage was done here yesterday when the worst dust storm since 1886, according to the weather observer, visited this section. The wind reached a velocity of fifty miles an hour. Trees were uprooted, windows broken and signs demolished. It is reported damage was done to unharvested grain throughout the valley.

NORTH DAKOTA COUNTY TREASURERS' ELECTION.

Fargo, N. D., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Egbert Gilbertson of Fargo was made president, C. R. Kositzky of Bismarck, secretary-treasurer, of the North Dakota association of County Treasurers, which met here this afternoon. The meeting was largely devoted to a discussion of new laws passed by the last legislature.

CLOSING DEALS FOR ARMORIES

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—In the offices of the governor this afternoon the state armory board has arranged to close some details in connection with the construction of the new armories at Austin, Zumbrota, Redwood Falls, Princeton, Eveleth and St. Peter.

No more new armories will be ordered constructed until next year as the full amount of the appropriation made by the last legislature has been drafted.

GET AT BANKS' CONDITION.

Royalton and Bowlus Institutions Are Looked Into.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Depositors in the defunct state banks at Royalton and Bowlus may lose from 20 per cent to 50 per cent of their money. The greatest loss, unless some unknown and unforeseen asset appears, probably will be to depositors in the bank at Royalton. The deficit there aggregates approximately $37,000. The bank was organized with a capital stock of $10,000 and stockholders are liable for double the amount of their holdings. Even if an assessment of 100 per cent, the full amount allowed under the law, be levied, the deficiency would not be met. Examination of the bank showed that the total deposits amounted to $109,539.92 at the time it closed.

Bowlus Shortage $14,000.

At the bank of Bowlus, the deficiency is approximately $14,000. This bank, too, was organized with capital stock of $10,000. The deposits aggregated at the time it closed, $69,512.96. Should an assessment of 100 cents on the dollar be levied on the stockholders for double their holdings, as provided for by law, the discrepancy probably could be met.

Suits are being prepared to place the banks in the hands of receivers. It is supposed that the court will order double assessment of stockholders at once to meet deficits.

Warroad Given Loan.

Warroad, Minn., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—The application of the village for a loan from the state of 7,000 has been accepted by the state board of investment and the bonds will be issued.

WILEY SAYS HE MET OPPOSITION AMONG MEN HE WORKED WITH

Pure Food Expert Testifies at Inquiry By Congressmen.

Denounces Adverse Statement of Personnel Board as False.

Says Federal Funds Were Wasted By Food and Drug Board.

Washington, Aug. 16.—Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, head of the government chemistry bureau and central figure in the agricultural department pure food controversy, before the house investigating committee today branded as false a statement of the personnel board which recommended him for dismissal.

He told how Dr. F. L. Dunlap, associate chief of his bureau, and Solicitor McCabe of the department, repeatedly voted him down in the food and drug inspection board, of which Wiley was a member.

Charged with having made an illegal contract for the expert services of Dr. H. H. Rusby of New York, Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, chief of the chemistry bureau, testified before the house committee today.

Opposed by Manufacturers.

Dr. Wiley told of his educational training for the pure food life, and described his activity in advocating pure food legislation and of opposition by food manufacturers.

Dr. Wiley said that he had taken the old fashioned classical course at Hanover college, "with some science, not much."

"I took a very active part in all steps leading up to the pure food law," Dr. Wiley said, replying to Chairman Moss. "I began in 1883 an attempt at a scientific investigation of the adulteration of foods, and took an active part in all efforts to secure such a law."

He explained that the pure food law authorized his bureau to investigate all foods, to determine whether they were misbranded or adulterated.

Procedure is Changed.

"Do you then certify your findings to the secretary of agriculture?" asked Representative Floyd of Arkansas.

"We used to."

"What was the next change in administration of the law?"

"The appointment of a food and drug inspection board. At first the

SIMPSON DENIES HE WILL RESIGN

Attorney General Says He Is Too Busy With State's Affairs.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—"I am not going to call on the governor today to hand in my resignation. I am not going to call on him tomorrow. I am not going to call on him Friday. I am not going to resign Jan. 1. If I decide to quit the office of attorney general, I am at liberty to do so at any time. But right at present I have my hands full of law matters pertaining to the state, and I'm attending to business. That's sufficient, isn't it?"

Attorney General George T. Simpson thus expressed himself this morning when the rumor that he was to see the governor today or tomorrow was called to his attention. Governor Eberhart said that Mr. Simpson had not mentioned the matter to him, that he knew nothing of it and knew of the report only by what he had seen in the newspapers.

WOOL BILL VETO MESSAGE READY

President Hopes to Send It to the House By Friday.

Washington, Aug. 16. — Although the compromise wool bill agreed to by the senate and house is not expected to be received at the White House until late today, President Taft hopes to have his veto message on that measure ready to send to the house tomorrow or Friday. The message is now practically complete.

MONEY BOARD TO WIND UP ITS WORK

Commission Will Meet Monday to Consider Plans.

Washington, Aug. 16.—The national monetary commission, of which Former Senator Aldrich of Rhode Island is chairman, will meet next Monday to consider its plans for winding up its work. The senate has passed a bill, now pending in the house, requiring the commission to report finally to congress and dissolve by Jan. 8 next.

FOR PROBE OF STEPHENSON

Heyburn, Sutherland, Bradley, Paynter and Pomerene Are Named.

Agreement on Statehood Bill Is Sought By Congress.

Washington, Aug. 16.—Senators Heyburn, Sutherland, Bradley, Paynter and Pomerene were today appointed a sub-committee to investigate the election of Senator Stephenson of Wisconsin. The appointment was made by Chairman Dillingham of the committee on elections.

Accepts Publicity Bill.

The senate today agreed to the conference report on the campaign publicity bill, and it now goes to the president for signature. It includes a provision that no senator shall spend more than $10,000 nor any representative more than $5,000 in securing his election.

More Free List Talk.

Further conference between the house and senate on the farmers' free list bill was asked for today by the senate after Senator La Follette had presented the conference disagreement. The same conferees who served before were named.

Seek Statehood Agreement.

To determine whether a compromise can be effected between the two houses of congress to provide statehood for Arizona and New Mexico, the house territories committee today appointed a sub-committee to confer with the senate committee. The senate committee deferred consideration of statehood legislation until tomorrow.

Sign the Wool Bill.

Speaker Clark and Vice President Sherman today signed the wool bill, which passed the house Monday and the senate yesterday. It now goes to the White House for the president's action. He will return it with a veto.

POPE IS ALLOWED TO SEE CALLERS

Condition Is Unchanged But Physicians Seek to Cheer Him Up.

Rome, Aug. 16.—For the first time since his illness caused anxiety, Pope Pius X was permitted today to receive several callers. The physicians approved, thinking that a chat with different persons might brighten the patient.

The condition of his holiness is practically unchanged. The slow improvement appears to continue, but a slight temperature indicates that the gouty affection and the kidney trouble have not been wholly overcome.

The pontiff received Mgr. Canali and Mgr. Scapinelli and high officials from the papal secretary of state in addition to Cardinal Merry del Val, Mgr. Bisleti and his sisters and niece, who are always within call.

ONE KILLED IN MINE; ANOTHER IS DROWNED.

Calumet, Mich., Aug. 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—Falling rock in a mine and the waters of Portage Lake claimed two human lives yesterday. Waino Whittimaki, single, aged 23, had his skull fatally crushed by a cave-in in the Superior mine and George Arsenault fell from a rowboat into Portage lake and was drowned.

LIVERPOOL IS FACE TO FACE WITH REAL FAMINE CONDITIONS

Bread Is Nearly Gone and All Food Prices Are Soaring.

Serious Suffering All Over Island Sure If Strike Spreads.

Liverpool, Aug. 16.—This city is nearing the starvation point, and unless a railway strike is averted, two days more will find the bread supply exhausted.

The only bread now in the city is that displayed in the shop windows. Some restaurants already have been closed because their managers could not obtain sufficient provisions.

All the necessaries in food have advanced greatly in price. Today the price of eggs went up 8 cents a dozen and butter made the same advance per pound. These are merely samples of the tax imposed upon the housekeepers by the strike.

No steamers for America are likely to sail from this port this week, as they cannot obtain coal supplies. The mails for America were forwarded to Queenstown to catch the Southampton boat.

Will Not Carry Troops.

The railway men at various centers today notified their superiors of their determination not to handle trains employed in conveying soldiers and police through the strike areas.

A report was current this afternoon

LIVELY FIGHT FOR EAGLES' OFFICES

San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 16.—Wishing to be on the ground so that they may participate in the preliminaries of the grand aerie session of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, which opens here August 21, grand officers and prominent members of the order already are arriving.

Conrad D. Man, grand secretary, arrived last night, accompanied by a delegation of fifty from Kansas City. "Big Tim" Sullivan of New York is expected today.

A sharp contest is expected over the selection of a grand president to succeed Thomas L. Grady of New York, who retires at this session. Grand Vice President John Parry of San Francisco would succeed Grady in the ordinary course, but has announced himself a candidate for grand secretary, which is conceded to him.

San Francisco Eagles have selected J. J. Cusack as an insurgent candidate for grand president to oppose Frank E. Herring, past grand president and now chairman of the board of trustees, who is supported by the old guard of the order.

ATWOOD IN OHIO TOWN

Pettisville Is Next Stop After Elkhart in Long Flight.

Aviator May Not Fly to Boston—Has Row in Chicago.

Pettisville, Ohio, Aug. 16.—Continuing his record-breaking flight from St. Louis to New York and possibly to Boston, Harry N. Atwood this morning traveled from Elkhart, Ind. to Pettisville, Ohio, where he descended to eat luncheon and take gasoline. He covered ninety-seven miles in 2 hours and 6 minutes. He traveled at a speed of a mile a minute during most of the way on the first leg of today's flight. His average speed for this morning's journey was forty-six miles an hour. He is now 484 miles from St. Louis.

Elkhart, Ind., Aug. 16.—With 191 miles set for the day's run, Harry N. Atwood, the Boston aviator, left here at 8:06 a. m., to resume his aeroplane flight from St. Louis to New York. Atwood fixed his first stopping place at Toledo, saying he would probably cover the 133 miles from here to that city by 1 p. m., and an hour later would start for Sandusky, Ohio, fifty-eight miles further eastward, where he will be prepared to stop over night.

Leo Stevens, a New York aeronaut, announced he might accompany Atwood on part of today's trip, but weather conditions prevented this plan being carried out.

Before starting out Atwood said he was not certain that he would extend this cross-country flight as far as Boston, but that he might end it at New York. The trip from St. Louis to New York, he said, would be sufficiently long to establish a new world's record for a cross-country flight.

New Viewpoint to Life.

Discussing his experiences from his air craft in his cross-country trip, Atwood said:

"I am sure when aviation becomes common, it will add a new viewpoint to life. As seen from my machine, houses look as small as dog kennels,

SAYS CONGRESS MAY ADJOURN ON SUNDAY.

Washington, Aug. 16.—Adjournment of the special session of congress next Sunday is possible, according to a statement made today by Senator Penrose following a conference with the president.

"By carrying the legislative day of Saturday over until Sunday we should be able to get away by Sunday night," said the senator.

SANE FLYING IS IN FAVOR

Two Deaths in One Afternoon Put Gloom Over Chicago Meet.

Badger and St. Croix Johnstone Victims of Fatal Plunges.

Chicago, Aug. 16.—Following the fatalities which cost the lives of two aviators yesterday — St. Croix Johnstone and William R. Badger—there was much subdued talk among those remaining at the big aeronautical tournament here about the necessity for "sane" flying.

As the aviators went about the work of tuning up their machines for this afternoon's program, their wives stood about for the most part silent and subdued. They talked among themselves by fits and starts of the dangers incident to the precarious lives of their husbands. The whole camp was in gloom, for Johnstone and Badger were popular, and their tragic fate brought home to each the extreme danger following even the most careful of air pilots.

Speed, altitude and duration trials were on the program for the day, although the official report was that a windstorm was headed this way that might make flying difficult, if not impossible.

Woman to Compete.

The male aviators here will have to share their prize money with a woman for the rest of the meet. Matilda Moisant, sister of John Moisant, who was killed at New Orleans, and of Alfred Moisant, already a participant, joined the ranks of regularly licensed pilots

FALLING PISTOL KILLS WOMAN

Texas Boy's First Visit to New York Marked By Tragedy.

New York, Aug. 16.—According to witnessses, a charge of carrying a concealed weapon is the severest that can be lodged against James Cullen Henderson, a lad from San Antonio, Tex., whose revolver shot a woman dead when he dropped it last night on Park Row.

Henderson, in jail today awaiting arraignment, showed the most anxiety regarding how the occurrence would be viewed at home. To his mother, 314 Woodlawn avenue, San Antonio, he sent the following telegram:

"Dear mamma: I have, please remember, unintentionally shot a news woman. Don't get excited."

Is 16 Years Old.

Henderson, who is 16 years old, said he had been saving his money for months to enable him to spend his vacation in New York.

"I went over to the woman," he said, "to buy a paper. I was fishing in the side pocket of my coat for a cent, and in drawing my hand out I pulled the revolver out. I tried to catch it, but it fell to the sidewalk and went off."

Mrs. Rose Malcheode, who sells papers at the Brooklyn bridge entrance, was shot. She died in a few minutes.

OSMAN ALSO SAYS HE HAD A $1,000 OFFER FROM P. M'DONNELL

Admits, When Forced to Do So, That "Paddy" Approached Him.

Says He Has Asked for Money But Never Received It.

Hearing of Steele Charges Is Resumed By Council Committee.

Informed that if he refused to answer the committee's questions he would be taken before the district court today, A. G. Osman told the council committee which is investigating the "paving scandal" that "Paddy" McDonnell offered him $1,000 not to bid on the Fourth street paving job. The committee resumed its sessions in the council chambers at the city hall at 9:30 o'clock this morning after an adjournment of ten days.

This is the second offer of $1,000 which is alleged to have been made by McDonnell to contractors not to bid on the Fourth street job. Hugh Steele testified that McDonnell also offered him $1,000 not to bid on that piece of work. Steele said that the offer to him was made before the third set of bids was opened and Osman asserted that the offer was made to him between the time of the opening of the first and second bids. Osman said he has asked for the $1,000 but has never received it.

Attorney Crassweller stated in the recess this forenoon that he has papers prepared to bring all witnesses who refuse to answer questions, before the district court. There they will be required to show why they should not answer the questions of the committee or be in contempt of court.

George S. Telford, now in the employ of Hugh Steele and a former employe of the city engineering department, stated that he put in a bill of $5 a day for overtime for two days, and that his pay was $50 per month. He said that the other inspectors were paid that amount for overtime, and that he thought he was entitled to the same consideration. Ho named Chris Brian and Jim McGhee of the engineer's office as two others who were paid at that rate for overtime. He stated that there is a provision in the contract that the contractor shall pay for the overtime. The overtime was paid through the comptroller and the city treasurer. P. McDonnell was the contractor on Garfield avenue.

No Undue Influence.

MAN HUNT IN BAY STATE

Officers and Citizens Seek Alleged Wife-Slayer Near Bedford.

Woman's Body Found Amid Signs of Fierce Struggle.

Bedford, Mass., Aug. 16.—Although a posse of police and armed citizens carrying lanterns searched the woods in every direction all night, Bliss William Darrah, who the police say, stabbed his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth A. Darrah, to death with a butcher knife, was still at large today. This morning the posse was greatly increased by farmers and citizens and the big woods about the town were beaten in the hope of apprehending the man.

Darrah, who had been employed here for about a week as a farmhand at the Frost place, where his wife was cook, left several days ago after quarreling with her. Late yesterday afternoon Darrah appeared at the home of Thomas Coyle, in Lexington, a short distance from the Frost home, and, telling his troubles to Coyle, asked him to go with him to his wife and bring about a reconciliation. Coyle refused.

Seen Running for Car.

About an hour afterwards Coyle and his wife saw Darrah running down Summer street in an effort to catch a Boston car.

The body of Mrs. Darrah was discovered by farmhands coming into the house for supper. The body was lying outside the door and there were signs of a fierce struggle. Chief of Police Kelly immediately made an investigation and a search was instituted.

Darrah is about 40 years old.

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 16.—A special to the Post-Intelligencer from Dawson, Y. T., says that Robert Service, the author, who has arrived there from Fort MacPherson, reported that Hubert Darrell, an Arctic explorer, has been missing from Baillee Island, east of the mouth of the MacKenzie river, since last October. He is given up as lost by the traders in that vicinity. Darrell formerly made trips between Dawson and MacKenzie for the mounted police and was with the explorer, Hanbury.

None of his relatives had heard from Shields in the meantime. He served in the Civil war and has since lived in various parts of the country. His father and mother died believing him dead. He is 68 years old.

He was created cardinal on July 27, 1885. The death of Cardinal Moran creates the twenty-third vacancy in the sacred college.

WISCONSIN MIDDY HAS DISAPPEARED

Marinette, Wis., Aug. 16.—Garrett Day, son of A. B. Day of this city and a member of the United States marine corps at Annapolis, is missing.

He was summoned home a week ago by a telegram telling him of the critical illness of his mother. He left Annapolis for Marinette, and his suit case has arrived here, but nothing has been heard from him.

The navy officials and local police are co-operating in an effort to locate Day. His mother cannot live, and the failure of her son to arrive is hastening the end.

SCHOOLS GET STATE AID

St. Louis County Has 117 and Is in Position to Ask Assistance.

Total Amount to Be Distributed in County This Year Is $19,900.

The county superintendent of schools, N. A. Young, has just received a communication from the state department, in which the state superintendent of public instruction indorses the recommendations made on July 15, by the county superintendent, as to rural schools which are to draw a special state aid.

This list of schools consists of twenty semi-graded schools of two or more teachers. The aid for the semi-graded schools is $300 each. There are eighty-four first class rural schools for which the aid is $150 each and thirteen second class rural schools for which the aid is $100 each. The list has been increased this year over what it was last year by twenty-nine schools. The total amount of special state aid which is to be received by the districts in which these various schools are located is $19,900.

Last year's report showed that the rural schools of this county had eighteen which drew semi-graded aid; sixty-two which drew first grade aid and eight which drew second grade aid, a total of eighty-eight.

When it is understood that in order that a school may be placed on this list it is necessary that the building be heated and ventilated by plants especially constructed for the purpose and that the building be properly equipped with maps, a globe, plenty of blackboard, lighting space, etc., and that practically all of the teachers hold first grade certificates, with the exception of those teaching the schools which draw second class rural aid, it will be realized that the rural schools of St. Louis county ought to rank well with other rural schools of the state. The county superintendent of schools expects to add materially to this list during the coming year and that instead of 117 schools which draw aid of these various kinds, there will be, in all probability 140.

IOWA FARMERS BUYING LAND

Men From Great Corn State Locating in St. Louis County.

Leroy Burch of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, who owns 13,000 acres of land in St. Louis county and more in the adjoining counties, is in Duluth on his way back from a trip with several Iowa farmers who are planning to locate in Northern Minnesota. He had four men with him, and last week sold a section and a half of land. The Iowa agriculturalists took their spades with them and inspected the soil carefully before they did any buying.

The land owned by Mr. Burch is principally in township 56, range 21, about ten miles south of Hibbing. He says the soil is fine and the men from Iowa were enthusiastic. He has twelve farmers on the land already and expects to locate twenty-five more there in February.

Because of the higher rates of taxation in the adjoining counties, Mr. Burch says he has more difficulty in disposing of his holdings there.

FEW WESTERN VETERANS GOING

While every arrangement has been made to make the trip to the East an easy one, the western delegation of members of the G. A. R. which will attend the national encampment at Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 21, will not be large. As far as is known at present, Judge S. F. White, representing the state encampment, will be the only Duluth veteran at the big meeting. The trip is a long one for most of the men who took part in the Civil war to take, and as one of the Duluth veterans put it, "We don't see so many familiar faces any longer. The boys are dying off pretty fast. The national encampments are getting to be pretty largely sectional affairs, those in the West for the West, and those in the East for the East."

A special train has been arranged for the Minnesota and Dakota delegates, leaving the Twin Cities Saturday night over the C., St. P., M. & O. for Chicago, going from Chicago to Rochester via the Nickel Plate. The ladies of the G. A. R. and the Woman's Relief corps will also send delegates to Rochester, and these will also be accommodated on the special.

BOYS ORGANIZE STRONG CLUB

The Agogas Is Name Chosen By the Central Baptist Church Body.

The boys of the Central Baptist church, and their friends, attended the second weekly meeting of their recently organized club last evening. A club name was chosen and other matters of business discussed. Several new members signed the constitution. The name selected was the Agogas. "Agoga" is a Greek word, meaning training.

Mr. Glover, who is a regular attendant at the meetings, and an enthusiastic worker in behalf of the club, was largely instrumental in the forming of the Twentieth Century club, which is now large and prosperous.

A speech by Leigh Gunther, teacher of the young men's class, received great applause from those present. Both Mr. Glover and Mr. Gunther are experienced workers in the organizing of boys' clubs, and they are very optimistic of the future; they think the boys have much to look forward to.

TO MAKE MINES COLLEGE ADJUNCT TO UNIVERSITY.

Houghton, Mich., Aug. 16.—Governor Chase S. Osborn has promised he will make an earnest effort to have the state legislature make the Michigan College of Mines a part of the state university so that graduates of the former school may have the prestige of state university degrees.

ODD NAMES FOR PLANTS.

In the naming of plants in the vernacular, while endeavoring to give them designations suggested by other objects, some exceedingly whimsical titles have been bestowed, says the Indianapolis News. How did that beautiful plant of early spring, with its little bell-like flowers, come to be called lily of the valley? The German name of Maybells is more appropriate. There is another plant of which the name bella donna, "beautiful lady," has been given and which has quite supplanted its earlier and more significant title of deadly nightshade. A great many plants are recognized by names having reference to some animal. The cat loves a special mint, hence the name cat mint or catnip. We have the bee-orchis and fly-orchis, resembling the bee and the fly, and the flower of the single columbine is like an assemblage of doves (Latin, columba, a dove). There are also the crane's bill, foxtail grass, adder's tongue fern and lark's-spur. Lady slipper is a beautiful name, but the flower hardly suggests a lady's slipper.

Horse radish takes its name from its excessive pungency, horse, as so used, being derived from the old English curs, or the Welsh gwres, signifying hot or fierce; and the horse chestnut for a similar reason, as it is hot or bitter and thus differs from the sweet chestnut. The duck-weed is by no means choice food for ducks but simply ditchweed. The corruption in this case may have originated in the Saxon word "dig," which signifies both a ditch and a duck.

Colt's-foot (tussilago farfara) seems to be either from Cough wood or cold wood in accordance with the Latin name, which is derived from "tussis," a cough—and this plant has been long established as a remedy for coughs. There is no resemblance to the foot of a colt, or horse, about it. Pliny wrote that this plant had been in use even in his day from very remote times, the fume of the burning weed being inhaled through a reed.

The gooseberry once bore the old English name carberry or careberry, which carried the intimation to beware of its thorns when gathering the fruit. The present term, however, probably was once gorseberry, gorse meaning prickly. There was a time when goose was both written and spoken gos, as is shown by the word gosling, a young goose, and the migration of gorse to goose was easy and natural.

The name harebell, given to the word hyacinth, properly belongs to the bluebell, campanula rotundefolia. Harebell is traced to a Welsh word signifying airbell, and the name should properly be so spelled.

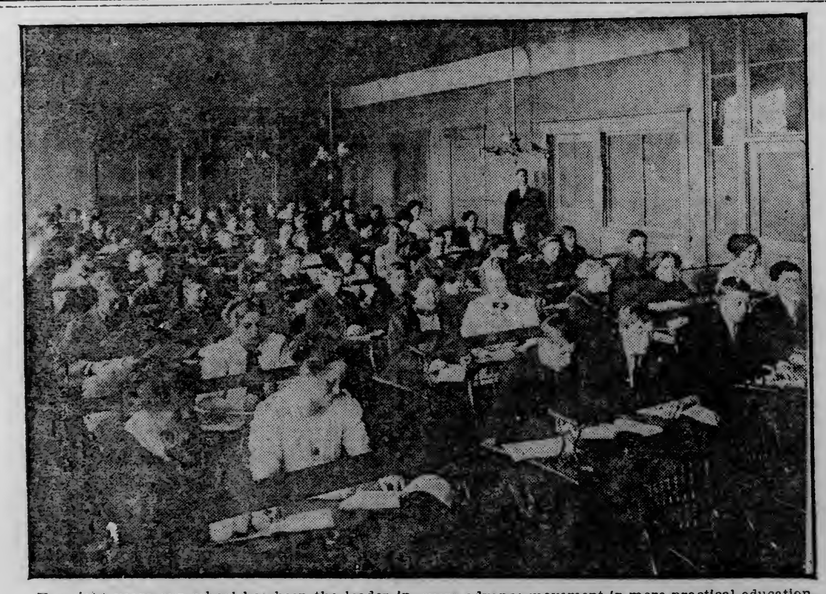
NOT LIKE "OUR MARY."

Los Angeles Times: "Mary Anderson is writing a play," said a New York magazine editor. "I have read it. It is a good play, with a very brilliant cynic in a minor part.

"One of this cynic's speeches is on love. It sounds odd, such a speech, coming from the pen of 'Our Mary.'

"'A lover,' he says, 'is a man who, in his frenzy to obtain possession of another, loses possession of himself.'"



For eight years our school has been the leader in every advance movement in more practical education.

TWO BODIES WILL MEET

State Food and Dairy Executives Also to Hold Session Here.

Will Gather Wednesday Evening, Aug. 23, at Commercial Club.

The Association of State Food and Dairy Executives, a sort of wheel within a wheel, will hold its annual meeting here next week during the annual convention of the Association of State and National Food and Dairy departments.

The executives, who are also members of the larger association, will hold their second annual meeting on the evening of Wednesday, Aug. 23. The program consists of ten-minute talks on subjects of interest to the executives, followed by general discussions. The subjects to be discussed are "The Policy of Supplanting the General Food Law by Special Laws Dealing with Special Commodities or Classes of Commodities," which will be handled by R. M. Allen of Kentucky, E. F. Ladd of North Dakota and Gilman M. Dame of Michigan; and "The Chemical Laboratory, Should it be Located at the Headquarters of the Control, or is Some Other Location More Conducive to Efficiency?" which will be discussed by H. E. Barnard of Indiana, A. H. Jones of Illinois and W. P. Cutler.

A round-table conference to follow will discuss the subject, "The Conduct of the Legal Side of the Work, Should this Lie with the Attorney General or With the Commissioner Through Special Counsel?"

Officers will be elected on the same evening. James Foust of Pennsylvania, who is treasurer of the other association, is president of the executives. Other officers are Charles D. Woods of Maine, vice president; W. D. Saunders of Virginia, secretary; R. M. Allen of Kentucky, treasurer. The members of the executive committee are A. H. Jones of Illinois, E. F. Ladd of North Dakota and H. M. Potter of Connecticut.

The Commercial club is preparing for the entertainment of the visiting pure food experts. They will be given an automobile ride around the boulevard, a boat ride on the harbor and a dinner at the Commercial club on some evening during the week. The meeting of the larger association will open Monday morning and close Thursday afternoon.

AMUSEMENTS

LYCEUM—Forbes Stock company, in "The City."
ORPHEUM—Vaudeville.
EMPRESS—Vaudeville.

Amusement Notes.

Manager Marshall of the Lyceum theater has succeeded in booking Joe M. Gaites' stupendous musical production, "Bright Eyes," for an engagement of three nights commencing Thursday, Aug. 24, with the original New York and Chicago production intact, with Cecil Lean and Florence Holbrook, who have been seen in this piece for the past two seasons to phenomenal business throughout the East, and it can be safely said that this will be one of the musical treats of the year.

"Bright Eyes" is by the same authors as the "Three Twins," Charles Dickson, Otto Hauerbach and Karl Hoschna, and in "Bright Eyes" they have retained their former reputation as authors of successes. Seats go on sale Thursday morning at 10 a. m.

The Six American Dancers who are appearing in the feature act at the Orpheum this week, have just completed a complete tour of the world, lasting nearly two years. They showed what American dancing is, to theater audiences in nearly every civilized country, and their tour was one of the most successful ever taken by a vaudeville troupe. They went first to England, and then toured the continent, playing in the principal music halls and vaudeville theaters. Leaving Europe, they went to Australia and played six weks in Melbourne and six weeks in Sydney, following these engagements with six weeks in the smaller cities. They left Australia last April and returned to America, after what was probably the longest continuous tour ever made by a vaudeville act.

American acts and American actors are very much in demand in Australia, according to the members of the company, who say that while Australia is nominally a British colony, it really seems like a new United States. American customs are followed more than English, and in business life as well as theatrical, Americans are in demand.

Throughout the long tour the company remained intact, and in fact there has been but one change in the company in five years.

In the role of George Frederick Hannock, the moral degenerate and drug fiend, in Clyde Fitch's play, "The City," which the Gus A. Forbes Stock company is presenting this week at the Lyceum, Edwin Brandt has a role which has been one of the most talked of in the annals of the American stage. Dope fiends and moral degenerates are not familiar, luckily, to the majority of theater-goers. The average individual seldom sees a human being that has lost almost entire control of himself, and in the creation of this part Clyde Fitch has again shown his wonderful cleverness. The character creates horror in the minds of the spectators but there is always the feeling of his utter lack of responsibility.

Incidentally Mr. Brandt is giving a remarkable interpretation of the role that shows much careful thought and attention to the pathological details of the character. The first matinee of the week was presented today and "The City" will be repeated every evening this week and Sunday evening, and there will be Saturday and Sunday matinees.

"Charley's Aunt" will be the bill for next week.

Lovers of thrilling acrobatic acts are being offered a treat by Miller, Eagle and Miller at the Empress this week. This act contains a thrill a minute and these daring performers do some death-defying feats that almost make one's hair stand on end. Although they take their lives in their own hands, these performers go through their routine with a reckless abandon and ease that is wonderful. Miller, Eagle and Miller were one of the principal attractions with the Barnum shows for three years and it was only after much persuasion that they were induced to enter vaudeville.

"101 RANCH" SHOW IS TRUE PICTURE OF WESTERN LIFE

ACTORS IN THE "101 RANCH" SHOW.

In a recent agricultural article the New York Herald said: "The 101 Ranch is the largest and most renowned stock and agricultural ranch in the United States consisting of over thirty square miles. Five hundred farm hands are required to harvest the crops, and several hundred cowboys look after the 25,000 head of cattle. The Miller Brothers own one-tenth of all the American buffaloes in the country."

This is the home of the 101 Ranch Real Wild West Show which will be here Friday, Aug. 25. It is from the ranch that the show derives its name and the ranch in turn takes its name from the brand "101" that is placed on the left hip of all live stock of the ranch. The same people that own the ranch are the owners of the show and a truer ring of the genuine could not be had. The show is truly western in the most minute detail and there is nothing that could be considered foreign to the West in any of its many departments. It is not the show that is founded on the ideas that fiction has spread broadcast and so unreal, but the foundation that served as a basis at the time of its organization and which has been adhered sacredly since is realism, personal experiences and individual knowledge of western things as they were and are. While other alleged wild west shows have based their organization on blood and thunder incidents gleaned from the books with the yellow covers, the 101 Ranch Real Wild West Show has successfully offered that which has a tendency to elevate, educate and entertain. Of course there are a number of feature acts the portrayal of which necessitates the use of firearms but they have not been made the basis of the exhibition. There is much more interesting than pistol shots, long hair and Indian whoops with the 101 Ranch. To particularize would necessitate an exhaustive treatise but to sum up it is only necessary to say that the past and present of the West are literally transported from that interesting part of this world to make an entertainment.

WEST END

PASTOR VISITS FORMER FLOCK

Rev. Albert Johanson of Moline Renewing Acquaintances in the West End.

Rev. Albert Johanson, a former pastor of the Swedish Mission church, Twenty-first avenue west and Second street, now in charge of a large mission church at Moline, Ill., is spending a few days in Duluth visiting friends and old acquaintances.

Thursday evening Rev. Mr. Johanson will speak at the branch Mission church, Seventeenth avenue east and London road. Sunday morning he will preach in the West Duluth Swedish Mission church. Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock he will address the young people of the West End Mission church and will occupy the pulpit of the same church at the evening service.

REV. ALBERT JOHANSON.

Rev. Mr. Johanson was pastor of the local church between 1900 and 1906, leaving this charge to go to Chicago, where he filled the pulpit of the Tabernacle mission for two years. From Chicago he went to Moline. Rev. J. Kling succeeded Rev. Mr. Johanson in Duluth.

Rev. Mr. Johanson misses the cool lake breezes for which Duluth is noted, when he is at Moline in the summer time. He has visited in the West end a number of times since he resigned from the local charge.

WILL BENEFIT THE WEST END

West end people welcome heartily the announcement that the Duluth Commercial club is raising a fund of $500,000 to secure more industries for Duluth. The territory west of the Point of Rocks is looked upon as the industrial center of the Greater Duluth, and if new industries come, either the West end or West Duluth will get most of them. There is plenty of room for new industries, it is pointed out, and with proper advertising it is thought that many new concerns will locate here. The West End Commercial club may appoint a committee to co-operate with the uptown organization in raising the manufacturers' guarantee fund.

SWEDISH SUMMER SCHOOL CLOSES.

After a six weeks' successful session, the summer school of the Swedish Mission church, Twenty-first avenue west and Second street, closed yesterday. Appropriate exercises attended the completion of the course, one of the features of the program being an old-fashioned "spellin' bee."

The forty-two children, who were regular attendants at the school during the past few weeks, were divided into five classes according to ages. Those winning the honors were: Class 1, Miss Lindes Edstrom; class 2, Walter Wilson; class 3, Anna Matheson; class 4, Erick Nelson; class 5, Milton Perry.

Rev. J. J. Daniels, pastor of the church, acted as instructor at the sessions of the summer school. The subjects taught were the elements of the Swedish language, the main object of the school being to teach Americanized children of Swedish patronage how to speak the mother tongue correctly.

West End Briefs.

A daughter was born to Dr. and Mrs. L. Q. Greeley of the Greeley apartments, 317 North Twenty-third avenue west, last evening. Mrs. Greeley was formerly Miss Grace Braithwaite, a teacher in the public schools at the West end.

Miss Irene Tetu entertained a number of her friends Sunday at the "Rocky Run." Last week she was hostess to the Misses Evelyn Blais and Georgina Grignon at her summer home in Adolph.

The funeral of Timothy DeMarce, the Soo switchman, who was killed Sunday in the Garfield avenue yards, was held this morning at 9 o'clock from the St. Jean Baptist church, Twenty-fifth avenue west and Third street with interment in Calvary cemetery. DeMarce was 39 years old and leaves a wife and five small children.

The Ladies' Aid society of the Swedish Mission church was entertained this afternoon at the home of Mrs. Gust Parling of 2124 Piedmont avenue. Mrs. William Peterson assisted the hostess.

August Pierson of West Fourth street returned yesterday from a trip to the coast. While away, he visited Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, Seattle, Spokane and other points of interest on the western coast.

The choir of the Swedish Mission church will meet for rehearsal Friday evening in the church, Twenty-first avenue west and Second street. Miss J. J. Daniels will be in charge.

Miss Ovidia Olson of 2305 West Third street, daughter of Rev. Carl G. Olson has returned from Minneapolis and Chicago lake, where she has spent the past month.

MILL CITY MAN WINS RACE WITH GRIM REAPER.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 16.—Frederick T. Gray, a Minneapolis manufacturer, won his race with death and last night grasped the hand of his son at his home here. Mr. Gray arrived at 10:30 p. m. over the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway. The boy, Martin Gray, broke his neck when he dived into a dredge heap in Lake Calhoun. The father a few days before had sailed for Europe. Called by cable, he at once took passage for home. The boy, whose case has mystified physicians and surgeons, recognized his father last night, although he is said to be dying.

FOREST FIRES BURN NOVA SCOTIA VILLAGES.

Halifax, N. S., Aug. 16.—Half a dozen or more villages in Shelbourne and Queens counties, in southwestern Nova Scotia, have suffered severely or are seriously threatened by forest fires which have raged for two days. The main sections of several villages have been wiped out but no loss of life has been reported as yet.

MAY BE LAST DIVIDEND PAID BY STANDARD OIL.

New York, Aug. 16.—The directors of the Standard Oil company declared the regular dividend of $6 a share yesterday. This will probably be the last dividend the company will pay before it distributes the stock of thirty-three of its subsidiary companies to its stockholders, in accordance with the decree of the supreme court.

The company has been in the habit of declaring a dividend of $6 a share for this period, but in view of the recent action of the American Tobacco company in passing its dividend pending reorganization, there were many reports that Standard Oil might likewise defer a dividend declaration at this time.

Since the beginning of 1905 Standard Oil has been paying $40 a share annually in disbursements of $15 a share for the first period, $5 a share for the second, $6 for the third and $10 for the last.

CRYSTAL FALLS OFFICER IS FATALLY WOUNDED.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 16.—Dr. William Lunsford of Nashville, Tenn., was the principal speaker Tuesday at the third annual session of the Northwestern Bible conference, which opened yesterday in Minneapolis. SUPERIOR IN FIRST PLACE

Official Announcement By President Force Changes Aspect of Race.

Superior leads the Minny league teams, with a lead of two points over Winona, according to the official standings wired The Herald by Frank E. Force, president of the league.

The official standings differ from the former newspaper standings in several respects. President Force has issued no official standings this year except on request. The Herald requested him this morning to wire the standings, and the result shows that instead of Winona being in the lead, Superior has first place as a result of yesterday's victory over the Pirates.

The relative standing of the other teams is not changed by the official announcement, although there is some difference in the number of games and those credited in the newspaper standings. According to Force, Superior has won 57 and lost 32, while Winona has won 60 and lost 34.

HACKENSCHMIDT IS IN NEW YORK

New York, Aug. 16.—George Hackenschmidt, the Russian Lion, reached here today on the Olympic, to train for his match with Champion Frank Gotch in Chicago on Labor day. He was accompanied by Dr. Roller, the wrestler of Seattle, who has him in charge. Hackenschmidt will go into training near Chicago.

Hackenschmidt appeared to be a trifle heavier than when he was last in this country. He expects to go on the mat at about 200 pounds. He is confident as to the outcome.

Crossing the Atlantic, the big wrestler entertained the passengers by wrestling with an actor named Wright.

MINNEAPOLIS WANTS TRANS-MISSISSIPPI TOURNEY

Omaha, Neb., Aug. 16.—Weldell Hertig, representing the Minnikahda Club of Minneapolis, who incidentally caddies for Harry Legg in most of his championship matches, arrived today with a boost for his club for the Trans-Mississippi tournament of 1912. He is supporting Frank Woodward of Denver for president.

FIGHTER ARRESTED FOR ASSAULT IN RING.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Aug. 16.—Al Mandino of Pittsburg not only lost his fight with Tom Douglass of Boston on a foul here last night, but was arrested for assault and battery as a result of his tactics. With Douglass down in the second round of their eight-round bout, Mandino hit him three times. He was arrested in the ring.

YOUNG MILLER AND JOE CARR TO MEET.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 16.—Walter Miller of St. Paul, welterweight wrestling champion, and Joe Carr of Minneapolis will meet in a finish bout at Nicollet baseball park tonight.

Much local interest attaches to the bout, although it is not for the title, as Carr is above the welterweight limit.

BUY STATE LAND TO CULTIVATE

Prospective Farmers Take 840 Acres in St. Louis County,

Theodore Nelson, manager of the land sales department for the state conducted the August sale of St. Louis county lands in the grand jury room at the courthouse, today. The sale was the largest since the first of the monthly sales inaugurated this year, 840 acres of farming land being disposed of chiefly to men who expect to go on the land themselves and cultivate it. Three forties were sold for $6 per acre and the balance at $5 per acre.

The lands sold this morning are the following townships: 57-17, 51-18, 56-18, 54-19, 56-19, 57-19 and 61-20.

NO OBJECTIONS.

County Board Meets to Hear Assessment Kicks, But None Appear.

That this year's personal property assessment is generally satisfactory was demonstrated this morning, when the board of county commissioners sat as a board of review on the assessment and not a single objection was presented for consideration.

The board will probably continue to sit in state and idleness during the afternoon, after which time the opportunity for objection to the assessor's estimates wil have passed.

At the afternoon session of the board yesterday Contractor Steele presented a bill for grading the slope between the government building and the courthouse, which the auditor had turned down. The board backed up the auditor, saying that the work had never been ordered. The county officials believe that the bill should be paid by the government.

NURSE TAKES STRYCHNINE

Miss Beulah Johnson Commits Suicide in Superior Hotel.

Despondent on Account of Inability to Obtain Employment.

Miss Buelah A. Johnson, a trained nurse, committed suicide in her room at the Hotel Superior about 9 o'clock last evening by taking the contents of a bottle of strychnine. Despondency is attributed as the motive.

The night watchman heard cries coming from her room and breaking in, found the woman stretched across her bed and in great agony. Before a physician could be summoned she died. Coroner Giesen was called, but decided that the death was suicidal and that no inquest was necessary.

Failure to get employment is believed to have been responsible in a large way for her despondency and to have caused her to take her life. She came to the city from the southern part of the state only a few days ago.

The body was taken to the Lo Sage undertaking rooms pending the location of relatives.

RAH BOYS WANTED.

Claimed to Have Attacked Laborer and to Have Slashed Him Badly.

Joe Rah and Tony Rah, not college boys, are wanted by the Superior police for assaulting an Italian laborer in a boarding house at 1013½ Banks avenue, last evening.

The Rahs, brothers and also laborers, had a quarrel with the victim of the assault earlier in the evening and the outcome was that they drew their knives and attacked him.

The man was cut quite badly before the fight was stopped. The police were called but the men escaped.

LICENSES TO DULUTH BREWERIES DON'T COUNT.

Although the state law provides explicitly that in a city with the population of Superior, only 161 saloon licenses shall be granted by the council, the city fathers have found what they believe to be a loophole in the law and have granted up to date 164 licenses to retail liquor dealers.

The law was construed to mean that the granting of a license to a foreign brewery or corporation outside of the state was illegal and counted as no license. Three of these licenses have been issued to breweries of Duluth, and, according to the city attorney, they do not "count."

The council assumes that it is acting entirely within the law when it grants the extra licenses and still makes no move to revoke the so-called "illegal" licenses issued to the Duluth brewing concerns.

The city fathers did not settle the matter of retaining or discarding the ornamental lighting system on Tower avenue.

Will Help With Fair.

For the purpose of assisting the Douglas County Development association in making the plans for the big county fair in September, President Spring of the Superior Commercial club yesterday appointed a committee to work with the association in completing the plans for the exhibition. Joseph Konkel was named chairman of the committee and the other members are W. H. Webb, John C. Bertrand, G. C. Pauling, W. S. Wingate and C. E. Armstead.

Will Reorganize.

The Superior branch of the Wisconsin Free Labor bureau will reorganize Sept. 1 with new rules and policies. Supt. William O'Carroll will remain in charge of the office. One of the features of the change will be that more attention will be paid to the employment of women and in all probability Mr. O'Carroll will have a woman assistant.

Meeting of Stockholders.

A meeting of the stockholders of the Twin City & Lake Superior Railway company for the purpose of electing officers and transacting other business will be held Sept. 5. It is expected that the meeting will be an important one, as steps will be taken to push the roadbuilding project. About forty-five miles of the road has been graded, thirty miles cleared and options secured on seventy more miles.

Will Attend Convention.

Postmaster O. K. Anderson will attend the annual national convention of postmasters which will be held in Omaha, Neb., Sept. 14, 15 and 16. He is unable to attend the Wisconsin convention, which is now in session at Green Bay. The national meeting will be a big affair, postmasters from all large cities in the country attending.

THE UMPIRE.

Chicago News: "A man who has some leisure on his hands receives many invitations to get busy," observed the retired merchant. "I am always being asked to officiate at one function or another. This evening I am going to act as umpire at a game of baseball. The fats and the leans are going to meet upon the crimson field for the championship of the ward."

"Well, I hope you come back from the game all in one section," said the hotel keeper, "but the chances are against it. A man has a chance for his life when he umpires a real game of baseball, played by professionals, but when he undertakes to preside over an amateur uprising the probability is that he will be torn limb from limb. I'd like to know why the fats and the leans always are arrayed against each other in baseball.

"A few years ago, when I wasn't half as wise as I am now, I yielded to the solicitations of a committee of patriots and agreed to act as umpire at a fat and lean game. I supposed, of course, that everybody would be good natured and that my decisions would be accepted as though they were the laws of the doggone Medes and Persians. I took it for granted that the fats and the leans would realize that they couldn't play ball, and would be in a humble and apologetic frame of mind. But if you want to find the man who knows it all, in any avenue of usefulness, all you've got to do is to hunt up some half-baked amateur.

"It's just the same in baseball as it is in music. You run up against a fellow like Paderewski, who can take a piano in both hands and play it like a concertina, and he'll admit before he has talked five minutes that he merely knows the rudiments of music, and would need to live a thousand years to arrive anywhere. Then you encounter some village professor who can play 'Silvery Waves' with variations, and he can explain just why Beethoven and Mozart were cheap musicians.

"On the baseball field a man like Christy Mathewson is looking for ways and means to improve himself, knowing that there are hundreds of possibilities he has not mastered. Then you see some barnyard chieftain, with his whiskers full of cockleburs, trying to do a pitching stunt, and nobody can tell him anything. He knows it all, and the men who invented baseball would look like a wax figure beside him.

"Well, I hadn't been umpiring that fool game five minutes before I saw I had made the mistake of my life. Every man on the ground knew more about the game than I did, although I had studied it all my life, and had the rules by heart. Both teams were made up of silver-tongued orators, and every time I made a decision a lot of the players would leave their places and gather around me and make the welkin ring. The umpire at an amateur game has to stand for this sort of thing. He can't order offenders to the bench or off the grounds, and if he tries to assert his authority there is danger that he will be taken to the nearest tree and lynched.

"Before the second inning was ended everybody was frothing at the mouth, and the fat man in center field had a stroke of apoplexy. It seemed that I was trying to rob both sides, and people were always coming toward me with bats upraised, threatening to brain me. There is an old superstition that fat men are cheerful and good natured, but don't you believe it. The fat men were far more violent than the lean ones, but, fortunately, they couldn't run as fast. When the game ended with a foot-race, with me setting the pace, the short wind of the fats was all that saved my life. Several bats and stones hit me as I vaulted over the fence, and when I got home most of my features were out of alignment, but I wasn't mortally injured.

"If you emerge alive from this game come to the hotel and try a new liniment that I bought in a gallon can from an agent the other day."

THE WILY CUCKOO.

Prof. Taylor in the June Strand: As is well known, the cuckoo makes no nest of its own, but utilizes one built by some other bird, leaving the task of incubation to the future foster-parents. These foster-parents may belong to any small species of bird, such as meadow-pipits, hedge-sparrows, willow-wrens, wagtails, and others—all very tiny birds in comparison with the cuckoo itself.

The cuckoo must, therefore, lay a very small egg to match those of its host, and, for the size of the bird, the cuckoo may be said to lay the smallest egg of any living species.

The procedure adopted by the cuckoo is this: First it lays its egg on the ground, then carries it by beak or claw into the nest of the intended foster-parents, who incubate it along with their own eggs.

It is evident that the cuckoo searches for nests. With a view to testing its proceedings I have, on various occasions, placed deserted and empty nests in tufts of grass on ground frequented by the cuckoo. In some cases the trap has been successful and a solitary cuckoo's egg was found lying in the dummy nest. Were proof needed, this would tend to show that the cuckoo needs no assistance from the parent birds in finding nests, and further indicates that she is at no pains to ascertain before depositing her egg, that the nest chosen is destined to be used.

"WHITE WAY" AS BOOM FOR GRAND

The Grand avenue business men have again taken up the agitation for a "great white way" for that thoroughfare between Fifty-fourth and Fifty-ninth avenues west. The street is now being paved and if the property can stand the expense, it is probable that the ornamental lights will be installed.

Unquestionably, Grand avenue would then become the principal business street of West Duluth and outrival Central avenue in every respect, it is claimed. The property owners may get together within a few weeks and bring the matter up for a careful consideration.

The avenue is being widened two feet by the paving operations. After it is paved it will be a 56-foot street with a 12-foot sidewalk. Formerly it was a 44-foot roadway with an 18-foot sidewalk. The street is being paved with brick laid on a concrete foundation and the paving will be finished within a month.

MAY CLOSE ALL STORES AT SIX

Suburban Merchants Considering Proposition to Discontinue Evening Trade.

West Duluth merchants may get together and agree to close all stores in the western suburb at 6 o'clock every evening except Saturday. This will not include drug stores.

The change, if effected, would be a permanent one, and, it is believed, will meet with the moral support of the community which patronizes the stores.

A quiet canvass is now being made among the business men in an effort to secure the co-operation of every one concerned in the matter, and to ascertain the sentiment which prevails.

The closing of the stores in the downtown and other districts of the city has met with general approval. It is figured by the West Duluth merchant that if all the stores are closed at 6, he will not suffer any loss of patronage.

After 6 p. m. at West Duluth business is light, and there are many who believe that it would be more sensible should the stores be closed and the clerks and help allowed their evenings off.

PROVES UP ON HIS CLAIM

Mayor Cullum Exercises His Stone and Timber Right.

Marcus B. Cullum, mayor of Duluth, today proved up on a quarter section of stone and timber land near the lake shore, near Wax Lax lake in Lake county, on the Alger-Smith logging road. The patent to this land is expected from Washington in a few weeks.

The description of the land is given as the southeast quarter of the northeast quarter of section 7, 56-7. The application was made on this quarter on March 31, 1910. Mayor Cullum is also the owner of a homestead which he took out in Wisconsin.

A large number of Duluth men are the owners of land in that vicinity, which is said to be an excellent fishing and hunting grounds, and those interested in the lands thereabout, it is said, have organized a club, the principal object of which is outdoor sports. Wax Lax lake and Baptism river, which runs through this land, abound in fish, while the wods about there are full of wild game, adding much to the pleasure of the outdoor life.

Among the men said to have land there and who are members of this club are Frank Brewer, J. A. Ferguson, R. N. Marble and John Millen.

WILL CHECK UP MILEAGE USED

State Auditor Serves Notice on Officials as to Mileage Books.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—State Auditor Iverson will approve the expense accounts of state employes which include the purchase of mileage books. He so informed the heads of departments today. But he ties a string to the mileage books, in that he will require each trip to be itemized on a special blank provided for the purpose, and require further that the exact number of miles used on the trip be listed.

In this way state empolyes whose homes are not in St. Paul will not be able to go to their own firesides at the week-end and charge the railroad transportation up to the state.

The railroads sell 2,000-mile mileage books at the rate of 2 cents a mile, while local tickets cost 3 cents a mile. Mr. Iverson recommends the use of the mileage books, but says that local trip tickets will be audited, too.

AIR MEN ARE INDIGNANT

Say Chicago Contests Should Have Halted When Badger Fell.

Atwood Declares That Management's Course Was "Uncivilized."

Chicago, Aug. 16.—The aviators here are inclined to criticize the local management for not calling off the program for the day when Badger was killed. Harry N. Atwood, who is flying from St. Louis to New York, sent identical telegrams today to every afternoon paper, characterizing the nonaction of the management in this regard as "ferocious and uncivilized."

"We were all unnerved by the accidents," Brookins said, "but we were not signaled to come down, and so continued our flights. There wasn't an aviator on the grounds who felt fit to handle a machine after Badger's death. We knew him and liked him. Still the program never halted. No aviator would decline to fly, no matter how shaken his nerves were. If he did his prestige would suffer greatly."

Dangerous Stunts Barred.

Owing to the danger, the trial for altitude with passenger was eliminated from the program, and this afternoon the airmen were warned to avoid spirals, dips and other hazardous feats.

A coroner's jury, being unable to fix definitely the cause of Badger's death, returned an open verdict, merely stating that death was due to a fall from an aeroplane.

Walter J. Fontain, a mechanician in the Baldwin camp, fainted when he saw Badger's body.

Inquest over Johnstone's body was postponed until Saturday.

HELPED CAPTURE THE DON JUAN

Duluth Man Inspects Boat He Helped Take From Spain.

Harry Dahl, a butcher at Tenth avenue west and First street, was one of the most interested visitors to the Don Juan de Austria, the training ship of the Detroit naval militia, when she was in the harbor this week. Mr. Dahl was a gunner on the cruiser Baltimore when the Don Juan de Austria was captured in the harbor of Manila.

Mr. Dahl served four yeras in the United States navy and was at his gun during the battle of Manila. Four Spanish ships were sunk and three, the Don Juan de Austria included, were captured. Mr. Dahl visited the Don Juan de Austria and told the militia boys the story of her capture.

Mr. Dahl's brother, a second lieutenant in marines, was one of the victims when the Main was blown up in Havana harbor.

DECLINE GENERAL; UNDERTONE WEAK

Coppers Recede—Selling Heavy—Foreigners Liquidate Stocks.

Labor troubles and financial difficulties abroad were the chief elements of a bearish nature influencing the stock market today. Several leading English railroads will combat a general strike order, having been assured of government protection. Disorders continue in Liverpool and the continental markets were depressed by the English labor troubles. Three foreign banking houses went to the wall, causing liquidation in some of the leading American stocks, especially Amalgamated and Canadian Pacific.

The return of J. P. Morgan from Europe was without effect, as no support came to stocks from leading interests. A leading industrial concern passed its preferred dividend, which contributed to the general depression. Trading in stocks today was active. The announcement that merchants involved in the poultry trust prosecution would be sentenced to imprisonment in jail had a depressing effect. The Taft message was regarded with favor by Wall Street for its "sound conservatism." The financial situation is not regarded with favor.

Amalgamated sold at $61.25, $59.75 and up to $60.50 and then to $60. Butte Ballaklava sold at $3.75. Giroux was traded in at $5.50, $5.12½ and $5.18¾; North Butte sold at $26.25 to $24.50 to $25; Ojibway was offered at $5; Greene sold at $6.62½ to $6.50.

Final payment on its property was made yesterday by the Live Oak Development company. The deed to the land was turned over to the company. The payment was not due for eighteen months, but the company got a discount. The ground is fully paid for. It has been demonstrated that the property contains a large tonnage of low grade copper ore similar to that of the Miami.

Alaska is now contributing 2,000,000 lb of copper per month to the supply in this country. The Guggenheim interests have recently started up the Tacoma smelter on the coast to treat the ores now coming from the Bonanza mines in Alaska. The result is about 2,000,000 lb of copper per month to add to an already abundant supply.

Development at depth in the North Butte properties is proving the mine to be of greater value than anticipated, it is said. Little exact information is obtainable, but a marked improvement is reported during the past few weeks on the 2,800-foot level. The vein is said to have a width of eighteen feet in places, carrying from five to seven feet of copper glance and bornite, and is being developed rapidly.

MEANS MUCH TO AMERICA

Joint Commission With the Canadians Has Important Tasks.

Will Eliminate London From International Negotiations.

Washington, August 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—The international joint commission which will shortly be completed by the promulgation of the names of the Canadian commissioners, the announcement of the Canadian personnel coming through the British foreign office as of the appointment of King George, is the first piece of international machinery for direct negotiations and settlement of questions that may arise between the United States and the Dominion of Canada. It is a modified Hague tribunal, confined to the northern part of the North American continent.

Through the powers conferred upon this commission by the treaty with Great Britain of 1909, the representatives of the United States and those of Canada may take up questions relating to the development and use of the waterways between the two countries.

Use of Waterways.

The primary work of the commission is in relation to the water boundary—not as to its location, but as to its uses. There are many plans for the use of these international waters other than for navigation, but there has been no competent authority for granting permits and at the same time properly protecting the rights of the people on either side of the international line.

There are pending schemes for developing water power in the St. Johns river, which forms the international boundary between Maine and New Brunswick; for the development of the Richelieu river, which is the outlet of Lake Champlain; for the improvement of navigation and the development of water power in the St. Lawrence river between New York and Ontario; for a sanitary canal around Niagara Falls on the American side; for the development of water power in the Rainy river between Minnesota and Canada; also for development of water power in the Lake-of-the-Woods, and uses of the water of the St. Mary river and the Milk river in Montana and Saskatchewan for irrigation purposes. There are smaller projects, but these larger schemes will furnish ample work for the commission and, if settled, ample justification for the creation of such an international court of arbitration.

Big Step for Canada.

The negotiation of this waterways treaty, creating the international joint commission, is the first step towards an enlarged control by the Dominion of Canada of her relations with the United States. These questions, relating to the water boundary, are not new. They have been under consideration for years, but they had to be handled in the old way through the diplomatic representative of Great Britain, and the negotiations had to be conducted in the roundabout way of London to Ottawa and back by the same route to Washington. Such indirect negotiations were in a measure responsible for the dissatisfaction the Canadians have manifested with the settlement of the Alaskan boundary and other questions in controversy.

The international joint commission provides for direct negotiations between Canada and the United States on all questions relating to the water boundary, and opens the way for the settlement of all other questions that may arise by the reference of these questions to that commission.

Tawney on Commission.

The general arbitration treaties between the United States and Great Britain and France may fail of ratification, but in the creation of the international joint commission the beginning has been made in the most practical way on the questions touching the relations of this country and its nearest neighbor, who is progressing along the same lines as here, with the same kind of people, who have the same ambitions and the same enterprise touching the development of the greatest water power on the American continent.

The commissioners to represent the United States have been appointed and are: Former United States Senator Thomas H. Carter of Montana, Ex-Representative James A. Tawney of Minnesota, and Frank S. Streeter of New Hampshire.

PIANOS FROM CHICAGO.

Chicago Tribune: Chicago is now the largest piano producing center in the world, turning out annually more than 100,000 instruments, which are shipped all over the world. Manila alone within the last two years has taken over 1,100 pianos. Mexico, until the present trouble overtook that republic, took more than 6,000 pianos annually from Chicago, and Central and South America, especially the Argentine Republic, have been great consumers of Chicago pianos.

Up to a few years ago Germany sent all the instruments that were shipped to these countries. But the German woods in the cases would not stand the climates. It was Milwaukee that first discovered this and sent trade emissaries to the far away lands. Within a few years Chicago has built up a large export trade in this line. What holds good of the piano also holds good of band instruments.

Chicago sells approximately 100,000 pianos a year, aggregating in value about $50,000,000, which is about one-third of the entire product of the nation.

CLOSE RACE IN THE NEBRASKA PRIMARIES.

Omaha, Neb., Aug. 16.—According to returns from Nebraska's state wide primaries yesterday, the renomination of Supreme Judges W. B. Rose and C. B. Leeton by the Republicans seems probable. But a few hundred votes divided the five leading candidates for the Democratic supreme court nominations.

Beebe and Hall are almost tied for the Republican nomination for railway commissioner, with four others not far behind them. Harmon has a strong lead for that place on the Democratic ticket.

BURGLARS GET BUSY

Three Attempts Made in Hibbing Tuesday Night, Little Secured.

Two Suspects Taken and Police Are Searching for Evidence.

Hibbing, Minn., Aug. 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—A gang of burglars operated here last night. While little or nothing was secured, it does not appear to have been the fault of the operators. Two suspects, giving the names of R. H. Towsley and Gordon Buckhart, were arrested by the police in front of the Hibbing hotel at 9:30 a. m., and are being "sweated" in an endeavor to worm something out of them that will bring about the conviction of someone for last night's work.

One Cut His Hand.

An incriminating piece of evidence is a wound on the hand of one, as blood marks were found on the rear door of the Hub saloon on Pine street, through which an opening had been cut, indicating the wound had been sustained while cutting the hole. The effort to enter the saloon was evidently abandoned after the wound was sustained.

The burglars also broke into the basement of Congdon's drug store, but found their passage into the store above blocked by a door. About 2:30 this morning while the night clerk of the Hibbing hotel was upstairs, the cash register in the cigar stand and the cigar machine were stolen. The register contained nothing. It was found in the yard along with the cigar machine, which had been smashed and about $3 in nickels abstracted. The two suspects under arrest have been loitering around town for two days and the police hope to connect them with last night's work. The town has been remarkably free of burglaries and the police will spare no effort to run down last night's marauders.

RAILWAY COMPANY GIVEN FRANCHISE

Eveleth Joins Other Mesaba Range Towns in Welcoming New Company.

Eveleth, Minn., Aug. 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—The city council last night granted the Mesaba Electric company a franchise to build its electric road through the city. After much discussion it was decided to accept the company's request and have the line on Adams avenue instead of Grant although many of the latter merchants petitioned to that effect.

Engineer E. C. Thomas for the company explained to the council that a meeting of the underwriters of the enterprise will be held in New York tomorrow evening with Attorney Oscar W. Mitchell of Duluth provisional president present. Mr. Mitchell will present franchises from Gilbert, Buhl, Mountain Iron, Virginia, and verbal agreements from Hibbing and Virginia.

Any delay on Eveleth's part he said might prejudice the underwriters who have made extensive plans for the construction of a range road this fall. Many of the property owners present dwelt upon the fact that a presidential year is approaching carrying with it meeting financial conditions which might affect the project for a few more years. A few were in favor of calling a later meeting for citizens to vote on the route for the line but the proposition was rejected as the promoters wish to start work on the line next month.

To Have Office in Virginia.

Engineer Thomas stated that he had opened an office at Virginia and would confer with contractors today relative to the work of constructing the line. bids for which will be opened Aug. 26. Fifteen engineers are now assisting him. The line will be built on Adams avenue with one station near the Glode hotel where passengers will have a waiting room. Service will be maintained hourly between the points on the line during eighteen hours of the day. State Senator James P. Boyle, State Treasurer Walter J. Smith and President James C. Poole of the Commercial club were among the interested citizens present who spoke with great length on the location of the new line in passing through Eveleth.

F. Lainen, John Abo, S. E. Helps, Capt. Thomas H. Davey, Krist Kristoferson and A. Johnson were granted milk permits while H. Wilkl was refused a permit, his application not carrying the necessary per cent of cream. The city clerk was instructed to advertise for 2,000 shade trees for the city park and boulevards for spring delivery, and also for 550 feet of sewer pipe on Hayes street which it is estimated will cost $490. Insurance on the pump station at St. Mary's lake was placed with the First National and Miners' National banks, the former receiving $3,000 and the latter, $7,000. The city attorney advised that the city could assist in erecting an armory and Friday evening a site for the new drill quarters of the local militia company is to be selected by the city council.

BLACK HAND MAY HAVE DONE CRIME

Rumored That Sacco, Alleged Slayer of Bonaco, Belongs to Order.

Virginia, Minn., Aug. 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—Is Carmine Sacco, the alleged slayer of Caesario Bonaco, a member of the Black Hand and was Bonaco killed by orders of that murderous organization? These are questions being discussed here. The police, however, scout the idea and claim the killing of Bonaco was the result of a poker game row.

While being brought to this city by Deputy Sheriff Molian, Sacco was noticed by Pat McDonald, a steam shovel engineer of Coleraine, under whom Socco worked for some time and who was well acquainted with him. He said he had frequently talked about the Black Hand societies with the prisoner and that the latter was apparently very familiar with their operations.

This has led to a rumor here that Bonaco was the victim of a Black-hand plot but the officers scoff at the idea and declare there is no evidence to support it. As near as can be ascertained, the affair was the outgrowth of a quarrel.

Four Held for Murder.

Following a preliminary hearing conducted by Judge Carey in municipal court Sacco and three others, Antolno Vritano, Nick Collago and Sam Tonello were held to the grand jury for killing Bonaco. The other suspects were released. Nothing new about the tragedy of last Sunday evening when Bonaco was shot down during a row following a poker game was developed at the hearing. It seems to be the prevailing belief that Sacco fired the fatal shots but this is largely speculation.

Aurora, Minn., Aug. 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—John Zagar, aged 8 years, was badly injured yesterday by the explosion of a dynamite cap. He was playing with the cap near his home.

FIRE LIMITS ARE TO BE SPECIFIED

Virginia Council Expects to Have Fire Limits Better Defined.

Virginia, Minn., Aug. 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—To better specify the fire limits and prescribe the character of buildings to be erected therein the city council last night instructed the city attorney to prepare an ordinance to that end.

The ordinance relating to the establishment of a building line on Maple street which has caused much discussion was tabled. A new ordinance was introduced relating to the erection of livery stables. It provides such barns must be at least 75 feet from the outside lines of the property and cannot be built within 200 feet of other buildings unless the permission of a majority of the other property owners is secured.

The city engineer was instructed to draw plans and specifications for a sewer in block 13 of Anderson's second addition and for a sanitary sewer on the North side.

ARRESTS FOLLOW WEDDING BLOWOUT

Two Evelethians, Who Celebrated Too Strenuously, Are Given Fines.

Eveleth, Minn., Aug. 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—Paul Frankovich and J. Frankovich was fined, in all, $58, $25 for assault and battery and $25 for resisting Officer John Zidar, who placed him under arrest and $8 for costs. Pokovich, who pleaded guilty to the charge of assaulting Frankovich, was fined $5 and costs. Frankovich smashed his head with a beer bottle, inflicting a gash one and one-half inches deep.

Mrs. J. Watress failed to testify against her husband, who was charged with threatening to kill her, and the defendant was accordingly dismissed.

LUNDSTROM'S BODY NOT YET RECOVERED

Failure to Find Body Leads to Hope He May Be Alive.

Ely, Minn., Aug. 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—There is a bare responsibility that E. Lundstrom, the West Duluth man reported drowned in White Iron lake last Saturday, while on his way to the St. Croix lumber camp where he was cooking, may not have perished. Repeated efforts to bring the body to the surface even by the use of dynamite have failed and this has prompted his relatives to hope he still be alive.

His wife and young brother have arrived from West Duluth and will not abandon the search for him. They fear the worst as some men claim to have seen Lundstrom in a canoe on the lake Saturday and to have helped him right the craft after which the empty canoe was found.

SILLIMAN WOULD SELL PLANT TO HIBBING.

Hibbing, Minn., Aug. 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—The board of light and water commissioners has an offer from A. P. Silliman to sell the Brooklyn light and water plant to the village, but the board at its meeting last night did not act upon the proposition, owing to the absence in Duluth of Chairman Wearne.

Mr. Silliman proposes to sell the entire Brooklyn plant including plant, electric wire lines, poles, transformers, water mains and all and offers it to Hibbing for the sum of $58,850. Brooklyn is now included within the village limits and has some thousand residents, nearly all of whom secure their power and water from the Brooklyn plant. Mr. Silliman, it is understood, wishes to get rid of the responsibility of the plant and devote himself to his mining interests. The plant is thought to be a paying investment.

The council is about prepared to let the contracts for the various parts of the work, except the dam, which is the most important part of the work.

LOCKS FAMILY OUT OF DOORS

Hibbing, Minn., Aug. 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—Locked out by a brutal intoxicated husband and father, Mrs. Steve Swatovich and two little girls, aged 5 and 3, were forced to spend the greater part of Monday night on the Butler ore dump, exposed to the chill breeze and threatening storm.

Dan Sweitzer, a switchman employed at the Grant mine near Buhl, was working on the night shift as usual and was being visited by Joe Panyon, a resident of the village, who spent the time during Sweitzer's leisure moments in swapping stories.

Suddenly the men heard a cry like an infant's and they were much puzzled. The cries continued at intervals for two hours or more and it was towards 3 o'clock in the morning that the men investigated. They then found Mrs. Swatovich and her two little ones huddled closely together at the end of the ore dump. Accompanied by the two men the woman and children returned to the little house. Once inside they found that Swatovich had slept off his potations and was longing for their return. He had forgotten that he had driven them out of doors.

WILL KEEP UP ALASKA PROBE

House Committee Not Ready to Drop Controller Bay Case.

Washington, Aug. 16.—Republicans charged in the house yesterday that the Democratic members of the interior department expenditures committee, after allowing the administration and the name of President Taft to be reflected by "hysterical publicity" of "scandalous and scurrilous" reports in connection with the Alaskan Controller bay land claims affair, had dropped the investigation to prevent the real truth from becoming known. Representative Graham of Illinois and Representative Ferris of Oklahoma, Democrats, of the committee, denouncing these charges as untrue, declared the committee promised to prosecute the inquiry until all obtainable facts are brought out.

Mistake by Taft.

Mr. Graham, who is chairman of the committee, intimated that the Democratic majority of the comittee are not by any means satisfied that President Taft did not err when he permitted Richard Ryan of New York to secure the water front tract on Controller bay. He said it was now known that the president made a mistake when he "sacrificed" Louis R. Glavis, in the Ballinger-Pinchot controversy, and that it was entirely possible that he had erred again. He added, however, that the Democrats on the committee had too much respect for the president to make the attack on him the Republicans claimed had been made.

The discussion ended without action. Mr. Graham gave notice that he later would move to table a resolution introduced by Representative Humphrey of Washington to discharge the Graham committee from consideration of the matter and supplant it by a special committee.

Attorney Argues That Two Harbors Charter Provision Cannot Hold.

Unless the case is dismissed on the technical ground that the proper remedy has not been taken by the relator to secure his position as alderman-at-large of Two Harbors, it is probable that the equity case of Irwin against Johnson now on in district court will bring the constitutionality of the recall of public officers directly to an issue and result in a decision on the validity of such a provision in city charters even after the legislature expressly authorized it.

Charles Baldwin, in his argument against the validity of the recall before Judge W. A. Cant this morning, declared it to be unconstitutional and contended that since the legislature itself cannot remove a public officer without cause under the state constitution, it cannot grant the power so to do to the people. Therefore chapter 107 of the laws of 1909 is, according to Mr. Baldwin, an invalid provision in specially permitting recall provision in city charters.

In the course of his argument Mr. Baldwin brought up President Taft's veto of the statehood bill with the recall of judges' provision, and stated that he was entirely in sympathy with the president's attitude. The recall of judges would, he said, prevent that independence which was indispensible to the judiciary, and the recall of members of legislative bodies would also result in a regrettable loss of independence.

John A. Keyes represented the newly elected candidate of the Socialist local, and his argument was principally based upon the contention that Irwin had taken the wrong remedy in seeking a restraining order to prevent the newly elected candidate from interfering with him in the performance of his duties. He pointed out that Johnson, the new candidate, had positively sworn that he would take no illegal means to possess himself of Irwin's office.

The case was continued until 9:30 this morning at the close of court and, after listening to arguments this morning, the court resumed the hearing this afternoon.

Proceedings on Johnson's mandamus to compel the city clerk to issue a certificate of election to him have been discontinued as it appeared to the court that the matter could be successfully tharshed out in one action.

RETURNING FROM ALASKA

Missionary to Outposts of Civilization Will Speak Here.

Rev. E. P. Newton, a representative of the Episcopal Board of Missions of New York city at Valdez, Alaska, will be in Duluth next Sunday on his way to New York, and will speak at the morning service of the Trinity Episcopal cathedral, Twentieth avenue east and Superior street, on the subject "Alaska."

Rev. Mr. Newton has devoted several years of his life in the fields of Alaska, and is an inspector general in the outposts, which are established in the out-of-the-way places to supplant the saloon. He has been very successful in his work, and the Literary Digest, in the issue of July 1, speaks well of the work.

He will leave in the evening on the steamer Dionesta for Buffalo, from where he will go to New York. Mr. Newton is known in Duluth and was a classmate of William C. Sargent.

SHRINERS HAVE MERRY TIME

Annual Picnic at Fond du Lac Brings Out Large Crowd.

There was much pleasure and much excitement yesterday on the annual picnic of the local Shriners, which was held at Fond du Lac. More than 500 people took part in the outing, which was one of the most enjoyable of the season.

The program of the day consisted of fakes of various kinds, which lent excitement to the day of pleasure; music furnished by Flaaten's orchestra, and singing by Miss Patsy Ann Epperson of Louisville, Ky., and Prof. A. F. M. Custance and his chorus of high school girls.

The sports of the day were well contested and interesting throughout, the competition being keen. The winners of the events were awarded prizes. The unmarried women took the prize in the tug-of-war contest with the married women, but the tug-of-war between the married and unmarried men ended in a tie, as the rope broke when the contest was at its height.

The sporting program concluded with a thrilling boat race, in which Earl Bradley's boat was capsized and the life-saving crew called upon to rescue the woman occupant, which proved to be but a dummy.

WOMAN IS MURDERED.

Mrs. Albert O. Bourne Beaten to Death Near Montevideo.

Montevideo, Minn., Aug. 16.—Mrs. Albert O. Bourne was found murdered five miles east of here yesterday. She lived with her husband eight miles from this place.

The coroner's jury held that she came to her death from a blunt instrument, possibly a stone, in the hands of her husband.

Identfication of the body was aided today by the action of a strange horse that was found Sunday afternoon without a driver. When turned loose today he went to the Bourne home.

The couple had been married two months.

WET SPELL CAUSES CONSIDERABLE WORRY.

Thief River Falls, Aug. 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—The continued wet weather is creating some alarm lest serious results may follow in its wake. Harvesting is on full blast and the fields are weighed down with bountiful yield, but a few more damp spells accompanied by heat and the net product will be very materially cut down. Reports of rust are heard of, but the trouble from this direction is limited to small sections. Flax promises a good crop and oats are thrashing out to exceed the expectations of the farmers, but wheat is not meeting the anticipations of the farmers.

TWO INJURED IN IOWA CENTRAL WRECK.

Albert Lea, Minn., Aug. 16.—In a head-on collision between Minneapolis & St. Louis passenger train No. 2 and Iowa Central freight train No. 97, north bound, near Glenville, Minn., late Tuesday, Roy Trow and Mary Broderick, passengers and J. A. Carter, passenger engineer, were injured. The injured were hurried to Glenville. The Iowa Central and the M. & St. L. roads use the road jointly at Glenville. The wreck, it is believed, was due to a misunderstanding of orders.

SOFT PEDAL IS ADVISED

Efforts to Keep Wilson-Wiley Row Out of Meeting Here.

Secretary of Agriculture and Food Expert Both Invited to Attend.

Efforts are quietly being made to prevent any echo of the row between Dr. W. H. Wiley, federal pure food expert, and James Wilson, secretary of agriculture, from being heard at the annual meeting of the Association of State and National Food and Dairy Departments here next week.

Dr. Wiley and Secretary Wilson have both been invited to attend the meeting, but it is not known whether either will attend. Government experts in the food department are expected, however, and there will be friends of Dr. Wiley and Secretary Wilson among the number. If the controversy between the two officials breaks out here, each will have enthusiastic friends to defend his position.

The government experts will be gagged to some extent by virtue of their positions, but there are no gags on the pure food experts and they may drag the Wilson-Wiley embroglio to the front and thrash it out.

The officers of the association are seeking to prevent such an occurrence, however. They are letting it be known that whoever jumps in with a defense of either official will be regarded with great disfavor and they hope that the attitude they take will cause the soft pedal to be put on all utterances respecting Secretary Wilson, Dr. Wiley, the Remsen board and the subjects that caused the breach between the secretary and the food expert.

Joel G. Winkjer, the Minnesota food and dairy commissioner, admits the efforts being made by the officers of the association to keep the federal department row out of the meeting.

"We are trying to prevent its coming up," Commissioner Winkjer said. "People have turned thumbs up for Dr. Wiley and we want the matter to rest.

"Will you tell where the controversy has appeared out here?" Mr. Winkjer was asked.

'Not without mentioning a specific instance or two, which I must keep in confidence."

"Then the Wiley and Wilson interests are working?"

"Decidedly so."

ANNUAL PICNIC OF CLAN STEWART

Scotsmen of Duluth and Families Will Gather at Fond du Lac.

Fond du Lac, where once the war dance of the Indians took place, will be the scene of the Highland fling and a few other quaint old Scottish dances tomorrow, and war songs of old trading post days will give way to the popular songs of Scotland, for the members of the Clan Stewart and their families and friends will gather there for their annual picnic.

The outing will be one of the largest and best ever given under the auspices of this organization. The trip will be made on the steamer Columbia, leaving the Fifth avenue dock at 9 o'clock in the morning. Many others will go up in the launches, while some will take the train. It is expected that over 3,000 will attend.

The program for the day consists of athletic sports of all kinds. The committee on sports has arranged for prizes for the best Scottish dancers and nothing has been left undone that would add to the interest and pleasure of the day. The following are the members of the committee which has arranged for the picnic:

Dr. Alex Graham, chairman; Robert Ferguson, C. H. Macintosh, John G. Ross, Thomas Clark, Jr., Alex G. McKnight, P. T. McDonald, Alex McDonald, John Currie, F. P. Stevenson, S. Watt, Simon Clark, Don McLennan, Robert Tulloch, Malcolmn Buchannan, Colin F. Brown, Alex McRae, John H. Matheson, Norman McLean and D. M. Morrison.

SETTLING EARLY.

The promptness of the financial officers of St. Louis, Ramsey, and Hennepin counties in making settlements with the state treasurer's department will obviate the necessity of the state treasurer's withdrawing funds from the state depositories this summer. State Treasurer Walter J. Smith was in Duluth yesterday on his way to Eveleth and he stated that he had just received word that the three big counties of the state were making settlements at the present time and this would make any draft on the depositories unnecessary until October at least. The total receipts for the past fiscal year by the state department were $15,612,048.79 and the total disbursements $16,364,789.21, according to Mr. Smith.

BODIES FOUND IN WELL IN MISSOURI.

St. Joseph, Mo., Aug. 16.—An old well at the former home of E. E. Hesse at Tecumseh, Neb., says a News Press special, has been opened by direction of Sheriff Roberts of Johnson county and two decomposed bodies, believed to be those of Hesse's wife and daughter, were found.

Mrs. Hesse and the 15-year-old girl, Juanita, who was her step-daughter, disappeared in July 1910, and Hesse said they had gone to Lincoln on a visit. Several days later his house burned and he filled the well with earth. Hesse disappeared. Suspicion was received by the sheriff yesterday, hinting at double murder. A drill used at the well turned up human flesh and then the well was opened up with shovels.

Hesse was a bridge foreman for the Burlington railroad and about 50 years old. It is known that he frequently quarreled with his wife and daughter.

DEFENDS THE PEACE PACTS

Says He Will Not Try to Hurry Their Ratification.

Ocean Grove, N. J., Aug. 16.—President Taft last night continued his campaign before the people in behalf of the British and French general arbitration treaties. Speaking before the Ocean Grove Campmeeting association, the president reviewed in comprehensive fashion the terms and meanings of the pacts, but declared that he did not fear the effect of delay.

The longer the senate holds these treaties, and he does not expect action on them at this special session, the president argued, the greater will be the opportunity for him to preach the gospel of peace and arbitration and the greater will grow the sentiment for the agreements.

People Will Decide.

"If the senate," said the president, "or any members of it should think that its powers are greater or less than they are, and the limitations they insist upon interfere with progress toward peace, or any other great national or international policy, the question whether they are right or not must ultimately be referred back to the people whose representatives the members of the senate are, for we all, as I say, have derived our power from the people as the ultimate source of power, and in such case of disagreement the proper place for the discussion of such an issue is before the people.

"The cause is sufficiently great to warrant the straining of efforts to secure treaties like these.

"If I am wrong in my judgment, and I do not claim infallibility, and know enthusiasm of the cause may sometimes warp my judgment, I am quite willing to abide by the ultimate judgment of the people, but I deem it my duty, until I shall receive an adverse decision, to urge my views upon the senate and to invoke the attention of the people to these questions and such expressions of opinion upon them as shall influence a ratification of the treaties in which they were signed."

Many to See Taft.

The president reached Ocean Grove shortly after 6 o'clock. He took dinner at the home of A. H. De Haven. While he was at dinner, thousands of people stood before the De Haven house in a pouring rain. Thousands more stood around the auditorium in the downpour to catch a glimpse of the president. The hall is said to hold 8,000 people and hundreds were standing when the president arose to speak. Governor Wilson and other New Jersey notables were on the platform.

In his address, he said in part:

"If we are afraid to submit to an impartial tribunal, lest we may lose our case, then we would better go back to war as the only means of settling international controversy when negotiations fail. When we enter into arbitration or an agreement to submit our differences to an impartial tribunal, we must 'play the game.'

"It is generally quite impossible for a court to decide a case so that both shall like the decision, and a court to decide between nations cannot find it any more easy than a domestic court to do this.

Chances of Losing.

"We cannot make omelets without breaking eggs; we cannot submit international questions to arbitration without the prospect of losing; and if arbitration is to be effective and is to cover the ground that shall really promote the cause of peace and prevent war, it must cover questions of the utmost interest to both countries, and therefore the loss of one country in the contest must of course be a serious matter to that country, and when it comes into an agreement for arbitration, it must be willing to face the disappointment that comes from a serious loss thus imposed by an arbitration decision.

"If we are ging into the arbitration game, we must play it through the end, then we must take our hard knocks with equanimity, as we expect others to take theirs, with the hope and knowledge that the disadvantages that may accrue to each party can never equal the horrible losses and wickedness of war."

"Now I freely concede," he said, "that it is within the power of the senate, in its function of advising and consenting to the treaties, either to reject them or amend them.

Action of Senators.

"They do not amend the treaty, strictly speaking, they merely continue the negotiations by suggesting another form to be submitted to the other party to the treaty, and that, I understand, is what the foreign relations committee of the senate has done, to-wit:

"It has stricken out the third clause, vesting the commission of six commissioners, three from each side, with the power to determine whether differences are arbitrable within the meaning of the first section, and to bind both countries when the vote is five out of six in the committee to accept of a judgment by arbitration upon each issue.

"I think this is a very important part of the treaty. I think it is one of those pledges of good faith in entering to the treaty that is essential to make it a step forward in the adjustment of international controversies."

LIKES MINNESOTA.

George Lydick of Cass Lake is one of the many farmers who are supremely satisfied with Northern Minnesota. After investigating farming conditions from Minnesota to Texas he came back and is spending $7,000 in improvements to his Cass Lake property. He is convinced that Northern Minnesota is the place par excellence for dairying and backs up his statements with descriptions of his crops this season. His potatoes will run 300 bushels to the acre, his corn stands nine feet high, he is milking twenty-three cows which bring him an income of $200 per month, and he is getting ready to raise hogs.

ACCUSED OF INDUCING GIRL TO ENTER RESORT.

Chicago, Aug. 16.—Sidney Davidson, 21 years old, charged with inducing Bessie Landu, 17 years old, said to be the daughter of Randall Landu, an employe of the city of Milwaukee, to come to Chicago and enter a resort on the West Side, was arraigned before Municipal Judge Uplir and hearing of the case postponed until Aug. 18.

The Landu girl declares that she first met Davidson in a chop suey restaurant in Milwaukee July 4. Later he wrote her several letters and induced her to leave home and come to Chicago, according to the girl's story. She says he then took her to a West Madison street resort and left her there, but the proprietor would not permit her to stay because of her tender age. She reported the matter to the police and Davidson was arrested. He denies the charges.

RECIPROCITY FIGHT IS ON

Canadian Leaders Both Have Opened Their Campaigns.

Herron Repudiates Borden's Views After Traveling With Him.

Simcoe, Ont., Aug. 16.—Predicting that the Liberal party will be returned to power and by November the reciprocity agreement with the United States will have been ratified, Sir Wilfrid Laurier opened his speech-making campaign here before a large crowd, although this is considered a Conservative stronghold. Sir Wilfrid confined himself entirely to reciprocity.

For forty years, he said, the policy of reciprocity had received the indorsement and strong support of the men at the head of the Canadian government. It had been the goal of the Liberals and Conservatives both, he said, but the Conservative party of today has turned its back upon its former leaders.

The government believed that between Canada and the United States freer trade in natural products would be of great benefit to both countries, but more beneficial to Canada because of smaller markets.

Ridiculed Annexation.

Sir Wilfrid ridiculed talk of annexation. Some of the men in the United States may want it, he said, but there are men in Canada who do not want it. Annexation talk was beneath the attention of the Canadian people.

"Peace, harmony and concord between Canada and the United States have been firmly established" said Sir Wilfrid in conclusion, "and the people are at the dawn of a new era. They have learned that blood is thicker than water.

Borden Opens Campaign.

London, Ont., Aug. 16.—R. L. Borden, opposition leader of the recently dissolved house of commons, whose obstructionary tactics prevented the Liberal party from securing a vote on the reciprocity agreement, formally opened his platform campaign here yesterday. His speech attacked from many angles the reciprocity agreement, and imputed its advocates on both sides of the line, many ulterior motives.

Mr. Borden did not seek to avoid reciprocity, the government's chosen issue for the campaign. He boldly challenged the economic soundness of the reciprocity pact and denounced it as against the interests of Canada. Practically his entire speech was upon reciprocity.

Appeals to Farmers.

"The reciprocity proposal provides free trade in everything the farmer sells," he said, "but maintains the tariff on everything he buys. It is idle to expect the farmers would continue to be satisfied with this. They would demand free trade in what they buy. Unrestricted continental free trade is the goal to which this reciprocity agreement will lead us. That is the view of President Taft. Unrestricted continental free trade will mean that the one tariff which will prevail for Canada and the United States will be made at Washington. What will then become of Canada's fiscal independence and connection with the British empire?"

"Discussing reciprocity's economical aspect, Mr. Borden said President Taft was justified in declaring the agreement will be to the advantage of the farmers of the United States. For every Canadian farmer admitted to the American market free, he said, twelve American farmers will be admitted free to the Canadian market. Canadian wheat and barley should be manufactured at home and not sent to the American mills, he said.

Herron for Reciprocity.

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 16.—That the reciprocity campaign is growing in strength was indicated when John Herron, late member for McLeod, Alta., on the eve of the Conservative nomination in that riding, came out strongly for reciprocity. Herron spoke with Borden during his recent Western campaign, but never before repudiated his leader's views. His constituents are largely Mormons, formerly of Utah, and they are strong for reciprocity in natural products.

The growth of reciprocity clubs in Southern Alberta is alarming for those members who are opposing the pact.

A prominent banker from Weyburn, Sask., and a worker in the Conservative ranks, remarked to the Associated Press that, from what he could learn, all the candidates in Saskatchewan who are opposing reciprocity will lose their seats. This means they will not poll half of the votes of the successful candidates.

Railways Oppose Pact.

It is apparent that the government's strongest opponent in the West is the Canadian Pacific railway, and in a lesser degree, the Canadian Northern railway. Although the Canadian Pacific has a line running into the states, which would greatly help its traffic receipts under reciprocity, nevertheless it is said this great corporation is fighting reciprocity hard, and in many devious ways. It is formidable in its vote-casting power with its tens of thousands of employes.

Protests have been entered against the Winnipeg registration of voters, which leaves the total names on the list 30,000, an increase of 5,000 over a year ago, insuring a big vote on Sept. 21, polling day.

BOY IS DROWNED IN LAKE POKEGAMA.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 16.—Melville Barnard, 7 years old, son of M. H. Barnard, a contractor of Minneapolis, was drowned Tuesday in Pokegama lake. The boy was fishing at the dock of the Tuxedo inn, where the Barnard family has been living this summer, while Mr. Barnard has been looking after his contract for the building of a new line east of Bruno for the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie Railroad company.

WOOL BILL IS UP TO TAFT

Adjournment Next Week Predicted By Party Leaders.

Washington, Aug. 16.—The senate, by a vote of 38 to 28, last night adopted the conference report on the wool tariff revision bill, already adopted by the house. The bill will now go to the White House for the expected veto of President Taft.

The vote came after a vigorous five hours' debate on the merits of the bill. It was a victory for the combined Democratic and insurgent Republican forces as against the regular Republicans. Only two progressive Republicans, Senators Borah of Idaho and Bourne of Oregon, united with the regulars in the vote against the bill.

The bill, as passed by the two houses, places a flat ad valorem duty of 29 per cent on all raw wool and proportionate rates on woolen manufactures.

Starting Last Week?

The opinion was held in Washington last night that congress today would enter upon the last eight days of the session. Senator Penrose's resolution for adjournment Aug. 22, and the belief expressed by Democratic Leader Underwood of the house of representatives that all work can be concluded by Tuesday or Wednesday of next week, were taken to indicate that it will be difficult to hold the special session together longer than that.

The demand of insurgent senators that the cotton bill be disposed of is complicating matters in the senate. A caucus of Democratic senators has been called to consider the cotton bill and the question of adjournment.

As to Veto Action.

The house is ready to act upon the wool bill, in case the president vetoes it, and to act upon the free list bill as soon as the senate takes another vote on that measure. It was stated by house leaders that the free list bill probably will be accepted by the house as the senate passes it without request for another conference. In this event it is expected that both the wool bill and free list bill will be before the president before Friday. The house will be ready to attempt the passage of these bills over a presidential veto as soon as they come back from the White House.

LIVES ARE CLAIMED; PROPERTY WRECKED

By Disastrous Tornado That Sweeps Vicinity of Appleton, Minn.

Appleton, Minn., Aug. 16.—In a tornado that swept over this district at 6.30 p. m. yesterday from Benson, Minn., at least two persons were killed. They are Mrs. Herman Trager and her 4-years-old daughter, living on a farm near Holloway. The farmhouse was wrecked, Mrs. Trager was instantly killed and the little girl so badly injured that she died shortly afterward.

Isolated reports from the surrounding country tell of wrecked barns and outbuildings. Communication is greatly interrupted and there may have been more fatalities, still unreported.

Two North Dakotans Killed.

Noonan, N. D., Aug. 16.—John Caquin and H. Claveck were killed and half a dozen other persons injured in this vicinity by a tornado that left a trail of wreckage in its path here yesterday. Crosby, Kermit and Larson were also hit hard. The property damage at Noonan also is said to exceed $3,000.

Many farm houses were blown to pieces, livestock was killed and crops in many instances torn to ribbons.

Caquin was working on the farm of Trux brothers, four miles north of Noonan when the storm swept down on him. Several buildings on the Trux farm were demolished. Claveck was working nine miles south of Noonan and was struck by flying timbers. At Noonan six large barns were razed and the lumber yard of Erickson & Erickson was wrecked.

At Crosby one side of the Lingworthy Lumber company's building was crushed in by the force of the wind. Several barns were blown down, several houses were moved on their foundations and twenty-five chimneys were blown to the ground.

In all the towns affected small frame houses suffered, some of them, it is said, being wrecked beyond repair.

Wire communication in the visited territory was demoralized by the storm, and reports as to casualties are very meager.

S.S.S. CURES RHEUMATISM

The usual cause of Rheumatism is an excess of uric acid in the blood which weakens and acidifies this vital fluid, and prevents the proper amount of nourishment being afforded the muscles, nerves and tendons. The pains and aches of Rheumatism may be temporarily relieved by the use of liniments, hot applications, and other external treatments, but the disease cannot be permanently benefited by such measures and is bound to become chronic and dangerous if such things are depended upon alone. S. S. S. cures Rheumatism in the only way it is possible to cure the disease. It goes down into the blood, and removes the uric acid from the circulation. When S. S. S. has cleansed and purified the blood the pains and aches cease, all inflammation disappears, and every symptom of Rheumatism passes away. Book on Rheumatism and medical advice free. *S. S. THE STATEHOOD VETO.

"Come right in," said congress affably, holding wide the door.

The recall of judges is clearly a debatable proposition, far more so than the plan of giving the people power to recall other elective public servants. Also, there is much debate about it. The president ably states the case against the idea of making judges responsive to the people's will, even if he does confess to a greater distrust of the judgment of the majority than we should like to see, and there will be many to agree with him.

But is his opposition to the judicial recall quite reason enough for denying statehood to Arizona and New Mexico? Presumably the provision for the recall of judges is in the Arizona Constitution because the people want it there. If the people of any state want the power to recall their judges, that is their business and they can have it. The veto won't prevent Arizona from doing this if it wishes to do it. It can amend its Constitution by taking out the judicial recall, acquire statehood, and then amend its Constitution again by restoring the judicial recall.

So that the veto comes chiefly to this: that it is a rather violent method of expressing the president's obviously sincere objection to subjecting judges to the will of the people. And that is about all it is. Statehood, though denied now, is merely postponed. Possibly congress will pass the statehood resolution over the president's veto, and then statehood will come, judicial recall and all. If it does not, Arizona will probably put the judicial recall in a pigeonhole for the time being, apply again and be admitted, and then if its people really want to recall their judges they will provide for it by a constitutional amendment.

But, believing as he does that the judicial recall is a menace to "free government," President Taft hardly could have done otherwise than express himself as he did through his veto message.

NEW OUTLETS FOR DULUTH.

An item in the railroad column of The Herald of last evening was a timely reminder of the very important fact that Duluth, though already fairly well supplied with railroad outlets, is getting new ones rapidly.

By the first of November, it is stated, the Canadian Northern will reach Duluth with its new and important line from the north, affording a new outlet to the Canadian territory that reciprocity will open up to Duluth trade.

Somewhat later than that the Soo will have its line to the Twin Cities opened, and passenger trains will be running over it by the first of the year.

In this connection an interesting rumor that the Northern Pacific will put on a new fast train to the Twin Cities was reported. This report has been current for some time, and it seems to be authentic, though the railroad is not yet ready to announce it. A faster train to the Twin Cities is easily feasible, and it will be a real convenience.

THE BANE OF RECIPROCITY.

All during the debates on Canadian reciprocity in the congress of the United States the country was warned of the dread things that would come of it. The pauper vegetables of Canada were going to ruin the American farmer. The thin wedge of reciprocity would be followed by free trade, to the ruin of American industry and the total destruction of the American workingman. Reciprocity was going to reduce the prices of American products, but in some mysterious manner the consumer was going to be deprived of the benefits of the reduction.

In short, this country was totally ruined seven different ways twice every day while the debate was going on.

And now reciprocity is being debated in Canada, and Canada is being ruined daily, just as we were being ruined a little while ago.

For instance, here is the Montreal Star, a Conservative newspaper, sounding the tocsin of alarm to Montreal and to Canada. It says: "The first prospective effect of reciprocity on Montreal is plain enough. It will rob us of much of our commercial and agricultural 'hinterland.' The Canadian West—instead of sending its grain to our mills and ports and patronizing the steamboats and railways which come to us—will ship its harvest by the Hill railways to American cities. We will be in the position of a lake, fed by several chief rivers, which should suddenly find the largest of them diverted to another outlet. This will be a blow to our commerce, to our shipping, to our railways, to our merchants and to our manufacturers. Hundreds of wage earners will find themselves 'on the street' as the first result of this turning away from us of an immense stream of trade and traffic. And what will be opened up as compensation? We cannot see that anything will."

Thus, in Canada as it was in the United States, during the debate the opponents of reciprocity can see nothing but harm and absolutely no good in it. And in Canada, as in the United States, after reciprocity is a fact in practice all these alarms will disappear.

If the Montreal Star is right, and the trade of the Canadian West is diverted to the United States, enormous prosperity for the American Northwest will follow, with Duluth perhaps the chief beneficiary.

Yet, while reciprocity will create a tremendous expansion of trade between the two countries that will benefit Duluth and other American cities hugely, it does not follow by any means that the Star's logic is correct.

Reciprocity is a step toward free trade between two countries that should enjoy unlimited free trade. Free trade is never a one-sided benefit. If it turned out to be, there would be no trade. Removing restrictions on commerce between two such countries as the United States and Canada cannot possibly result otherwise than in good for both. There must be mutual profit and advantage, or there will be no trade. When countries buy and sell to each other, the exchange of commodities is made because it is to their mutual advantage to negotiate it. There is profit in buying as well as in selling.

Reciprocity does not remove the restrictions on trade between the two countries, but it does lessen them; and so far as it goes in that direction it will work to the profit of both nations.

The Star's alarms are as unfounded as were the alarms of the American opponents of reciprocity. In this country the scares were conjured up for political reasons largely. The same thing may be true in Canada. In this country the good sense of the whole people discounted the alarms and properly estimated the enormous advantages to be expected from reciprocity. The indications are that the same good thing will happen in Canada.

DULUTH'S HOME GARDENS.

Never before were there so many home gardens in Duluth as there are this year. Never before have so many Duluth people realized the joys of watching the growth of things they have planted themselves, the pleasure of helping them to grow, and the relish and profit of eating the fruits of this enjoyable labor.

Perhaps it is only a tiny patch with a few radishes and a little lettuce. Perhaps it is a large garden with a wide variety of vegetables that kept yielding all summer long and will continue to yield for some time to come. But whatever it is, whether large or small, more people than ever before had home gardens this year, and the results are good in many ways.

This is highly pleasing to The Herald, because for several years it has advocated the "back yard garden" and has urged everybody who has a bit of vacant ground available, however small, to cultivate it.

To those who have not indulged in this delightful occupation this year, the advice to do it next year is timely.

It is too late to plant a garden this year. There isn't much that can be planted now that will mature this season. But it is not too late to begin planning next year's garden.

Set apart and stake out the area you are going to plant. Spade it up—plow it if it is large enough—and work some manure into it this fall. Turn up the clay and let the frost reduce it this winter. Tough and unpromising though it may seem now, after the winter's freeze is through with it it will be as fine as dust, and amazingly fertile.

This winter, while the frost is making your soil for you by reducing the clay and rotting the manure, plan your garden. Get a seed catalogue early in the year and decide what you are going to grow. Nearly all garden vegetables do well here, and your selections need be limited only by the size of your garden plot and the extent of your ambition. Having decided what you will grow, get a sheet of paper and draw a plan of your garden upon it according to scale. Plan your beds and rows, putting your perennials like rhubarb and berry bushes on the outside. Plan for succession planting, too. Arrange it so you can plant things like onion sets, radishes, lettuce and peas every ten days or two weeks, so that after they begin to bear you will have a steady supply. Leave half of your plot for the vegetables you plant later. Hardy stuff you can plant early; beans, corn, tomato plants and the like should go in only after all danger of frost is over.

You will get a lot of fun out of planning your garden. You will get a lot more fun out of planting, cultivating and feeding it. You will get pleasant, healthful exercise that no gymnasium course can equal. You will get strength and wisdom from contact with the fresh soil. You will get fresh vegetables for your table, and with tender stuff like lettuce and corn this is the only way you can get it really fresh and delicious.

An interesting experiment is to keep books on your garden. Open a garden book and keep records of your plantings, of when the seeds sprout, and of when they bear. Keep a record of expense, and put opposite it a record of the yield of your garden, with the approximate retail value of what you get out of it. If you make mistakes put them down, too, so you won't repeat them.

Incidentally, you will find that the home garden is not only a pleasure but a source of actual profit, and that its yield will cut considerable figure in your cost of living.

A JUST SYSTEM.

The semi-annual report of the water and light department, published in The Herald last night, shows water receipts increasing more rapidly than water consumption. This is attributed to the adoption of the meter system.

There is no question that the meter system is the proper way to reckon payments for such service as this. When the department began to change abruptly from the flat rate system to the meter plan there was a protest, in which The Herald joined; and this protest was justified as applied to the abruptness of the change. The department has been making the switch gradually, requiring all new customers to go on the meter basis and changing others from the flat rate to the meter rate from time to time. This is judicious, and it was particularly wise to provide special rates for lawn sprinkling, as this removed the chief objection to the meter system. Meters are being put in at the rate of about a thousand a year, and it will not be long at that rate before everybody is on the meter system, and the flat rate will be abolished.

Under the meter plan everybody pays for what he uses, and that's a just system. Those who wish to economize can do so, which wasn't possible under the flat rate, while those who are extravagant with water must pay for what they use.

THE OPEN COURT

(Readers of The Herald are invited to make free use of this column to express their ideas about the topics of general interest, but discussions of sectarian religious differences are barred. Letters should not exceed 300 words—the shorter the better. They must be written on one side of the paper only, and they must be accompanied in every case by the name and address of the writer, though these need not be published. A signed letter is always more effective, however.)

WHAT A MOTHER'S FEELINGS ARE.

I don't like to bother you with my troubles but I feel that you can do me more good than anybody else. Can't these moving picture theaters be closed in the evening, or when it begins to get dark, to young girls? I am a widow and I have to sew morning, noon and night. I can't keep watching for my girl. She is a good girl, I know, but she doesn't like to stay home. She says it is dull. I know it is, but what can I do to brighten it up? I haven't got any time to do anything but sew.

She goes to the moving picture shows in the evening because I can afford a nickel, but she doesn't see any of the good shows at the big theaters. The only ones she knows about are the moving picture shows. They're all right, I guess. I don't know because I don't have any time to find out. But what I want to say is, can't the theaters be closed to young girls after dark? I know what happened to a 16-year-old girl in the next block and it started in a moving picture show. She met the young man there. Those houses are dark and young men can spark the girls, and do things they wouldn't dare attempt if there were any lights.

I don't want my girl to go to moving picture shows in the evening but I can't help it, unless I keep her in the house every night after dinner.

The nights are so long when my girl is away. I lie awake until she comes home. When I hear her come up the sidewalk I jump out of bed and grab her at the door like I hadn't seen her for a year. I don't think such temptations ought to be placed in the way of young girls. If the state is going to let them exist then I think the state ought to help me so I can give time to look out for my girl and keep me away from the danger that the state lets exist. I read something like that once and it meets my ideas exactly.

Can't the council or somebody do something? Can't The Herald do something? If we can't keep the young girls and boys out of these shows in the evening, let's make them close after 7 o'clock. A MOTHER.

LAST SYSTEM OF FEES SHOULD BE ABOLISHED.

I noticed in last evening's paper that health commissioners have been receiving 25 cents for each birth and death certified to the county, in addition to their salaries. As they are paid $1,200 a year and the fees run to $600 or $700 a year, their total recompense amounts to $1,700 to $1,900 a year. I see no reason why these fees should not be turned over to the city. I have no doubt but what it was the intention of the men who drew the charter that the total recompense of the health commissioner should be $1,200 a year. No other city official gets any fees, and I do not see why the health commissioner should, as it is directly in violation of the letter and spirit of the charter. The state law may give them the right to these fees, but the health commissioners are working for the city and under the city charter. For the work they do and the time they put in, $100 a month is sufficient in my estimation. It is true that they are professional men, etc., but it strikes me that they are well paid even on that basis. I do not think that any of them average more than one hour a day, or six hours a week, or 26 hours a month, in the health department office. At that rate they get about $4 an hour for their time as health commissioner. As to the fees, the health commissioners do not turn a hand for them, I understand. According to my information, the births and deaths are all certified to the county by one of the deputies in the health department. Although he doesn't hardly see the certificates, the health commissioner collects $600 or $700 a year on the side, while the city pays the wages of the man who handles the vital statistics as well as the salary of the health commissioner. Henceforth I believe that the men in charge of the city administration should see that these fees are turned over to the city, the same as is done with the fees collected by other city officials. THIRD STREET.

Duluth, Aug. 16.

APPRECIATES SARCASM, BUT NOT THE VIEWPOINT.

To the Editor of The Herald:

The alliterative gentleman who refers to "complacent cud-chewing cows" and other bucolic features of New Duluth in his letter to The Herald's Open Court yesterday, was evidently "one of the toiling masses," while at work on that communication. So strenuous an attempt at sarcasm deserves commendation for the effort involved and the "proletariat" should be thankful for so brilliant an advocate. It is to be regretted, however, that the editor should bury so melodious a symphony of verbal harmonies on an inside page. Seriously, however, that imaginative "toiler" should have exercised his happy faculty a little more and drawn us a picture of New Duluth a few years from now, when it has become the congested center, as it, apparently, has every prospect of being, of a foundry and factory population. A park there at present seems an absurdity, of course, but Alderman Krueger is right, I think, when he suggests to the park board that now is a good time to buy a site or two while prices are comparatively cheap. It is too bad that some of the land speculators out there did not have to donate a few sites before being allowed to file their plats, but as they didn't, it is up to the city, and it is hoped that those in charge will do so in plenty of time.

Thanking you for this space, Mr. Editor, and trusting that yesterday's contributor will regale us with some more of those delightful efforts of his toil, I remain, yours truly,

A NEW DULUTHIAN.

High Heels and Wit.

Paris Correspondence London Standard: If anything could be higher than the Parisienne's hat it is her heels. The low English heel has once or twice enjoyed a brief season's favor in Paris, but at heart the Parisienne dearly loves to add a cubit or so to her stature and she achieves it, of course, with her beloved Louis XV heel. Perched thus on stilts with the foot at an impossible angle "le footing" becomes impossible and madame seats herself in a cab every time she starts out for a walk. That is why her boots and shoes are always new. Some one has discovered that there is a close relation between the heels and the wit. The conversation of the walker in low heels is trite and flat—bromidic, so to speak—but she who trips in high ones will soar to unexpected altitudes of epigram and paradox. We know that great wit and insanity are near neighbors and the Germans, putting the principle in practice, are treating madness with a barefoot regime. The contact of the bare foot with Mother Earth is expected to bring back wandering minds to an every day plane and the experiment is naturally interesting.

Press Agent Doing His Part.

Charleston News and Courier: If Bailey is courting unpopularity, he may consider his suit won.

THE DEMAND FOR AN EXTRA SESSION.

Sentiment Getting Stronger.

Thief River Falls Times: The more one reads the arguments pro and con relative to the railroad gross earning tax, the more one is convinced that new legislation is needed to protect the interests of the people. When The Duluth Herald just agitated the question of a special session of the legislature, Minnesota editors were pretty evenly divided in their opinions. Later developments, however, would indicate that sentiment is getting stronger every day for the extra session, much as the people dread to get that bunch of law-makers together again. The reason for calling a special session this summer isn't very convincing, but a session in the winter or early spring would probably be a successful venture. Northern Minnesota has been "the goat" long enough. It's time now to begin to "butt" over asfew of those whose main idea seems to be the persecution of the common people for the betterment of the "interests" and the "combines" and the "trusts."

Not Yet, But Soon.

Evelth News: The Duluth Herald has not succeeded in getting an extra session of the legislature to raise the gross earnings tax on railroads, but it has chased an African out of the wood pile and put the governor into the hole.

Legislature Will Act.

Motley Mercury: We would be in favor of an extra session of the legislature if we had the right kind of a legislature. But what proof have we that they will do any more than they did at the last session? And then we are pretty sure that that governor of ours would never call an extra session if he thought there was any danger of their doing any more. Take it from us that if Governor Eberhart calls an extra session, it will be when he is pretty sure there is no danger of the legislature squeezing the big fellows.

The People Wish It.

Moose Lake Star-Gazette: That The Duluth Herald will be successful in its campaign for a special session of the legislature to increase the gross earnings tax is the wish of the people of the state. It is high time, in this land of special privilege, we ascertained who is the authority in the making of the laws. The legislature passes a law, is carried into the district court and the judge gives his opinion that it is unconstitutional and that the legislature has no jurisdiction, the case is then carried to the supreme court and it either concurs in or reverses the decision of the lower court, leaving the whole country in doubt as to what to do. The law making power should be given to the legislature which should be decisive and cut out all this tom-foolery of carrying cases from one court to another for the sake of killing time and there is no telling when the end will be in sight. A corporation is entitled to no greater privileges than an individual, and the sooner this becomes an enforced law, the sooner will the people of this nation prosper equally.

Country Press Is Enough.

Clear Lake Times: The Duluth Herald, one of the best and ablest edited papers in the Northwest, and always a staunch advocate of all measures for the benefit of the people irrepective of party, is working for an extra session of the legislature, the object being, primarily, the enactment of a bill increasing the gross earnings tax from 4 to 5 or 6 per cent. It's hoping The Herald will succeed in its laudable undertaking. It's a pretty safe guess, however, that it will get no help in that direction from the Twin City dailies.

Demand Is Reasonable.

Redwood Gazette: An increase in the gross earnings tax on the advice of the astute attorney general was headed off last winter because it might hurt the rate cases!

Of course there were other reasons for the defeat of the Spooner bill, some of which will be given to the public in due time.

At any rate, because it was defeated and because the roads have foolishly returned to the 3-cent rate, an extra session of the legislature is being demanded and the demand may become too insistent to be ignored.

Such a session would increase the tax to 5 or possibly 6 per cent. This would mean at least a million more a year to the state.

Of course there is some politics back of this demand, but on the whole it looks reasonable, and if the legislature were to confine its attention to the tax business exclusively, Governor Eberhart might not suffer. Otherwise—?

Tranquil Habit.

Dear tranquil Habit, with her silent hands,
Doth heal our deepest wounds from day to day
With cooling, soothing oil, and firm-ly lay
Around the broken heart her gentle bands.

Her nursing is as calm as nature's care;
She doth not weep with us; yet none the less
Her quiet fingers weave forgetfulness—
We fall asleep in peace when she is there.

Upon the mirror of her mind her breath
Is like a cloud to hide the fading trace.
Of that dear smile, of that remembered face,
Whose presence were the joy and pang of death.

And he who clings to sorrow overmuch,
Weeping for withered grief, has cause to bless
More than all cries of pity and distress—
Dear tranquil Habit, thy consoling touch!

Fish That Destroy Mosquitoes.

Harper's Weekly: All the pools and swamps in Barbados, West Indies, are stocked with swarms of "millions" of tiny fishes that feed on the larvae of the mosquito. The health board of Antigua, being convinced that these fish do a valuable missionary work in the consumption of mosquito eggs, some time ago arranged for their systematic distribution throughout the ponds and streams of Antigua. The Jamaicans also have utilized these fish in this way: The tanks of one hotel in Jamaica are full of them, and the secretary of an agricultural society in that island reports that there has been a marked diminution of fever round about, the millions evidently accounting for the mosquito larvae. The British authorities have suggested that these useful fish be given a trial in the malarial districts of Africa. Some specimens have been taken to England and imported into malarial districts with happy results. It should be added that near Frankfort, in Germany, there has been discovered another small fish called the "blue eyed," which feeds on mosquito larvae. At the request of the Italian government consignments of them have been sent to the Campagna, where malarial fever is a scourge.

When a Boy Confesses.

Chicago Record-Herald: Little Freddie, in a burst of penitence, confessed to his mother his almost unforgivable wickedness.

"The other day, mamma," he murmured, "I found the church door unlocked, and I went inside. I went in, and I was bad that day, anyhow, and——"

"You didn't take anything away, my son?" queried the startled mother, scared by the child's apparent inability to proceed.

"Worse than that, mamma. I——"

"Did you mutilate the hymn books or play any naughty tricks of that kind?"

Another silence, then, suddenly:

"Oh, worse than that, lots worse than that," sobbed Freddie, his face buried in the maternal lap, "I—I went and sat down in the amen corner and said 'Darn!'"

Getting married doesn't cost half as much as being married.

And it sometimes occurs that marriage is an antidote for love.

No matter what you say to a chemist, he always has a ready retort.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

The more chances come to a man to get rich the surer he is not to be ready to seize them.

When a girl has on her prettiest sailor hat it's a sign she hasn't been, and isn't going, sailing.

If a man found a million dollars it wouldn't be very long before he began grumbling because it wasn't two.

The reason a girl is so innocent about so many things is she knows when and where to hold her tongue about them.

Tom Johnson's Real Aim.

The Public: Low fares, however, were not Tom L. Johnson's aim. They were a means to an end. He knew that low fares would but increase local land values and thereby transfer excessive profits from street car companies to landowners. What he aimed at, regarding street car fares, was ultimately to abolish them altogether, paying for street car service out of the consequent increase in local land values.

Nor was this the end of his ambition as a city builder. Just as he would have maintained street car systems free out of taxes upon the higher land values such systems would cause, so would he have pushed on to the maintenance of all municipal service by such taxes; thereby fostering industry by exempting its operations from taxation, discouraging land monopoly by taxing its value regardless of improvements, and supplying the public treasury by diverting publicly created ground rent from private to public use. This was Tom L. Johnson's idea of the necessary condition of that ideal city which it was his ambition to "set upon a hill."

Well Drawn Distinction.

Washington Star: Prof. Brander Matthews in an address at Columbia university once made a striking distinction between the two words gourmand and gourmet.

"The difference between these two words," he said, "is plain."

"Gourmand and gourmet, they alike enjoy a good dinner; but as soon as it is over the gourmand asks:

"'What is there for supper?'"

How McKinley Annexed a Dog.

"One hot day," says a man associated with Mr. McKinley in business, "we were at work in the office when a little dog came sneaking in to escape the misery of blistering sidewalks. It was mud-stained and owned a busy, unkempt coat that made hot weather a horror to it. Its ears were ragged and there was a hunted, homeless look in its pathetic eyes. It turned these pathetic eyes on McKinley, who was trying to catch up with a hard day's work. In a few minutes he laid down his pen, left the room and returned with a bowlful of water. I was called away. When I came back I found the congressman with a newspaper spread over his knees and upon it stood that dog. A pair of scissors which had cut off millions of dollars in coupons was shearing away at the ragged coat of the wretched little beast, which was looking up with almost human gratitude in its pathetic eyes.

"Since that day McKinley has had a shadow in the shape of a small mongrel that any dog fancier would cast outside the pale of classified canines."

Man.

He's only a purse to pay her bills—
Pay for her hats and frocks and frills;
An escort to take her to and fro
Wherever she thinks she wants to go.
To call for her when the bridge game's done;
To sympathize with her grief or fun.
A something to tell her troubles to;
To chirk her up when she thinks she's blue.
To take, but never give her advice.
To tell her horrors of hats look nice.
To post her letters and wind the clock;
And hook up the back of her modish frock.
To strap her suitcase and find her gloves;
And listen to tales of her old time loves.
In fact to do all she may say or ask;
And he's such a fool that he loves the task!

New Motor Cars Supplant the Camel.

Daily Consular Report: One by one, slowly, but none the less surely, things old and venerable are pushed aside, destroyed or disregarded by trade, progress and other relentless instruments of change. The latest is the attack on the Asiatic caravan, by means of which the best tea has been brought from China across the Great Gobi desert of Central Asia to Russia, crossing en route three high mountain ranges. This picturesque transportation by camel will soon give way before the motor car. A line, running at regular intervals, has already been established and two weeks' time is cut off.

Some Dryness.

Atlanta Constitution: Some dryness in the town of Alta, according to this from a local correspondent:

"It is so dry here that wagons are going around with their tongues out. Ice has to be soaked in water all night before it is wet enough to make lemonade. The catfish kick up such a dust in the bed of the river that the river has to be sprinkled before you can go fishing. A spark from an engine set fire to a pond and burned up a lot of bullfrogs before the fire could be extinguished, and the ground is so dry and hard that crawfish holes in low places are being pulled up and used for gas-pipes."

Overworked.

Cleveland Plain Dealer: It might as well be understood that a frequent and reckless use of "Banzai" doesn't make a man a Japanese scholar.

DINWIDDIE, WHEELER, JAYNE AND ARMSTRONG

Only Four Men Left in Race for State Tennis Title.

Duluth's hope that N. F. Davis might work his way to the semi-finals of the tennis tournament was blasted this morning by the defeat of that player by Trafford Jayne, the Minneapolis veteran of many tournaments, who won in straight sets, 6-0; 6-3.

The veteran outplayed his opponent throughout. The court covering of Jayne was the best seen in any of the games played in the tournament so far, and though the score indicates an easy win, Jayne was forced to show his best form and played corking tennis all the time.

The rangy Minneapolitan perhaps covers more court than any player at the tournament. In the play this morning he returned many of the drives of Davis from the back court that would have ordinarily scored points for the younger player. Jayne's return of drives was especially good, and the game this afternoon between Jayne and Wheeler, both veterans tried and true, should bring out some of the best tennis that has been played at the tournament.

If the Duluth followers of tennis were keenly disappointed in the defeat of Davis by Jayne, this regret was atoned for in some measure by the victory of Dinwiddie over Carl Weinhagen. This was by far the best match played today, and one of the best played so far during the tournament. Dinwiddie won the first set, 6-3, lost the second by the score of 6-8, and then came back in clever fashion and took the third set by the score of 6-1.

Good Playing.

Time and time Dinwiddie brought applause from the gallery by his neat placing of drives. In the first game he had the St. Paul man covering all kinds of territory and before the completion of the second set had about run Weinhagen to death.

With a stroke that is one of the best of any player at the tournament, and the ability to place his returns in almost any place he wants them, the game played this morning by Dinwiddie was scientific and classy. The victory of the Duluth player was clean cut and went far to show the visiting players that Duluth is developing some real players.

The third game of the morning marked the further progress of the veteran Wheeler, "Father of Tennis" in this state and one of the players who is reckoned with each season at the annual state tournament. Wheeler defeated his fellow townsman, Cathcart, winning in straight sets, 8-6, 6-3.

In the first set the young player showed some good tennis and had the game in doubt at several stages, though Wheeler might have had something up his sleeve. The second set went to Wheeler comparatively easy, though he played good tennis to win.

With Wheeler, Jayne and Dinwiddie in the semi-finals with Armstrong, the St. Paul youth going in yesterday by virtue of his three victories, the schedule this afternoon calls for some corking games.

Armstrong and Dinwiddie are expected to furnish one of the best exhibitions of the tourney, with the Duluth man given an outside chance. It is not generally expected that Dinwiddie will win; yet those who have watched his play closely, say that he has one chance, and at all events will make the St. Paul star play some mighty good tennis to win.

Wheeler and Jayne will meet in the other game of the semi-finals and some rattling good play is anticipated. The two veterans have met in the past and great games have resulted. Two fast matches should result from this afternoon's work in the singles.

No doubles were played before noon, some good games in the doubles being set down for this afternoon's play.

hearings were held before the bureau of chemistry; then they were transferred to this board."

"Is Dr. Dunlap a chemist?"

"Yes."

"Is Solicitor McCabe a chemist?"

"Not that I know of."

"Suppose you take one position as a chemist and Dr. Dunlap another; does Mr. McCabe's vote decide the question?"

"It did."

"What attitude has the board of food and drug inspection taken toward the bureau of chemistry?"

Chemistry Bureau Overruled.

"The views of the chemistry bureau as to what was adulterated or misbranded were overruled in about two-thirds of the cases. Sometimes I voted to overrule the bureau, but usually it was overruled against my vote."

"When you and Dr. Dunlap disagreed how many times were you sustained by Mr. McCabe, the third member of the board?"

"Never, as I remember, except on my decision that rye whisky must be made from rye. On that matter Mr. McCabe sided with me."

"How many of the cases have been passed on by the board?"

"From 1,500 to 2,000. On about 100 cases where Dr. Dunlap agreed with me on the first vote and the solicitor disagreed with both of us, Dr. Dunlap changed his vote in every case to agree with the solicitor."

Wasted the Funds.

Dr. Wiley declared that the result of these overrulings was to squander and waste all the money spent in preparation of the cases by the chemistry bureau. He said that so far as he knew, all appeals to Secretary Wilson had resulted in a decision sustaining the board's ruling.

undue influence ever being brought to bear on the board of public works or any other city employes. P. G. Pastoret, president of the Pastoret-Lawrence company, said that he knows of no undue influence being exerted or of any money being offered to one contractor by another to refrain from bidding on city contracts. City Engineer McGilvray told of the course through which contracts go and had figures on several different improvements. Several long exhibits relative to different contracts were introduced as exhibits by Attorney Arthur Crassweller. Among them were proceedings from the board of public works, the council, the water and light department, and the figures for the various contracts which have been performed by P. McDonnell in Duluth the last three years. The exhibits will be used later in the testimony, as the various jobs are brought up.

Osman On Stand.

When A. G. Osman was put on the stand he was asked if he knew of any instances in which money had been offered by one contractor to another to refrain from bidding on any city contract. He answered in the affirmative. Attorney Crassweller then directed him to give the persons, time and place of any such offers.

"I don't want to answer that unless I have to," he replied.

"If you do not answer you will be summoned before the district court today," said the attorney.

"Shortly after the first bids and before the second, 'Paddy' and I had a conversation in his office," said Mr. Osman. "I said then that I wouldn't bid on the job again; I told everybody so, including the fellows in the city hall. But to make sure of it 'Paddy' offered me $1,000 not to bid on the job, and I said 'all right.'"

"Did you ever get it?"

"No."

"Did you ever ask for it?"

"Yes."

Osman then stated that he gathered from his conversation with McDonnell that he had tried to "fix" Steele, but that Steele wouldn't be fixed. When asked if he knew of any other similar instances, he answered, "Not in the city." Osman said that he was invited to go to McDonnell's office and did not go there of his own accord.

Asked why McDonnell had not paid him the $1,000 offered him, Osman said that McDonnell told him that because Steele had refused to stay out, he had been compelled to so reduce his bid that he couldn't afford it. Osman said that he certainly expected to get the $1,000. Osman said that he had paid his own assessment for the property which he owned on Fourth street. He explained that he was anxious to get the job, as he figured that he would be able to make enough to take care of the assessment. Attorney E. M. Morgan asked him if he wasn't earning part of the $1,000 offered him by McDonnell when he appeared before the council the second time the bids were opened to urge that the contract be awarded to McDonnell. He said that he was anxious to have the job completed, as he owned property there.

McDonnell's "Extras."

The figures of the jobs done by McDonnell the last three years are of considerable interest, because of the assertions that he has been paid thousands of dollars in extras. The figures show that on some jobs the final cost has run quite a bit over the contract price. In all work 10 per cent is added to the cost for engineering expenses, and this is included in the total cost which is assessed against the property owners. The 10 per cent does not go to the contractor. The largest difference is on Garfield avenue. The contract price was $99,635.58, and the cost as per the final estimate was $110,755.46. The estimated cost was $110,687.18. On Jefferson street the cost as per the final estimate was $33,851.95 while the contract price based on the engineer's estimate of quantities was $27,754.

Grading, paving and otherwise improving Third street, from Twenty-third avenue east to north line of Harrison's division—Date of contract, April 16, 1908; estimated cost, $13,196; cost as per final estimate, $13,073.65; total cost, $13,610.18; contract price, $11,911.

Paving and otherwise improving Twelfth avenue east, from London road to Fourth street—Date of contract, May 14, 1908; estimated cost, $11,972; cost as per final estimate, $12,950.66; total cost, $13,460.20; contract price, $12,406.15.

Grading Fifty-fourth avenue east, from Superior street to Oneida street; and Tioga street, from Fifty-fourth avenue east to lot 5, block 11, Lester Park, Second division—Date of contract, June 25, 1908; estimated cost, $5,422; cost as per final estimate, $4,537.62; total cost, $4,765.50; contract price $4,208.50.

Paving Twentieth avenue east, from Superior street to Fourth street—Date of contract, April 15, 1909; estimated cost, $20,451.40; cost as per final estimate, $19,082.65; contract price, $19,582.50.

Regrading and paving Lake avenue, from Second to Fourth streets—Date of contract, Sept. 9, 1910; engineer's preliminary estimate, $9,832.50; contract price based on engineer's estimate of quantities, $9,098.10.

When George S. Telford, the former inspector was put on the stand, he was asked, in addition to his overtime, about a conversation he said he heard between City Engineer McGilvray and Joseph Shartel, president of the council, relative to the present investigation.

He testified that they made fun of the investigation. Contractor Steele asked him if he had heard McGilvray state that he would make a tramp of him (Steele), and he answered that he heard McGilvray say that the investigation would do so. When pinned down he declared that he had never heard the word "tramp" used. He also denied that he had ever told Steele that he heard McGilvray use that word at the time of the conversation between the engineer and the president of the council.

He said that he went into the office of the engineer with Shartel to ask about his overtime, which he said he thought was due for overtime on Garfield avenue last summer. He stated that neither made any attempt to conceal their conversation from him. The city engineer later explained that Telford left suddenly, and as far as he knew, without notice, and that he had not included his overtime when he made up the pay roll. He said that there is a provision in the contract to the effect that the contractor shall pay for the overtime, and that it was arranged that it should be paid through the treasurer. Telford stated that he heard the expression "Poor Hughie" used several times during the conversation at which he was present in the engineer's office.

Knows of No Bribery.

Mr. McGilvray declared on the witness stand that he knows of no bribery or undue influence in the award or performance of city contracts. He declared that he has never been offered a bribe and that he does not know of any being offered to any of the employes of the department. He said that he has not accepted any favors from contractors or allowed himself to be placed under obligations to them at any time.

He told of the channels which contracts follow in going through the engineering department. He explained that he has general charge of all city improvements, and that the detail work is done by his assistants and employes. He said that it is impossible to have preliminary estimates accurate, but that the final estimates are correct, as the men on the job know just how much work has been done and the quantity of the materials used. On Jefferson street he said that the estimate called for 1,000 yards of crushed rock, but that 3,880 yards had been put in.

He said that the preliminary survey had been made in January and that probably the men doing the work had failed to make proper allowance for accummulations of snow and ice. On Garfield avenue he said that the original estimate called for 1,000 yards of earth excavation, while the final estimate called for 10,528.4 yards, which had been allowed and paid for. He said that the first estimate included the removal of the old paving blocks, but that the assistant who had made the subsequent preliminary estimate had not included their removal, through an oversight. He said that on the figures submitted by all the other bidders, McDonnell did the job for over $3,000 less than it would have cost had the next lowest bidder gotten the work, using their figures and the same quantities allowed McDonnell.

David Sang said that the West Duluth Commercial club had a sample of the concrete in the West Duluth reservoir, and that the club discussed the matter before the contract for relaying the bottom was let. He asserted that it was about like a lump of sand and could be crumbled in the hand. He referred to a letter which was published, in which Contractor McDonnell stated that if it could be shown that it was due to any fault of his, he would replace it free of charge. He said that the next he knew of it the contract had been let by the board of water and light commissioners. He said that he thought when the sewer built by King in West Duluth was extended, bids should have been called for. He said that the extension called for $13,000 of extras, while the original contract was about $22,000.

Study Contempt of Court.

Washington, Aug. 16.—Inquiry into contempt of court and its punishment, emphasized recently in the sentencing of American Federation of Labor officials in the Buck Stove & Range company case, is to be undertaken by the house judiciary committee through hearings beginning Dec. 7 next, on the bill introduced by Chairman Clayton of the committee defining contempt of court.

BOOSTERS FOR DULUTH

Trade Excursion Will Not Be Confined to Commercial Club Members.

Three Days' Advertising Campaign for Everybody Concerned in Trip.

The trade excursion being arranged under the direction of the Duluth Commercial club is not confined to members of the club. Any Duluth man who wants to boost the city and believes that a trip into Soo Line territory will benefit his own business and that of other Duluth business men is invited to get into touch with the Commercial club and make arrangements for accommodations on the trip.

The wholesalers committee of the Commercial club is acting only as a committee on initiative. The success of the trip is to be made by the co-operation of the business men who are primarily interested in cultivating friendly relations with the towns to be visited. Although the committee is now figuring on about 100 business men, many more can be accommodated, and the greater the number on the train the more impressive will be the showing and the better will be the work done.

The business men of the different towns to be visited are being notified of the time of arrival of the Duluth train and of the fact that the Duluth travelers are anxious to meet the townspeople. The train will keep as close to schedule as possible so that there may be no delays and no disappointments for the towns to be visited.

Everything has been arranged for the trip. The Soo Line officials have promised to furnish a train that will be a credit to the road and that will be a fitting advertisement for the travelers. The Soo Line territory is little known in Duluth, as the line has been in operation but a short time, and the Soo Line officials will take the opportunity to show their road and equipment to the best advantage.

The excursion is primarily an advertising trip. The Duluth houses having representatives on the train will get good advertising. The towns visited will get advertising of immeasurable value. The Soo Line will advertise itself. It will be a mutual three-days' advertising campaign that should bring benefits to everybody concerned.

SENATE CAUCUS BEARS NO FRUIT

Cotton Tariff and Adjournment Discussed By the Democrats.

Washington, Aug. 16. — Without reaching any conclusion, the Democratic senators held a two-hour caucus today, adjourning to resume again after today's session of the senate. The advisability of action on cotton tariff revision, of amending that measure and of adjourning without further efforts at legislation was discussed. Some senators were anxious to bring the session to a close, while others favored its continuation.

WOMAN'S REALM.

Sailor lads will give their places to the sailor lassies in the races Saturday afternoon at the Duluth Boat club, as that is the date set for the annual ladies' day.

The regular weekly races will be held during the afternoon, but instead of the stalwart sailors who are usually at rudder and sail, the boats will be "manned" by members of the fairer sex who have been practicing for some time at being sailoresses, and who are ready to show their skill in handling the boats.

Interest in the sailing races has been higher than usual this season, but the Saturday program will probably call out an exceptionally large attendance at the club. Other water sports are being planned for the afternoon, and features of special interest will be added to the program.

Of course, the men will be in the boats, too, but they will simply be "taken along," for the girls will do all of the work and expect to take all of the honors of winning.

FAREWELL PARTY.

Luncheon and Theater for Mrs. Liehe.

Mrs. C. C. Huebsch entertained at a prettily appointed luncheon, followed by a theater party at the Orpheum, yesterday afternoon, in honor of Mrs. A. J. Liehe, who will leave soon for Eau Claire to reside. The others who enjoyed the party were Mesdames M. M. Boyce, F. C. Deery and J. L. Dorsey.

ROSE SOCIETY.

Plans to Be Made for.

The Duluth Rose society will hold an important meeting Friday afternoon with Mrs. R. P. Boyington of 5804 Tioga street at 2:30 o'clock. The society is making its plans for the flower show which will be held here in the near future at which time the results of gardening in Duluth will be displayed and prizes awarded. THE EVENING STORY

From the Dark Valley

By A. Bower Poynter.

The mothers met for the first time outside the iron gates of the somber looking hospital. In the arms of each lay a baby sick unto death, and the warm heart of the younger woman yearned, through the very strength of her own trouble, to comfort a sorrow even greater than her own.

Nan Crofton was a little more than a girl—impulsive, sunny tempered, with a face that looked too young for the grief she had already known. A year had not yet passed since her husband had been carried, crushed and helpless, through these very gates, to return to her with both limbs amputated, a mere shell, for all the days to come, of the gay and agile manhood she had known. Now their only child, stricken with fever, must seek life within the same gray walls; and for five months only had she gloried in her sweet possession.

But the other woman who stood there also had fought through a darker hour. It did not need the crape upon her black dress to tell of her widowhood. It was written in her dove gray eyes, and the sad lines of her thin face. Her hands were toil worn, and want lived very close beside her; yet these things sank to insignificance beside the appalling specter that had arisen in the thorny path. Her son—all that now held her to the world—also lay wrestling for his very existence.

"Has your baby got the fever, too?" asked Nan in a voice of compassion and Lillian Newton nodded stonily.

"He's terribly ill," she said. "If anything happened to him I'd go mad. I've nothing else left in the world."

"Poor thing!" the young wife answered softly. "I've not been used as cruel as you; but, oh! I know what trouble is! My husband's been in here only ten months ago and had both legs took off, and now it's baby!" She stepped forward and tenderly touched the shawl wrapped round the other little sufferer.

"Let me look at him," she said, and the widow turned back the shawl.

Nan gasped, and drawing aside the covering from the face of her own little son, showed the cause of her wonderment. The two small flushed faces might have been the chiseled imagine of the same child. The blue eyes, the wisp of flaxen hair, the delicately cut nose and mouth—the likeness could not be denied. "Him and my little Ned might be twins!" Nan said.

That night she told her husband of the chance encounter as she sat resolutely at her sewing, with her eyes averted from the empty cradle. Her husband forced a tender cheerfulness that found no echo in his anxious heart, and enticed his wife to talk as her hands flitted to and fro. For by dressmaking she added her share to their modest income, her crippled husband working by day at the bench of an unpretentious shoemaker a street or two distant, whither he was wheeled each morning by a warm hearted shop mate, who claimed the same privilege after working hours.

Each morning of the days that followed, Nan accompanied him as usual to the little garden gate to speed him on his way. Then, hurrying through her daily duties, she locked up the cottage and followed her heart to the door of the great gray hospital.

Then came the morning, soft and sweet with the dew of autumn, when the two mothers received each her portion from the altar of Fate. Upon the happy breast of the younger a downy head was pillowed once more, and, selfish in her joy, she fled from the wild, heart broken cry wrung from the widow who held out empty hands in impotent anguish.

The small unconscious bundle in her arms was laid gently down in the cradle prepared for its coming, and while the child slept, the young mother conned over the instructions for its welfare given her by the nursing sister of the hospital. The thinness of the tiny face brought tears to her eyes. But he was safe—he was safe, and her heart sang an endless paean of praise.

When her husband returned from his work Nan lifted the child, no longer sleeping, and laid it in his arms. Crofton's delicate face, soft with a father's compassion, reflected her own contentment. "He's changed a bit, poor little chap!" he whispered.

The child moved feebly, and Nan bending over it caught a flickering smile. Without a word she lifted him to her own breast and hid his face. A sudden shadow had darkened the sunshine, and left her trembling.

When she rose at last, shaking from head to foot, she passed her husband with averted face. The guilty knowledge of what she had discovered seemed to strangle her, and in the shadows of the little garden she fought wildly against truth and the path of honor.

At first she denied it even to her own soul. The thought was monstrous in its cruelty. Such a ghastly mistake was unthinkable. As she looked again at the baby he gave a pitiful cry, and she lifted him up in her arms. The soft head nestled against her and lay still; and the resolution was taken. She would guard the secret that this was the widow's son and not her own, and no one need ever know.

Scalding tears fell from her eyes through the darkness of the night when she thought of her own little son. She would brand herself with an added crime if she remained mute. Other hands would tend him in his last resting place, the name of another would be engraved upon his simple stone. Yet this other child she could not part with.

Her resolve buoyed her up, and she met the morning bravely. Her face was deathly white, and her eyes held the shadow of her deception. As the day advanced a ghostly figure watched her in the background—calling and ever calling. Closely she held the baby in her arms closing her heart to the cry. But the widowed mother's sorrow was too deep. The passing hours witnessed the struggling. The stars of night looked down upon its close.

The young wife stole from her home like a criminal, and when she reached the widow's home she heard a sob. She knocked softly on the door and entered. The widow rose hastily at the sound of her foostep, and Nan, with streaming eyes, held out the little bundle in her arms.

"Take him, Mrs. Newton!" she cried. "He's your little boy, and it's mine that's been took from me!"

Lillian Newton turned death-like in her faintness. She looked at the child, and fell upon her knees before the younger woman. "My dear!" she whispered, "you are one of God's angels."

"Indeed, indeed, I'm not!" Nan answered. "I'm a bad, wicked girl! I meant to keep him—I knew he was yours; but I meant to keep him! But I thought of you so lonely, and I couldn't!" With a swift movement she bent down and kissed the baby's face as he lay between them on his mother's breast. "Bring him sometimes to see me," she pleaded, "for the sake of my own little boy, that's dead." She ran through the dark street forlornly, with empty hands pressed close to her bosom. But peace was following very closely behind her.

Softly opening the door she found the little kitchen still in darkness but the glimmering firelight fell upon the face of her crippled husband as he sat waiting for her return. Sad lines were about his mouth and his eyes held a new sorrow. Falling on her knees beside him, she buried her face in her hands, and told her simple tale with many tears.

"Be kind to me, Tom!" she cried, beseechingly. "I've took the baby back, and give him to Mrs. Newton. It was our little Ned that died—and when I found out the mistake they had made at the hospital I wouldn't tell you for I was going to keep him—Oh! I wanted him terrible! I've been a wicked thief—but now I've got no one but you!"

She could not see the tender light within her husband's eyes, but his hands drew her head to his shoulder, and her heart found comfort.

"There, dear," he answered softly, "don't fret no more. The nurses found out their mistake today. Sister has been here looking for you."

Letting a Man Alone

By FRANCES WILEY.

That a husband is at times silent and preoccupied does not argue that he is indifferent to his wife. He may be depressed, and yet not feel that marriage for him is a failure. He may be captious and fretful, yet feel no irritation against his wife.

I am not absolving men from the obligation to be agreeable to their womankind and not extenuating their frequent infractions to the code of marital amenities; I am only assuring you, for your own good, that these things are often the outward and visible sign of an inward and spiritual discordance which you have not caused, and about which you would be unwise to grieve.

Learn to wait and by and by you will find that business went wrong that day; or he sat in a draft, and all his bones ached with an incipient cold; or he had eaten an indigestible meal (not at home, of course), and was depressed, he knew not why. Wait! wait! and when you have found out what the matter was, you will be thankful you did not weary him with foolish questions.

Manners You Possess

By CARA REESE.

It is not your old age, great-grandsire, that brings you into disrepute and makes you a burden to your fellows. It is your manners.

The great Socrates received an enlightment of this sort. He had a friend of advanced years who was withal so courteous, so agreeable and mindful of the rights of others that it gave Socrates the greatest delight to be in his company and many a wise and profitable discourse the two had together. Socrates asked this aged friend whether he looked upon old age as grievous or precious. The venerable one replied that "manners" in old age determined this just as "manners" determined a grievous disagreeable youth or otherwise.

The venerable one said that he had a number of aged friends who when they met together bemoaned the contempt which their old age had brought to them. They lamented their old age and grumbled over many ills which their old age had meted out to them. They felt themselves bereaved of mighty things. They envied youth, its pleasures and opportunities. They expressed indignation that they were not remembered on this occasion or that. The venerable one held that youth with equal disregard to "manners," namely envious, querulous, suspicious and contemptuous might find existence equally as grievous and be shunned by his fellows.

Hence it is "manners" in youth or old age which determines the consideration either is to receive. It is just as well to remember this fact whether as a lad or as the one who has passed the allotted age. Some youth has no manners and, ah, how quickly the world falls away and seeks not his company.

Then again there is an old age that has no manners. Such an old age is left to itself. It is bad manners in old age to be desiring and expecting all the devotion of family and friends to the disregard of the rights of others it is bad manners to be selfish. It is bad manners to speak disparagingly of those who have prospered or to cherish envious thoughts toward those still in their prime. It is bad manners to ever keep on looking back and longing for past pleasures and experiences. It is bad manners to be continually finding fault or wanting one's own way.

You will have no further trouble, great-grandsire, if you but keep the simple fact of "manners" in mind. You will have no more bitterness of spirit, venerable dame, if you but remember the simple rule of good breeding and good manners. A lovely and beloved old age depends entirely on the "manners" you have. Another thing, in order to have good manners in old age, it were better to begin in youth to cultivate the same. Manners are of slow growth, but oh, how they count. Old age is lovely when its manners are noble.

The Lover Who Wins

By ALVA ARMSTRONG.

The man of strong will who determines to marry a girl is pretty sure to succeed in doing so, always supposing another equally determined is not favored by Fate by being given more chances to exert his will over the adored one.

The idea that she should be so won will naturally cause any high spirited fair one who reads these lines to rage: yet the fact remains, it's "dogged as does it"—the man who is firmly resolved to win wins.

It will take time, for patience as well as determination is needed. The quarry may be shy—will certainly be angry when she finds all her evasions are useless. For this reason, and because her anger is fear of a new feeling that is beginning to make itself felt—for all these reasons maybe she says "no" with fearful emphasis the first time she is asked.

But the determined man does not take "no" for his answer. He neither feels nor looks crushed, but goes on serenely along the path he has laid down for himself.

Sure enough presently the citadel capitulates, and perhaps no girl is happier than the one who is wooed by a determined man.

A Cup of Coffee

By ROBERT SNOWDEN

Coffee is now the daily beverage of half of the human race. Yet the ascent of the plant from its lowly station as a weed to a place in the garden of the gods was a long one.

The coffee plant, belonging to the great order of Rubiaceae, with its 4,500 species of flowering plants, was a shrub unnoticed for ages. Some unnamed benefactor of the human race discovered the virtue of the nutlets. From them, by roasting and crushing, he concocted a brew that for half a thousand years has cheered millions.

It is only on the world's waistband that the starry, white coffee flower blooms. Only between the fifteenth degs., north and south of the equator, can the tree be successfully grown, and on those altitudes which are between the 3,000 and 5,000 feet mark. Left by itself, the plant will grow into a tree twenty-five feet in altitude; but as man is not usually over two yardsticks high, the bearing shrubs are kept by pruning under a maximum height of 10 feet, so that they can be easily handled.

The seeds are thickly sown in the nursery; but, as soon as babyhood has passed and the tender sprouts are able to bear a breath of wind or changes of temperature, they are transplanted into orchards. They are set pretty far apart; so that, while young and not bearing, the soil may be utilized with parallel rows of corn, bananas or plantain. A thrifty shrub grows berries when three years old, and continues to bear during twenty-five years from three to six pounds of beans. Its glossy green leaves remind one of the laurel, and the fragrant, white, five-petaled flowers—the perfume varying in different countries and localities—grow in clusters of from three to ten each, in the axils of the branches. Well regulated streams of water run through the orchard to secure lusty growth; but when the berries begin to ripen the water is turned off, lest the fruit be too succulent. The twin beans or nutlets ripen within a mass of pulp that looks like a dark red cherry, or in tint and size rather like a cranberry. This pulp, when perfectly ripe, is delicious to the taste; but when dried it is taken off either by hand or, as is usually the case in the present day operations in Brazil, by most modern machinery.

The world now drinks over 1,000,000 tons of coffee a year, of which Brazil supplies two-thirds, some of the orchards having 5,000,000 trees. Indeed, Brazil has a larger coffee bearing area than any other country.

To Preserve the Home

By MRS. GEORGE BRANDT WINTHROP.

To make her home in which she dwells clean and tidy has been, after all, woman's traditonal function. Is that dreariness in city life, that lack of domesticity which the humblest farm dwelling presents, due to withdrawal of one of the naturally co-operating forces? If women have, in any sense, been responsible for the gentler side of life which softens and blurs some of its harshy conditions, may they not have a duty to perform in our cities?

If woman would fulfill her traditional responsibility of her own children; if she would educate and protect from danger factory children who must find their recreation on the street; if she would bring the cultural forces to bear upon our materialistic civilization; and if she would do it all with the dignity and directness fitting one who carries on her immemorial duties, then she must bring herself to the use of the ballot.

May we not fairly say that women need this implement in order to preserve the home.

Is Kissing Dangerous?

By MARGARET WATTS DE PEYSTER.

A crusade against kissing has recently been started by the young Spanish queen—the kissing of children, that is to say, the reason given is the danger of all sorts of infection that may lurk in a kiss. This is undoubtedly so, and a very real and desperate one, as every doctor agrees.

There are, however, other dangers, apart from microbes in the act of kissing, and the man or maid anxious to escape them would do well to entirely refrain.

A careless, snatched kiss at a "kissing gate," or one duly earned in some foolish Christmas game, has over and over again opened the door to Master Dan Cupid, and rendered both kisser and kissed his willing slaves.

Therefore, let all who would avoid the golden chains of Cupid steadfastly avoid kissing as they would the plague, or most surely will they catch the love microbe.

Successfully Blow Safe in Store and Postoffice at Vesleyville, N. D.

They Cut Telephone Wires Then Blow Strong Box All to Pieces.

Grafton, N. D., Aug. 16.—(Special to The Herald.) — About $500 was the booty secured by yeggmen who entered the postoffice at Vesleyville and blew the safe. The entrance was made through a rear window, and the job has every appearance of having been the work of professional cracksmen.

The postoffice is located in the Peterka Bros. general store, and the little town's telephone office is also located in the building, but all the wires were out before the men entered.

Strong Box Is Demolished.

In blowing the safe they were successful in completely demolishing the strong box, but in their hurry to get away they dropped a portion of their loot on the floor, which was later found.

Of the amount secured by the safe blowers, $350 was in cash, the remainder being in checks. Some stamps were also secured. The men left a few of their tools in the building.

CANADIAN CROP IS WAY BEHIND

Some Rust in Red River Valley and Manitoba, Says Crop Expert.

Grand Forks, N. D. Aug. 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—That there is more grain rust than generally supposed is the opinion of John Inglis, crop expert, who was here yesterday after a Canadian trip. Black rust is prevalent in the Red River valley and in Manitoba as well, he says, but he is unwilling to make any statement as to the amount of damage that will accrue.

Says Grade Is Off.

He declares that the grade is off badly; that the crops in the Northern Canadian provinces are about two to three weeks behind this section and that the time between the harvest season and the time of frost will be decidedly short.

With reference to the heads, Mr. Inglis says the berry is small and that no great yield can be secured with a small berry. The heads, as a rule, stand straight, instead of bending as they do under the weight of large kernels.

CHIEF SULLIVAN FOUND NOT GUILTY

East Grand Forks, Minn., Aug 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—Chief of Police P. J. Sullivan yesterday was declared not guilty of assault and battery on which he was recently arrested. The case took up the entire day. The prosecution sought to show that Sullivan and Officer John Gordon, complaining witness, had clashed over political matters. The defense brought in evidence to show that the chief of police was sober at the time of the alleged affair, and there was no small amount of difference between the stories of the two sides.

The case has aroused considerable interest and has made the political situation more lively than ever.

SAM HILL'S CLOSE CALL.

James J. Hill's Son-in-Law Nearly Killed in Oregon.

Salem, Or., Aug. 16.—Samuel Hill, the Washington good roads enthusiast and son-in-law of James J. Hill, had a narrow escape from death Monday while descending a bluff 100 feet high near Goldendale, Wash. But for his presence of mind he would have suffered serious injury.

Mr. Hill, with Governor West of Oregon and others, was examining the highways near Goldendale when Mr. Hill slipped on a rolling stone at the brow of the high bluff and, falling on his side, rolled several feet. He threw out his arms and managed to grasp a bush, which saved him.

AUTO SCARES TEAM; DRIVER IS KILLED

Thief River Falls, Minn., Aug. 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—Andrew Welo, one of the first settlers in Pennington county, met death in a tragic manner Monday evening.

He had driven into town the latter part of the afternoon with a spirited team of young horses and on returning was thrown from his seat on the wagon and dragged until killed. The team took fright at an auto on the outskirts of the city and rushed towards home with the result above stated.

An inquest found that his death was entirely accidental, being caused by the negligence of no one. He will be buried in Greenwood cemetery today. He leaves a wife and large family.

LITTLE ONES WERE BEYOND HUMAN AID

Efforts to Resusitate Two Girls Drowned in Chub Lake Futile.

Carlton, Minn., Aug. 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—Chub lake, in which Mr. Lillibridge and Miss Stapleton of Cloquet were drowned about a month ago, claimed two more lives yesterday, when two girls in wading got into miry mud and were struck by a wave and sank. They were soon rescued, but despite heroic efforts to resuscitate them, they passed away.

They were:

PEARL DUNPHY, aged 14.

FLORENCE DUNPHY, aged 12.

Both were daughters of James Dunphy, proprietor of a store here and largely engaged in the lumber business.

Together with a number of other girls, the two had walked out to the lake yesterday morning, where a camp of girls and boys was being held this week. About 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon four girls dressed themselves in bathing suits and went in for a swim.

In the party were the two girls now dead and a younger sister, Marie Dunphy, and Bernicee Hynes, daughter of J. F. Hynes. The spot where they were bathing or wading was just south of the McKinnon cottage, or between there and W. M. Cain's landing, on the east side of the lake.

High Wave Struck Them.

The account of Marie is that while they were thus wading a higher wave than usual swept over them, and when it receded from shore took the two girls with it out of their depths. They struggled and screamed, but soon sank, and the screams of the girls and their companions brought James Gillespie to the rescue from W. M. Cain's cottage, who, after a few minutes, was able to get hold of Pearl and bring her to shore, but not before she had become unconscious. Ellen Dunphy, an older sister of the girls, hurried out with a boat, and after some time managed to get Florence on a paddle and brought her out. The two girls were laid on the grass, medical aid hurriedly summoned, and every effort made to resuscitate them.

At 7:30 o'clock in the evening it was announced that both girls were dead. The two girls were pretty, intelligent and popular, and the accident has come as a terrible shock to the parents and sisters.

Few Minutes Under Water.

Reports of others who saw the accident are that the two girls were swept but a short distance from where they stood when the wave struck them, but at that point there is a patch of miry black mud in which it is easy to get caught but almost impossible to get out. Florence only remained in the water about five minutes and Pearl about ten minutes. Little Bernicee Hynes also was caught temporarily, but managed to extricate herself by catching hold of the boat which was hastily brought near. In the efforts at resuscitation Probate Judge F. W. Watkins tore the dynamo out of his automobile and electricity was thus applied to the unconscious girls for over an hour, while both Dr. John D. Gilbert and Dr. O. S. Watkins of Carlton exhausted every means at hand to bring back life, but to no avail, and at about 7:30 hope was given up and further efforts ceased.

INDIAN GIRL SINKS.

Launch Owned in International Falls Hits Rock.

International Falls, Minn., Aug. 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Indian Girl, James Dionne's little launch, met with an accident Sunday night in the lake near Ranier which caused it to sink but fortunately all of its passengers were taken off safely.

The launch had been to the Cascades with a crowd of "outers" and was ready to make a landing on the lakeside dock at Ranier, shortly after 10 o'clock when the storm was at its height, when it was discovered that an immense boom was blocking the way. In running around the boom the Indian Girl struck a rock so hard that it was unable to free itself. The Champion, the alligator in charge of the boom, went to the rescue of the passengers and took them safely to shore, then it returned and pulled the launch off but its hull had been damaged so badly that the boat immediately filled with water and sank.

BLOWN BY ELECTRICITY.

Queer Stunt Pulled Off at International Falls During Storm.

International Falls, Minn., Aug. 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—During the storm Sunday night the whistle at the paper mill blew a prolonged blast and alarmed the citizens, it suggesting fire, although there were no intermittent blasts. The whistle was blown by accident, an electric light wire having come in contact with the lever and opened the valve which allowed the steam to fill and blow the whistle.

RECEIVER APPOINTED

For Winona Railway Light and Power Company.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 16.—Judge Charles A. Willard of the United States district court has appointed Howard Morris of Milwaukee, receiver for the Winona Railway, Light & Power company. The naming of the receiver followed extended argument yesterday on the part of attorneys representing receivers of the La Crosse Water Power company, and unsecured creditors, who sought to interpose objections to a receiver being appointed at this time.

Nineteen attorneys were in court, representing every possible interest involved.

Clement C. Smith, for the receivers, produced a tender of cash to the amount of $12,375 for payment of the defaulted interest to the Old Colony Trust Company of Boston as a plea that the receiver be not appointed for the Winona company. Frank B. Kellogg acting for the trust company, objected to the tender on the ground that it was made at the wrong place and declared that it was not offered in good faith.

Grand Forks, N. D., Aug. 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—That North Dakota's new law preventing the drinking of liquor on trains and giving the conductors the power of making arrests will help the conductors in handling the annual fall traffic is the general sentiment among the men engaged in that capacity. SAYS AUTOS HELP ILLEGAL HUNTERS.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—According to H. A. Ryder, executive agent of the state game and fish commission, the automobile is a new enemy of the prairie chicken. Hunters in machines steal out into the chicken country, he declares, shoot the birds and secrete them about their motor cars, then go by the game wardens like paycars passing tramps.

"We are making a determined effort to stop this sort of practice," Mr. Ryder said, "and it's going hard with the poachers we capture."

WILL PRODUCE ITS BOOKS.

Minneapolis & St. Louis Road to Comply With Simpson's Demand.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 16.—Recognizing the validity and importance of the law passed by the last legislature placing the collection of inheritance taxes in the hands of the attorney general and vesting him with authority to compel individuals and corporations to produce whatever books and papers he may require, the Minnepolis & St. Louis railway has notified Attorney General Simpson that it will answer his summons in district court Aug. 19 and produce its books, showing its stock ownership. Mr. Simpson recently summoned the railroad to show what stock Charles Merrill, a wealthy New Yorker, owned in the road. Mr. Merrill died about three years ago. The effect of the Minneapolis & St. Louis yielding to the attorney general's request is looked upon as of vast importance, as it will enable him to determine not only the Merrill ownership of stock, but will show what E. H. Harriman, Russell Sage and other wealthy men held. The law applies to all corporations organized in this state and probably will be the means of opening up the way into many corporation books to determine what is due on inheritance taxes.

INJURED THE SECOND TIME

Workman Ordered Back to Old Job With Disastrous Results.

Brings Big Damage Suit After Settling for First Injuries.

In a complaint filed this afternoon with the clerk of the United States circuit court, through his attorney, Andrew Nelson, Sigvart Brokska, a laborer, demands $30,250 from the Boston Coal Dock & Wharf company and Jens Hansen, for injuries alleged to have been received on May 10, 1910.

It is set forth that the plaintiff was employed by the company for some time previous to the date of his injuries, and that he had been seriously hurt some time before that. Following the first injury, it is alleged, a settlement was effected between the plaintiff and the company and an agreement was also made to the effect that Brokska should work for the company, doing light work. He started the work on Dec. 10, 1909, after the first injury.

On May 9, 1910, it is averred, Hansen, the foreman for the company, ordered the plaintiff to work on the coal piles, and the following day, while so engaged, he was struck by one of the big buckets used to haul the coal from the steamers to the dock, and his hips and back were so severely injured, it is said, that he was paralysed for a time and that he is now a cripple.

WANTS HEINZE PUT IN PRISON

Butte Man Starts Action Over Aetna Bank Affairs.

Butte, Mont., Aug. 16.—F. Augustus Heinze, who reached Butte yesterday, has been made defendant in an action brought by Robert Lyons, as receiver for the Aetna Banking & Trust company, in which it is asked that Heinze be held responsible for $100,000, the amount of the capital stock of the bank, and that he be imprisoned until it is paid.

The complaint states that Heinze and A. R. Clements organized the bank, subscribing for $10 shares of the stock in June, 1901, and that in 1902 Heinze secured the major portion of this stock and made Clements cashier.

The minutes of the corporation are gone and it is alleged they were destroyed by Heinze. It is also alleged that Heinze and Clements combined to use the funds of the bank for their own personal use and disregarded all laws of the state in using the money for themselves.

CLEVER PAIR ROUNDED UP

Claimed to Have Passed Worthless Checks in Several Cities.

The arrest of Frank A. Moulton today at Beloit, Wis., on a charge of passing a forged check for $100 on Fred L. Engelking, who is connected with a paint company of this city, has brought to light a story of clever methods used by a man and woman in getting money on worthless paper.

Moulton came to Duluth a few weeks ago with an 18-year-old girl, whom he represented to be his wife, claiming that they were married in Minneapol's. The girl knew Engelking of this city and vouched for the identity of her alleged husband to Engelking, who cashed a $100 check for them.

The check was made payable to Moulton through a Minneapolis bank and was accredited to the account of the Whitney Law Corporation of Minneapolis. After it was found to be a forgery, Engelking notified the authorities and Moulton and the woman were traced into Canada as far as Montreal, where it is said that they worked the same game.

They recently turned up at Hamilton, Wis., where they also turned the trick, it is said. At Beloit they were detected and Moulton was placed under arrest. The woman was with him, but was not taken into custody. She claims that at Hamilton, Wis., she was sick and that he deserted her, but that she found him at Beloit.

Moulton, it is said, has another wife in Minneapolis.

OBITUARY

Capt. William Rosie, 85 years old, who had sailed the Great Lakes for the last forty years, is dead at the home of his son, William, in Grand Rapids, Mich. The most of his marine experience was on Lake Michigan, sailing out of Grand Haven, Mich. He was born in Scotland, coming to this country when he was 21 years old. Interment will be in Grand Haven, Monday.

W. T. Atwater, a resident of Minneapolis twenty-five years, formerly secretary of the W. S. Nott company, is dead at his home, 2512 Humboldt avenue south, following a stroke of apoplexy Wednesday. He retired from active business a year ago. Mr. Atwater was born Aug. 20, 1852, at Lockport, N. Y. He moved to Chicago thirty years ago, and soon after to Minneapolis. He had been a member of the Commercial club and of the Credit Men's association. He is survived by his wife, two sons and three daughters, all of Minneapolis: James Atwater, Pierce Atwater, Misses Florence Fay and Lois Atwater, and Mrs. J. Ernest Tatam.

Adolph Claussen, retired merchant and father of Ida Von Claussen, is dead at New York, at Brighton Beach. Mr. Claussen had been paying a visit to his daughter, who calls herself the Countess Ida Von Claussen. He was 74 years old. Mrs. Ida Von Claussen, the daughter, has been much in the newspapers on account of her warfare against President Roosevelt and other government officials, following an incident in Sweden where Mrs. Charles H. Graves, the wife of the American minister, refused to present her to the Swedish court. Some time ago she announced that she had instituted a suit against Col. Roosevelt for $1,000,000 damages.

WELDING TORTOISE SHELL.

Tortoise shell is the carapace or horny armor which protects the back of the hawksbill turtle. This armor is composed of thirteen segments or plates which are not fast at the outer edges but overlap one another like tiles on a roof.

The turtles are captured when they come on shore to lay their eggs, and after being killed are immersed in boiling water until the plates can be removed without injury. Formerly, in some places, says the Optical Journal and Review, live turtles were roasted until the plates loosened and could be taken away, when the turtle was put back in the sea to grow a new shell. It is doubtful if shells grow again, or if they would be of much value.

Hawksbill turtles are found in most of the tropical seas, and the shells are commercially rated as East Indian and West Indian. The East Indian shell is much darker than the other and has fewer of the transparent markings that go to make tortoise-shell desirable, and is not so valuable as the West Indian shell on that account.

The plates vary in size and thickness according to location, but in all cases taper to a thin edge where they overlap. In those cases in which a large piece is required to be of uniform thickness two or more plates are laid together and welded, until they become a solid piece of necessary thickness.

In welding plates they are first boiled in a salt solution until they become comparatively soft and pliable, when they are carefully cleaned to remove all foreign matter from the surfaces to be welded. The slightest impurity will prevent the shells from forming a perfect joint.

After the parts have been laid together they are wrapped with several thicknesses of wet cloth and an iron plate put on each side. These plates must be parallel so the pressure on the shell shall be equally distributed and bits of folded cloth are laid in wherever required to make the pressure uniform.

In the meantime heavy iron tongs have been heating and when hot enough to brown a bit of paper are made to hold the package of shell and cloths and the whole is put in a heavy press. Pressure is increased gradually to a certain point and maintained until the tongs became cold, when the parts will be found to have united to form one piece. Unless carefully done the shells separate on being put in hot water.

Small objects cannot be repaired by welding as a rule, because the surfaces are too small to knit properly and because pressure sufficient to unite the parts might destroy patterns or shape.

HOTEL MEN'S GATHERING

Northwestern Hotel Men's Association Is Meeting at Grand Forks.

Sioux City and Davenport, Iowa, Are After Next Annual Meet.

Grand Forks, N. D., Aug. 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—R. W. Johnstone of Davenport, Iowa, president of the association, formally opened the annual meeting of the Northwestern Hotel Men's association here today. A good attendance is present. Duluth hotels are well represented.

Uniform legislation affecting hotels in Minnesota, Iowa, North and South Dakota and Nebraska, that are included in the association, will be the principal object of discussion with strong probabilities that the Nebraska's deadbeat, limited liability and traveling men's laws will be recommended.

Sioux City and Davenport, Iowa, are the principal bidders for the next annual gathering, which will be selected tomorrow.

Omaha Hotel Man's Paper.

The paper that was to have been delivered by Rome Miller of Omaha was read to the convention this afternoon by William Anderson, chief clerk of the Rome hotel of Omaha. In this paper Mr. Miller takes occasion to voice his opposition to the plan of creating an association mutual fire insurance company, predicting that if such action should be taken, that that would eventually be the shoal upon which the association craft would be wrecked. Referring to convention resolutions, he said that the principal trouble with them was the fact that when the members of a convention "resolute," they go home after the meeting and that is the last that is heard of the resolutions until the next convention is held.

Concerning proposed hotel legislation, Mr. Miller favors the publicity plan and believes that best results can be obtained through it.

Country Hotel Man's Troubles.

The troubles of the country hotel owner are many, according to C. A. Klaus, proprietor of the Gladstone hotel at Jamestown, N. D. In his address before the convention he declared that the traveling public, despite the fact that hotels all over the country make charges for outgoing telephone calls, always make complaint on such charges when they are made by the hotel in the smaller city. The labor question is another that he pointed to as being extremely trying for the hotel owner of the small city, as the question of securing new servants is one that is extremely difficult to solve in many instances.

Tonight's program provides for an entertainment at Lincoln park which will be given following an automobile ride about the city. The election of new officers and selection of the next place of meeting will take place tomorrow.

Late Tennis Scores.

In the doubles tournament at the Oatka courts this afternoon, Clark and Cathcart of St. Paul defeated Stillman and Craig of Duluth, taking the first set in easy style, 6-1, and winning the second after a hard fight replete with deuce games and brilliant rallies, the final score being 8-6.

Davis and La Bree defeated Trout and Manville in one of the closest matches of the play so far, 6-3, 3-6, 6-2.

The special singles tournament for players outside of the three big cities is being played off this afternoon on the courts of the Northland Country club. It is thought that play in this event can be completed this afternoon.

THE SLANG OF OUR POLITICS.

Kansas City Star: Maj. Ben C. Truman, who was private secretary to President Johnson during the latter's occupancy of the White House, was afforded many opportunities for observation of political doings in those stirring times, and thus speaks with authority on the origin of many expressions still in use in current political life. Maj. Truman declares that while many of the slang expressions used in the United States are called "Americanisms," most of the latter have been bequeathed us from early English literature, and away down that line from Shakespeare to Dickens; and some of our most common applications have been adapted from the Bible itself. But an exception may be made regarding our political slang, nearly all of which is strictly original; and few or none of our presidential compaigns have been carried through without the production of some new political slang terms of more or less effectiveness. Indeed, to go back only a few presidential terms, no future treasure house of American-English words will be complete without the "mugwump" of 1884. It seemed expressionless and far-fetched, as first applied—by some one never strictly traceable—to those Republican goody-goodys who broke away from Blaine and helped elect Cleveland, and no satisfactory conclusion was ever arrived at concerning its prosody or etymology.

In 1834, the nickname of "locofocos" was given to the adherents of the Democratic party throughout the United States, who followed the course of a majority of the members of Tammany Hall, who, when the lights were turned out on them during a tumultuous meeting, kept right on with their proceedings by flickerings from locofoco matches until candles were procured. About the same time the members of the more radical wing of the New York Democracy received the derisive name of "barn-burners," classing them with a lot of lawless incendiaries, who for many months vented their spite on the owners of large grain and corn lands in the Mohawk and Oswego valleys by burning their barns.

Along in the forties came the terms "abolitionists" and "freesoilers," as applied to the growing anti-slavery element in the North; and about the same time the nickname of "doughfaces," as applied to pro-slavery men of both parties in the North, and that of "fire-eaters," applicable to extreme pro-slavery orators and newspaper editors of the South. Regarding the term "doughfaces" there has always been some difference of opinion as to its orthography and meaning, but Hon. George Bradburn once said in a political speech that "John Randolph, in referring to these Northern demagogues, from his seat in congress, branded them as 'dough-faces.' Randolph spelled the word d-o-e-face in allusion to the timid, startled look of that animal, which is said to shrink from the reflection of its own face in the water."

During the Civil war the pro-slavery Democrats and other rebel sympathizers in the North were termed "copperheads," after one of the meanest and most venomous of snakes. It was Mr. Lincoln who said that "not all Democrats were copperheads, but all copperheads were Democrats." Immediately after the war, those Republicans who went South and were elected to office were called "carpet-baggers," and all natives who affiliated with Republicans were derided by the Southern people generally as "scalawags."

Probably more political slang grew out of the campaign of 1870 than of all the others that preceded it, and the "bar'l of money," "bulldozing," "visiting statesmen," "solid South," "stalwarts," "shotgun policy," "nineteen rebel brigadiers," "counting out," "returning boards," "nephew of his uncle", and some others belong to that momentous year.

A few years afterward Congressman Flanagan of Texas, contributed to our political Americanisms "what are we here for?" and Cobb of Georgia asked "Where am I at?" But Senator Quay of Pennsylvania added a phrase to political literature that will reach a good old age when he wrote to a friend: "You do your part and I will shake the plum tree."

It was in 1876 that we first heard of the "dark horse," Mr. Hayes having been trotted out as that equine individual. There have been many attempts to hunt up the pedigree of the dark horse in politics, and the following has been generally the most satisfying: A few years "befo' de wah" there lived in Tennessee a trading horse jockey who had a coal black stallion, almost a thoroughbred. He entered this horse in a country race meeting where he was not known and where the natives heavily backed two or three favorites against him. Old Judge McMinamee, the turf oracle of that part of the state, was one of the judges of the meeting, and when he was told how the stranger was foolishly betting on his horse, he looked at the stallion and said: "Gentlemen, there's a dark horse in this race that will make some of you suffer before supper."

That imaginary stream called "Salt river up which defeated candidates are supposed to be rowed, is one of the most felicitous of all our political Americanisms, although its authorship is unknown. The term "caucus" was first used in 1828. Elbridge Gerry, a Democratic Massachusetts politician of the latter part of the eighteenth and the early part of the nineteenth century, was accused of having instigated the first division of states in to congressional districts without regard to the natural order and conditions in order that his party might succeed; thus, "gerrymander."

Probably the greatest excitement, next to the Civil war, our country has ever known, was that in 1855-6-7, between the abolitionists of the North and the slave holders of the South, for the possession of Kansas, then opening to the advance of immigration, and out of which the terms "Bleeding Kansas," "Border Ruffians," and "Squatter Sovereignty" became dramatically expressive and are undoubtedly defined in all text and phrase books.

The word "Boss" was first applied by Henry J. Raymond in the New York Times in 1856 to Isaiah Rynders, who was at the head of the Democratic marching clubs of that year. The word is derived from the Dutch settlers who first colonized New Amsterdam. Baas in the Dutch language signifies a master or the foreman of a workshop.

Regarding the word "machine," as derisively applied to politics in various parts of the United States during the past fifty years, it has been generally believed that it originated in New York, where, up to 1860, the fire engines were called machines, the firemen were volunteers and all of them politicians of some degree. But the application was borrowed from the English, for as long ago as 1845 the Duke of Wellington wrote to a friend as follows: "Such is the operation of the machine as now established that no individual can have any personal influence." The word "floater," too, as applied to the purchasable voter, is filched from the English.

The terms "jingo" and "jingoism" were voluminously applied to Secretary Blaine and to President Cleveland and to their brilliant and patriotic attitudes as Americans by foreign newspapers in their attempt to show that the Americans were spoiling for a fight. The words evidently come from the Amazonian Empress of China, named "Jingo," who made a furious oral onslaught on Korea in 204 A. D.

DEATH OF "PELORUS JACK."

London Daily Mail: Everybody who has sailed up the sound into the harbor of Wellington, N. Z., will hear with regret of the death of "Pelorus Jack." This famous dolphin has for years acted as the pilot of ships, and his loss will be deplored not only by New Zealanders but by travelers. "Pelorus Jack" had the distinction of being the only fish protected by special act of parliament. But the sharks have no respect for legislation, for the dolphin was their victim.

A correspondent writes: "When the king, who was then the duke of York, was making his last visit to New Zealand I was one of the company. As we approached Wellington we were told by the sailors that our warship would be met in the sound by an extraordinary pilot in the shape of a dolphin. We treated the story as a sailor's yarn, but sure enough, when we entered the sound there was the famous fish (which must have been about ten feet long) speeding before us and showing us the way. It is due to 'Pelorus Jack' to say that he was not tempted from his duties as pilot by food thrown overboard. He took his business seriously, and not until we were at anchor did he give any heed to the hospitality of the crew."

He was the last of his race, and the news that his body had been found partly eaten by sharks will be mournful tidings to scientists as well as to sailors. Sailors all over the world knew of "Pelorus Jack," and disbelieved in him until they saw him. Many a fo'c'sle fight has been caused by this famous fish, for his existence was an article of faith to those who had sailed in Antipodean seas and an old wife's tale to the Western ocean men.

A sailor from New Zealand had had a curious adventure with "Pelorus Jack" less than six months ago, which he related to the London correspondent of the Manchester Guardian. The sailor was sailing in a brig that had been trading in the Polynesian islands. When they reached the sound there was a good slant of wind, and the skipper decided to beat up to Wellington.

Now, this was a thing that was rarely done, as most of the ships are steamers, and sailing ships usually wait for tugs at the entrance, the wind being rarely favorable and the channel being unsafe for the usual big sailor. "Pelorus Jack" was waiting for them, and started off ahead in the center of the channel, as usual. When he found the brig heading on shore, he shifted his course and swam up and then headed for mid channel again.

Finding his lead still disregarded, he began to move along in some agitation, which increased after the brig had put about, sailing through mid channel and away to the other side. The fish then became very excited, and began to lash the water and plunge one way and then another. Ultimately Jack gave up and left to her fate this unaccountable ship that would not keep in the proper place.

FOUND—ONE LITERARY TRAMP.

Popular Magazine: Richard Haggard, who wrote "She" and "Ayesha," was traveling across the United States as the guest of John Hays Hammond in Hammond's private car.

"What I want to see," said Haggard, "is the real tramp. I haven't seen one since I reached this country. I can't believe you have as many as has been stated to be the case."

Harris Hammond, the eldest son of John Hays, promised:

He had seen one riding on the trucks under the car, and, at the next station, he went down and called the hobo out. When the tramp entered the car he was covered with cinders and dust, and looked like something from the lower reglons.

Hammond shook hands with him and introduced him, saying:

"This is Rider Haggard."

"Rider Haggard!" exclaimed the hobo. "Why, I've read all of your books, and loved every one of them."

Then he sat down and discussed literature with Haggard for half an hour. At the end of the talk Harris took him back, let him get some of the dust and cinders off, and handed him a good cigar.

"That fellow's not a tramp," said Haggard. "He's a gentleman in distress."

SOME SPOTS HAVE RAIN

Duluth Relatively Cool on Tuesday, With High Mark of 84 Deg.

If you lived in the East end and weren't deep in slumber, you saw a heavy shower last evening. If you lived in the central part of the city, you saw only a sprinkle, while those in other parts of the town saw only flashing lightning and heard only peals of thunder, with no accompanying raindrops.

The shower was one of the scattered kind that allows a ball game to go on at Athletic park, while people at the boat club hunt cover. It was too late for ball games or boat club crowds, but the effect was the same.

People in Duluth thought it was hot yesterday, but Duluth maintained its reputation for coolness, when relative temperatures are considered. The highest temperature recorded at the weather bureau on the hill was 84 deg., while the mercury at the kiosk and in street thermometers went to 90 deg. Official temperatures reported 90 deg. at St. Paul, 102 deg. at Huron, S. D., 104 deg. at Pierre, S. D., and 100 deg. at Omaha, so Duluth was cool.

Cooler weather prevailed in Duluth this morning, the temperature at 7 o'clock being 64 deg., which was 10 deg. under the temperature at the same time yesterday. The mercury went to 73 deg. at 10 o'clock, but the weather bureau did not look for very warm weather. Fair and still cooler weather are promised for tonight and tomorrow.

here yesterday and prepared to take an active part in the future events.

Badger First Victim.

The first victim of the two men to die was Badger, a wealthy youth who careened to his death in a pit in the aviation field. There had been a flaw in one of the wings of the propeller of the Baldwin machines he drove. Centrifugal force broke the propeller, upset the delicate equilibrium of the machine, and Badger dashed 100 feet to the bottom of the pit, his neck being broken.

Johnstone fell 500 feet and was drowned as the result of an equally unsuspected defect. Caught under the heavy engine in the Moisant monoplane, he was carried deep into Lake Michigan and his body was not brought to the surface until an hour later.

Badger lived for three-quarters of an hour after he had been extricated from the remains of his engine. He did not recover consciousness, and died almost at once after he reached a hospital. His death was the first serious accident of the meet, although thirty-five flyers have dipped and glided here for three days and experts say several similar accidents have been narrowly averted.

Fell Before Grandstand.

Badger fell just in front of the center of the grandstand and thousands of spectators were within a few hundreds yards of the accident. Hundreds leaped the fence, fought past the line of police and rushed into the pit where the wrecked aeroplane lay. There was a near panic in the field, and numerous heads were cracked by police clubs.

The injury was announced through a megaphone, and five minutes later, while Badger was on his way to the hospital, attention and interest had reverted to the men still flying, any of whom offered possibilities of similar thrills and possible fatalities.

Johnstone's death was due, according to expert aviators, to a similar unsuspected flaw in the mechanism of his monoplane. The correct cause will probably never be known, as the engine is in the deep and the planes were broken and scattered by the tremendous impact with the surface of the water.

Wife Saw Him Fall.

Johnstone's actual fall was witnessed by his young wife, although it was not until half an hour later that she was informed of his death. As the monoplane faltered in mid-air then crashed downward to the surface of the lake, the young aviator's wife, who had been following his flight closely, grasped a mechanic's arm and exclaimed in fear: "Oh, oh, pity! He's falling. My boy will be killed."

Wives of a half dozen other aviators whose attention had been riveted on the machine that was to carry the second victim of the day to his death, rushed to Mrs. Johnstone's side, and as the machine hurtled into the lake and out of sight, they tried to assure her that Johnstone would suffer nothing worse than a ducking. A mechanic rushed up and assured Mrs. Johnstone that her husband had been plucked out of the lake unharmed, that a boat was bringing him ashore, and that he would join her in the hotel immediately.

Reassured by this information, which had been deliberately invented to calm the fears of the aviator's wife, she went back to her hotel and hurriedly laid out dry apparel for her husband. For half an hour or more she waited, then a member of the Johnstone family took her word of the aviator's death. The young wife was prostrated.

Against Father's Wishes.

Like Badger, Johnstone flew as an amateur. His father, Dr. Stuart Johnstone, a practicing physician here, had refused to buy him an aeroplane. Johnstone, who was 26 years old and ambitious, started to build one and went to France, where he entered the school of aviation. He then went to the Blerlot school and learned to fly.

When Johnstone's father again refused to buy him an aeroplane, his answer to his boy's entreaty, a letter written almost a year ago, seemed to foretell the fatal accident.

"My conscience will not permit me to contribute to your certain death by providing you with a flying machine," he wrote. "I can't buy you one, St. Croix."

After learning to fly in France, Johnstone went to Havana, where he was the first to fly over the city. He gained a record when he was the first to fly around the wreck of the battleship Maine. He returned to the United States late in the spring and was immediately engaged by Alfred Moisant, and had since been with the group of French aviators.

This was his first serious fall, although he flirted with death a month ago in Detroit. At that time his machine dropped some distance, but the aviator escaped without a scratch.

Made American Record.

After his return from Havana, Johnstone established one American record. During a flying exhibition at Mineola, Aug 5, he remained in the air 4 hours 1 minute and 59 seconds.

Johnstone has been one of the spectacular fliers during the meet here. Although he had won no races, he had become a favorite with the crowd, which had known him as a daring aviator.

Former Motor Enthusiast.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 16.—William R. Badger, the aviator killed in Chicago, was well known in Pittsburg, where he has lived most of his life. Badger, who was 25 years old, became an automobile enthusiast a few years ago, and having an independent fortune was able to gratify his somewhat expensive tastes in that direction. Last summer, during an aviation meet in Pittsburg, he expressed his determination to buy an aeroplane and secure an aviator's license. He bought the machine, and after months of practice made a number of successful flights at Mineola, Long Island, before he secured the required permission from the Aeroclub of America. It was his intention to make an ascent in Pittsburg before the end of the summer.

Badger was unmarried. He is survived by his step-father, John Goettman.

that the government was likely to respond to this action of the men with a proclamation of martial law on all railways, and replacing the strikers with the men from the royal engineers army service corps.

Passengers for Manchester were informed at the booking offices that the railway companies were unable to guarantee them transportation further than Crewe, which is about twenty-five miles southwest of Manchester.

Little Abatement Seen.

London, Aug. 16.—There was little if any abatement today of the strike fever that has spread through Great Britain. At some points, such as the London docks, conditions continued to improve, but this was offset by outbreaks elsewhere.

With the exception of Liverpool, where there was rioting nearly all last night, the men generally are orderly, and beyond picketing and peaceably inducing men to join the unions, did not interfere with those desiring to work.

Two Men Killed.

The fighting at Liverpool last night, which resulted in the death of two rioters who were shot by Hussars in quelling five prison vans occupied by riot prisoners whom the mob attempted unsuccessfully to release, has not tended thus far to improve the situation except as it has helped to keep the peaceably disposed outside the strike area. This enabled the police to more easily handle those who were causing trouble.

This was particularly noticeable this morning, when the streets were quiet, the rioters having retired for a much-needed rest after the night's battle, and also probably to keep out of the way of the strong forces opposed to them during daylight. The police and soldiers, however, prepared for a renewal of hostilities when night falls.

Steamers Not Unloaded.

Today teams were busy removing goods from the railway stations to business houses. They were unmolested. Along the docks, however, work was at a standstill and the men showed an ugly spirit. The continued rioting on the Mersey port was not calculated to restore confidence elsewhere, and men at other ports were refusing to discharge steamers diverted from Liverpool. Glasgow for example, which had just disposed of a street railway strike now has a dock strike as a result of the men declining to remove a cargo of fruit from a steamer sent from the Mersey.

Railway Strike Declared.

Another ominous sign was the choice of the leaders of the workers of Liverpool as the city from which to direct threatened general strike on the railways which was declared last night by the executives of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants, the Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen, and the general railway workers' union, to become effective within twenty-four hours unless in the interim the companies express a willingness to negotiate for a settlement of grievances.

Heretofore the railway strikes have been managed usually from London or some central point in the North. The threat to tie up all the railway lines in the United Kingdom caused more uneasiness than all the other strike movements combined, for it was known that if the effort was successful it would completely cut off the food supplies from the greater part of the country. The government exerted every influence to avert such a calamity.

Hope for Partial Service.

Should the railway strike take place, the managers hope to maintain a partial service on all lines, and for months have been preparing for such an eventuality. They have already made up time tables for a curtailed service with the aid of non-union men, who compose about three-fourths of the workers. The unions have about 170,000 members.

The residents of many of the poorer districts already are suffering from prolonged idleness, and in some sections of London and the other large cities, where the husbands and wives equally contribute to the support of their homes, both are on strike and dependent upon charity for food.

The trade of Manchester has been completely dislocated by the strike in the transport service. Today the signal men joined the strikers, preventing the movement of trains, so that even if the teamsters were at work there would be nothing for them to transport.

The striking freight handlers at Birmingham returned to work today.

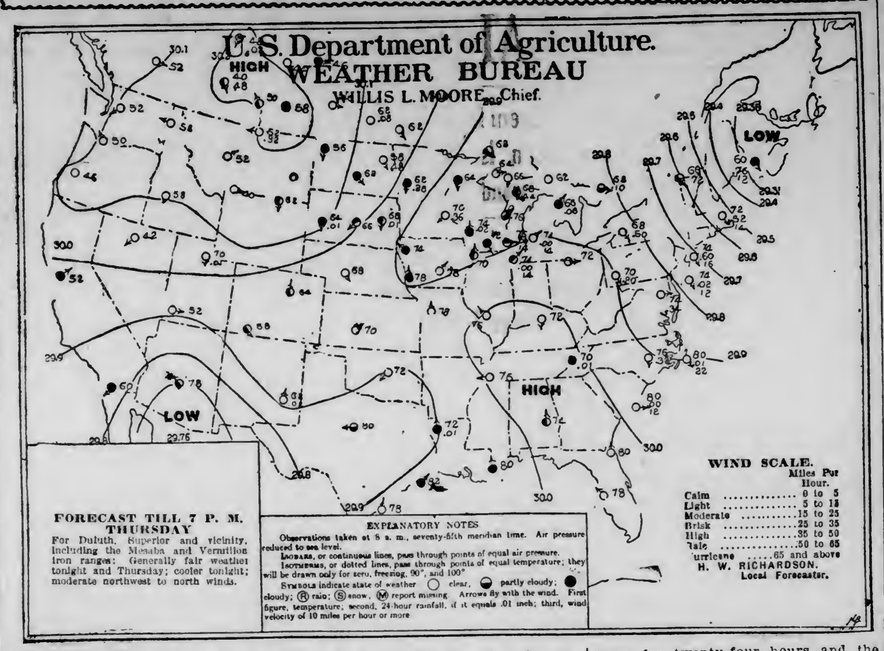
Many Minor Strikes.

There appeared to be no danger of a resumption of the dock strike at London. The men were slowly returning to their places and it was expected that normal conditions would prevail tomorrow.

Smaller and spasmodic strikes, which have broken out in every variety of industry throughout the country, have caused the greatest suffering, as the poorest class is engaged in these employments and a few days without work means they must go hungry.

The best way not to succeed is not to advertise.

OFFICIAL MAP OF THE WEATHER



FAIR

The weather man made good in spots on his shower prediction last night. Rain fell in some parts of the city, while in other parts the storm was confined to thunder and lightning. The high temperature yesterday was only 84 deg., but the heat was oppressive on account of an excess of humidity. The temperature didn't get below 60 deg. last night. Today is partly cloudy, cool and altogether delightful.

Fair weather prevailed a year ago today.

The sun rose this morning at 5:06 and it will set at 7:18 this evening giving fourteen hours and twelve minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"Moderately warm to hot weather prevails over all districts except in Western Canada and Pacific Coast states. Temperatures of 90 deg. or more occurred Tuesday in the Central valleys and Southern states. Light to copious showers fell during either Tuesday or last night in Alberta, Northwestern Montana, Western Manitoba, the Dakotas, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Eastern Canada and all of the Atlantic states except South Carolina and Florida, principally in connection with the disturbance now central over Maine. Cooler weather has developed over the greater portion of the Northwest. At the Head of the Lakes pleasant weather is indicated for the ensuing thirty-six hours.

towns appear to be clusters of toy-houses and rivers look like brooks. Over the towns the temperature is slightly warmer than over the open country. It is curious that above the din of a city one may sometimes hear such distinct sounds as the barking of dogs."

One minute after he had left the ground the airman had risen to a height of 300 feet, and after circling twice around the driving park, he piloted out a point above the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern railroad tracks and started due east.

"The air's fine and if it keeps up this way all day I may break a speed record," said Atwood as he waved to the crowds below. He said he hoped to reach Toledo before 1 o'clock.

Great crowds of people, including many farmers who had come in automobiles, turned out and watched the aviator until he disappeared in the east.

Trip From Chicago.

Skimming over the southwest corner of Lake Michigan and then over the sand hills of Northern Indiana, Atwood yesterday afternoon flew the 101 miles from Chicago in 2 hours and 16 minutes, without stop, thus completing 387 miles of his 1,460 cross-country flight.

Atwood made the 101 miles from Chicago in only twenty-one minutes more time than the fastest train service in the United States, which covers the distance between Chicago and Elkhart in 1 hour and 55 minutes. He left Chicago at 3:33 p. m.

Trouble Over Check.

Chicago, Aug. 16.—There was much vehemence of language and gesticulation at the aviation grounds just before Harry N. Atwood started on the second stage of his St. Louis-New York flight yesterday. The dispute was between Atwood and Chairman Mudd of the aviation committee, and it terminated only with the thrusting of a certified check for $500 into the aviator's hands just as his big biplane was starting.

The trouble started when somebody with a badge, but unidentified, told Atwood that he must leave the grounds by 3:30 or he would not be allowed to start at all. Atwood responded with heat that he would start when he pleased, or some one would get hurt.

This subject was scarcely quieted when the air pilot was tendered a check for $500 "as a gift," because he landed here Monday and started from the aerodome.

"I landed here yesterday to please the crowd, mostly, but I was promised $1,000 for doing it," the bird man cried "and I want to have it."

Got It Certified.

Loud language over this point continued as the aeroplane was brought to the starting line. The check for $500 was thrust into his hands, and rejected because still uncertified. The propellers were whirring, and half a dozen men were required to restrain the machine while Chairman Mudd did a quick job of certification. The "deck hands" released their hold, and at 3:29 the long distance aviator rose. He winged around the pylons once for the crowd, which numbered close to 100,000 persons, and then shot southeast in the direction of Michigan City.

Beachy was the only aviator to escort him and he returned after flying two miles.

ATTORNEYS GENERAL MUM.

Not Disclosing Their Attack on Judge Sanborn's Ruling.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 16.—Attorneys' general meeting in St. Paul to prepare a brief in the appeal from Judge Walter H. Sanborn's ruling in the Minnesota rate case refuse to discuss what took place yesterday other than to say the question of interference with interstate commerce probably would receive the most consideration.

Inasmuch as the rate-making power of the state commission is under attack in the case, the attorneys general of several states have interested themselves in the Minnesota rate cases, and have come here to confer with Attorney General Simpson and E. T. Young, former attorney general.

It was pointed out by one of the attorneys that the matters under discussion preparatory to drawing up the brief, will not be made public for obvious reasons. Chief attention, however, undoubtedly will be directed against the arguments advanced by railroad counsel in the rate cases that the making of rates by state commissions constitutes interference with interstate commerce.

CLAIMS DISPUTED BILL WAS VETOED

Senator Wilson Believes Seven Senators Act Was Not Legally Passed.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 16.—Attack on the "seven senators" bill continued all day yesterday and when court adjourned there was every indication of another full day of argument today. George Schmahl, counsel for the relators, Representatives C. R. Fowler and W. D. Washburn, Jr., completed his arguments on the technical points in the case at noon, and was followed by a short talk by Senator George P. Wilson.

General Wilson took up the question of the validity of the reapportionment bill from the standpoint that the governor had not signed it and it was therefore void.

Bill Never Signed.

He pointed out that ordinarily a bill becomes a law if the governor does not attach his signature within three days after the bill passes, providing the legislature is in session. He declared the legislature adjourned sine die the day following the passage, or supposed passage of the "seven senators" bill, and in view of the fact that the governor never signed it, it cannot be considered as passed, but as vetoed.

Assistant Attorney General Jones declared he believed the bill would withstand any attack that might be directed against it, and that extended arguments on his part would not be necessary.

FORMER ST. ANTHONY MAN SUDDENLY DIES.

Crookston, Minn., Aug. 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—Monday evening Joseph D. Spence died suddenly at his farm home southeast of Harold Station of heart trouble, from which he had suffered for some time past, and though a physician was summoned at once when he was stricken, no relief could be given. Deceased was 54 years of age and leaves a widow and two children. He had resided there but a year, coming here from St. Anthony, Minn.

DEER RIVER WILL BE ELECTRICALLY LIGHTED.

Deer River, Minn., Aug. 16.—The Everton Light & Power company will erect a large electric light plant here. Work commenced yesterday morning and it will probably take three months before the plant is completed. The old power house is now located back of the Everton hotel and is very unsatisfactory. The new building will be of brick.

BEMIDJI ENGINEERS ORGANIZED INTO UNION.

The following were chosen as officers: President, J. M. Newmann, chief engineer of the Crookston Lumber company; vice president, O. H. Ongstad, chief engineer of the Bemidji Lumber company; treasurer, F. L. Bursely, engineer at the city hall; financial secretary, G. R. Martin; recording secretary, F. E. Moore; corresponding secretary, D. C. Smyth; conductor, Andrew Rood; doorkeeper, E. J. Barrigan; trustees, Dan Backlund, William Gaines and George Robinson.

The next meeting will be held Monday evening, Aug. 21.

NINE WARRANTS FOR LYNCHERS

One Arrest Already Has Been Made at Coatesville, Pa.

Coatesville, Pa., Aug. 16.—Stirred to action by criticism because of the delay in arresting those known to have been implicated in the lynching of the negro, Walker, last Sunday night, nine additional warrants were sworn out this morning by the Chester county authorities and will be served during the day.

These warrants, it is believed, are based on information given by Kennedy Boyd, a lineman for an electric light company who was arrested last night after he had been put through a severe examination by District Attorney Robert S. Gawthrop.

Boyd, according to the police, admitted having been in the mob Sunday night, and gave the names of others he recognized in the crowd.

The state police still are on duty, but have little to do. Maj. John C. Groome of Philadelphia, superintendent of the state police, came here today and took personal charge of the troops.

ANARCHISTS AT PANAMA CANAL

Lopez Himself Is Said to Be One of Laborers There.

New Orleans, La., Aug. 16.—According to information received here last night from Panama, it is believed that an organized body of anarchists has been discovered among the Spanish laborers on the isthmian canal.

The discovery, it is said, was made through the confession of a laborer, believed to be Aquilino Lopez of Barcelona, and alleged to have been implicated in the massacre of priests, nuns and other religious workers in various parts of Spain two years ago. The man said to be Lopez and several others who admitted they were anarchists, have been detained.

CAVALRY SENT TO THE FRONTIER

Trouble Is Threatened By Lower California Revolt.

Washington, Aug. 16.—Because of threatened trouble in Lower California, incident to the Mexican government's endeavors to quell disturbances there, a troop of United States cavalry will be ordered to the frontier today to patrol the border from Yuma, Ariz., to San Diego, Cal.

Is Real Revolution.

City of Mexico, Aug. 16.—In government circles here it is no longer denied that the government has on its hands another revolution. The revolutionary movement begun by Emilian Zapatas' men has gained such headway that it can be stopped, apparently, only by the use of the army. The movement is purely local, however, and is causing no great uneasiness in the capital.

Agrees to Conference.

Cuatla, Mex., Aug. 166.—Francisco I. Madero has induced Emiliano Zapata, the leader of the rebellious Maderistas, to agree to another conference. Upon this will depend the fate of the Zapata revolt.

ARRANGE FUNERAL OF LIEUT. MERRITT

Iowans Will Hold Services Over Body Taken From the Maine.

Red Oak, Iowa, Aug. 16.—Arrangements for the funeral here Friday of Lieut. Darwin Merritt, naval officer who lost his life on the battleship Maine in Havana harbor, have been completed. His body was the only one to be positively identified of the few recovered from that vessel.

The funeral was postponed to await the arrival from San Francisco of naval officers sent by the national government to participate in the obsequies. United States troops from Des Moines and details of state militia also will be present. The body is expected today from New York.

Judge Horace E. Deemer of Red Oak, justice of the supreme court of Iowa, will deliver the funeral oration.

ROCHESTER HOPES TO LAND MERCANTILE MEN.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—The second day of the ninth annual convention of the National Association of Mercantile Agencies opened today with a spirited contest being waged between Rochester, N. Y., and Seattle, Wash., for the next convention. The Rochester contingent early today expressed confidence in view of the fact that the meeting this year is being held in the West. The election of officers was scheduled as the last important official act of the convention today.

In the afternoon a trip will be made by trolley to Lake Minnetonka, where the delegates will be entertained at luncheon and with a boat ride. The annual banquet will close the convention tonight. Sixty delegates are here from as many cities.

SUPERIOR WINS FIRST GAME OF WINONA SERIES

Winona, Minn., Aug. 16.—In the first game of the all important series between the Superior Red Legs and the Winona Pirates, upon which the winning of the flag may rest, the hustling visitors had little trouble in grabbing the game, driving Dauss, the Winona star from the mound and winning out by the score of 9 to 4.

In the second inning there was a bombardment of hits that netted seven runs, four coming before Dauss was driven to the bench and the remaining three being garnered off the delivery of Baillies. Superior played errorless ball in the field, the locals wavering at times. In every department of the game the Pirates were outplayed. Dahlgren weakened in the sixth and was succeeded by Gilchrist, who has been at outs with the Superior management.

MATCH PLAY ON OMAHA COURSE

Omaha, Neb., Aug. 16.—Match play began today in the championship flights for the trans-Mississippi Golf association trophy. Sixteen pairs were scheduled for the forenoon's eighteen holes with flights for the other cups next on the program. With some of the best golfers in the West entered and nearly all of them qualifying below bogey, sensational golf was expected.

R. W. Hodge of Kansas City, who qualified with 148 on a 166 course, with E. M. Fairfield of the Omaha Country club, had the honor and teed off at 8 o'clock. They were followed at five-minute intervals by the other pairs.

No relief from the hot weather greeted the golfers this morning.

PICKERING IS OPTIMISTIC

Gopher Captain Not Worrying Over Loss of Star Players.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 16.—Earle Pickering, captain of the 1911 Minnesota football team, returned yesterday from a canoe trip which has lasted all summer. He appeared optimistic as to the Minnesota eleven, despite the fact that James Walker, all-American tackle; Bromley, picked by several for a place on the all-Western at guard; McGovern, the star quarter, and Johnston, the speedy back, will be lost to the team, with several other lesser lights.

Walker plans to enter the University of Pennsylvania and Bromley may go to Harvard. The others have played their three years. Pickering will again play left end this year.

DULUTH MAN MAY WRESTLE AT BIG MATCH.

In a letter to the sporting editor of The Herald, received yesterday, Jack Curley, secretary of the Empire Athletic club of Chicago, states that the officials of the club are at the present time looking for some first-class wrestler to meet Pilakoff, the Finnish Lion, in the main event preceding the Gotch-Hackenschmidt match at the Chicago American league grounds, on the afternoon of Sept. 4.

If Pilakoff wrestles in the biggest match that has ever been staged in the history of the world, he will be the first wrestler who has ever really placed Duluth on the wrestling map. The Chicago promoters are considering the match at the present time, and if the match is given to Pilakoff, it will make his name famous the country over.

PILAKOFF ARRIVES IN DULUTH FOR MATCH.

Fred Pilakoff, the huge Finnish Lion, reached Duluth this morning, coming in from Chicago, where he has been training with Postl for his match here tomorrow evening with John Soderlund. The big fellow has been working hard to get into good shape for the series of fall matches that are coming, and he is at the present time in the best of condition.

Pilakoff has been working with Carl Busch, the German wrestler, also, and is in as good condition as he was at any time last season.

COMMENTS AND OPINIONS ON THE SPORTING PARADE

Wrestling Will Break in on the Summer Baseball Season—Duluth Progressing in Tennis Matters—The National League Race.

THE summer interest in baseball will be broken in upon for the moment by the athletic exhibition tomorrow evening at the big Auditorium rink, the biggest structure in the city, where Frederick Pilakoff, the Finnish Lion and one of the real strong men of the world, will participate in a finish wrestling match and will also give his wonderful exhibition of strength.

Pilakoff's appearance will be doubly interesting from the fact that the big man is expected to meet some of the greatest wrestlers of the world in Duluth the coming winter. The wrestling match tomorrow evening will give the fans and those interested in clean mat sport, an opportunity of judging of the ability of the Gigantic Finn, who bears a great reputation on the other side of the water.

In John Soderlund, Pilakoff will meet a man who has achieved some reputation in the northern part of the state. While the match will be a finish one, Pilakoff has agreed to throw his opponent twice within half an hour. In addition to the wrestling match he has a long and interesting program of strength feats, in which the remarkable strength of the Finnish Lion will be brought out.

A letter received yesterday from Jack Curley, secretary of the Empire Athletic Club of Chicago, the organization putting on the world's championship wrestling match between Gotch and the great George Hackenschmidt, stated that Pilakoff might be chosen for the main preliminary of the big match thus giving a little publicity to Duluth, as Pilakoff will make his future home here and will be announced to the vast throng as coming from this city.

SO FAR in the tennis tournament that is being played at the Oatka courts, young Joe Armstrong has shown the class of the play. Only a kid in years and lacking the experience at least two of the visiting players participating, it is generally believed by the most interested followers of the play that the St. Paul youth will win the tournament and will consequently face John Adams in the match for the state championship.

While it can be said without any sense of flattery to the visiting players or disparagement to the Duluth players, that not more than three of four of the local men class with the best of the visitors, it can be stated that within a year the standard of tennis has advanced immeasurably here.

Tennis has been in a deep sleep for a number of years at the Head of the Lakes. Then came the courts at the main house of the boat club, bringing to life the game that is one of the most popular of all summer sports The revival of the game here in Duluth is surely developing some players that in a season or two are going to be important factors in the future state tournaments.

Players of the class of Armstrong are unusual in this part of the country. Only a boy, this really remarkable young player should have a very brilliant future. The record of Adams and Armstrong on their Eastern trip speaks highly of their ability.

Duluth is surely on the right trail in tennis matters. We have some live wires at the head of the tennis game in this city, and we are progressing.

A WRITER in the Cincinnati Enquirer, a paper which is held highly in the world of sports, expresses the opinion that the Philadelphia Nationals and the St. Louis Cardinals are out of the race in the older major league.

Most of us observing fans had noticed the drop of St. Louis, some of coming to the conclusion that the race had been too heart-breaking for the sturdy boys under the managerial wing of Roger Bresnahan. But the belief that the Phillies are out of the race is one rather radical at this stage of the battle.

Magee's reinstatement is going to help the Philadelphia team. There are few if any better players in the country than the big outfielder who created such a stir in the world of baseball. It will be recalled that he was the real leader of the National league last season and was going great at the time of his suspension.

A pennant for either Philadelphia or New York would be a good thing for baseball. Naturally a win for St. Louis would be better than anything else that could happen in the older league, unless we include the name of Boston. Chicago and Pittsburg have had rather a monopoly on the flags that have been distributed of late years, though New York cut in with two successive wins, back in the days before the wonderful Cub machine struck its gait.

Many of the fans in the West can't for the very life of them help wishing that the dear old Cubs, who have been counted out time and time again since the rather disastrous defeat at the hands of the Philadelphia Americans, would win again; this, too, despite the fact that all observing followers of baseball realize that the winning of some other team would be a greater benefit to the game.

The dear old Chance machine has a host of followers in this city. The fans up here admire the grit and fighting spirit that has been shown times innumerable by the Murphy pets. The fighting at the present time is fast and furious, and the drop of St. Louis is not surprising. Yet to state that Philadelphia is out of the race, is an assertion that will bring into being a whole swarm of disputes.

SUPERIOR HAS THE CALL

Red Legs Look Better Than Pirates, Compared Man for Man.

Duluth Fans Are Rooting for Superior to Take Pennant.

Superior clearly and decisively outplayed the Winona Pirates in the first game of a series that is attracting the eager and close attention of all the fans around the Minny league circuit.

A win for Superior yesterday put the Red Legs in the lead, deposing the Pirates from the proud position they have held at the top of the percentage ladder since the opening game of the season.

Figuring man for man, some of the critics around the circuit can't see where the Pirates are as good a team as the fine bunch of players that Superior has at the present time. The acquisition of Dolan and Dunbar has made a great minor league team out of the bunch from across the bay.

In Jensen, Dahlgren, Rhodes, and Dunbar, Taylor has a hurling quartet that surely compares with McNeil, Dauss, Wagner and Baillies. Then take the Red Legs and Pirates around the in and outfields. Dolan has it on Curtis a city block. Grogan is only fair at second for the Red Legs, but Bancroft is ahead of Davey and Lippold is about as good as Liefhelt.

In the outfield Taylor has a fast and heady trio in Bennett, Landry and Ford. Collins and Swanson are classy players, but there are better outfielders in the league than Duchien.

Now that the Superior boys are at the top it will be an awfully hard task for the Pirates to take the lead away from them. The Red Legs have been coming all season, playing hard and uphill game and the Pirates have been losing ground. The race somewhat resembles that between Philadelphia and Detroit in the American league.

The hitting of Biddy Dolan has been one of the big factors in the climb of the Red Legs. The old boy has been slamming the ball around the lot something scandalously, and when Taylor signed the Wausau manager he made a move that may bring the flag to the city across the bay.

Fans around here are rooting for the Red Legs. Superior bugs can't accuse Duluth of not being a good sport. If we can't win we are for Superior. Proof of that has been the cheers at the games over here when the announcement of the score has shown Superior in the lead. Duluth won the first Minny league pennant, and now we are rooting for the team on the other side to cop the third flag.

O'BRIEN EASY FOR NEGRO

New York, Aug. 16.—Sam Langford of Boston, with an advantage of about ten pounds in weight, fought Philadelphia Jack O'Brien to a standstill in four and one-half rounds last night at the Twentieth Century club. Referee Charley White prevented a knockout when he stopped the bout in the middle of the fifth round. O'Brien was practically out from the effects of a hard left hook to the jaw and had to be helped to his corner.

It was the old story of a clever boxer pitted against a hard-hitting fighter, and from the start the Boston heavyweight had O'Brien's measure taken. Langford's blows were of the sledge-hammer order, while none of O'Brien's swings and hooks had sufficient steam to bother the colored man. The pace was fast and O'Brien showed clever footwork as well as scientific boxing.

At the end of the second round O'Brien was bleeding from the nose and mouth and was cautioned frequently for holding. Langford put O'Brien twice to the floor in the third round, O'Brien taking nine seconds on the second fall. O'Brien was weak, but managed to stall along until the bell gave him a respite.

There was no question as to O'Brien's gameness, as he took a lot of punishment in the fourth and was fighting hard in the fifth until Langford landed the finishing blow.

HANDICAP RACES FOR MOTOR BOATS

Arrangements are being made at the present time for a handicap motor boat race to be held at the boat club next Saturday afternoon. The officials of the club are working out a handicap system at the present time, based upon the records the various boats have made in their past performances.

In addition to these races there will be a number of special events, Saturday being ladies' day. The motor boat events will be the last motor boat events of the season and it is expected that every boat at the Head of the Lakes will be entered.

Ladies will handle the sail boats and the officials are at work at the present time on some special events.

Gilligan Released.

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 16.—Pitcher Gilligan of the Milwaukee American association was given his unconditional release yesterday.

ARMSTRONG REACHES SEMI-FINALS IN STATE TOURNEY

St. Paul Boy Playing in Rare Form on Oatka Courts.

Tuesday afternoon's play in the state tennis tournament brought out some more good tennis. The day was an Armstrong day, in a measure, for in addition to his victory in the morning over Walter Fraker, the young St. Paul star defeated Donald Haynie of St. Paul and Max Washburn of this city, going into the semi-finals.

In none of the games played yesterday did Armstrong have to extend himself to the limit of his abilities. He won from Haynie in the afternoon by the score of 6-2, 6-3, while Washburn was defeated 6-1, 6-0, in this game Armstrong letting out more than he did in the other contests he has played in the tournament.

So far the St. Paul boy has shown the real class of the play, and it is generally believed that he will meet John Adams in the play for the state championship.

A close and well played game that came in yesterday afternoon's play was the match between Cathcart of St. Paul and Gardner of this city. Cathcart has played some of the cleverest tennis of the visiting players and the tall Duluthian forced the St. Paul man to the limit yesterday.

Gardner had been in a single and double game previous to the match with Cathcart, and this undoubtedly worked to his disadvantage. In the first game he played the visitor right up to the last set, the game being close and hard fought all the way. Gardner weakened in the second game and Cathcart won in much easier fashion. The first match was won 8-6, it being in doubt right up to the last set. Cathcart won the second 6-3.

Carl Wainhagen of St. Paul had little trouble with E. I. Shepard of Winona, winning in two straight games by scores of 6-2, 6-2. Courtenay Dinwiddie, one of the best of local players, defeated Walter Amundson rather easily in the first game between the pair, Amundson rallying in the second contest and playing a rattling good game. Dinwiddie won out after a close and hard fought contest, the score being 8-6.

D. P. Haynie, one of invincible Joe's victims yesterday afternoon, earned his right to meet Armstrong by defeating J. B. Becher of Duluth by the score of 6-1, 6-2.

Doubles Started.

The preliminary round of the doubles was started yesterday, Haynie and Kennedy defeating Graff and Dickerman, 6-4, 6-3, Graff failing to show the form that he displayed in his games of last season. Lack of practice may account for the disappointing playing of Graff.

Fitzpatrick and Mowry had little trouble with Cheney and Jones, winning out, 6-3, 6-1. Congdon and McBride won from Falk and Barnes, 5-7, 6-4, 6-3. Clark and Cathcart won from Trott and Wright, 6-2, 6-0, and in the first round of the doubles the Shepard brothers of Winona won from De Witt and Ingalls, 6-3, 6-0. The veterans, Wheeler and Jayne, defeated the crack local doubles, Davis and Gardner, winners of the local tournament, by the scores of 6-2, 6-0.

By far the best tennis of the tournament was seen yesterday, and the games on today's draw promise even more for the lovers of the sport. As the play progresses and the games narrow down, the play is getting better.

Enthusiasts of the game are eagerly looking forward to the meeting in the singles of some of the cracks who are pretty sure to survive the fight to the finals. They are Trafford Jayne and Wheeler and Armstrong. Local men are hoping that N. F. Davis gets into the finals, for the Duluthian has so far shown some very clever tennis.

MARINE NEWS

LAKE TRAVEL INCREASING

Anchor Line Reports Doubling of Passenger Fare Receipts.

Many People Are Turned Away By the Boat Lines.

That the passenger business on the Great Lakes is an increasing business is emphasised by the statements coming from officials of transportation companies, and also by the fact that those now doing business are planning more boats.

The report comes from Buffalo quoting an official of the Anchor Line in which he is said to have stated that the receipts of the company have increased over 100 per cent this year over those of last year. When asked whether the burning of the North West did not have some bearing upon the increase, he stated that he did not believe so, because there was more business to be handled this year than ever before and that large numbers were turned away. Also he said, many who had planned on going on the lakes, abandoned the trip because of the destruction of that boat.

Other companies make reports similar to this, and claim that the business has been heavier than expected at the opening of the season. The intense heat of the East and South has driven the people to the lakes, where they can get cooled off. Moreover, the people have become fond of riding on the lakes, and many are taking the same ride every year.

The Octorara of the Anchor Line arrived in the port this morning with 800 passengers from Buffalo, and will leave tomorrow evening. The Huronic of the Northern Navigation company, and the Minnesota of the Chicago & Duluth Transportation company left last evening each having about 300. They arrived in the afternoon, and had capacity loads. The Lakeland of the Port Huron & Duluth Steamship company, will leave this evening with about 175 passengers, having arrived yesterday morning with about the same number.

QUICK WORK SAVES LIFE

Master of Duluth Hurls Life Preserver to Struggling Swimmer.

By the quick action of Capt. S. R. Jones, master of the steamer Duluth, of the Western Transit company, and his crew, a life was saved on Lake Erie on Sunday morning. The accident almost caused the grounding of the Duluth in the shallow lake.

A member of the crew of the City of Ottawa, a Canadian passenger steamer, which was traveling immediately ahead of the Duluth, was lowered over the side to clean out the ash pump. While so engaged the man fell through the ropes which held him. The passengers on the boat were frightened, and immediately the crew began the work of rescue, but the master of the Duluth and his crew were quicker to act, and Capt. Jones hurled a life preserver to the man, which landed about two feet from him. The life boat was then lowered and the crew soon reached him.

The Duluth by this time had passed the man, and had to turn around to pick up its life boat. In so doing she almost ran aground. The passengers and crew of the Ottawa cheered the master of the Duluth and his crew in the work of rescuing the man.

Hanna of the Mitchell fleet, which has been tied up at the Ripley dock since the close of navigation in 1910, will be placed in commission next week. The boat is now being overhauled by the crew. The scarcity of cargoes is the reason for the long idleness.

Falling Whaleboat Upsets Boat in Which Men Were Rowing.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.) — Albert Hollopa, John Laplant and Robert Dolley, members of the state naval reserves aboard the Yantic, escaped drowning by the bravery of Mate Alfred Ohels, a member of the United States navy.

A heavy yawl-boat was being hoisted from the water to the ship when the riggings gave way, letting the boat fall and striking the boat in which the three men were rowing. The men were thrown into the water and owing to the injuries they had received were unable to help themselves.

Ohels, seeing their danger, jumped in and succeeded in getting a line about the men so that they could be hauled aboard.

All three are receiving treatment in the local hospital.

Owing to the injury to the rigging, the Yantic has been unable to sail for Houghton, but expects to get away this evening.

The steamer North Wind of the Mutual Transit company, which is expected to leave Buffalo tomorrow, will start on her twelfth round trip. She arrived in Buffalo on Tuesday, completing her eleventh trip of this season. This is considered a remarkable business by one vessel. The Northern Queen of the same company is on her way to Duluth now and when she arrives will have finished her tenth round trip. The St. Paul of the Mutual company has made thirteen round trips, but only one to Duluth. She left this port yesterday morning on her first round trip to the Head of the Lakes this season. THE MARKET IS ERRATIC

Values Bulge, Then Drop and Rally, Closing on Yesterday's Levels.

Crop News From Canada Good—Reports From Northwest Conflicting.

Duluth Board of Trade, Aug. 16.—Wheat was nervous today. There was heavy selling on the early bulge and toward the close eleventh hour shorts covered freely on the decline. Reports of exports of red winter wheat helped values to firm at the close.

September wheat was unchanged. December advanced ⅛c. Durum lost ¼c., oats closed unchanged and rye gained ½c. Barley was unchanged. Cash wheat was 1c over September. Corn gained ⅜c.

Linseed was fairly active. September gained 3c, October and November were unchanged.

The wheat market had a weak undertone on account of profit taking from longs who got in the market some time ago and who delayed in getting out around the top. Crop news generally was bullish but the market lacked support. Efforts were made to put prices up but on the bulge there was heavy selling. Hedging sales from the mills were fairly heavy and contributed to the weakness.

The bullish situation was emphasized by reports comparing this season with that of 1904. It was said that farmers in Western North Dakota are cutting wheat that has not ripened. Estimated yields from that state are being cut down by people who have been traveling over North Dakota. The bulls think the green condition of wheat in many localities is deceiving and that the actual damage will be prominent after harvest.

Samples of wheat received here from Southern and Central Minnesota indicate that the quality is extremely poor. These samples are from territory that was affected by black rust. The Eastern milling demand is dead.

Reports from Eastern North Dakota that rust did not appear to have hurt wheat in that locality comprised one of the factors which helped put wheat downward. Reports from Canada said the wheat has been ripening fast and that considerable grain has been cut. Reports from Canada are generally favorable.

The foreign markets opened strong but gradually declined. The outlook in Russia is more favorable and that country is beginning to offer wheat fairly freely indicating that the drouth damage was not as severe as some people predicted. The world's visible supply last week increased 382,000 bu.

Broomhall cabled from Liverpool: The weakness in America was offset here by large outside buying and the market opened with a steady undertone and prices unchanged to ⅜d lower. Following the opening there was a sharp advance, prices gaining ⅜d to ½d on the strength in Mark Lane market and light arrivals due to the strike situation. During the morning, prices declined from the extreme high on a cable from our agent reporting partial rains in India where needed and a more cheerful outlook in Russia with Russian offers on a more liberal scale. The market on the whole was extremely nervous with the undertone firm, the situation being influenced by the strike situation which has assumed an alarming proportion. At 1:30 p. m. prices were ⅜d lower for October and ⅛d higher for December, based from yesterday's.

Corn opened steady and unchanged and later advanced to ⅛d in sympathy with America yesterday and the firmness in wheat.

CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Prices Work Higher During the First Hour.

Chicago, Aug. 16.—Wheat prices worked higher during the first hour of trading today on a demand from shorts, but the trade generally was small. Liverpool was higher and there were rumors fo some foreign demand which were bullish factors. September opened ⅜c to ½c higher at 89⅝c to 89½c and sold to 89¾c.

Grasshoppers were reported in Kansas and Illinois. The close was quiet and steady, September a shade over yesterday at 89⅛@89¼c.

The corn belt was reported dry and hot, and damage claims from the Southren and Southwestern part of the belt influenced a fair demand from commission houses. The cash demand yesterday was good and the sample market firm. September opened ¼@¼c to ⅜@½c up at 64⅝c to 64⅝c. Later sales were made at 64¼@64⅝c.

The close was firm with September ¼@⅜c higher at 64½c.

The oats market was quiet but steady, local traders buying on the corn strength. September opened ¼c up at 41⅝c, but declined to 41¼c later.

Light offerings and some commission house buying held provisions steady. January pork opened 7½c up at $16.30; September lard, 5c higher and September ribs unchanged.

MINNEAPOLIS MARKET.

Lack of Support Brings Decline After Early Buoyancy.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 16. — The wheat market was very erratic today. Early the tendency was to advance, but lack of support caused a decline late. Rains last night in the Northwest were unfavorable. September closed unchanged from yesterday to ⅛c higher; December unchanged to ⅛c higher and May unchanged to ⅛c lower. Local elevator stocks of wheat decreased 300,000 bu for four days. Minneapolis today received 112 cars of wheat against 283 a year ago; Duluth 42 against 93 and Winnipeg 87 against 43.

September opened $1.00 to 99¾c, high $1.00⅝, low 99¼c, closed 99½c; December opened $1.01¼ to $1.01, high 1.01⅝@$1.01¾, low $1.00¾, closed 1.00-$1.00⅝; May opened $1.05½, high $1.05½, low 1.04⅜@$1.04½, closed 1.04⅝@$1.04½.

New York, Aug. 16.—The cotton market opened steady at a decline of one point to an advance of one point. There was a big business on the call, but sellers seemed rather the more aggressive and following private reports of showers in Texas, active months broke to a net loss of 9@12 points. Liverpool was better than due early, but declined sharply toward the hour of the local opening, with the later cables 9½ to 10 points lower. Private crop accounts received early were of rather bullish average, indicating rapid deterioration in Southwestern prospects, but appeared to be offset by the reports of lower temperatures and showers.

Futures closed very steady; bids: August, 12.21; September, 11.28; October, 11.25; November, 11.24; December, 11.30; January, 11.25; March, 11.33; May, 11.42; July, 11.43.

Grain Grading Exhibit.

All over the United States Minnesota grades of wheat are recognized as the standard. Managers of the state fair board believe that the people of the state should not only know this, but should know why they are the standard and how Minnesota grades are determined.

To give every one the opportunity of learning this valuable lesson Supt. C. P. Craig of the agricultural department has arranged for a grain grading exhibit This feature will be put on by the state grain inspection department. It will include a demonstration of all the processes that are actually used in grading Minnesota grain and everything will be done as in the practical work. Each process will be explained by competent inspectors of the department.

By a visit to this exhibit in the agricultural department the farmer can learn just how to grade his own grain. He will be shown just what makes a deterioration in the grade of his wheat, oats and barley and will get information that will be invaluable when preparing his grain for the market.

HEAVY CLOSE FOR STOCKS

Tendency to Improve Is Shown in the Last Hour.

New York, Aug. 16.—A heavy tone developed in the stock market at the opening. Canadian Pacific which was off over two points in London declined 4 points here, with a loss of 1⅝ in Northern Pacific, and one point losses in Reading, Amalgamated Copper and Union Pacific; Texas company declined 2. The balance of the list showed marked declines with practically no gains.

The selling decreased somewhat soon after the opening, but prices continued to decline. The 6 point loss in Canadian Pacific resulted from reports of adverse crop conditions in Canada. There was no news to account for the further liquidation in the Harrimans. Losses other than those recorded at the opening ran from a point or more in the active group to four in Rock Island preferred and 5 in United States Pipe preferred.

The market was again attacked in the second hour Union Pacific being once more the weakest feature. On the floor of the exchange various rumors concerning that stock were in circulation. One of these was that the Harriman estate had long since disposed of the greater part of its holdings. The rumor received no little credence, although impossible of verification in official quarters. Union Pacific had fallen to a new low record with a loss of 4 points by midday, and lower levels for the present movements were also recorded by Southern Pacific, Canadian Pacific, Lehigh Valley and Amalgamated Copper. United States Steel and many standard stocks were within small fractions of that level. Delaware, Lackawanna & Western fell 10 points and Texas company 8. Bonds were easy.

The market closed heavy. The list evinced some tendency to improve in the last hour, Canadian Pacific, Union Pacific and Reading rallying from 1¾ to 2 points. The selling seemed to have exhausted itself at this time, but the undertone continued hesitating. Semi-official denial that the Harriman estate had sold its holdings was a helpful factor in the rally.

MUST LOOK INTO RECENT FIGHT

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 16.—That the prize fighting which is said to have been conducted in the vicinity of Duluth recently must be investigated, and investigated thoroughly at once, is the substance of a letter Governor Eberhart sent to John R. Meining, sheriff of St. Louis county, this morning.

COTTON BULLS' DOWNFALL.

Many Men Have Vainly Tried to Corner the Market.

Various big bulls have dominated the cotton market for the last ten years, says the New York Press. Conditions have favored them nearly every season. They have manipulated prices and had manufacturers almost at their mercy. They engineered corners and squeezes, tied up immense stocks of raw material and played hob with the textile industry. Incidentally the whole body of the people has had to pay the bill, for the price of cotton goods has increased 100 per cent or more. There were many indications that the reign of the cotton bulls would be continued through this year. On acount of the high prices for raw cotton in recent years the acreage planted this season was immense—the biggest on record. The crop got a moderate start and then got various reverses. It rained too much in the Atlantic part of the cotton belt, and it did not rain at all in Texas, where nearly one-third of the crop is grown. The storehouses of the world were bare of cotton, and a short crop meant disaster. Speculative bulls fatten on disaster, and there was much rejoicing in their ranks. Every day added to the strength and security of their position until about six weeks ago. Then there was one of those reverses that come about once in a generation in the cotton country. It sprinkled in the southwest. Next it showered. Later on it rained. The parched earth drank up the moisture and it was grateful, but the rain only sank a short distance into the soil. Next day it rained some more, and the day after it rained again. There have been fine, generous, glorious rains at intervals since. All that was lost or seemingly lost in the cultivation and development of the crop was recovered and more, too. Cotton flourished famously.

While it rained in Texas it cleared in the Atlantic states. The fields dried out, the weeds were checked and the plant grew gloriously. So it has continued ever since. Within a month or six weeks there has been such a marvelous change that from threatened disaster now the prospect is magnificent. Conditions are ideal. The greatest cotton crop the world ever has known is assured. With this change in conditions the prices of spots and futures have declined rapidly. Within a month the shrinkage has been 175 pounds—nearly $9 a bale from the top price. And with the decline there has been more dethroning of cotton kings than the market has seen in a score of years.

The cotton crop this year is estimated conservatively at between 14,000,000 and 15,000,000 bales—some say 16,000,000. Taking the lower estimate, and figuring on the basis of 11½ cents a pound, this means that the value of the cotton crop this year will amount to about $850,000,000. The value of the by-products—cotton seed, linters, etc.—will reach $175,000,000 more. The astounding total is more than a billion dollars. The goods that will be manufactured from this year's cotton crop will be worth more than $3,000,000,000.

This huge crop is of immense importance not only to the United States, but to all the world. It means that the cotton spinners here and abroad will be retarded no longer by the stringency that has prevailed so long. It means that the financial equilibrium of the country will be restored. Cotton sells for gold. Our exports of cotton are what maintain our supremacy and a favorable balance of trade with Europe. Cotton diffuses more actual money than, perhaps, any other product of the earth. This unprecedented crop means a great deal to the railroads, the merchants and the manufacturers, South and North. It means the larger buying of commodities. Its ultimate effect means the free interchange of many billions of dollars in all the markets of the world.

Among the most picturesque of the figures that have dominated the cotton market for so long, but are now in eclipse is Eugene G. Scales. He came from North Texas. He made and lost two fortunes before he piled up his present one. Twice before he has been a a millionaire, and twice before he has been flat broke. In 1908 he was practically penniless, with the exception of a heavily mortgaged ranch near San Antonio, Tex., and a diamond stud worth about $400. He pawned this stud in Dallas for $250 in 1908. After paying a few bills and his railroad fare to Shreveport, La., he had a cash capital of $200. With this sum he started in to play the wheat market in the office of his cousin, S. G. Harmon. Scales was a friend of Patten, the one-time wheat king, who was running a deal in May wheat then, and the latter helped him with information that enabled him to run his $200 into about twenty times that much in a few days. Then cotton broke to 8¼ cents, and Scales turned his attention to that commodity. He bought and bought and bought. The market advanced almost uninterruptedly during the winter of 1908-9, and Scales went to New Orleans and began operating from there on an extensive scale. Later he came to New York with a line of about 75,000 bales. He kept on buying as the market advanced. The first of this year he was credited with having amassed more than $6,000,000 in paper profits and in contracts that he had cashed in. He was nipped in the big break in January, which halted his progress momentarily. The recent decline is said to have caught him for between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000.

Scales has been in the position at various times where the big spinners of the East have gone to him and made arrangements by which they might be permitted to get cotton at a price that would enable them to keep them from shutting down their mills. His domination of the market was so absolute that he could put the screws on them and make them beg for mercy. He has had his headquarters at the Waldorf-Astoria since coming to New York.

Another big speculator who has lost heavily of late is Col. R. M. Thompson, sometimes known as the "Nickel King," because he practically controls the nickel market of the world. Although known as "Colonel," he is a graduate of Annapolis. Thompson is one of the most secretive and mysterious beings on earth. He is one of the richest men in the world, and one of the biggest of speculators. His income is reckoned at $6,000,000 a year. Yet very few persons know anything at all about him. He is a Wall street plunger of the real plunger type, and the most picturesque of all. He has manipulated or participated in the manipulation of the cotton market from his yacht in the Indian ocean and in the Southern seas, from a hotel in Egypt, from a watering place in Germany, from a chalet in the Alps, from a shooting lodge in the Black forest, and from various places in Asia and Australia. He spends his life in travel, yet he keeps in active touch with the world's affairs. The government has a pretty fair idea of Col. Thompson's activities, for he was one of the men indicted for the cotton corner of a few years ago.

Thompson gave a water party a few years ago that was unique. He chartered the ocean steamer Manitoba and transformed her into a floating hotel. Then he invited a party of friends around the world. Thompson has been caught for $2,000,000 to $3,000,000 in the decline in cotton recently, but it is probable that he is not giving the matter much thought. He is so extraordinary rich that the loss of a few millions is of little consequence.

Col. W. P. Brown and Frank Hayne are two more important figures in the little group that have been dominating cotton, but do so no longer. They have been the longest in the game and have been in the center of the stage the most. Brown is a big, black-mustached Southerner, of florid appearance and rather lively mien. Hayne is smaller, quieter and more thoughtful. There are those who think that in the many campaigns in which Brown and Hayne have been engaged Hayne has done the thinking and Brown the spectacular work. At any rate, they, too, were caught by the sudden change in the aspect of the cotton crop. The rains have washed away a lot of their profits and forced them into at least temporary obscurity.

Mike Thomas is another big speculator who has made and lost two or three fair-sized fortunes. He has made considerable money the last year—a million or two—but he was shaken out with the rest of the bulls in the recent great decline in prices. Another man who played quite a part in the manipulation of cotton was the Rothschild who was instrumental in having a prominent New York firm of cotton brokers ruled off the exchange not long ago for not carrying out his orders. He, too, made a good deal of money when the bull group was in control of the cotton market, but, like all the rest, saw a good deal of it vanish when the news of the bumper crop came after years of shortage.

Even James A. Patten, who made millions in wheat and was credited as being one of the few men of recent times whose judgment was not impaired by successes so that he knew when to unload, also was caught napping like all the rest. He appeared in New York a little more than a year ago and got into the cotton market, despite the resolution that he once expressed of going into retirement in Colorado when he got $6,000,000 to the good.

MAKING THE REVOLVER SAFE.

The first hammerless revolver was of American origin and of recent date. The chief ends gained were the elimination of danger of an explosion caused by striking the hammer, as from a fall, and in taking the projecting thumb piece away that it might not become caught in the withdrawal of the weapon from the pocket.

A still later device has made it impossible to explode the hammerless revolver unless it shall be clasped by the hand at the moment the trigger is pulled for firing. The mere "breaking" of one of these modern weapons, as necessary for loading, insure through the shell ejector the absolute safety that comes of certain emptiness of the cylinder.

The first automatic weapon for pocket or holster use was of German origin, says Fur News. It was heavy, cumbersome and devoid of all artistic lines. Even at the present time it carries many imperfections of line and balance, but in the smaller sizes for pocket use the doing away with the obtruding cylinder has made it compact for the purpose of concealment. Also it has added three more cartridges to the chamber than is possible for the pocket size, five-shot revolver.

The chamber of this automatic pistol is inserted with its eight cartridges into the lower end of the butt. A sliding, forced movement of the barrel mechanism gives the user a full notice that it is loaded. A safety catch makes it safe until the catch is released by thumb pressure. Thereafter from the first shot it becomes the most dangerous weapon ever made.

Using the high explosive cartridges the recoil from the shot is taken up in cocking the weapon automatically, ejecting the empty shell and forcing the next cartridge into place ready for the next pull of the trigger. There is no sense of recoil to the hand holding the gun. A light revolver may jump three to six inches from a shot; the automatic pistol holds it quite level shot after shot until the magazine is empty.

To the untutored or careless user this automatic weapon is one of the most dangerous of arms to himself or bystander in that unless a careful examination be made the user never knows for a certainty if it is empty. To the weapon trained man this fact in itself makes always for its safety in that its terrible muzzle never is pointed in any other than a safe direction. Like the hammerless revolver it cannot be fired save when clasped in the hand and the trigger pulled.

PAVING HEARING IS FEATURED MAINLY BY SERIES OF DENIALS

Contractors, Officials and Inspectors All Disavow Any Knowledge of Bribery.

Patterson Assumes Responsibility for Twenty-third Avenue Mixup.

Steele Also Got Extras—Cement in Reservoir Up to Grade.

Aside from the declaration of A. G. Osman that "Paddy" McDonnell offered him $1,000 not to bid on the Fourth street job previous to a similar offer to Hugh Steele, the present sessions of the council committee which is investigating the "paving scandal" have been featured with a steady succession of denials of bribery or undue influence of any kind in the award or performance of city contracts.

Contractors of high standing, present city officials, inspectors and former employes of the city have declared specifically that they have no knowledge of any money being used in any manner. Not a single city official has been specifically charged with accepting cash to favor any contractor, although when the hearing was first started it was asserted that McDonnell put them under obligations to him by entertainments and lavish expenditures of cash. This has been denied by all officials and employes thus far put on the stand.

Patterson Takes Responsibility.

In connection with questions along this line, the committee has been delving into various city improvements. This morning R. E. Patterson, a former member of the board of public works, stated that he assumed the responsibility of telling MacDonnell to go ahead with the repairs to Twenty-third avenue east, which cost between $4,000 and $6,000. He stated that he acted upon the assumption that there was a guarantee on the work, but had made no investigation, either of that or of the probable cost. This is the job which was advertised for bids after the work had been completed.

NOVICE ELOPES FROM CONVENT

Marries Doctor Who Wooed Her During "Professional" Visits.

Marshall, Mo., Aug. 17.—A month to a day before she would have taken the veil and become a nun, Roman Romine, 18 years old, Tuesday night climbed over the high wall of the Notre Dame convent here and joined Dr. Becker D. Baldwin of Elkhart, Neb. The couple were married yesterday in Omaha.

Sixty days ago Baldwin, who was visiting in Marshall, was called to attend her for a slight indisposition. Under the guise of professional visits he carried on the courtship and the plans for the elopement.

MINISTER WOULD BE CINCINNATI'S MAYOR

REV. DR. ROBERT WATSON.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Aug. 17.—Cincinnati is to see a minister at the head of municipal ticket this fall. Rev. Dr. Robert Watson is going to have himself nominated on an independent ticket. The Democratic candidate will be Henry Hunt, who conducted the recent prosecution of Boss Cox. Louis Schwab, the present mayor, will seek re-election on the Republican ticket. The Democrats say Watson will divide the anti-Cox men and insure the election of Schwab, who is a follower of the Republican boss.

TAFT FIRM FOR VETO

Message Rejecting Schedule K Revision Is Discussed.

Washington, Aug. 17.—Following a special meeting of the cabinet today—the fourth held this week—the last remaining doubt of President Taft's attitude toward the wool bill was swept away. It was stated that Mr. Taft's veto message might go to the house late today.

One or two cabinet officers, who heretofore had held the opinion that it might be wiser for the president to sign the wool bill, were said to have been entirely won over to Mr. Taft's views at today's session, where his message was read and discussed.

The wool bill reached the White House shortly before noon.

Ax For all Tariff Bills.

It became known after the meeting that the president would not only wield the ax on the wool bill but that the cotton bill, with the proposed amendment revising the iron and steel schedules and the farmers' free list bill would suffer the same fate.

It was indicated that any tariff revision bill at this session would be vetoed.

The president, it was said, would go before the country in his messages and in speeches on his Western trip this fall and argue against what he would characterize as an unnecessary upsetting of business through revision of the tariff not based on information from the tariff board.

WILEY SAYS RULING AGAINST SYRUP WAS MADE OVER HIS HEAD

Decision Approved By Wilson Himself Suddenly Reversed.

Pure Food Expert Again Testifies Before House Committee.

Washington, Aug. 17.—Dr. H. W. Wiley, the pure food expert, added another sensation to the house inquiry into agricultural department affairs today when he declared that a ruling adverse to the so-called "corn syrup manufacturing interests," promulgated by the bureau of chemistry, the food and drug inspection board and Secretary Wilson himself, had suddenly been changed into a favorable opinion without being referred to him or his associates.

Made Subject to Dunlap.

Upon resuming the witness stand today Dr. Wiley placed in evidence the letter written by Secretary Wilson April 24, 1907, notifying him of the appointment of Dr. F. L. Dunlap, as associate chemist. This is the letter which Dr. Wiley interpreted yesterday as giving Dr. Dunlap authority greater than his own.

Secretary Wilson's letter directed Dr. Wiley to extend to Dr. Dunlap all facilities for examining the correspondence of the bureau of chemistry, for "overlooking all experiments," and for making whatever independent investigations he cared to make.

Secretary Wilson announced in the letter that he had decided to create the board of food and drug inspection; and that he would "look to you (Dr. Wiley) for the facts and to Mr. McCabe for the law."

Never Told of Charges.

Returning to Dr. Wiley's testimony that he had never been informed of the exact charges made against him before the personnel board, Representative Floyd of Arkansas asked if he had received any statements from the per-

EDMUND ROSTAND IS HURT BY AUTO

Poet and Dramatist Seriously Injured When Car Overturns on Him.

Biarritz, France, Aug. 17.—Edmund Rostand, poet and dramatist, was the victim of a serious automobile accident near here yesterday, and lies in his villa at Cambo Les Bains surrounded by physicians who as yet have been unable to determine what the outcome of his injuries will be. He is suffering from serious contusions of the head and body, and it is feared he is injured internally.

M. Rostand was motoring from Cambo Les Bains to St. Jean de Luz, accompanied by his chauffeur and a mechanic, when his machine skidded on a curve in the road, leaped up in the air, turned over and fell to the bottom of a 15-foot ditch, pinning the poet beneath it.

CANADIAN NORTHERN WILL BUILD LAKE VESSELS

Duluth Will Be Terminus of Railroad and Vessel Lines.

With the passing of reciprocity will come a bitter struggle between the Canadian railroads and the American roads for freight business, with the outcome that the Mackenzie & Mann company will build a large lake fleet to handle its business, most of which is to pass through Duluth.

A report on good authority comes from Canada that this company already has plans for the construction of package freighters, ore boats and passenger vessels to handle the traffic on the lakes, all of which will ply from Duluth. The company now has several boats, none of which, however, come to this city.

It is understood that Sir William Mackenzie has changed his attitude on the reciprocity question. About six months ago he was strongly opposed to it, and used his influence against it, but now, while he has not declared himself in favor of it, he is not working against it, but maintains that he is "on the fence."

And since this change has come over him regarding the issue that has confronted the two nations for a long time, the report comes out that the lake fleet is to be built. It was previously stated that if the reciprocity question went through the American roads would have the better of the Canadian lines on the long haul, which would be made through Duluth and the Twin Cities eastward, but as the Canadian Northern will have terminals in Duluth it can handle eastbound freight and grain on its own steamers, and thus compete with the strongest American roads.

Besides building lake steamers, it is rumored that the company will construct several ocean liners, which will handle the grain and freight for foreign countries. The company also has ocean steamers now, some of which are said to compare favorably with some of the best now sailing. While the boats are not all under the name of the Mackenzie & Mann company, they belong to this company or its subsidiaries.

The passenger boats will be of the type of those now sailing the lakes and will carry from 300 to 400 passengers.

ROOSEVELT DEFENDS HIS ACTION IN STEEL AFFAIR

Writes Concerning His Appearance Before House Committee.

New York, Aug. 17.—Ex-President Roosevelt has an article on "The Steel Corporation and the Panic of 1907" in the Outlook appearing today. Mr. Roosevelt discusses his recent appearance before the congressional committee investigating the Steel corporation, repeating the written statement he then presented and dealing with some of the lines of inquiry and his responses. He says:

"On Saturday, Aug. 5, in compliance with the request of the chairman of the congressional committee investigating the absorption of the Tennessee Coal & Iron company by the Steel corporation, I appeared before that body. I had nothing new to which to testify. There was not a fact of the slightest importance or of the slightest bearing upon my action which was not already known, and which had not been known from the time I acted; and incidentally I may mention that this is also true as regards Panama, the dealings of my administration with the Sugar trust or any other

TENER TAKES UP COATESVILLE CASE

Pennsylvania Governor Is Not Satisfied—Three Arrests Made.

Coatesville, Pa., Aug. 17.—No more arrests will be made in connection with the lynching here last Sunday night until after the conference between Governor Tener and District Attorney Gawthrop of Chester county. The governor is said to be dissatisfied with the progress made so far by the Chester county authorities and the district attorney was late last night summoned to Harrisburg. The governor has given up his vacation and will stay in the state until he is satisfied that the Chester county authorities are vigorously prosecuting their investigation into Sunday night's affair.

Boy Among Prisoners.

Three persons arrested late yesterday afternoon charged with murder in connection with the lynching are in jail at West Chester, the county seat, and will have a hearing in a few days. The prisoners are Joseph Schofield, 40 years old; Norman Price, 20 years old, and George Stahl, 16 years old. Some of the people of the town are indignant over the arrest of a 16-year-old boy when it is alleged the real leaders of the mob are still walking about Coatesville and are known to the police.

The funeral of Edgar Rice, the special policeman, took place today. A detail of state police kept the crowds from congregating near the Rice home and at the cemetery.

GENERAL STRIKE IS CALLED ON ALL BRITISH RAILWAYS

RESIGNS AS ATTORNEY GENERAL OF STATE

GEORGE T. SIMPSON.

SIMPSON GIVES UP JOB AS STATE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Says He Is Done With Public Life "for Good."

Lyndon Smith Will Succeed Him on Jan. 1 Next.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—With little ceremony and in the presence only of Executive Clerk Archie M. Hayes, Assistant Attorney General Lyndon A. Smith and two newspaper men, Attorney General George T. Simpson tendered his resignation to Governor Eberhart this morning, effective Jan. 1, 1912.

Immediately thereafter the governor tendered the office to Mr. Smith, and it was accepted.

This is the first time in the history of Minnesota that an attorney general has resigned from office.

Mr. Simpson prefferred the governor a letter setting forth in detail why he quit. In it he dweit on the fact that he was advancing in years, that he would leave the office poorer than when he came in, and that duty to his family prompted him to take up private practice. He will go to Minneapolis to become associated with R. J. Powell, a widely known corporation attorney who numbers among his clients the Sheol-Carpenter Lumber company and allied corporations.

For Monetary Reasons.

Mr. Simpson will take to the firm the business of several other Minnesota corporations which have agreed to place the whole or part of their business with the firm of Powell & Simpson. It is because of monetary inducements, possible through the partnership, that the attorney-general leaves the employ of the state.

In resigning from the office of attorney general, Mr. Simpson announced that he was through with politics forever—that he would never be a candidate for governor, nor for any other office within the gift of the people.

"I'm done with public life—through for good," he said after the "die" had been cast.

MEN ORDERED OUT AT ONCE

Asquith Makes Vain Effort to Avert Industrial War.

Day-long Conference at Board of Trade Is Fruitless.

Street Car Employes in Liverpool Are Called Out.

London, Aug. 17.—An industrial war has been declared and the employes on all the railway lines of the United Kingdom have been called out.

All day long conferences at the board of trade proved fruitless. The representatives of the union were immovable from their standpoint that the managers of the railroads had broken the letter and violated the spirit of the conciliation agreement.

"We have unanimously come to the conclusion," they told Sydney Buxton, president of the board of trade, "that the only way that now will be an effective road to peace is that the companies shall consent to meet us."

Rejected Asquith's Order.

At this point Premier Asquith intervened and offered to appoint immediately a royal commission which should investigate and report what amendments, if any, were desirable for the conciliation plan. Mr. Asquith made the same proposition to the railroad managers, adding the confident hope that the government might rely upon both sides to give all possible assistance to the proposed commission.

The representatives of the union refused the proffer of the government to appoint the commission. The railroad managers, on the contrary, consented to the plan.

The leaders in the Amalgamated Society of Railroad Servants this evening dispatched telegrams throughout the country calling on the men to cease work.

Time Limit Expired.

The time limit of twenty-four hours within which the railway men demanded that their employers agree to consider their grievances, expired at 8 o'clock this morn-

SCOTCH MOVE FOR HOME RULE

First Step Taken in Introduction of Bill in Parliament.

London, Aug. 17.—The desire for home rule in Scotland is assuming a more concrete form. As a first step, Sir Henry James Dalzell, a newspaper proprietor and member of parliament for Kirkalyburg, has introduced in the house of commons a bill to establish a legislature in Scotland to deal with purely Scottish affairs.

TOGO IS LAID UP BY INDIGESTION

Boston, Mass., Aug. 17.—An attack of acute indigestion, declared by his attendants to be slight, caused the cancellation of the program of entertainment in honor of Admiral Togo, the Japanese naval officer, here today. The proposed trip of the admiral to Provincetown to receive the courtesies of the United States fleet at that port was also abandoned.

Up Broadway in Auto.

New York, Aug. 17.—Admiral Togo bade New York good-bye for Boston late yesterday afternoon. Nearly a week spent in sight-seeing here left him rather fatigued and he kept to his room during the forenoon, but spent the greater portion of the afternoon at Governors Island as the guest of Maj. Gen. Frederick D. Grant, and concluded his stay with a four-mile automobile run up Broadway from the Battery to his hotel.

Broadway and rush hour crowds gave proper setting for the run. Preceded by four motor cycle policemen shrieking a brazen alarm, the admiral and his party in two automobiles stopped traffic, stilled by patrolmen without incident.

Swayed Cars Over Pavement.

To show the perfect control of the situation, Chauffeurs swung their cars from curb to curb at intervals as they sped over the thoroughfare. The little warrior was delighted. When the cars stopped at the hotel he invited the four motor cycle bluecoats to his room and personally thanked each one touching palms with all in a warm handshake.

REGATTA AT WEST DULUTH

Motor Boat Owners Are Planning Races for St. Louis Bay.

May Be Beginning of a West Duluth Motor Boat Club.

If the weather is clear and bright and the waves on St. Louis bay are not too choppy, West Duluth people will have an opportunity to witness the first of a series of motor boat races on the bay on Sunday, Aug. 27. Only West Duluth boats have been entered, as it is planned to make the races a local affair.

At an informal meeting of the motor boat enthusiasts held this week, it was decided that the matinee which has been planned would be the right step in the direction of organizing a permanent motor boat club at West Duluth. In the western suburb there are between twenty-five and fifty who own semi-speed craft and who are interested in the proposition.

Atle Swanson, a Central avenue druggist has been selected by the motor boat enthusiasts as temporary secretary and will receive entries for the races, which will be held a week from Sunday. Two classes of boats will compete, the 25-horse power and under and the 10-horse power and under. The start and finish will be in front of the Sixty-third avenue west bathing beach, where a large crowd can easily watch it. The race will be a twelve-mile run, three laps to a four-mile course. The boats will go down stream as far as the Virginia & Rainy Lake mill and in returning will go up the river as far as a point opposite the Ironton station.

In the 25-horse power class, there have already been six entries as follows: Merwin Murray's Splitrock; Olson Bros.' Dupont; Swanstrom Bros.' Gee Whiz; Harry Nelson's Goschen; Arthur Jacoby's Seemego, and the Sunkist owned by E. G. Kreidler and William Sullivan. The following have entered their boats in the second class, boats of the 10-horse power and under: John Mallska, Atle Swanson, M. L. Bailey, Moore Bros., Robert Jennings, A. E. Armstrong, Charles Dusling, Ed Ramstead, Andrew Carlson and others.

The races are expected to settle the much-disputed question as to who has the fastest boat in each of the classes. Nearly every one entered has declared that he is confident of winning and expects to capture the prizes. Two trophies will be donated, but the donors, as yet, have not been announced.

"CAPTAIN" MAGHAN RETURNS ON VISIT

George Maghan, assistant chief of the Eveleth fire department and former captain of No. 8 fire company of West Duluth, is spending a two weeks' vacation with old acquaintances in the western end of the city.

Mr. Maghan resigned from the local department last December to take up his new duties at Eveleth. In point of service he was, at the time of his resignation, one of the oldest men on the Duluth department, having served for twenty-three years and most of that time in West Duluth.

He was very popular with the "boys" at No. 8 while he was in charge of the department. Mr. Maghan says that he likes his new work at Eveleth. He formerly resided at 903 North Fifty-sixth avenue west.

DECISION SOON.

Judge Cant Will Hasten Judgment on Ramsey Street Extension.

While there are a number of lengthy matters which will require a large amount of work for their decision pending before Judge Cant in the district court, there will probably be a decision in the Ramsey street extension case some time next week.

Judge Cant stated this morning that owing to the necessity of a ruling on the case in the near future, because of the paving work now in progress on Grand avenue in West Duluth, he felt the need of an early decision, and would try to hand down a judgment in the near future.

The case involves the condemnation of certain property along the line of the proposed extension.

Election of Officers.

At the annual election of officers for the Asbury M. E. Sunday school held last evening in the church parlors, the following were selected to conduct the affairs of the school for the ensuing year: S. G. Wollan, superintendent; Albert Meldahl, assistant superintendent; Clarence Gilbert, secretary; Earl Donald, treasurer; Miss Elizabeth Buckbee, organist; Mrs. Ethel Meldahl, superintendent of primary department; Mrs. Louise Meldahl, superintendent of cradle roll department; Miss Eliza Remfrey, delegate to St. Louis county Sunday school convention at Eveleth.

PRESBYTERIANS BEAT METHODISTS.

In a five-inning contest, the Westminster Presbyterian church baseball team administered defeat to their old rivals, the Merritt Memorial Methodists, the feature being the hitting of the Calvinites. M. J. Murray was score keeper and Edward Holland and James Habert officiated as umpires.

The following was the lineup:

The Presbyterians since their victory have been challenged by the West Duluth Baptists and the Asbury Methodists. Both defies have been accepted and it is expected that the games will be played off next week.

West Duluth Briefs.

Rev. Arthur J. Hoag, a former pastor, will occupy the pulpit of the West Duluth Baptist church, Fifty-ninth avenue west and Grand avenue, this evening. Rev. Mr. Hoag is now associate pastor of the First Baptist church of St. Paul, and is spending a few days in the western end of the city as a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ashley.

Hurst, watch repairing, West Duluth.

The choir of the West Duluth Swedish Mission church will entertain at a concert this evening at the church, Fifty-ninth avenue west and Green street. Rev. T. Wallender, the new pastor of the Swedish Mission church of Superior, will be the principal speaker.

A lawn party was held last evening at the home of Miss Bessie McKinnon, 412 North Fifty-eighth avenue west. The evening was spent in games and music was furnished by the Jackson orchestra. The decorations consisted of Japanese lanterns. The favors were won by Miss Lillian Boreen, Gordon Hutch, Carl Carlson, William Anderson, Arthur Myres and Miss Mabel Clark.

The Fairmont-Tiger Athletic club entertained last evening at the first of a series of weekly dances at Wade's hall, Central avenue and Ramsey street. The affair was well attended. The hall was prettily decorated for the occasion.

HARVESTERS ARE NEEDED

There is a pressing need for harvesters in Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan, Can. Farmers from all over Western Canada are complaining of a shortage of labor in handling the bumper crop which is now ready for cutting.

As a result they have appealed to the Canadian Northern and other roads in the district for aid and today W. Stapleton of Saskatoon, Sask., and J. H. McKinnon, commercial agent, St. Paul, representatives of the Canadian Northern, are in Duluth trying to get some of the idle labor started for the Canadian wheat fields.

The experts who have looked over the Canadian wheat country have estimated a total of 217,000,000 bushels for the three provinces, a record crop. Ordinarily the Canadians have depended on labor from the eastern part of the dominion, but the crop this year will be too large to handle by Canadian labor alone. During the last week the railroads have sent 20,000 men into Manitoba, where cutting has already begun and the Canadian Northern men here today estimated that 30,000 more will be needed before a sufficient force is on hand to handle the immense crop. Of these it is thought that 20,000 can be enlisted from Eastern Canada leaving 10,000 to be secured from along the American border.

The Manitoba farmers started cutting this week, and it is estimated that about half the crop in that province is cut. Cutting in Saskatchewan and Alberta will commence next week. The Canadian Northern has agents out all through the wheat country getting reports on the number of men needed, and while they do not guarantee work to any of the laborers they have great confidence in their estimates of the number of laborers that are needed by the wheat growers of the provinces.

The road is giving a $5 rate from Duluth to Winnipeg and 1 cent per mile to all points in the wheat country out of Winnipeg. Work can at present be secured anywhere from 50 to 800 miles out of Winnipeg. The wages which are being paid throughout the belt are $3 and over, with board for common laborers and $5 to $6 for engineers and the more skilled labor in the harvest fields. It is expected that the work will last between two and three months, and in many instances up to snow time.

SKELETONS OF ELEVEN BUILDINGS GOING UP

Two Concrete Plants in Operation and 750 Men Employed.

Steel construction on the $25,000,000 steel plant now being erected near New Duluth, is being rushed by the American Bridge company which has the contract for the erection of the superstructure, and it is stated by the officials that all the steel for eleven of the buildings will be up before Jan. 1.

It was planned to have the steel work up several weeks before this but delays of various kinds at the grounds stopped the work for some time. Already nearly 3,000 tons of steel is on the ground, much of which is already erected. It is estimated that about 17,000 tons are needed.

The buildings for which steel is expected to be up, are the open hearth furnaces, the open hearth pouring and charging building, the merchants' mill, the mixer building, the stockhouse, the pit furnace, the blooming mill building, the blooming mill engine house, the gas producer building for the reheating furnace, the reheating furnace building, and the billet storage building.

As the steel structures are being erected, concrete blocks for the walls will be added, and the structures inclosed almost as fast as the superstructure is put up. The work is being rushed as rapidly as possible with the view of having the initial plant of what will be one of the largest steel plants in the world, ready to turn out steel by July 1, 1913.

Two Concrete Plants.

The construction company has two large concrete plants in operation now, one turning out the concrete in bulk form for the foundation, and the other making blocks of various sizes and shapes for the buildings. The plant which makes the bulk form is turning out concrete at the rate of one cubic yard per minute, and it is being used as fast as it is made, on the many foundations that are being put in. These foundations are enormous in size, being put from fifty to sixty feet into the ground, and re-enforced with wires and steel. The company has been fortunate in that it has been able to secure its own sand and gravel for the concrete on the ground, and it is saved the trouble and expense of removing the earth, and hauling to the site sand and gravel from other places.

The concrete block machines are turning out thousands of blocks daily, while men working by hand are making the higher class of concrete blocks. Many hundred thousands of blocks are on the ground ready for the construction of the buildings as soon as the steel superstructure has been erected.

Men are already on the scene from Chicago to put up the seven high concrete smoke stacks, and operations on these are expected to be started within a day or two. There is one smoke stack up already, this one having been built last winter when the machine shop and electrical plant were erected.

The work on the building of a pumping station and the laying of mains from the river to the plant will be started within a few weeks. The company is going to have its own water system, believing that it will not only be more convenient but also more economical. The pumping station will be built by the American Bridge company.

The Minnesota Steel company has about 500 men at work on both day and night crews, while the American Bridge company is employing about 250, and is calling for more. Many skilled men are expected daily from Chicago.

RAILROADS

LINE NEARLY COMPLETED

Only Eight Miles of Rails to Be Laid on Canadian Northern.

Road Will Be Ready for Passenger Trains By Nov. 1.

Only about eight miles of rails are now needed to connect Duluth with Winnipeg over the Duluth, Winnipeg & Pacific railroad, the subsidiary road of the Canadian Pacific, this distance lying between Shortline park and Duluth.

The rails between Shortline park and Virginia have been laid, although there is considerable work to be done on this road. It is in condition, however, for the operation of work trains, the first of these passing over the road yesterday.

All that remains to perfect the road between Shirtline park and Virginia is ballasting work, and the fixing up of two small sink holes. This work will require a few weeks, but when finished it will leave the track in first-class order. The company have experienced the most difficult task in overcoming the many sink holes between these two points, but has filled them all in with the exception of the two small ones mentioned.

H. T. Hazen, chief engineer of the Canadian Northern, stated this morning that the road between Duluth and Virginia would be ready for the first passenger train on Nov. 1, and that the company would not have to rush much to bring this about. The rails will be laid between Shortline park and Duluth before the last of this month, with the exception of the places over streets in West Duluth, where steel bridges will be erected. Work will be started on the steel bridges in about one month, and it is not expected it will require much time in putting them up, and at the same time the rails will be connected.

No decision has yet been made as to where the new West Duluth station will be, but the company will not enter into any negotiations with the Northern Pacific with the view of constructing a union station, as the one to be used by the Canadian road will be elevated about twenty-six feet.

Mr. Hazen will leave this evening for Port Arthur, where he will spend a week or more attending to the building operations there.

AMERICAN ROADS ARE MORE LIBERAL

The controversy between the railroads and commercial interests relative to the size of trunks has led a Chicago official to declare that in their baggage requirements American roads are the most liberal in the world, not only in its handling, but the amount carried without charge.

He has prepared a table which may be used in the event of the trunk people carrying their grievance to the interstate commission, the idea being that it will serve to demonstrate that in all the matter of "free allowances" there are decided differences as to what is required by some states, compared with what the roads voluntarily grant.

The differences in the various states are: Alabama, no amount; Arizona, no amount; Arkansas, 150 pounds; California, 100 pounds; Colorado, no law; Connecticut, no law; Delaware, no law; Florida, no advice; Georgia, 150 pounds; Idaho, no law; Illinois, 100 pounds; Indiana, 150 pounds; Iowa, 150 pounds; Kansas, 150 pounds; Kentucky, no law; Louisiana, 150 pounds; Maine, no law; Maryland, no law; Massachusetts, no law; Michigan, 150 pounds; Minnesota, 150 pounds; Mississippi, 150 pounds; Missouri, 150 pounds; Montana, no law; New Mexico, no amount; Nebraska, 200 pounds; Nevada, no law; New Hampshire, reasonable; New Jersey, no law; New York, 150 pounds; North Carolina, 200 pounds; North Dakota, 100 pounds; Ohio, no law; Oklahoma, 100 pounds; Oregon, no advice; Pennsylvania, 80 pounds; Rhode Island, 80 pounds; South Carolina, 200 pounds; South Dakota, 150 pounds; Tennessee, no law Texas, no advice; Utah, no law; Vermont, on amount; Virginia, no amount Washington, 150 pounds; West Virginia, 100 pounds; Wisconsin, no law, Wyoming, no law.

SENDING EMPTIES FOR GRAIN CROP.

The crops along the Great Northern railroad are in a very satisfactory condition, according to D. M. Philbin, general superintendent of the Great Northern. The crops this year in North Dakota, Mr. Philbin maintains, are good in comparison with those of the average for the past five years.

Both the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific have been sending out empty cars to the wheat fields to take care of the shipments of grain, a large amount of which will come to the Head of the Lakes. The shipments of coal to the Dakotas have been heavier, he states, this year than for the corresponding time last year, and from now on the roads will be active in the shipment of coal westward and of grain eastward.

SUPERIOR

PENITENTIARY TERM FOR NON-SUPPORT.

Non-support was made a penitentiary offense in Wisconsin by the last legislature and if William S. Seems, who was arrested at the instigation of Miss Florence Two, Superior's social worker and County Poor Agent Swan Hard, is found guilty of that charge, he will be the first to be convicted under the new law, which has just gone into effect.

Seems was up in police court this afternoon and while practically admitting the charge against him, he pleaded not guilty and was bound over to the present term of the superior court and sent to jail to await trial.

The penalty provided by the law is from one to five years in state's prison. Poor Agent Hard says that he has several other warrants which will be served and convictions will be secured if possible.

MAY BUILD CREMATORY.

The health and sanitation committee of the council has recommended the sale of some of the vacant parcels of city property, the proceeds to go towards the installation and maintenance of a city garbage crematory. The matter will be given consideration at the next meeting of the city fathers.

Britton-Gould.

A wedding of much interest to Superior society took place last evening at 9 o'clock, when Rev. F. L. Roberts of the First Methodist Episcopal church, united in marriage Miss Grace Virginia Britton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Britton of the Roosevelt terrace and William Gould, son of Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Gould. The wedding took place in the church and about 400 people attended the ceremony. The bride was attended by the Misses Horton of Minneapolis, May Whitney and Georgia Herzog of Superior, and Miss Newton was flower girl. The groom's attendants were Leslie Ross, Joel S. Lighting Talks

More Municipal Plant Facts

Another municipal electric plant which is often cited (at a distance) as a successful example of municipal ownership is that of Tacoma, Washington, a city of 83,743 people (practically the same population as Duluth). Tacoma's street lighting furnished by this municipal plant costs that City $72.00 per arc lamp per year.

The Duluth-Edison Electric Company offers to light the streets of Duluth for ONLY $45.00 PER ARC LAMP PER YEAR; and in addition to give this City $1,500 worth of electric light every year FREE.

The Tacoma municipal plant also does a general electric lighting business, the true nature of which may be gathered from the following editorial comment in a recent issue of The Tacoma Daily News:

"There may have been a time in the history of Tacoma when the electric lights were worse than they are at present, but we do not recall that gloomy and disheartening period. Complaints are numerous, and righteously so. The incandescents appear to have difficulty now and then in producing more than a feeble winking, like obscure stars in the milky way. At times it is impossible for the ordinary eye to read leaded brevier directly under the 'glare' of four of the city's latest brand of the 20-candle-power lamps, and one man writes to the News that he is unable to read anything in the early evening hours, tho he is paying for current for 15 lamps in his library.

"After 9 or 10 o'clock there is usually a brightening of the lamps, as if additional current had been found somewhere to assist in getting to bed by, which is kind, as it probably saves serious accidents on the stairs. * * *

"It will be noted that the meter still goes round and round, as of yore, and in spite of the decreased efficiency in the lights there is no decrease in the bills."

In this Electric Lighting business, in the final anaylsis, the QUALITY OF THE SERVICE you get is more important than the price you pay. Such poor service as most municipal plants provide is dear at any price.

The Service of the Duluth-Edison Electric Company is unsurpassed anywhere in the world. We do not know of a single municipal plant in America whose service is constantly of the high quality provided by this company in Duluth. We do know of scores of municipal plants whose service is unsatisfactory to their customers.

What's to be expected from a municipal plant conducted, not as a business pure and simple, but as a machine to further the fortunes of some group or faction of petty politicians?

The Duluth-Edison Electric Company is not in politics in any shape or manner. And there is no reason, no sense, no need for mixing the electric lighting business in Duluth with politics, to the detriment of the City and of the tax-payers and of the users of electricity.

BAND WILL MAKE TRIP

Music at All Stops on the Trade Excursion Next Week.

Names Being Added Daily to List of Duluth Travelers.

The Third Regiment band, one of the best musical organizations in the Northwest, will accompany the Duluth trade excurstonists on their trip into Soo line territory next week.

At each station, the band will enliven the proceedings while the Duluth men are meeting the business men of the town and getting a line on trade conditions. Some of the stops will be very brief, but the townspeople will know that the Duluth visitors are on the scene. The Duluthians are going out to boost and they will let every person in every town know who they are and why them came.

As the time for the excursion draws near, Duluth business men are becoming more alive to the exceptional opportunity given them for making new business acquaintances and strengthing the bond between Duluth and a growing territory from which the trade should naturally come to this city. More names are being added daily to the list of those planning to make the trip and when the train pulls out next Tuesday morning, it will carry a big crowd of enthusiasts.

Most of the territory to be visited has only recently been opened by the building of the Soo line. The little towns along the way are growing rapidly, however, and many of them will in time become important trade centers. The territory is naturally tributary to Duluth, but trade does not always flow in natural courses. It must be developed and fostered and the Duluth jobbers believe that by going out among the people they can make Duluth and its business houses better known and appreciated.

The route calls for a trip first to Cuyuna, then back and up the Thief River Falls branch to Bemidji, where the first night will be spent. Wednesday morning, the train will leave for Thief River Falls, and will then turn on the old main line, going to Alexandria for the night. Thursday, the train will return to Duluth along the new Brooten branch.

of public works, stated that he remembers no official action of the board of public works ordering the repairs, nor was his memory refreshed when Attorney Crassweller called his attention to a memorandum from the works board office to the effect that the work had been ordered.

"Extras" in Steele's Contracts.

In refutation of Steele's statement that P. McDonnell's contracts always overran and that his contracts, if anything, were cut down, statements of the contracts performed by both were introduced. They showed that Steele's contracts overran as well as those of McDonnell, although the aggregate would be less as Steele has not had as many large contracts as McDonnell.

C. R. McLean, the contractor who resurfaced the bottom of the West Duluth reservoir, of which it has been stated that the bottom laid by McDonnell was so rotten that pieces of it could be kicked out with the heel, said that in his opinion the defect in the concrete was due to frost. He said it was not bad all the way through, but that approximately one-half the surface to about one-third of its depth was rotten. Experienced cement men were put on the stand and testified that the Edison cement, which Inspector Bruner said he refused to allow until told to let it go in by McGilvray, is recognized as first class and the equal of other well known brands of cement.

Trouble With Inspectors.

Contractor George R. King asserted that he did not know of his own knowledge of any undue influence being exerted by one contractor upon another or by contractors upon city officials or employes in the award or performance of city contracts. He said that he has had trouble with city inspectors because he considered from his experience that they were not qualified to do their work, but that he bore with them as an affliction. In answer to a question by Hugh Steele, he said that he employs an engineer to check up the city employes where they are engaged upon his contracts and that he finds it pays. He explained that their mistakes were not serious, but were the outcome of incompetency and were such as might be made in computations. He said that they were mistakes which might happen anywhere on the field.

Contractor E. A. Dahl stated that he does not know of any case in which money has been used between contractors or used by any contractor to influence any city employe.

Frost Spoiled Cement.

C. R. McLean was questioned at considerable length on the West Duluth reservoir, to which much attention was given yesterday afternoon. In explanation of the statement that he thought the concrete used was good, he said that underneath the surface, where it would not be affected by the frost, it was in good condition. He found only the upper two or three inches rotten over about half the surface of the bottom. He said that he believed it due to frost, as he has had the same experience with concrete which has been spoiled by frost. He said that except for one small piece, the walls were in good shape. He considered Edison cement as good as any of the other brands. He stated that the cost of relining the bottom was between $5,000 and $4,000. He knew of no undue influence in any shape.

McLean was an engineer in the office of the city engineer before he engaged in the contracting business. He was asked about the Jefferson street work. He stated that if a Telford base were laid under the crushed rock, it would make a better foundation than were all crushed rock used. He stated that if the regular Telford bottom were laid it would be more satisfactory and cost about as much as the crushed rock.

Inspector Charles Voss stated that a Telford bottom was laid, the rocks being broken with a sledge, laid by hand, and then rolled, after which the crushed rock was placed. This was on Jefferson street. He said the cost of the Telford base would be about the same as crushed rock.

No Guarantee Given.

President Olson of the board stated that he knows of no official being influenced by cash considerations or favors or of any contractors offering one another money not to bid on contracts.

He said that there was no guarantee on the Twenty-third avenue east pavement, and told what he knew relative to the work. He said that he understood that Patterson ordered the contractor to do the resurfacing, and that he did not know of it until it was about half finished. He said Patterson acted under the impression that there was a guarantee. He didn't recollect any official action of the board in ordering the work, even after Attorney Crassweiler had read from the records of the board, a note to the effect that the work had been ordered done. He said that that could be explained by the clerk.

After McDonnell submitted a bill for about $6,000 he stated that the board went into the situation. They found that the charter required that bids should have been advertised for. To comply with the form of the charter, he said they advertised for bids and that McDonnell bid at $1.10 a yard, and Steele 75 cents a yard. Later McDonnell cut his bid to 66¾ cents a yard, bringing his bill down to about $4,000. They put the matter up to the city attorney and were informed that there was no way in which McDonnell could be paid. McDonnell has not yet been paid and has brought a suit which is now pending in the courts.

Steele as "Defaulter."

He said that at the time McDonnell was given the contract for paving Second alley from Lake avenue to Fourth avenue west there was a strong sentiment that Steele was a defaulter. He said that Jim Preston, then a member of the board, was particularly strong in this position. He claimed that he (Olson) was neutral on the matter, and advised that the matter go to the council. The records of the council show that that body confirmed the award to McDonnell by the board as "the lowest qualified bidder."

Olson said that he has not considered Steele any slower with his work than any other contractor, and that complaints of slowness in performing contracts are common.

The board adjourned at noon today until 9:30 o'clock tomorrow morning. Several of those interested in the investigation stated that they had engagements to attend the Scotch picnic at Fond du Lac this afternoon.

Records Not Protected.

Should the city hall be destroyed by fire the only records of hundreds of thousands of dollars of work, probably running into the millions, would be destroyed. There would be no means of replacing them and the city would not know where it stood in the matter of its city improvements. Should an investigation such as is now being conducted by the council investigating committee be started, no figures of any kind, except those showing how much money was paid for the work, would be available.

City Engineer Thomas F. McGilvray testified yesterday before the committee which is probing the "paving scandal" that the allowance for his department is so small that he is unable to open a set of books on each contract to show just what goes into each contract. The funds will not permit of the hiring of a bookkeeper, he said.

The engineer explained that the construction work in the city has increased in the last few years from $250,000 per season to approximately $600,000 last year. At the same time he called attention to the fact that the building season in Duluth is short and that this amount of work is done in a few months. In addition to that he asserted that the engineering department is obliged to get out estimates, plans and specifications for work each year to the extent of about $1,500,000. To do this mass of work he said that he is able to hire less than thirty men, and the majority of them are employed during the summer months. He added that the department is always "up against it" for inspectors.

When the various contracts are completed the department officials are obliged to put the contracts, in which are included statements of estimates and quantities and cost, into an envelope, label it and put it away in an ordinary drawer, according to the engineer. He says that there is not enough room for them in the vault, and that they would be destroyed by fire or could easily be stolen.

When the investigation was started two weeks ago, Contractor Hugh Steele stated that the specifications of East Superior street had not been followed, in that the base contained but three inches of crushed rock while the specifications called for six inches. The engineer testified yesterday that the specifications called for but four inches of crushed rock, because of an old Telford pavement which was on the street. He said that he was not surprised that but three inches show now, as the street has been in use continuously for seven years and that it was natural that the crushed rock would settle to some extent.

Yesterday afternoon Contractor Steele asked the city engineer how it happened that large blasted rock, two or three feet in diameter, had been put in Jefferson street when the specifications called for crushed rock. The engineer replies that the job had been in charge of E. K. Coe, present county engineer and former chief assistant city engineer, and that he would probably be able to give the explanation. Inspector Charles Voss corroborated Steele's statement that the big rock had been put in, while the specifications also showed that crushed rock had been called for and paid for. No conclusive testimony was introduced to show the difference in cost between the blasted rock and the crushed rock. It was stated that the big rock for the foundation was more satisfactory, and that the top filling had all been crushed rock. The blasted rock, according to Inspector Voss, was secured from another East end street. A subpoena had been issued for Mr. Coe, but it had evidently not been served as he was not present at the hearing yesterday when his name was called.

The Reservoir.

Much of the afternoon testimony dealt with the West Duluth reservoir. It was shown that there was an overrun of 10 per cent of excavating. It was said that this was due to the difficulty of determining the nature of the ground under the surface. The engineer said that this was not unusual, as that difference might come on any city contract. He said that he does not expect the preliminary estimates to be very exact. Robert N. Bruner, who was hired by the water and light board to take charge of the work, testified that 851,824 pounds of cement had gone into the concrete. Of this amount he said 242,184 pounds was Edison cement, which he claimed was contrary to specification. He said that he had refused to allow it to go in until told to do so by Engineer McGilvray. He said that the reservoir was not completed until December, and that the fall weather was very changeable. He explained that it snowed, rained, froze and thawed, but that in his opinion the work was pushed rapidly as possible under the conditions.

Asked if it were true that the expansion joints were of wood instead of tar, as claimed by Contractor Steele, he denied that such was the case. He explained that wooden frames were put in expansion joints and filled with tar, after which the wood was removed. He thought that some pieces which it was found impossible to remove, might have remained, but he said that tar was put in the expansion joints as called for by the specifications. The committee went to considerable trouble to learn just where the concrete containing the Edison cement had been laid, and what proportion it was of the whole.

Cement All Right.

A. E. Watts, connected with the government engineering department, stated that he had been told by United States Engineer Coleman that government tests had shown that the Edison cement produced concrete which tested higher than concrete made of any other cement. He said that he had used some of it in the basement of his home and that it proved to be very hard and was highly satisfactory.

All employes and past employes of the engineering department who were put on the stand yesterday afternoon stated emphatically that they have never been subjected to undue influence by any contractor. They declared positively that they have never allowed themselves to be put under any obligations to any contractors. All asserted that they have never been removed from any job at the request of any contractor and that no reward of any kind has ever been offered them by any contractor to slight the work or give them the best of it. Those who so testified included James McGhee, Charles Voss, Bert Farrell and Henry J. Gude, now in the department's employ; E. W. Kelly, former second assistant city engineer and at present engineer of the water and light department, and Mark C. Williams, former inspector and at present deputy city clerk.

BELTRAMI COUNTY FAIR.

Funds Liberally Subscribed to Insure Its Success.

Bemidji, Minn., Aug. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Funds with which to finance the seventh annual fair of the Beltrami County Agricultural association, to be held here Sept. 13, 14 and 15, are being obtained in such amounts as to already guarantee the success of this year's exposition.

The city council has appropriated $250 for the fair; personal and firm contributions already amount to about $400, with more coming from that source; $400 will be received from the state before Sept. 1, and the further sum of about $1,000 will be available from the state during the month of December, this latter sum being for the special purpose of reimbursing the fair association for premiums paid out at this fall's fair.

The premiums amount to about $1,500; and special inducements are held out to potato raisers and dairymen for exhibits at the fair.

TWO BIG PICNICS ARE IN PROGRESS

Scots Gather at Fond du Lac —Butchers at Lester Park.

Two big picnics at opposite ends of the city are on Duluth's amusement program for today.

At Fond du Lac the loyal Scots of Clan Stewart are celebrating at their annual outing, and a big sports program has been planned, with a lot of amusing features. The steamer Columbia, which took the Scots up the river at 9 o'clock this morning, was crowded, and the crowd had every aspect of being off for a good time.

At Lester Park the butchers of the city will hold their annual picnic this afternoon. The affair was to have been held last Thursday, but on account of the rain which fell all day, the big affair was postponed. The crowd will spend only half the day at the park, which will necessitate no extra closing, as the shops are closing every Thursday afternoon during the summer, anyway. A program of races that will enable everybody on the grounds to qualify in some of the events has been prepared, and a good list of prizes is posted. There will be a dance in the evening.

Nine New Names.

Most of the appointments are promotions and transfers within the foreign service. Nine of the consular nominees, however, are appointed from civil life. Of these, seven come from Southern and two from Northern states. These nominations are made from competitive examinations and an effort is being made to apportion equally the appointments among the several states.

Since the issuance of the executive order providing for filling consular vacancies by examinations, seventy-four initial appointments have been made. Of these, thirty-nine have been from Southern and thirty-four from Northern states.

trust, and as to any other action of my administration.

Nothing Hidden.

"Nobody need feel either concern or hope as to whether anything done by my administration will be "discovered," for the excellent reason that there is nothing that was hidden.

"I made the committee the statement which follows. Several questions were then asked by different members of the committee. Most of these questions dealt with matters not of sufficient moment to warrant allusion to them here. Many of them were as to what my belief was concerning the motives of the Steel corporation people in acquiring the Tennessee Coal & Iron company's property; to which, of course, my answer was that it was not my business, and neither was it in my power, to search the hidden domain of motive, and that my action was conditioned, not upon what I believed to be the motives actuating the Steel corporation, but upon my belief that the action which they proposed taking would be enormously to the benefit of the community at large at that particular moment.

Motive of No Concern.

"Whether the chief motive for their action was a desire to absorb the Tennessee Coal & Iron company, or whether their chief motive was to save the threatened New York firm from failure, and thereby stop the panic, was of no concern to me.

"That both motives were in their minds I thought possible, and now think possible. What was the predominant motive was of no consequence. My concern was that the action should be taken and the situation saved in the interests of the people of the United States. Most individuals have short memories, and the events in question took place nearly four years ago; but if any one will look back and think the matter over seriously and in good faith, he will understand that it was not a question of saving any bank or trust company from failure; the question was of saving the plain people, the common people, in all parts of the United States, from dreadful misery and suffering, and this was what my action did.

Stopped the Panic.

"One of the questions put to me indicated disbelief, or, to be more accurate, perhaps, I should say that it was meant to be understood as indicating disbelief, that the action taken was really efficient in stopping the panic. At the time, and for some months after the panic had been stopped, no man would have ventured to express such disbelief unless prepared to be greeted with derision by every human being who knew anything whatever of the actual facts. The question is not to be treated seriously, for it cannot be so treated. The action taken was, in my judgment, the only action that could stop the panic, and it most certainly was of enormous, and in all human probability of decisive, influence in actually stopping it.

"Certain other questions related to the alleged fact that during the past four years the ore lands formerly owned by the Tennessee Coal & Iron company have been developed until they are of such enormous importance as to give to the Steel corporation nearly complete control of the steel business, through control of the sources of the raw material."

Has No Bearing.

"Whether or not this is so has no bearing upon the action taken four years ago. The purchase as made did not by itself, one wor or the other, affect the status of the Steel corporation so far as the Sherman law was concerned; and this statement is not affected by consideration of what may not be a totally different state of affairs four years later. I dealt with facts as they were, not with facts as they might or might not afterwards become.

"I believe that this covers every point of any consequence raised in the questions put to me after I had made my statement."

the senate today when an iron and steel amendment to the cotton bill, offered by Senator Bacon of Georgia, a Democrat, was adopted by a vote of 28 to 25. The Bacon amendment was exactly similar to the amendment originally offered by Senator Cummins of Iowa, Progressive Republican, who withdrew it today.

It had generally been supposed that the senate would adopt the La Follette amendment, and it is likely that this amendment will be offered later as a substitute for the Bacon amendment.

An amendment offered by Senator Simmons of North Carolina, reducing the duty on certain kinds of cotton machinery to 30 per cent ad valorem, was carried 36 to 22.

ing, but the threatened general strike on the railroads of the United Kingdom failed to materialize. Instead, representatives of the four railway societies involved went into conference with the board of trade.

Traffic proceeded as usual. No formal orders were given the Union men by their leaders, but apparently it was generally understood that a truce would be observed while negotiations with the board of trade continued.

At Liverpool traffic was also maintained, but the stations in that city were guarded by soldiers with fixed bayonets.

Cruiser Sent to Mersey.

The armored cruiser Antrim has been sent to the Mersey to protect the shipping there.

The trains to and from Manchester were generally suspended.

The trans-Atlantic shipping companies plan to coal and victual their liners at American ports for the round trip, but in cases like that of the Lusitania, which is scheduled to sail Saturday but has been unable to obtain a crew or coal, they are likely to have trouble in keeping their crews when the vessels reach England.

What Men Demand.

A general increase in wages of 50 cents a week; a work week of fifty-four hours; and the recognition of the unions.

The railway managers strongly object to granting this recognition where it involves dealing on their part with representatives of the men other than their own employes.

Troops to Guard Trains.

The railway managers declare they have been promised protection in running their trains. At Aldershot the military authorities are taking every precaution to insure the working of the railways in the event a strike is called. Every soldier in the Aldershot command has been placed under orders for duty, including the royal engineers, the army service corps and the field and garrison artillery were warned to have every man ready to move on a moment's notice.

Three regiments of cavalry and three batteries of royal artillery will first be moved direct to London, to be followed at short intervals by an infantry battalion, field artillery, the royal engineers and the medical units of the command. Only barracks guards will be left at Aldershot.

All the soldiers will be armed with rifles and ball ammunition. They will be stationed along the railway lines north and south of London, while the cavalry will be employed at stations and will also patrol the lines so as to be able to get quickly to any point of danger.

Trains will be worked by flag signals.

Protect Non-Union Men.

In the house of commons Winston Spencer Churchill declared that nonunionists were entitled by law to work without molestation and would be protected in the exercise of that right.

David Lloyd-George also declared that the government was determined to protect the railways and the food supply at all cost and would not depart in the smallest degree from its determination to protect life and property.

Streetcar Strike Called.

Liverpool, Aug. 17.—The strike committee last night issued an order calling out all the street car employes of Liverpool.

A renewal of rioting growing out of the strike of dockers and allied unionists occurred in the Scotland Road division of this city. The police again had to make baton charges and the soldiers also were called upon. Their presence however, was sufficient to awe the rioters, who dispersed.

The troops are camped in the streets. Their orders are not to fire over the heads of rioters in the future, as this endangers innocent parties, but if it becomes necessary to shoot, to pick out the apparent ringleaders of the mob.

Coal and provisions are being brought into the city under military escort.

FAIR

The weather man is behaving very nicely. The temperature mounted to 80 degrees yesterday and we who are accustomed to the cool breezes off Lake Superior, found it a little oppressive, but it was a change after the extraordinary cool weather of the past few weeks. The mercury dropped to a fine temperature for sleeping last night, and today is another beautiful summer day.

Clear, cool weather prevailed a year ago today.

The sun rose this morning at 5:08 and it will set at 7:16 this evening, giving fourteen hours and eight minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"Somewhat cooler temperatures prevail over the Western Lake region. Central Canada, the Dakotas, Minnesota, Eastern Nebraska and Western Iowa in connection with the northwestern high pressure condition. Hot weather continues in most districts south of the forty-fifth parallel. Showers fell during Wednesday or last night over Saskatchewan, Manitoba, the Dakotas, Nebraska, Iowa, Southern Wisconsin, Illinois, Michigan and Ohio, principally as a result of the low pressure area off the Maine coast. The barometer is falling throughout the far West. At the Head of the Lakes fair weather will likely continue throughout the ensuing thirty-six hours."

General Forecasts.

Chicago, Aug. 17.—Forecasts for twenty-four hours ending at 7 p. m., Friday:

Upper Michigan—Fair tonight and Friday; slightly cooler tonight in northwest portion.

Wisconsin—Generally fair tonight and Friday; somewhat cooler in southeast portion tonight.

FRECKLES GONE

"The best skin specialists told me that nothing would remove my freckles and that I would carry them to my grave," said a well known society woman, "but I fooled them all with a new drug, othine—double strength, that I bought at Boyce drug store, which cleared my skin and gave me a fine complexion."

The action of othine is really remarkable, for when applied at night, many of the freckles disappear entirely by morning, and the rest have begun to fade. An ounce is usually all that is needed, even for the worst case.

Be sure to ask Boyce drug store for the double strength othine, as this is sold under a guarantee of money back if it fails to remove the freckles.

Quick Work of Boatman Saves Girls When Canoe Upsets.

Rollers In Wake of Columbia Cause Near Tragedy on River.

The long rollers in the wake of the steamer Columbia as she plowed up the river with the members of Clan Stewart, picnic bound, aboard this morning, caused a near-tragedy when they upset a canoe from the Spirit lake branch of the boat club in which Miss Frances Hall, 2132 Jefferson street, and Miss Sevena McGiffert, 2015 East Fifth street, were paddling, and precipitated both young women into the water.

Jack Mizera, boatman at the club, witnessed the accident and he smasned several single scull records getting out to the scene of the accident. Both of the young women succeeded in getting hold of the canoe, and were clinging to it when Mizera arrived.

The crew of the Columbia witnessed the accident, stopped the steamer immediately, and were proceeding to the rescue of the unfortunates when it was seen that Mizera would get there first. After it was seen that both the very damp, but otherwise unharmed, young women were safely aboard the rescuing craft, the Columbia resumed the trip up the river with the picnickers.

Where the Flag Was Born.

A small two-story house still standing at 289 Arch street, Philadelphia, is where Mrs. John Ross made the first United States flag. That flag was designed by George Washington with a pencil, and was adopted by congress June 14, 1777. There is a striking resemblance between the flag and the Washington coat of arms, from which it is supposed the design was taken. Golden grain belt beers were designed from the most famous of German brews, but are said to surpass them in flavor. Try them yourself. Order of your favorite dealer or of duluth branch minneapolis brewing company.

STORM HITS IRONWOOD.

Lightning Strikes Blacksmith Shop —Grandstand Wrecked.

Ironwood, Mich., Aug. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—A terrific rain and wind storm visited this section Tuesday night. Lightning struck the village blacksmith shop in Ironwood township earlier in the afternoon and burned it to the ground. Later the wind struck the grandstand in the city ball park, completely destroying it. Telegraph poles were torn up from the ball park at Monticello and doing damage to personal property in that vicinity. Hundreds of dollars worth of corn has been lost here, the wind breaking the stalks down. The loss to the farmers is very heavy. Some of the smokestacks at the mines were blown over.

BOY SHOOTS HIMSELF.

Ontario Youth Accidentally Killed By Gun.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Aug. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Shot through the heart by a gun with which he is supposed to have been playing, 8-year-old Paul Beck was instantly killed at a summer home of his parents about eight miles from here. His sisters were out berrying when they heard a shot and hurried back. The body was found by a younger sister. He lay in front of the muzzle of the gun while the butt rested on a sewing machine.

PLAN EXTENSIVE IMPROVEMENTS

Fitwell Clothing Company Will Have a More Handsome Home.

The Fitwell Clothing company is planning extensive alterations in its store at 112 West Superior street to begin at once. The entire interior of the store will be redecorated and there will be some up to date improvements over the present manner of handling and placing the large stock of men's clothing which is carried.

An entire new front will be built, including deep windows, affording better opportunities for display, and a handsome tiled entrance. Work will be commenced this week, and it is expected that the improvements will be completed by the first of September ready for the fall trade.

DULUTH BREWING COMPANY LOSES BEMIDJI FIGHT.

Bemidji, Minn., Aug. 17. — After having changed an adverse council into one granting its demand, the Duluth Brewing company loses in its attempt to have the saloon zone extended so as to take in a building on Minnesota avenue, opposite the city hall. Mayor John Parker, at the regular meeting of the council Saturday night, vetoed the proposed amendment adopted one week ago by the council favoring the brewing company's request.

In neither case was anything taken but the incidents in connection with those reported yesterday proved sufficient to put the police on their mettle and Chief Wring is increasing the watchfulness of the force.

Breaks Into Saloon.

About 2 o'clock this morning L. D. Dewey sleeping in the rear of Michael O'Malley's saloon, 307 Pine street, heard some one in the front of the place and getting out of bed investigated. He saw a burly figure in the moonlight approaching the bar. He struck the intruder bringing him to the floor but the latter regained his feet and fled, disappearing through the window by which he had entered before Dewey could make him fast. He opened the door and yelled for the police. Several "night hawks" rushed in and then joined in a search of the neighborhood but the burglar had escaped.

Tries to Enter Window.

About the same time this morning Mrs. A. Newberg living at 128 North street, was awakened by some one trying the window of their bedroom and she nudged her husband, telling him a burglar was trying to enter. Mr. Newberg got up and rushed to the window just as a dark form was seen fading in the distance.

R. H. Towlsey and Gordon Buckhart, the pair arrested yesterday on suspicion of being implicated in the petty theft at the Hibbing hotel, were released about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, the police after judicious "sweating" having been unable to connect them with the crime. The pair promptly shook the dust of Hibbing from their feet, taking the road to Chisholm.

BAND CONTEST AT THE COUNTY FAIR

Range Musical Organizations to Compete at Hibbing Next Week.

Hibbing, Minn., Aug. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—A band tournament among seven or eight of the Mesaba range bands is being arranged for by the management of the St. Louis county fair, which will be held here the latter part of next week.

It is expected that Chisholm, Biwabik, Eveleth, Virginia and several other range towns will send their musical organizations to cop off the $100 cash prize offered for the best band.

The Hibbing Concert band reasonably expects to win the prize. Under the direction of Prof. Fitch the band has put in some hard work practicing and while still too young an organization to produce music of the classic or highly finished order, they expect to make a creditable showing against their competitors.

The date of the tournament has not yet been decided upon. The Hibbing band, however, numbering twenty-five musicians, will be in attendance at the fair for all four days.

Race Track Is O. K.

"The race track at the St. Louis county fair grounds is in as fine shape as any half mile track in the United States, bar none," said R. L. Griffin, secretary of the board, this afternoon. "I would not hesitate to put our track up against any other as far as making fast time is concerned."

The reason for Mr. Griffin's statement was the fact that the track was given a thorough dressing of road oil yesterday afternoon. The preparation has had ample time to thoroughly soak into the ground and also to absorb all of the dust. The track is certainly in first-class shape now. The mile of county road between Hibbing and the fair grounds has also been thoroughly oiled, and although automobiles and wagons traverse it constantly not a speck of dust is raised.

HIBBING CHILD PRAYS FOR GREAT TY COBB.

Hibbing, Minn., Aug. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—As Mrs. Charles Calligan, 222 Sellers street, wife of the captain of the Hibbing Colts, was preparing her little boy Carroll, aged 2½ years, for bed the other evening, she bade him kneel down in front of her and say his prayers. Little Carroll lisped, "God bless my papa; God bless my mamma and God bless Ty Cobb, the greatest baseball player in the world."

POUNDMASTER OF HIBBING FIRED

Let Out By Mayor Weirick Because of Recent Action.

Hibbing, Minn., Aug. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Dr. H. R. Weirick, mayor of the village, has deposed Robert Casmey as poundmaster of Hibbing.

This action on the part of the mayor was taken last evening and is the direct result of a fight which Casmey had with Frank Thompson, a gypsy, who then had the poundmaster arrested for assault. Casmey was found guilty of the charge in municipal court and fined $10 and costs.

It is said that this was not the first time that Casmey has been in trouble occasioned by pugilistic fracases on his part, and the mayor has decided that a fighting poundmaster is out of place in Hibbing.

EVELETH BUILDING FINE CEMENT WALKS

Contractor Killbride Is Making Satisfactory Progress With Work.

Eveleth, Minn., Aug. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Contractor W. F. Killbride is making good progress with the cement sidewalk paving despite the recent bad weather, and expects to complete the work by the middle of next month. The men have been employed since early in May and have laid over 63,000 square feet of cement walk, about 16,000 lineal feet of curb and gutter and over 14,000 square feet of crossings.

The work is being done at 12½ cents per square foot which the authorities believe is very reasonable compared with figures being received by contractors throughout the state. A very good mixture of cement is being obtained and all concede that Eveleth will have the best cement walks in the Northwest.

The work is being supervised for the city by City Engineer Peter F. Huntington, who was in charge of the cement work done by Contractor Killbride last year.

Contractor Killbride who is being assisted here by his two sons, plans to return in the fall to his home at Alpena, Mich., where he is the proprietor of a large cement block factory. Contractor Charles H. Rutty of this city, and his crew are now constructing the new walk to the Leonidas location which will be 3,450 feet long. The work will be completed sometime next month.

Street and water improvements lead this year but a campaign is now being mapped out by the city council which will call for a new firehall, armory, library, water line and smaller improvements, next year.

Plans have been drawn for a pavilion and playgrounds, and 2,000 trees will be planted on the property next spring.

The business places on Central avenue and other heavy consumers of light on side streets have been using light with the new system for the past month. The residence district is now being supplied and will be running under the meter system by Sept. 1.

At the last meeting of the village council Mayor J. C. Ohles appointed B. W. Batchelder, P. H. Tweed and M. Barber as a water and light commission.

These well known men are already busy making various changes to the welfare of this department. The electric meters will be used with a flat rate, $1 for each sixteen-candle power lamp in use after Sept. 1.

Virginia, Minn., Aug. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Tuesday night a church sale and social was given at the Norwegian Methodist church under the auspices of the ladies' aid and young girls' societies. The church was crowded to the doors. The affair opened with a short program, and concluded with refreshments. The sale was very successful, and each article sold brought a good price. The two which obtained the highest prices were a sofa cushion made by Mrs. Rohrstad, and a center-piece worked by Mrs. Hans Andersen. Axel Carlson and Mrs. E. Rosewell became the respective owners of them. Both societies are pleased with the success of the sale and the entertainment.

BUYS FORTY ACRES.

Reclamation Board Acquires Tract Near Grand Rapids.

Grand Rapids, Minn., Aug. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Acting for the state reclamation board, W. R. McKenzie of Bemidji, the secretary, and Supt. A. J. McGuire of the Northeast Experiment station, a member of the board, have acquired forty acres of land in the ne¼ of se¼ of sec. 16-54-24, twenty acres of which will be cleared and the whole sold by auction to the highest bidder over a certain appraised valuation. Bids for clearing the land are called for. The fund at the disposal of the board for the present year for the entire state is but $8,000, and they will therefore be able only to clear twenty acres in this section. The movement is to a large extent an experiment, and as such is being watched with a great deal of interest.

NASHWAUK MINER HURT.

Rosit Trevano, Injured By Blast, Taken to Hospital.

Hibbing, Minn., Aug. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Rosit Trevano, a miner, employed in the La Rue mine at Nashwauk has been brought to the Adams hospital to be treated for injuries received by a blast underground. Trevano and his partner had prepared several holes for blasts and after lighting the fuses went to places of safety. All but one of the holes exploded and Trevano, thinking the other had missed, returned to his place of work just as the explosion of the last hole occurred. He was taken to the Nashwauk hospital and his wounds dressed, and later brought to Hibbing and placed in the Adams hospital.

Poole of the Commercial club expects to attend the meeting of the Virginia Cemetery association tomorrow when the matter of purchasing a mausoleum in preference to a vault for the Greenwood cemetery, will be discussed. Mr. Poole favors a mausoleum for Eveleth as this city has been unable to secure a cemetery for sixteen years and because the mausoleum could be better located between Eveleth and Gilbert than a cemetery.

MAKES SUCCESS BY IRRIGATION

Italian Farmer Near Tower Adopts Western Methods on Farm.

Tower, Minn., Aug. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—A Minnesota farm handled by Western irrigation methods is certainly a novelty, yet such a one is to be seen near here, and it is a success.

Joseph Bracco, a native of Italy, who came here many years ago, possessed of the certainly of having crops by irrigating, cleared sixty acres south of Lake Vermilion and constructed ditches and aqueducts that convey the waters of West Two rivers to his farm. The water is conveyed in various directions about the farm, finally turned on to the soil at advantageous places.

Bracco is Congratulated.

The whole plant required considerable engineering skill, and Mr. Bracco is being congratulated on the successful performance of the work which required considerable capital and labor The expense was justified, for never has the farm experienced a crop failure and it has always been a money-maker for the owner. This interesting farm is well worth the short drive from Tower.

Preveschnek, claims his wife wants him to furnish her with $30 monthly and that he is unable to furnish that amount. The couple have had quarrels almost daily and have given the police much trouble. Many desire their 2-year-old son sent to a state school, and their marital troubles settled to avoid further appearances in the court. WILEY SAYS RULING AGAINST SYRUP WAS MADE OVER HIS HEAD sonnel board until the final notice that he was to resign.

"Up to that time did you have any clear idea of the charges against you?" asked Representative Floyd.

"Nothing whatever," said Dr. Wiley.

Chairman Moss asked Mr. Wiley about the negotiations that led up to the employment of Dr. H. H. Rusby, which, it is charged, was a "secret arrangement."

"Did you personally take this matter to the secretary of agriculture?" asked Chairman Moss.

"I did," said Dr. Wiley.

Told Wilson of Rusby Affair.

"Did you explain the terms of the arrangements fully to him?"

"Yes, sir; I did."

"Was your going to the secretary direct an unusual proceeding?"

"Oh, no; we go to him constantly with such matters."

"You assume the full responsibility for the arrangements that have been made?" asked Chairman Moss.

Explaining his part in the negotiations with Dr. Rusby, Dr. Wiley said: "I asked Dr. Bigelow to get into communication with Dr. Rusby and ask what was the smallest sum he would work for and appear in court when we wanted him to."

Representative French of Idaho asked Dr. Wiley whether a well balanced board in the agricultural department on which the solicitor's department and the bureau of chemistry were proportionately represented, could handle pure food cases without friction.

Too Much Friction.

"I don't think it could be worked out with the present antagonism existing between those two departments," said Dr. Wiley.

He told the committee that Secretary Wilson never refused him authority to attend public health and scientific conventions.

"The only injunction upon me was that I should not speak on the questions of food adulteration that were still undecided by the referee board," said Dr. Wiley.

Dr. Wiley testified yesterday that he has surrendered practically all of his authority for enforcing the pure food law to Dr. Dunlap, associate chemist, and George P. McCabe, solicitor of the agricultural department. Overruled in two boards on the cases he has brought before the food and drugs inspection board, composed of these two men and himself, he declared that he had found it useless to appeal to Secretary Wilson and had not even received an answer to one of the most important appeals he had made to the secretary.

Denied Rusby Letter.

Dr. Wiley gave the committee the most illumination which has been developed in the investigation.

He testified he had never received the letter from Dr. Rusby which was used by the presonnel board to prove that he knew about the Rusby contract. He said that in using this letter the personnel board had admitted its most essential portion, namely, the statement of Dr. Rusby that "we have agreed upon the following arrangement as fair and satisfactory, if approved by the department."

Dr. Wiley left the agricultural department one day at 4 o'clock to go to Boston. Between that time and 4:30, when the department closed, he said, a special meeting of the board of food and drug inspection was called, Dr. Dunlap, acting as chairman, and a decision was made overruling the "three secretaries" board, and permitting manufacturers to use the sulphuring process without publishing the fact on their labels.

WINSHIP LEAVES FOR SAN DIEGO

Former Grand Forks Publisher to Reside in Southern California.

Grand Forks, N. D., Aug. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—George B. Winship, who this week retired from the ownership of the Daily Herald, and Mrs. Winship are now speeding westward via the Great Northern for St. Maries, Idaho, where they will visit for a few days with Mr. Winship's brother, Frank M. Winship.

They will then spend a week in Glacier Park, Montana, then go to Denver, where they will make a short stay with their daughter, Mrs. Weego. Leaving Denver they will go on to San Diego, which is to be their winter headquarters. There Mr. Winship has in view a suburban cottage with a few acres of fruit land. Mrs. Weego and her little son, George, will accompany them, and Mr. Weego will join the family there for his winter vacation.

Retirement Not Surprise.

Mr. Winship's announcement of his retirement from the Herald published Tuesday morning was not a surprise, as the fact that the transfer was about to be made had been known to his friends for some time. Some disappointment was felt, however, that his own departure followed so soon, as plans had been started for a gathering at which there might be expressed something of the esteem in which he and Mrs. Winship are held.

Neche, N. D., Aug. 17.—William Marshall, a wealthy farmer who lived east of Neche, is missing from home. Marshall was very weak and it is feared he laid down in some secluded spot and died.

BRAINERD OBJECTING

Takes Exception to State Tax Commission Attitudes Toward Town.

Claims Comparison With Kasson Where Wealthy Reside Is Unfair.

Brainerd, Minn., Aug. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Brainerd citizens do not relish the publicity given this city by the state tax commission regarding the money and credits taxation. Brainerd and the town of Kasson have been compared in the amount of taxes returned and their populations as follows: Brainerd, population, 8,526; assessment, $102,660, assessment per capita, $12. Kasson, population, 932; assessment, $199,098; assessment per capita, $213.

The difference appears startling until one understands something about the towns.

Brainerd Town of Wage Earners.

Brainerd is essentially a town of wage earners. Less than 99 per cent can be termed people who are capitalists or rich enough to cease their daily labor. Kasson, on the other hand, is the home of Banker Slingerland reputed to be a millionaire several times over and possessed of so much Dodge county land that he can hardly keep track of it. Kasson is also the residence of Sam Lord of the Minnesota state tax commission.

Kasson was a wealthy town fifty years ago and it was in the center of a rich community before Brainerd was ever heard of.

Kasson Land High.

Land near Kasson has been $100 and over an acre many years while Crow Wing county still offered a poor man a chance to buy a farm at a cheap price. And another point raised in Brainerd is, "Who pays for the reassessment of Brainerd?" Does the city or the state tax commission? Many in Brainerd believe that the appointee for the job of re-assessing on moneys and credits better give more attention to where he will get his pay than to figure on what work is to be done. Many think the law is unconstitutional.

St. Cloud Assessor Independent.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—The tax commission has ordered a re-assessment in twenty-one districts of Stearns county, seven districts of Morris county including the town of Little Falls; Brainerd in Crow Wing county, and Wilmar in Kandiyohi county. Moneys and credits turned in by the assessor from St. Cloud aggregated only $113,871, although the place has more than 9,000 inhabitants in Stearns county and more in an adjoining county. A county line runs through part of the town.

The assessor in Brainerd turned in moneys and credits aggregating $102,660, while the town has a population of 8,526. The assessor at Wilmar turned in moneys and credits aggregating $146,749 and the town has a population of 4,135.

Concealing Money and Credits.

"Effort is being made in many districts to conceal moneys and credits," a member of the tax commission said. "The assessors in many places are not using sufficient energy to bring them out. We have been told that the assessor at St. Cloud, who returned only $113,871 as the total of moneys and credits there, said: 'Oh, to hell with moneys and credits. I haven't time to bother with them.' It is just such attitude as this that causes re-assessments to be ordered.

IT HELPS FARMERS.

Government Interest in Building Silos Very Beneficial.

Grafton, N. D., Aug. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—North Dakota farmers, especially those of the northeastern section of the state, are taking a deep interest in the work that is being done under the direction of the bureau of agriculture of the federal government in the work of constructing silos. Experts Risser and Merrill, delegated to this work, are this week located in Walhalla after having already completed one silo under the terms laid down by the government.

It is a big help for the farmers, for all the farmer has to do is to furnish the material and one helper, and the government men do the rest of the work in putting up these demonstration silos, the construction of which is urged as a part of the general scheme of dairy life promotion.

MRS. KATE HARMER.

Camden, N. J. (Special).—"I have taken Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey for years for a general rundown condition and consider it the best tonic of the age. As it has helped me I feel sure it will help others and highly recommend it to my many friends."—Mrs. Kate Harmer, 516 Rex Place.

For over fifty years Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey has been the standard remedy for every condition where a health and strength builder is needed. It overcomes weakness in a gradual, natural manner—restores the tissues to a vigorous, healthy condition.

It is invaluable in the hot summer weather to bring restful sleep and keep the system and stomach in a good, healthy condition, so that they will be able to ward off the diseases, such as indigestion, cramps, cholera, dysentery and diarrhoea, which are so common.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is the only whiskey that was taxed by the Government as a medicine during the Spanish-American war.

All druggists, grocers and dealers, or direct, $1.00 a large bottle. Write for free medical booklet and advice.

A. Brannon in that position, the latter having been promoted to the position of dean of the college of liberal arts.

NEW PENAL PLAN PROVES POPULAR

Single Board Control of North Dakota Institutions Gives Favor.

Carrington, N. D., Aug. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—The new plan of directing the affairs of the several penal and charitable institutions of the state, evolved by the last legislature and providing for the central single board, bids fair to meet with general favor from the several institutions that are affected by the legislation. There was general hostility to the plan at first, but it now appears that the movement is more popular, the plan having been in active operation about a month and a half.

One of the features of the work of the new board that has met with particular favor at the hands of the institutions is the fact that the board of control has not attempted to bring about any great or far-reaching changes in the manner of management, nor have there been any changes in the institution officials in any case.

Board Makes Investigation.

The control board has made a thorough inquisition into conditions at the several institutions and is gradually becoming acquainted with the details of the work upon which it has entered, but up to the present time has given over to the institution heads as much leeway as they have always enjoyed.

At the conclusion of their general tour, the board members expressed themselves as well pleased with the conditions that were found. Speaking of the state reform school, President Carmody declared that one would have little idea that the place was a reformatory unless he had been appraised of the fact.

Considerable new construction work is being handled this year, appropriations for building work becoming available this year and thereby throwing onto the newly created board the task of spending such cash

BISMARCK SEES $185,000 FIRE

State Officers Participate in Burning That Amount in Bonds.

Bismarck, N. D., Aug. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—It is not every day that bonds, good negotiable paper with 4 per cent attachments and printed in attractive colors, are put to the flames. It seemed almost like sacriliege when the state board of auditors, consisting of State Auditor Brightbill, Secretary of State P. D. Norton, and Attorney General Andrew Miller, in the presence and with the consent of State Treasurer Olson, Tuesday, destroyed bonds to the amount of $185,000, but this is just what was done in compliance with a resolution passed by the state legislature.

Twine Factory Bonds.

The bond issue was made in 1901, and is what is known as the twine factory bonds. They were never sold owing to complications which arose at that time and the paper has since reposed in the big vault of the state treasury. Each succeeding state treasurer is charged with their custody and in order to put them out of the way the legislature ordered their destruction. The work is no small job, for it was necessary to cancel them by number and one at a time, and they were in denominations of $1,000 each.

A separate record was made of each bond, its number put in the book and then the precious paper was canceled, after a full description had been recorded.

SUSPICIOUS FIRES LESS IN NUMBER

Insurance Adjusters Find a Notable Decrease in Losses.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Insurance adjusters are reporting to the state fire marshal that since the activity of the fire marshal's office in running down incendiaries has begun, they are having very little to do, and that when the annual report of fire losses in Minnesota is compiled an enormous falling off will be recounted. Fire Marshal Keller declares that the number of fires is very materially lessened.

"Very few reports come to the office now indicating arson," Mr. Keller said.

The last legislature passed a law providing for payment of $1 to fire chiefs, mayors, president of village boards, township clerks or other persons whose duty it is to report fires to the state marshal. This goes only to those who do not receive more than $50 a year for their services. As a result, practically every fire which occurs in the state of Minnesota, even to the burning of a hay stack, is reported to the fire marshal's office. Mr. Keller has prepared and sent out blanks asking for detailed information on all blazes. Among the instructions printed on these blanks, are the following:

"'Carelessness' can not be accepted as a cause of a fire, because all fires save those from an adjoining fire, incendiarism and lighting, result from carelessness."

"'Overheated stove' is not explicit enough. What is ignited by it, should be stated. A sound stove, properly placed and protected, cannot burn a house by being overheated."

"'Gasoline.' All gasoline fires start with a nexplosion. In every case, state exactly how the gasoline was being used and tell what flame started the explosion. If it was in a stove or lamp, tell the kind, and name of maker, if possible."

MURDERS WOMAN IN FORT FRANCES JAIL

Crazy Woman Strangles Aged Female, Then Tries to Kill Self..

Fort Frances, Ont., Aug. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—An atrocious murder was committed in the Fort Frances jail Tuesday, when one woman inmate strangled another to death and tried to kill herself, but was stopped by the matron

Mrs. Bertha Fulsham, aged 36, had been committed to jail because of mental weakness, being picked up near Dowker's barn. Confined with her was Mrs. Long, aged 82, committed from Emo as insane.

Between 11:30 and 12 a. m. Tuesday, while the matron was getting dinner for the women, the younger one pulled off her underskirt and tearing a strip from it strangled the older one to death.

Matron Prevents Suicide.

When the matron arrived the murderess was lying upon the bed, black in the face and blood running from her nose and eyes, with the same strip of skirt in her hands, which held the fatal piece of cloth in a death grip. She was revived and had a hearing yesterday, but the coroner has not rendered a decision.

Little is known of the antecedents of the women. It is presumed that Mrs. Fulsham will be arraigned on a murder charge at an early date, when the question of her mental responsibility will be determined.

Hale of the district court announced he would consider but one point—that of its constitutionality. The measure seeks to prevent any one county from having more than seven senators in the legislature. Judge Hale announced he would file his decision early in September.

WOMAN'S REALM.

A program of four different sailing races in which the boats will be sailed by women, some rowing races and motorboat races and a band concert by the Third regiment band have been planned for Saturday afternoon at the Duluth Boat club for the annual Ladies' Day program.

The band concert is one of the chief features of the afternoon and one which will add much to the attractiveness of the day. The club has had some difficulty with the weather man in arranging for the Sunday afternoon band concerts so it has been decided to have the concert Saturday afternoon during the racing hours.

The girls are getting quite excited about the race and are out practicing every day. Duluth has many clever sailors among the girls who are proud of their ability and glad of the chance to try their skill against one another.

Those who are planning on using the club boats for the races on Saturday should communicate with the sailing captain as they are in demand and are rapidly being reserved.

The men's races for motorboats and shells will be of interest also.

THE EVENING STORY

WALTER'S WIFE

By H. Greatrex.

"So the old place must go at last!" Walter Laton passed his hand wearily across his brow as he looked up from the letters he had been reading on to a pile of bills which lay beyond.

"May I interrupt you, dear? I've brought you a letter."

A sweet, girlish figure had opened the door, and was standing just within it. It was Grace, his wife. He smiled in quick response.

"Come in, sweetheart, you never interrupt, and I want comforting." The letter was tossed impulsively on the table, and Grace's arms were thrown around his neck. "More horrid bills, darling? Never mind, we shall see some way out of it soon, I am sure." He gently put her from him and turned his face away.

"Not only that, dear. The interest on the mortgage is over due. I have just had a letter to say that, if I don't pay it within a week, they will foreclose, and the farm must be sold."

"Dear, dear—as bad as that? But lots of things may happen in a week."

He buried his face in his hands, and there was silence. Grace, fearing to disturb him, rose and walked to the window.

"I ought never to have taken up that money," he said at last.

"But what would poor Alwyn have done then? I am glad you did it—for his sake, Walter, even if it has made us poor." He held out his hand.

"My brave little wife!" he said, and his voice trembled. "But it was a foolish quixotic thing to do. And you have to suffer for it."

He sighed as he thought of the day his brother had begged him for that $15,000 to put in the big South African mine his friend had discovered. How confident he had been of success. That was over three years, and they had never heard from him since.

"I had no right to make you suffer for his sake, dear," he repeated sadly. "I don't so much mind for myself, but there is another," he added, after a pause. "I cannot help thinking of the dear old dad. He was so proud of the place he had saved all his money to buy. He would have been vexed—would think I had been untrue to my trust—"His voice broke and he came to a sudden stop. Grace went over to him quickly.

"Walter," she said, "it is unjust to him to talk like that. If your father knew—if he can see you from that Great Beyond—it will make him proud to think you have given up your own possessions for the sake of your brother. 'Greater love hath no man,' you know, 'than to lay down his life—not by death, but sacrifice—for another!'"

He lifted her hand and pressed it to his lips. "But you—you!" he murmured. "Things are so hard for you. Not only have we been sent poverty but our little May—our only child—has been taken from us." Grace turned away quickly. Not even Walter must know how great was the yearning of her tender heart for the feel of little fingers and the sound of little feet. "See," she said hurriedly, turning to the table to hide the tears that had sprung to her eyes, "you have not opened your letter, and I do not even know who it is from." She took it up and began to examine the postmark.

"Why, it comes from South Africa!" she exclaimed. "Shall I open it?"

At that instant there was a loud pealing of the doorbell. Grace looked up in alarm, her fingers opening the letter. "It's about the mortgage," Walter said, and his face grew white. "He said in his letter that he would be here today, but I did not expect him here so soon. You had better go."

Grace slipped her arm through his. "Not while you're in trouble, Walter. Let me stay with you, now, at least. It is easier to hear it together."

A heavy step was heard on the stairs, and Grace's small maid opened the door. "Mr. Dixon, please, sir," she announced, pushing it wide to admit the huge figure of a middle aged man. This gentleman did not attempt to come forward with the usual greetings. He stopped short, and, folding his arms, regarded his victim with a heavy scowl.

"Well, sir," he said, in a sharp, raucous voice, as the door shut behind him. "Do you mean to pay me my interest or do you not? You got my letter, I suppose?"

"Yes, Mr. Dixon," Walter answered courteously. "I received your letter this morning."

"I've been at great inconvenience to come here at all!" he remarked sourly, "and I should have let the law take its course, only just now I'm too busy in other ways than to be bothered about this land of yours. I have a proposal to make to you. Are you prepared to listen?"

"Certainly," said Walter Laton. "Indeed, I am in such a position that I shall be glad to hear your decision and get it over."

"Rightly said, sir, so you are!" answered the other with an ugly chuckle. "Only it doesn't happen to be a decision. I'm making a proposal to you before I give my decision. Which shown, I may tell you, that I have a heart.

"I'm glad to hear it, sir," said his host.

"Well," began Mr. Dixon, and his voice became more smooth as he proceeded, "your farm is valued at about $25,000, isn't it?"

"My father gave that for it. But he improved it greatly, and I have carried on the improvements. Taken as a whole, it cannot new be worth less than $35,000."

"Oh, pooh—nonsense!" cried the other. "If it goes to the market, and you have a forced sale, it won't realize half that sum, and you will have solicitors, valuers and auctioneers to pay. You will be in a terrible mess, young man, and that's the truth, is it not?"

"Of course, it is true that I shall be in a very difficult position, if that is what you mean."

"There! You agree with me that you're in a regular fix! But thanks to my kindness, Mr. Laton, and my regard for the ladies"—he made a clumsy bow towards Grace—"I can find a way out, and the case will be quite simple. If I seize the farm in payment of my mortgage, I shall have to sell it, and we shall both lose; but if you will be reasonable and listen to me, we shall both be the gainers, and your wife need be put to no discomfort whatever." He smiled an oily smile, which Grace inwardly resented.

"The best way out of this muddle of yours," he continued, "is simply to make over the estate, stock, crop and all, to me by a private deed. Nobody need be any the wiser, for I will leave you here as bailiff at a good salary, and then you will have a chance of paying off those!" He pointed a scornful finger at the pile of bills.

"How much will you give me for the farm?" he asked with a quietness which suggested suppressed rage.

"Give you?" repeated Mr. Dixon, with affected amazement. "My dear sir, you don't understand. I am making you an offer of your mortgage money and interest. That is a very good offer for your farm as it stands. It means that you have no outsiders to pay at all, and they would run off with any money there was over, you may be sure."

"Then you want to give $15,000 for what you know is worth, at least $35,000?" Mr. Dixon raised a protesting hand.

"Mr. Laton, I can't waste time. Either you take my offer, or leave it. Which is it to be?" Grace was getting terribly nervous.

"I have no desire to waste your time, Mr. Dixon," Walter answered his burly visitor, "and I will give you an answer at once. You have made a most unjust proposal, a proposal which shows you to be an unscrupulous man. I reject it forthwith."

Mr. Dixon scrambled out of his chair with a purple face. "You'll rue this, sir, to your dying day," he spluttered. "How dare you talk to me like that?" Walter had risen, too.

"Because it is the truth and you deserve it."

"You'll be sorry you ever said it!" said the other with an evil grin. "Your farm shall come to the market with a bad name, I'll see to that."

"You can't influence the market." Walter answered though the blood left his face as he realized the power of Mr. Dixon in business circles.

"Can't I? I know the sanitory inspector. I know the valuer. Your solicitor works for me—and you can judge which he will prefer to please. Now, sir, bad drains, bad farming, and a solicitor who won't back you up! Do you think anyone will buy?"

"You scoundrel!" cried Walter, hoarsely. "Go out of my house, and never dare to enter it till I am turned out." He took a step forward towards the now cowering Mr. Dixon. But Grace suddenly rose with sparkling eyes and stood between them.

"And that will never be!" she cried excitedly. "Walter, the mine has turned up trumps, after all. I've read the letter from Africa. Alwyn has been ill, but the doctor writes he is coming home to pay you back the money he borrowed. So you, sir, will be paid tomorrow. And, Walter," she added, turning to her husband, "Alwyn's friend's wife died, and he is bringing back a tiny baby girl for us to adopt. They arrive tomorrow, and we are to meet them at the station." She held out the open letter.

Mr. Dixon was forgotten, and he bundled out of the house as best he could, disgusted that his "luck" by which name he chose to call his malpractices, had forsaken him for once.

AMUSEMENTS

TONIGHT'S ATTRACTIONS.

LYCEUM—Forbes' stock company in "The City."
ORPHEUM—Vaudeville.
EMPRESS—Vaudeville.

Amusement Notes.

"Bright Eyes" is a sister show to the "Three Twins," as it is by the same authors. Charles Dickson is responsible for the book, Otto Hauerbach the lyrics and Karl Hoschna the music. The play originally was a comedy without music, called "Mistakes Will Happen," as the "Three Twins" originally was the farce "Incog." Seats are now on sale.

The most difficult part of the act presented by the International Polo Teams at the Orpheum this week is convincing the audience that the game is a real contest. The four players stoutly assert that they are out to win every contest, and that nothing is prearranged. That it would be impossible to prearrange the plays is their claim. The game is fast and interesting to watch, and the evolutions of the bicycle riders are so intricate and made so quickly that it would be impossible to turn the game into a mere hippodrome exhibition. The teams are very evenly matched, and sometimes one team wins and sometimes another. A record is being kept of all the games played on the present tour, and up to the present time the Shamrocks are just four victories ahead on the series.

The game is a new one to Duluth. A small wooden ball is used, and the players hit this with the wheels of their bicycles. The side scoring the most goals wins.

Wherever 'The City" has been presented, the play has been the subject of almost endless discussion. The author, Clyde Fitch, had been accused of being unable to write a man's play; that it was only in the creation of feminine types that he excelled and his reply was "The City." Certainly for strength and power and rousing climaxes he succeeded and this week the performance which is being given by the Gus A. Forbes Stock company is remarkable in every detail. "The City" will be repeated every evening this week and Sunday evening and there will be Saturday and Sunday matinees.

The bill for next week will be that best of all farces, "Charley's Aunt," in which Mr. Forbes made so favorable an impression last year.

Harry Bouton, who is presenting straight and crooked magic at the Empress this week, is one of the hits of the bill. Mr. Bouton performs some illusion that seems almost beyond human skill and then exposes it in a manner that cannot help but produce laughter. Mr. Bouton is really one of the cleverest magicians before the public but realizing that the public was growing tired of the conventional magician he decided to try his present act as a means of attraction and has met with wonderful success from the start.

MEAT RATES ARE ORDERED HELD UP

Washington, Aug. 17.—Freight tariffs filed with the interstate commerce commission by the Southwestern lines, making material advances in the transportation charges on fresh meats and packing house products from points in Texas, Oklahoma and other points of origin in the Southwest to destinations in other states, were suspended today from the effective date of the tariffs—Aug. 18.—until Dec. 16.

The proposed rates constitute an increase of approximately 8 per cent over existing rates. Between 500 and 600 of the great interstate railways and such companies are affected by the suspension.

The entire question of rates on livestock and packing house products now is under investigation by the commission, and it is expected that by the close of the year a general readjustment of these rates may be effected.

BANKER LOSES 100 POUNDS IN PRISON

Chicago, Aug. 17.—The administration of the bureau of chemistry by Dr. Wiley, whose rulings vitally affect the canning industry, is indorsed in resolutions adopted today by the National Canners' association and the National Canned Goods and Dried Fruit Brokers' association. The resolutions, which are addressed to President Taft, conclude as follows:

"We respectfully urge his excellency, the president, to consider well the conspicuous service Dr. Wiley has rendered the people, their manifest approval and confidence in him, and to ask his retention in his present office, if not incompatible with that sense of fairness which has ever marked the judgments of the president of the United States."

CANNERS EXPRESS FAITH IN WILEY

Leavenworth, Kan., Aug. 17.—Ellis Bartholemew of Toledo, Ohio, former president of seven banks of Ohio and California, was released from the federal prison here today upon the completion of a thirteen months' sentence for misuse of the mails. Twenty minutes after his release he took a train alone for Toledo. He expected to be met at Fort Wayne, Ind., by a delegation of Ohio bankers to escort him to his home.

The banker weighed 250 pounds when he entered prison June 3, 1910. He now weighs 150. The prison physician said he left the institution in much better health than he entered it.

Health and Beauty Advice

BY MRS. MAE MARTYN.

Gertrude: To beautify the complexion and preserve its youthfulness, try an almozoin cream-jelly. This is splendid for the removal of blackheads and pore impurities, as well as clearing the skin of tan, freckles, blotches and fine lines. To prepare, get an ounce of almozoin from the druggist and stir it into a half-pint cold water, then add two teaspoonfuls glycerine. Let stand several hours. Using this cream-jelly quickly clears the skin and gives to it a velvety smoothness and charming tint without the least possible danger of growing hair.

H. U.: An unhealthy scalp causes profuse dandruff and dull, stringy, straggly hair. I would advise a quinzoin tonic, which is inexpensive and easy to prepare. Get an ounce of quinzoin from your druggist and dissolve in a half-pint alcohol, then add a half-pint water. Massaging the scalp frequently with this stops itchiness, removes dandruff or excess oil, and puts the scalp in a healthy condition. Its continued use makes the hair soft and glossy, restores the original color, and promotes a fine growth.

Mrs. A.: I don't think the condition of your eyes calls for glasses. The ache and smart of which you speak can be quickly stopped if you use an eye-tonic, made by dissolving an ounce of crystos in a pint of water and putting two or three drops in each eye daily. This tonic is very beneficial, as it soothes aching eye-muscles and removes inflammation. Using it makes weak eyes strong and gives to them an unusual brilliancy and pleasing expression.

A. D.: Do not employ the electric needle for the removal of those stray hairs, as it is a painful and costly operation. Get an ounce of delatone from the druggist and with water mix a little into a paste. Spread on hairy surface and after two or three minutes rub off, wash the skin and you will find the hairs are gone. Delatone costs a dollar an ounce and is worth it, too.

M. T.: Your hair can be kept glossy and fluffy by shampooing occasionally with canthrox. Get an original package of canthrox from your druggist and dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup hot water. Massaging the scalp briskly as you pour on a little at a time creates a rich, cleansing lather and when the scalp and hair are rinsed you will find both immaculately clean. With a canthrox shampoo the hair dries quickly without streaking, and hair that is dull, brittle or unmanageable will become bright, soft and easy to arrange.

Alma: Your skin will lose that shiny, unnatural look and take on a velvety smoothness and pink and white tint if you discard powder and rouge and use the following lotion: Dissolve four ounces spurmax in one-half pint hot water and when cool add two teaspoonfuls glycerine. Apply this to the skin, rubbing gently until dry. This is superior to powder because it is invisible when on, does not rub or blow off, and aside from beautifying the skin and removing tan and freckles, gives a richness to the complexion not possible with powder. It is especially nice to use in hot weather because perspiration will not spot it.

Mildred: Impure blood causes a sallow, lifeless condition of the skin, robs you of energy and gradually undermines your health. Before it is too late, get an ounce of kardene at the drug store and dissolve in a half-pint alcohol. To this add one-half cupful sugar and hot water to make a quart, then take one tablespoonful before meals. This tonic soon rids the blood or impurities, then health and strength quickly return. Nothing equals a kardene tonic as an energizer and system-builder.

Miss M.: It is not necessary to visit a sanitarium in order to reduce your weight. Dissolve four ounces parnotis in a pint and a half hot water. Strain when cold and take a tablespoonful before meals. This is quite harmless; and while it dissolves fatty tissues, does not leave the skin wrinkled or flabby, nor does it call for dieting.

GETTING ACQUAINTED.

Starting Aug. 22, Duluth business men will make a trip of three days to the towns on the Soo line, under the auspices of the Commercial club.

The value of this excursion is so plain that it needs no argument to enforce it. The coming of the Soo road has opened up to Duluth trade an entirely new territory along its lines. The people of this territory can be expected to deal largely with this city, selling their products here and buying their supplies here. This will be much more certainly true if Duluth takes steps to get acquainted with these new neighbors, and the trade excursion is the proper step. "A man that hath friends must show himself friendly," and so must a city.

It goes without saying that every Duluth business man who can manage it should take this trip and circulate among these new friends and neighbors. It will be good for the business man, good for Duluth, and good for the sections to be visited.

GEORGE B. WINSHIP.

After more than thirty years of hard and effective and, we hope, profitable work in the newspaper field of North Dakota, George B. Winship, editor and proprietor of the Grand Forks Herald, has disposed of his interests in that able and enterprising newspaper and will retire from active journalistic work. The Herald, it is stated, will be consolidated with the Evening Times, making a particularly strong combination.

The fact that Mr. Winship is about to step down from the editorial tripod and that his newspaper is to merge its identity with that of another is of more than passing interest. Editor Winship and the Herald have been strong and impressive figures in the public life of North Dakota. For years Mr. Winship has been an insurgent against the forces that controlled his state and that dominated his party. He was an insurgent, and a real one, before the word "insurgent" became a political label. A vexation to those bent on keeping the state shackled to the chariot wheel of privilege, Winship and the Grand Forks Herald have been the hope of the people. The steady, courageous and aggressive fight for real popular government that they have put up has been a large factor in redeeming the state from its old ignominy of boss rule.

George B. Winship will be missed; but into whatever paths his choice may lead him he will carry the honor of having fought the good fight.

A MOTHER'S PLEA.

"A Mother" wrote to the Open Court yesterday complaining that her daughter spent her evenings at the moving picture show, and that it worried her greatly because she stays out late. The mother wanted to know if there wasn't some way this could be stopped, and suggested that the moving picture shows be closed after dark, for the safeguarding of young people.

There is much that is pathetic and heart-stirring in this plea, and something, too, that is irritating. The irritation does not come from the specific case, but from a general tendency which it illustrates—the tendency of parents to submit to tyranny from their children.

This mother is a widow, and works hard to support herself and her daughter—perhaps others as well. She has no time to give to her daughter's entertainment: "I am a widow and I have to sew morning, noon and night. I can't keep watching for my girl. She is a good girl, I know, but she doesn't like to stay home. She says it is dull. I know it is, but what can I do to brighten it up? I haven't got any time to do anything but sew. She goes to the moving picture shows in the evening because I can afford a nickel, but she doesn't see any of the good shows at the big theaters. The only ones she knows about are the moving picture shows. They are all right, I guess. I don't know because I haven't any time to find out. I know what happened to a 16-year-old girl in the next block, and it started in a moving picture show. She met the young man there. Those houses are dark and young men can spark the girls and do things they wouldn't dare attempt if there were any lights.

"I don't want my girl to go to moving picture shows in the evening, but I can't help it, unless I keep her in the house every evening after dinner.

"The nights are so long when my girl is away. I lie awake until she comes home. When I hear her come up the sidewalk I jump out of bed and grab her at the door like I hadn't seen her for a year."

Poor mother! Poor girl! The mother wants her girl to be a good girl, and the girl wants a little light and variety and excitement in her life. She can't find these at home, because mother has to "sew morning, noon and night." So she goes to the moving picture show, getting what diversion and mental food she can out of it.

But the moving picture show doesn't last long. You can go to one right after supper and be home before dark. Why, then, should the mother find the nights so long while she is waiting for her daughter to come home?

It is easy to sympathize with both in such a case. It is easier, far easier, to sympathize with the mother. If the mother has to sew morning, noon and night, there must be housework for the daughter to do. True, it can't be all work for the young people; but surely there is some harmless amusement that she and her girl friends can have in her home, even if mother is stitching away for dear life in the other room.

Closing the picture shows wouldn't help. Forbidding the girl to go to them alone would help a great deal. The child's desire for interest and diversion is natural and honest; but there are more important things, and one of them is that this girl, and all girls, shall be kept clean and unspotted. The moving picture show, or the street, or anywhere but the home, is no place for a young girl alone after dark.

Society might and should make things easier for widows who have to sew morning, noon and night. Society can hardly take over the management of their daughters. But parents, be they widows or not, should manage their daughters, and should keep them off the streets and in the house of nights, whatever happens.

REMOVING AN EMBARGO.

During the Civil war the North struck one of its most effective blows at the Confederacy when it cut off its commerce with Europe. The South couldn't sell its products or buy what it needed because the North surrounded its ports with war vessels and prevented commerce from flowing freely in its natural channels.

The effect was that of a strong hand at the throat of a man. The South was throttled, and slowly it was starved into submission.

The tariff, when unwisely administered as it has been by the Republican party, does much the same thing. It is an embargo laid upon commerce, and while it has not throttled the nation it has bound it tightly so that in many directions where trade should have flowed freely it was stifled.

One of the directions in which trade should have flowed unhampered was with Canada. Canadian reciprocity would loosen the constricting bonds so that commerce may flow more freely through the natural veins. It wouldn't remove them and so bring about a state of complete commercial health—only free trade would do that. But it would help.

The Toronto Globe, one of the leading Liberal newspapers of Canada, sees this clearly and expresses it forcibly. The fight on reciprocity is waxing in Canada, and we who have lately finished ours will watch with keen interest the contest that will end with the election of a parliament Sept. 21. There is interest, therefore, in this Canadian view of the situation. Speaking of the campaign, the Globe says:

"On the one side men will be ranged who, not in name only but in heart and in deed, believe in justice for the common people and in equal opportunities for all citizens before the law. On the other side will stand those who defend and profit by class privileges and the inequalities of opportunity created by class legislation. The issue is clear and well-defined Stripped of all non-essentials, this is the question before the electors: Shall Canadians be given the free chance to sell and buy foodstuffs and the natural products of the country without the obstruction and losses of an unnecessary customs duty?

"At this moment Canadians have not that freedom of opportunity to sell or to buy foodstuffs, the products of the harvest field or of the orchard or of the garden or of the dairy or of the forest or of the fishing industry, except under conditions fixed by heavy customs duties. High protective tariffs in the United States and in Canada block the way of both producers and consumers. The opportunity is now offered to the people of Canada to wipe out most of those obstructions to freedom of sale and purchase of natural products. Whether that chance will be secured — a chance declared to have been the thing desired by both political parties in Canada for two generations—depends on the men to be chosen for the next parliament by the electors of Canada on Sept. 21."

This is seeing clearly and talking directly to the point. The issue as stated by the Globe is exactly the issue involved in reciprocity, and the only issue. The bugaboo of annexation, which is being used as a last resort by the Conservatives of Canada, is absurd. The bugaboo of harm to this producing interest or that, which was used in this country and is being used in Canada, is equally absurd.

The sole question, as the Globe states, is whether commerce between two countries almost as closely akin as two American states or two Canadian provinces shall remain constricted and impeded by tariff bonds, or whether these bonds shall be loosened that the two countries may buy and sell to their mutual profit.

And there seems little doubt that the final verdict will be for freer trade in the interests of all in both countries, and not for restricted trade in the interests of a few in each country.

WHO FOOTS THE BILLS?

A number of the country exchanges of The Herald report that some solicitious but unknown friend is offering to provide for them, free of charge, plates containing a recent speech by Senator Sutherland attacking the initiative, the referendum and the recall.

The offer is kind, but it seems not to be appreciated. No newspaper on The Herald's exchange list has yet published this matter, and many of them have exposed the thing promptly upon receipt of the offer.

Also, these newspapers want to know who is paying for this, and we should like to know, too. Surely Senator Sutherland isn't so crazy about seeing his speech in print that he is willing to pay for making and expressing plates at great expense to whatever newspaper will print it. Surely, too, there is no lover of the people who is spending money this way from pure public spirit. It would be interesting indeed to know who is so concerned about the safety of the Republic as to spend his money in this way.

THE WILEY HEARING.

Developments from the hearing in the case of Dr. Wiley, the pure food champion whom friends of fraudulent food manufacturers are trying to force out of public life, are making one thing very clear:

What is needed in the department of agriculture is not the discharge and humiliation of Dr. Wiley, but the discharge, if not the humiliation, of some of those who have been hampering his efforts to protect the people from dishonest food products.

In other words, the good of the service does not demand that Wiley shall be discharged, as his superiors wish, but that he be surrounded by public servants who will co-operate with him in his praiseworthy fight and not hamper it at every step.

AN ANECDOTE AND A REFLECTION

I was sitting in the Willard hotel lobby the other night with a friend, watching the pretty women entering or leaving the corridor that separates the two main dining rooms and is called "Alimony Row," when Nathan Bay Scott, former Senator from West Virginia, passed by, and my friend related an anecdote of him that was exceedingly pleasing and ought to have a wide circulation, and it heightens the satisfaction to know that an old Confederate soldier was the author of the narrative.

Scott was a Federal soldier and was captured in some battle or skirmish by the enemy. He was under guard and on the way to prison when he fell into conversation with the sergeant who had him particularly in charge. Scott was a boy and argued with his captor that his imprisonment meant little to the sergeant, but everything to him, as he was satisfied he would die in confinement, for Grant had refused to exchange prisoners. He was very earnest in his pleading, and wrought powerfully on the sympathies of his guard, who finally said to him: "Young man, do you see that thicket just ahead of us that comes clear up to the road?" Scott said he did. Then the sergeant significantly remarked, "I don't see it." Scott took the hint, plunged into the thicket, and escaped.

Many years later, after Scott had acquired a large fortune, he learned that his preserver, a farmer of North Carolina, was in hard lines, deeply in debt, and making a progress through a proceeding in insolvency that would leave him absolutely penniless. Scott took measures to pay his every debt, principal, interest and costs, leaving his farm free of incumbrance, and he gave that man a handsome annuity until the day of his death.

It takes much of a man to do that. Gratitude is as rare a virtue as it is noble, and it is also pleasant to know that Scott's long time colleague, Stephen B. Elkins, has as much of it as Scott himself, as witness his efforts in behalf of the Younger outlaws who saved Elkins' life during the war that was worse and more than hell in Missouri.

It is written: "Now there was a day when the sons of God came to present themselves before the Lord, and Satan came also among them." Thus it is recorded in the book of Job, and it is frequently illustrated in our own times. For example, the proposed amendment to the Federal Constitution providing for popular elections of senators was so distorted by the action of Senator Clarke of Arkansas, as to render it hopeless of ratification, because as it amended many of the Southern states will refuse to ratify it. Mr. Clarke was the single Democrat in the senate who was willing to augment federal power and give congress supervision of elections of United States senators in the states.

And then Joseph W. Bailey, by his vote in the senate Aug. 1, defeated the free-list bill of the Democratic house. He was the sole Democrat so voting, and through his effort in this behalf the monopoly of the beef trust will be perpetuated unless the two houses shall come to agreement on free meats. Mr. Bailey tells us that he is working in the interest of the farmer when he joins the standpat Republicans in their efforts to maintain dear food. The fact is that nobody but the lumber trust and the paper trust opposed Canadian reciprocity; but these two monopolies were shrewd enough to persuade some farmers and near-farmers that to open a wider market to American farm products would work an injury to the American farmer. They fooled a few, but they were not able to fool enough.

Free meats admitted to our markets would injure nobody but the meat trust. On the other hand, it would benefit everybody else. The meat trust is the only buyer of fat cattle, sheep, lambs, calves and hogs. It fixes the prices of all these, and I have not a doubt that the cattle companies are, most of them, annexes of the beef trust. Thus as a cattle feeder the beef trust can afford to depress the price of its own livestock to the end that it add millions to the profits of its own slaughter houses.

* * *

It is the credit-mobilier over again. The directors of the Pacific railroads became the directors of the credit-mobilier and contracted with themselves to build the road across the continent from the Missouri river to the Pacific ocean. They agreed to pay five times as much as the work was worth. Thus they lost as stockholders in the railroad, but gained five-fold as much as stockholders of the construction company. The stockholders of the roads not in the deal suffered.

That sort of stealing was not confined to the credit-mobilier gang. The oil trust did it. The steel trust does it, and the meat trust can do it, and thousands of us believe it does do it. They tell the farmer who grows grain or tobacco or cotton in great abundance that he is a cattle breeder if he has on his place half a dozen yearling calves. He is no such thing; but if the meat trust is a 51 per cent stockholder of the cattle companies it can fix the prices of a steer as it passes and that price controls in the sale of every little bunch of cattle the farmer raises.

Why, it was shown that Armour makes a dividend above 25 per cent annually, and we may be sure that other beef trust cormorants make as much. They do it by fixing the price of every hoof of livestock that is sent to market and then they fix the price of every mouthful of meat that goes down the throat of every citizen of every urban community.

Free meats would sorely cripple the beef trust; but the standpatters and Senator Bailey forbid free meats.

THE OPEN COURT

(Readers of The Herald are invited to make free use of this column to express their ideas about the topics of general interest, but discussions of sectarian religious differences are barred. Letters should not exceed 300 words—the shorter the better. They must be written on one side of the paper only, and they must be accompanied in every case by the name and address of the writter, though these need not be published. A signed letter is always more effective, however.)

WELL SATISFIED WITH SERVICE

In The Herald for Aug. 12 it said that (the people) of Midway are dissatisfied with the mail service since the rural free delivery was extended to Bayview Heights, but that is not the fact. Nine out of every ten are well satisfied with Uncle Sam's service. We do not think our letters will suffer any more staying at Proctor over night than they did lying over at the postoffice at Midway.

We have never been used to having our letters or mail sent the day it was mailed, unless we would be there before 8 o'clock in the morning and then go back at noon and wait a couple of hours for the mail carrier to arrive. Now we can take The Herald and get the news every day. I think The Herald can see the difference too.

We are well satisfied with Uncle Sam's doings and serving the Bayview Heights people also.

ONE ALONG THE R. F. D.
Midway, Minn., Aug. 15.

Col. Astor's Peril.

Boston Globe: "You are guilty," says the New York judge, "and cannot marry again. The fact that you are John Jacob Astor makes no difference. You are guilty."

But John Jacob, in spite of what the judge said, is about to marry.

"Whoa!" cries the Great Public. "Not so fast, John Jacob. Remember what the judge said."

"Well do I remember," replies John Jacob, "but I am not going to get married in New York. I'll do it in Rhode Island."

"Oho!" cries the Great Public. "We see your plan. You'll get married in Newport and go to live in New York. But if you do, John Jacob, you'll be pinched. The Tombs for yours. Isn't that so, judge?"

"Not so," says the judge. "If John Jacob marries in Rhode Island and comes to New York to live with his new wife he will be regarded as legally married."

"What!" exclaims the Great Public. "You told him he could not get married again and now you say if he gets married he can come into your jurisdiction and set up his oil stove and go to housekeeping. What are you giving us, judge? saving your presence and asking your honor's pardon."

"It is thus," replies the judge. "If he comes back here to live with wife No. 2 he might be arrested."

"Ah! we thought so," exclaims the Great Public. "We feel easier now for our altars and our firesides."

"But—" says the judge.

"Ah! then there is a text—!"

"But," says the judge, "although he will be legally married, he might be guilty of—"

"Abduction, your honor?"

"No, contempt of court. But pray do not misunderstand me. I wish to be explicit. I do not say he would be arrested for contempt of court; I say there is just a possibility of it. Next case."

(Exeunt the Great Public on the trail of Mr. and Mrs. Geraghty, nee French).

Nobody.

Who can tell me who Nobody is?
And where on earth does he dwell?
I've hunted and hunted in country and town,
And where to look now, I surely can't tell.

He must be somewhere right here in Duluth,
For I hear of him every day.
He's in our house from morn until night,
But who is he, and where does he stay?

When anything in the house gets lost,
Why, Nobody took it, of course.
But when I look for him, he's gone—
He must ride an invisible horse.

When things become disorderly,
When I've been working all day,
Why, Nobody has been here again,
But I wish he'd go and stay.

And then there's food around the floor,
And scattered on every chair;
But there's nothing to do but pick it up,
For Nobody put it there.

And then all the jelly is eaten,
And preserves and pickles, too.
Not any one knew there were such things,
So I guess Nobody ate it, don't you?.

Now Nobody has so much to do
Around our house, I know,
And a lot of trouble he surely makes.
If I see him I'll tell him so.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

We're More Optimistic Than That.

Cass Lake Times: The Duluth Herald, not always optimistic, rejoices over the fact that Minnesota rate cases are to be heard at the October term of the supreme court. Everybody hopes that the decision may be in favor of the people but few have any respect left for that superannuated tribunal and the ruling in the Standard Oil and tobacco cases are still fresh in mind.

That'll Be About Enough.

Cambridge North Star: Punsters all over the state are taking a shy at the candidates in the Eighth district. With Miller in and congress grinding, the political pot beginning to Boyle, the Princeton sage declaring that he is about Dunn with politics, McKnight keeping his plans dark, it does Bede all what an opportunity there is for the feebie minded to exercise their ingenuity.

Discrimination.

St. Peter Herald: Discrimination in favor of the Twin Cities is shown by the action of the railroads in granting half-fare rates for the state fair. County fairs are fortunate to get a rate of a fare and a third. Remember the Cashman bill.

There Is No Excuse.

Brainerd Tribune: If you are not helping to boost for Northern Minnesota—what's your excuse?

A Matter of Taste.

Carlton Vidette: A Duluth judge has rendered a decision to the effect that people need not dodge autos. County Attorney J. E. Diesen says "they don't have to dodge railway trains either, if they feel bullish about it."

Correct.

Walker Pilot: After all, the hand that guides the plow is the hand that the country eats out of.

Who Is the Real Governor?

Gilbert Herald: Who is the real governor of Minnesota? Every now and then we read how the supposed governor of Minnesota, is entertained here, or addressed a meeting there or something of like nature. Can it be that Minnesota, the most progressive state in the union, is without an executive most of the time? If such is the case we ought to abolish the office of governor and instead elect a man who will be known as "social representative" or "state orator." Then Eberhart would come nearer to filling the bill.

What a Lovely Time!

St. Cloud Times: What a sweet, lovely time, our Republican friends at the state capitol are having these days. A St. Cloud Republican reports that he recently called on one of the state officers and in the conversation referred in highly complimentary terms to another state officer. Immediately the air became chilled and the topic of conversation was changed. Then he dropped into another office at the state capitol and casually mentioned that so and so was doing fine. And then the thermometer went down again. And here is this spicy item from the Mankato Daily Free Press:

"The Minneapolis Tribune lampoons several state officials, calls the Red Wing training school investigation twaddle, and refers to the governor as a dishrag. 'And to this we say if a 'dishrag' governor and a 'hair-splitting-legal-twaddle' attorney general are to blame for the black barbarism of Red Wing which has already stained the state of Minnesota, they are likewise to blame for Sheriff Hazen continuing in office.' Oh, my; Oh, my!"

Automatic Sprinklers.

Insurance Engineering: Records of fires in buildings equipped with automatic sprinklers, kept by the National Fire Protection association, show that out of 11,257 fires, the protection was successful in 10,695 cases, or 95.01 per cent, the sprinklers either extinguishing the fires or holding them in check. In 3,286 fires the operation of one sprinkler was sufficient and 6,146 blazes were put out by three or less before a larger number were opened by the heat. About 59 per cent of the fires occurred between 6 a. m. and 6 p. m., and 62 per cent were discovered by employes. The fires occurred in 124 classes of occupancy. The failures or unsatisfactory fires (4.99 per cent) in buildings equipped with automatic sprinklers, were due mainly to preventable causes.

Glory.

An engine stalls; a biplane falls—
But why detail the story?
A casting breaks; a hand it shakes—
Another sacrifice to Glory.

Soar, birdmen, soar;
Set your wild planes flying.
'Tis but another aviator
Dying, dying, dying!

The Present Outlook.

A MOMENT WITH THE WITS.

Life: Randall—Was Spratt a popular man?

July Lippincott's: Lady President—What book has helped you most?

New Member—My husband's checkbook.

Chicago Tribune: "Mamma, is that lady the snake charmer? Why, she's as homely as a mud fence."

"Yes, my dear, but snakes are not like men. It takes something more than mere personal beauty to charm a snake."

New York Tribune: Chief Counsel—The first thing to do is to get at the root of this trouble.

Washington Star: "Clumsy of you to fall overboard," said the critical friend.

"I didn't fall overboard," replied the man who never confesses to a mistake. "The biggest fish I ever saw swam alongside and I couldn't resist the temptation to dive for him."

Washington Star: "The cook says she is going to leave," said Mrs. Cresslots mournfully.

"Are you sure she's in earnest," responded her husband.

"Yes."

"Nothing will change her mind?"

"Nothing."

"All right. Then I'll go down to the kitchen and discharge her."

Puck: Floorwalker — Looking for anything, sir?

Customer—Yes, for my wife.

Floorwalker—All right, sir. Put a notice in the "Lost" column of our daily paper published on the thirty-third floor, second counter, by 3 o'clock, and it will be on the corridors before 4.

Chicago News: Silas—I hear some wanderin' piano tuner knocked the stuffin' out of Hi Jones?

Hank—Yaas; ye know what a feller Hi is fer gettin' th' wurth o' his money. Wall, he wanted th' tuner to throw in an ollin' o' th' windmill and a repairin' o' th' mowin' machine, all fer th' same money.

Pathfinder: No sir; I won't have my daughter tied for life to a stupid fool.

Her suitor—Then don't you think you'd better let me take her off your hands?

Pointed Paragraphs.

It's a pity we can't see others as we see ourselves.

A stitch in time may save a dozen unprintable words.

A bachelor is just as good as a married man—or just as bad.

An old broom with a new hired girl attached may also sweep clean.

Hope is synonymous with the wag of a dog's tail when he is waiting for a bone.

A pretty girl tries to give people the impression that she is tired of being admired.

The trust may limit the output of whisky, but it would never, never try to limit the input.

And some people get a lot of enjoyment out of the trouble they are able to bestow on others.

How it must jolt a man when he is polite to his wife in public to have her look as if she wasn't used to it!

Occasionally there is a man that even his Satanic majesty wouldn't have, but there is always some woman who is willing to take him.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: We think our good deeds; we act the bad ones.

Friends seem principally to spend money on.

Time and tide wait for no man, but the devil always does for every man.

After a man has raised several children they act as if they had raised him.

A girl with yellow hair, no matter how she got it, can imagine she has blue eyes to go with it if they're as black as ink.

The Crop Yield.

This is distressing news, of course, when it is considered that the enormous yield of the fields and prairies in recent years has never meant overproduction.

But the situation as presented by the government, while not intentionally exaggerated, is, nevertheless, viewed at its worst—it may be materially improved in consequence of the rainfall and the moderation of temperature of the last week.

Reliable reports from everywhere, particularly from the fertile fields of Pennsylvania, New York and Ohio, indicate the extent to which the long periods of drought and intense heat have interfered with the productivity of the soil.

In order, however, to determine the general effect of a heavy decrease in the crop yield, it is necessary to measure the grain and other products after they are actually harvested.

Favorable conditions in certain important agricultural areas recent rains and less intense heat in the stricken territory and a natural increase in the acreage planted this year—all these things, it may be found, will tend to lessen the seriousness of the shortage revealed by the government report.

It may be pointed out, too, that the tremendous yields of the last three years especially exceeded predictions and were in truth "bumper crops."

A decline in the yield will tend to increase the attention given to agriculture in this country.

It will teach the value of taking care of the fields and of providing means which, in future, may be employed to check the losing effects of drouth and heat.

It will aid intensive, scientific farming and make the country more independent of natural conditions, as they may be from year to year.

In the case of the government's crop report, there is no present reason to think things are as bad as they seem.

Fishing.

Chicago Evening Post: No charge of irreverence ought to stand out against us when we say that David must have been inspired by high thoughts concerning the joys of fishing when he wrote: "He leadeth me beside the still waters. * * * My cup runneth over." David was a shepherd, but the green pastures are hard by the running brooks. Did he fish? Certainly he did. Fishing is the one sanctified sport. The father of lies speaks only through men who don't know how to fish and can't learn.

Life is life where the woods come down to the water. There are no old fishermen. They die, but the headstone maker lies in spirit when he chips aged anything over 21 in the marble.

It is not all nor one-tenth of all of fishing to catch fish. A musky or two, or half a dozen small-mouth bass, or a dozen brook trout; enough for a day's catch and for full knowledge of the riches of contentment. As for the rest, it shall be added unto you. When fishing you see things, hear things and learn things never seen, heard or learned by anyone but the fisherman. His is the joy perpetual, present active, future potential and past retrospective.

Go fishing.

STATE FAIR EXHIBITS

A. B. Hostetter Is Crating Products for Shipment to Hamline.

Wants Every Part of County to Be Represented in Display.

Some of the exhibits which will make up the St. Louis county display at the Minnesota state fair are being crated and prepared for shipment to Hamline. A. B. Hostetter is busy collecting and preserving other exhibits and has lieutenants at work assisting him. Charles Josten is working on the big map of St. Louis county, which will be the background for the exhibit.

Mr. Hostetter is anxious that every part of the county be represented in the exhibit. The plan is to have the big map as a background, with ribbons running from each exhibit to the point on the map showing where it was raised. In order that no one section may score more heavily than it deserves, Mr. Hostetter wants each community to send something for the display.

Exhibits must be received by Mr. Hostetter on or before Monday, Aug. 28, or they cannot be included in the display. The week before the state fair will be a busy one, as Mr. Hostetter and his assistants must ship the exhibits to St. Paul and set them up in the space allotted at the state fair.

Mr. Hostetter is also preparing twenty-four jars of St. Louis counuty products for the state immigration bureau. St. Louis county products are in great demand for exhibition purposes and the county will be well represented this year in the immigration bureau's display, as well as the displays to be made in cars by the railroad companies of the state.

ATWOOD DELAYED IN OHIO FLIGHT

Has to Leave Aeroplane and Go in Auto to Fix Landing Place.

Venice, Ohio, Aug. 17.—Harry N. Atwood did not reach Sandusky, the end of the first lap of today's stage in his St. Louis-New York flight, until 1:30 p. m. Passing over this village, fifty-five miles from Toledo and three miles from his destination, he discovered that he would have to investigate before making a landing. Accordingly he alighted, and taking an automobile proceeded to the city. He found the courthouse yard too small for a landing and arranged to alight at the fair grounds. Atwood then sped back to his waiting biplane, announcing that he would reach Sandusky about 1 p. m. After a few hours rest he will then proceed to Cleveland.

Started From Toledo.

Toledo, Ohio, Aug. 17.—Starting from a high altitude above the city, Harry N. Atwood left here in his aeroplane at 10:29 a. m. today, bound for Sandusky, and Cleveland.

"These little, hopping flights are getting on my nerves," said Atwood. "I want to make 300 or 400 miles a day and I could easily do it, if it were not that my engagement calls for stops. The distance between Chicago and New York ought easily to be covered in three days."

Atwood covered the 520 miles from St. Louis to Toledo, in 10 hours and 55 minutes flying time. This is the fourth day of his flight.

She became a Daughter of the Revolution at its start, in 1891, and her activities earned her the office of New York state regent for two years.

Col. Ben Elliott, who commanded one of Gen. Joe Shelby's Confederate regiments during the Civil war, is dead at Odessa, Mo., aged 79 years. He was born at Winchester, Va., and was graduated from Virginia Military Institute in 1852.

SEEK TO PROTECT AMSTER INTERESTS

Boston, Aug. 17.—A committee of three men prominent in the financial district, Charles Hayden, William A. Payne and George Baldwin, has been formed to protect the interests of N. L. Amster, president of the Arizona Commercial Copper company, the Boston & Corbin Copper and Silver Mining company and the Shannon Copper company of Arizona. The committee will seek to prevent needless liquidation of any of Mr. Amster's collateral. This collateral is composed chiefly of stock of the companies mentioned.

Mr. Amster holds, it is said, more than 60,000 shares of these stocks in the aggregate, about equally divided in the shares of each company. Ten houses, it is said, are carrying small accounts of Mr. Amster and the liabilities range from a few thousand dollars up to $40,000.

CRAZY POLICEMAN THREATENS AUTOISTS.

Chicago, Aug. 17.—In Lincoln Park here today, Park Policeman Thomas Coleman flourished a revolver and threatened to kill Lawrence Crowley and Alfred Cantwell, who were riding in an automobile. The occupants of the machine struggled with the policeman and finally overpowered him and took him to a North side police station, where Coleman renewed the attack when an attempt was made to lock him in a cell.

The policeman's strange conduct resulted in his examination by the city physician, who expressed the opinion that Coleman was demented.

WIN MATCH IN DOUBLES

Armstrong and Burton Will Probably Meet Jayne and Wheeler.

John Adams Will Be Here to Meet Tournament Winner.

Armstrong and Burton worked their way further toward the finals in the doubles this morning by winning in straight sets from Way and Neff, 6-1, 6-3.

Burton played some beautiful tennis in the match of this morning, while some of the returns of Armstrong were more than clever and stamped him as one of the most promising players in the country.

The net play of Way was the strongest feature of the Virginia combination. Time and time Way would make difficult returns of balls hit near the net, but the hard drives of Armstrong to the back of the court proved very difficult for the opposing pair to handle.

In the morning game Burton did some of the prettiest lobbing that has been seen in any of the games of the tournament. His covering of the back court was as pretty a piece of playing as anything that has been shown during the week.

As Armstrong is generally picked to win his game against Wheeler this afternoon, so are Armstrong and Burton generally credited with the ability to win the doubles.

The match between these two and Jayne and Wheeler the combination of Minneapolis and St. Paul against Minneapolis and St. Paul, should furnish some corking tennis. Jayne and Burton are from Minneapolis and Young Joe Armstrong and the veteran John Wheeler call St. Paul their home.

The big afternoon match between Armstrong and Wheeler, which will decide the winner of the tournament, is the subject of the spectators' interest today. They are wondering if the brilliant youngster can continue his remarkable form and win from the veteran.

John Adams, state champion, is coming to The Head of the Lakes to meet the winner of the Armstrong-Wheeler match. This announcement was made this morning by Carroll Graff, after receiving a message from Adams. The state champion will be in on tomorrow morning's train.

The match between the winner of the contest this afternoon and Adams will undoubtedly be one of the best ever played in the city. It will probably bring out the biggest gallery that has witnessed any of the games during the week.

Walters, V. Cayo, J. McInnis, B. Campbell, W. Campbell, F. Williams, H. Jackson, J. Busselman, F. Hycke, M. McDonald, J. Chisholm, F. Gordon and P. Paletta. Practice will start next Monday evening.

McFARLAND TO BOX IN ST. LOUIS SEPT. 4

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 17.—Officials of the Mozart society have accepted Packey McFarland's terms to appear in a six-round no-decision bout here on the night of Labor day, Sept. 4. Leo Kelly of St. Louis will oppose McFarland.

PRINTERS GET DOWN TO WORK

Fight to Oust Lynch Is Expected to Develop at Meeting.

San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 17.—When the delegates to the International Typographical union convention, now in session here, began today's session, the first important business before them was the selection of a meeting place for 1912. Cleveland, Houston, Vancouver, B. C., and Ottawa, Can., were placed in nomination yesterday, and their respective adherents have been hard at work ever since. Peculiar significance attaches to the contest, since the delegates appear disposed to name that city where the 1912 gathering will, it is believed, be of the greatest assistance to the cause of organized labor.

Today's session was the first devoted entirely to business. The only social affair will be tonight, when there will be a dance and a literary and musical program.

Clash Is Impending.

From now on the sessions will be busier ones. Many important subjects are scheduled for consideration, but the greatest interest centers in the impending clash between the administration and the anti-administration forces. The former appear in full control of the convention, but the latter are biding their time and probably will not make their first show of strength until some one of the appeals from the decisions of the executive council in local cases is called up for consideration.

While the attack will be directed at the decision of the council, it is said the real result will be the opening volley in the fight that the antis are to make in the hope of unseating President Lynch when the referendum vote is taken next May.

Talk With Publishers.

A long conference between Harry N. Kellogg of Chicago, representing the American Newspaper Publishers' association, and the arbitration committee of the Typographical union, ended without an agreement yesterday as to the new arbitration contract which will be voted upon by the convention Friday.

In behalf of the Publishers' association, Kellogg asked for unrestricted arbitration. The proposed agreement to replace the contract, which will expire May 1, 1912, provides for arbitration of only those matters not affected by the international law of the union. President James M. Lynch of the union has sanctioned the tentative agreement as it now stands.

Kellogg, who is chairman of the special standing committee of the Publishers' association, will attempt also to bring about consideration of the referendum vote of May 17, prohibiting piecework. Some of the delegates favor such action, and will seek to substantiate a provision recommending that all work be done on a time basis, but removing the mandatory clause.

Mr. Kellogg made a brief address to the convention.

WILSON WARNS ALL CROOKED POLITICIANS.

Belvidere, N. J., Aug. 17.—Governor Woodrow Wilson, who was the chief speaker at the annual Farmers' picnic here yesterday, told his hearers of his firm intention to see that the corrupt practices act was strictly enforced.

"Men who disregard this act in New Jersey," said the governor, "cannot have office. There must be no private conferences and no putting up of a game on the party. I am going to tell everything I know, and I know a good deal; I am onto their curves. I hereby serve notice on all men who are playing double that the game is up with them."

MARINETTE ELOPER HELD TO GRAND JURY.

Marinette, Wis., Aug. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Clayton Gove, the Marinette young man who was brought back from Milwaukee by Chief Cook, after he eloped to that city with his sister-in-law, has been bound over to the circuit court on a statutory charge. It is not thought that any charge will be brought against the woman who is 19 years of age.

MISTAKES POISON FOR HARMLESS DRUG.

Fond du Lac, Wis., Aug. 17.—Mistaking a bottle containing cyanide of potash for a harmless medicine, Nathaniel W. Sallade, a widely known lawyer of this city, today swallowed a quantity of the poison and died before medical aid reached him. Mr. Sallade was 40 years old, treasurer of the Episcopal diocese of Fond du Lac and secretary and treasurer of the Fond du Lac Church Furnishing company.

Oats Failure Around Eau Claire.

Eau Claire, Wis., Aug. 17.—Reports from places in the county where thrashing has been done indicate that the oat crop this season is going to be a great disappointment. All the grains apparently did unusually well this season and the farmers looked for a very good oat crop. But where thrashing has been done the oats have averaged around twenty-five and thirty bushels to the acre where a much larger yield was looked for and confidently expected.

Takes Menominee Job.

ONE HOUR OVERTIME MAY COST RAILROAD $3,000

For violating the United States law entitled, "An act to promote the safety of employes and travelers upon railroads by limiting the hours of service of employes thereon," which was passed by congress on March 4, 1907, the United States government, through the Minnesota attorney, Charles C. Houpt, has started suit in the federal court against the Duluth, Missabe & Northern railroad for $3,000.

This is the first case of this kind to be filed in the local federal court, and is probably the first in the state. It was filed upon the suggestion of the interstate commerce commission.

It is alleged that on May 10, 1911 the company had an extra train, the crew of which went to work at 11:30 in the morning, and remained on the train until 4:30 in the morning of the following day, or 17 hours. The limit is 16 hours.

The train crew was composed of six men, and for each man there is a suit of $500. The crew was composed of M. I. Hanley, engineer; H. E. Smith, fireman; A. Kurtz, conductor; J. L. Setser, S. A. Hill and H. P. Lambert, brakeman.

No answer has been filed by the company yet.

COPPERS ERRATIC; UNDERTONE SOFT

The copper market today was nervous and trading in the East was heavy. The financial difficulties of A. L. Amster of Boston contributed to the midday weakness although this lost its effect, partly, when it was announced that a committee had been appointed to take charge of Amster's trades and that his stocks would not be thrown on the market.

The English labor troubles were regarded as exceedingly bearish, especially on account of the liquidation by foreigners. The probability that the session of congress may be prolonged contributed to the depression of stocks. Loans have been reduced and money shows an easier tone. This is also partly due to smaller crops and dull business. Buying in the iron and steel trades shows a shrinkage. The proposed revision of the iron, steel and chemical schedules by the senate did not help the market.

There was some short coverings on today's early break but on the bulge stocks came out freely. There is no evidence or organized support to the market. Prices are down to a level where many stocks are exceedingly attractive and this fact may bring out some investment buying.

Change of venue was asked to some other county and that Judge McClernan be disqualified.

TALKS ON HEALTH OF MEN No. 2

CORRECT LIVING IS SECRET OF HEALTH

Is Statement of the Doctors of Progressive Medical Association.

Of all the thousands of suffering humanity today, there is hardly one who KNOWS HOW TO LIVE! And therein is the secret of health today—HOW to live correctly. We are all children of civilization, and have to contend with artificial and preserved foods. Many have digested the alluring advertisements of foodstuffs and other articles that have made millionaires of the manufacturers, but have left the nation with bad teeth and ruined stomachs. Just take for instance that unnatural and disgusting habit of chewing gum. And then consider these few facts: Our mouths have three pairs of salivary glands which supply us with the saliva and fluids necessary for the digestion of our food. Without this saliva digestion is impossible. If it be made to flow faster, and be used up in chewing gum, tobacco, etc., there is none left with which to digest food for the salivary glands have been overtaxed and emptied. Persist in such habits for a few months and the result is no appetite and an impaired digestion, of which Constipation, Stomach trouble, Indigestion, Liver trouble and Piles are a natural consequence.

A far greater evil of modern times is the habit of swallowing the food without thorough chewing. Practically nine-tenths of all stomach and intestinal troubles are due to this carelessness. The pale and haggard man, and the fat and heart-diseased man, are typical victims of this habit, and their condition is pitiable. If people would but live correctly, eat only what is nourishing, drink only what is healthy, and chew their food thoroughly, we would have but very few people suffering from internal diseases.

Our practice directs our attention most forcibly to these habits as the cause of painful, disheartening and fatal illnesses. We have devoted a great deal of research and labor to the perfection of a method of treatment, and by our method we have cured thousands of the most stubborn and chronic cases. This is because the method we have perfected is a NATURAL method, therefore, RIGHT. We must bring our patients back to nature, and to natural living, supplying what is needed to revivify the diseased parts, stimulate others to the performance of their special functions, and giving Mother Nature the opportunity she desired—an opportunity to bring her child back to health. These methods have proved successful in many cases that had been abandoned as "hopeless" by physicians.

In teaching our patients how to live, we have one object in view: CURE. We wish to teach them how to STAY healthy when once we have cured them, how they can enjoy their life better and only as healthy people can. Nothing can be a greater, nor more satisfactory recompense to the sincere and honest Specialist than the lasting cure of his patient. Right living and correct treatment are the only means for obtaining this cure. Right living alone will never effect a perfect cure, for the stomach, intestines and other organs are already in a serious pathological condition, the delicate mucous membrances wholly or partially destroyed and all must be brought back to health by the scientific attention of an experienced specialist. It would be most ridiculous for an ill man to to attempt to achieve this result himself, on account of his limited knowledge of the art of healing, and his lack of the proper apparatus necessary for successful treatment of his case.

The doctors of The Progressive Medical Association have invested over $10,000 in scientific appliances. They have been successful in many cases where learned physicans failed. They treat all diseases, but the diseases of men only. They are always willing to place their knowledge at the disposal of people who are troubled; a consultation is absolutely FREE, when you can discuss with perfect freedom the details of your illness. Consultation from 9 to 8 on week days, and on Sundays, from 10 to 1, at their offices, No. 1 West Superior street, upstairs.

EDUCATION IN SWITZERLAND

Resident of Zurich Tells of Methods in Little European Republic.

Government Gives Every Encouragement to Vocational Training in Schools.

Anton Bork, a supervisor of the pedagogical recruit examinations of the Swiss military service, was a visitor in Duluth today, a guest at the Spalding.

"Since 1875," said Mr. Bork, who lives in Zurich, Switzerland, "Swiss boys have been compelled to take examinations to compete for entrance to the country's military service. The result has been a spread of the educational system of the country into every corner of the republic. The school system is subsidized by the government, as some districts are so poor that government aid is necessary.

"Vocational training is especially favored by the government, which gives freely to the support of vocational schools. The government, in addition, grants subsidies to enterprises and institutions concerned with the furtherance of arts, industrial training, domestic and vocational training of women, commercial and agricultural education. The government's subsidies to these schools amounted to about $800,000 last year. The entire expenditures for the Swiss educational system was about $18,000,000.

"Each canton has supervision over its schools. There has been such rivalry among them in educational matters that the schools have become rather burdensome in some cantons. There are seven large universities with about 10,000 students. The presence of so many universities in such a small country has made it impossible to carry out plans for a federal university, thus realizing an idea expressed in the Swiss federal constitution.

In primary schools the salaries of teachers range from $560 to $753. In secondary schools from $675 to $868, and in commercial schools from $772 to $965. A pension is granted to widows, and there is a sick fund for the teachers of all grades. The Swiss system is divided into grades for the kindergarten age, the compulsory school age and the age following the compulsory school age.

"One of the largest high schools in Western Switzerland has three departments: commercial, administration and railroads. The administration school prepares young men for the postoffice, telephone, telegraph or customs services. The railroad school gives special attention to railroad construction, engineering of trains, passenger and freight traffic."

More people, men and women, are suffering from kidney and bladder trouble than ever before, and each year more of them turn for quick relief and permanent benefit to Foley's Kidney Remedy, which has proven itself to be one of the most effective remedies for kidney and bladder ailments, that medical science has devised. CROPS FIGURE IN CANADA CAMPAIGN

Farmers' Votes Are Being Influenced By the Weather.

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 17.—That weather will play an important part in the reciprocity campaign in western Canada is becoming more evident each day. For the last six days ideal conditions have existed for growing crops, and in consequence the farmers' feeling that they have it within their power to elect on Sept. 21 men favorable to the cause of reciprocity in natural products gives strength to the government's campaign.

Just about the time each year for the marketing of crops, 50 to 60 cents a bushel is all Canadian farmers realize for their wheat, and the prospect of higher prices in the Minneapolis and Chicago markets, almost at their doors, has set them thinking this year, as at no time in the past. Candidates opposed to reciprocity are having difficulty in belittling the United States market in the face of daily grain quotations.

Saskatchewan Solid.

Premier Scott of Saskatchewan states that in his province there is no greater difference of opinion today than there was last winter, when the Conservatives were even more pronounced and enthusiastic in favor of reciprocity than were the Liberals.

The Conservatives in that province are feeling handicapped in not having the support of their leader, Fred Houltain, who has steadfastly refused to change his opinion of reciprocity. He declared that it is the very best measure for Western Canada's welfare ever proposed.

Arthur Sifton, premier of Alberta, former chief justice and brother of the Hon Clifford Sifton, former minister of the interior who has expressed views directly opposite to his brother, said today:

"I am an advocate of reciprocity, chiefly because I think it will be a good thing for Alberta."

Rutherford Nominated.

The Edmonton city Liberal association nominated former Premier Rutherford last night to oppose the Hon. Frank Oliver, minister of the interior.

NORTH CAROLINA MOB THREATENS NEGRO IN JAIL.

Williamston, N. C., Aug. 17.—Brad Bagley, a negro charged with shooting Chief of Police White from ambush, spent a night of terror in the local jail around which surged a mob of townsmen of the dead officer.

Chief White arrested the negro several weeks ago on the chargo of selling liquor without a license. The officer received a charge of buckshot while returning from a visit at the home of the internal revenue collector.

MIGHTY HUNTERS INVADE ALASKA

Col. Scott of Mississippi and Party After Big Game.

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 17.—A hunting party of almost as much magnitude as that of Theodore Roosevelt in Africa is now wending its way into the interior of Alaska toward the headwaters of the Yukon and White rivers.

The party is headed and financed by Col. Charles Scott of Mississippi, and includes such sportsmen as Charles Baxter, the famous guide of Glenwood Springs, Colo., R. C. Harmon of Gardner Mont., J. M. Dickson and others. It is the intention of the hunters to be back in Seattle before Thanksgiving.

The hunters took equipment from here, the outfit including sixteen horses, fifteen tons of horse feed, forty dogs, two milch cows, seven cases of heavy rifles, four bundles of fishing rods, eleven tons of provisions, including beer and wines, fifteen tents for the party and three for the horses and cows. To care for the traps and to do the manual labor attached to making and breaking camp there are three negroes, two wood choppers, four boat men and a Japanese.

Col Scott said before sailing for the north that the cost of the expedition was approximately $20,000 and that he had been planning for the big hunt for years. The party will penetrate from Skagway into the interior about 250 miles, hence into the Yukon territory, where Col. Scott and Baxter are desirous of meeting some of the herds of caribou reported to be numerous there this summer. The main object of the trip is to secure mountain sheep and hides of the Alaskan grizzly.

PHYSICIAN ADVISES CUTICURA REMEDIES

For Eczema. Patient's Wrist and Shin Itched Like Poison. Scratched Until They Bled. Says: "Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured Me."

"Four years ago I had places break out on my wrist and on my shin which would itch and burn by spells, and scratching them would not seem to give any relief. When the trouble first began, my wrist and shin itched like poison. I would scratch those places until they would bleed before I could get any relief. Afterwards the places would scale over, and the flesh underneath would look red and feverish. Sometimes it would begin to itch until it would waken me from my sleep, and I would have to go through the scratching ordeal again.

"I consulted our physician in regard to it, and he pronounced it "dry eczema." I used an ointment which the doctor gave me, but it did no good. Then he advised me to try the Cuticura Remedies. As this trouble has been in our family for years, and is considered hereditary, I felt anxious to try to head it off. I got the Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills, and they seemed to be just what I needed.

"The disease was making great headway on my system until I got the Cuticura Remedies which have cleared my skin of the great pest. From the time the eczema healed four years ago, until now, I have never felt any of its pest, and I am thankful to the Cuticura Soap and Ointment which certainly cured me. I always use the Cuticura Soap for toilet, and I hope other sufferers from skin diseases will use the Cuticura Soap and Ointment." (Signed) Irven Hutchison, Three Rivers, Mich., Mar. 16, 1911.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold throughout the world, a liberal sample of each, with 32-p. book on the skin and scalp will be sent free, on application to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. 17A, Boston.

WEST END

FORMER PASTOR HERE "TO COOL OFF"

Rev. Arvid Edstam, pastor of a large Swedish Baptist congregation at Kansas City, Mo., has come to Duluth to "cool off" for two weeks.

Rev. Mr. Edstam knows Duluth's reputation for cool breezes in the summer time, because he lived here six years, when he was pastor of the First Swedish Baptist church of the West end.

For one accustomed to spend the summer in a hot city and who desires an ideal spot to get relief from the torrid temperatures, Duluth is the place, says Rev. Mr. Edstam.

He was pastor of the local congregation for six years up to two years ago, when he resigned and accepted a call to Worthington, Minn. He stayed there one year and then went to Kansas City, Mo. After a two weeks' visit in Duluth, he will leave for Ohio, where he will attend the annual national conference of the Swedish Baptist church.

REV. ARVID EDSTAM.

Tonight Rev. Mr. Edstam will give an address to his former congregation at the Swedish temple, Twenty-second avenue west and Third stret, after which a reception will be held for him. He will also occupy the pulpit of the Swedish temple at one of the services Sunday.

Rev. Mr. Edstam is a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Fredin of 3 North Eleventh avenue west.

DANIEL W. McRAE DEAD AT TACOMA

Word has been received in Duluth of the death of Daniel W. McRae, a former resident of the West end, at Taconia, Wash., last week. Mr. McRae's family was prominent in the western end of the city during the early history of Duluth. He is survived by one sister, Mrs. D. C. McKay, living here. Mr. McRae left Duluth twenty-five years ago.

In 1881 Mr. McRae joined the Second Presbyterian church of the West end and was for many years an active worker in church affairs. The following account of the funeral was taken from a Tacoma paper:

"There was a large attendance at the funeral of the late Daniel W. McRae this afternoon. The services were held at the First Presbyterian church, officers and employes of the St. Paul & Tacoma Lumber company attending in a body. Mr. McRae had for twenty-two years been master mechnic for the company. The casket was covered by a large spray of lilies and other choice flowers sent by his fellow employes, who also sent a floral design of a large broken wheel. There was also a large standard cross from the St. Paul & Tacoma Lumber company, a large emblem from Tacoma council No. 26, Universal Craftsman Council of Engineers, composed of master Masons, and a Masonic design from Tacoma lodge, No. 22, F. & A. M. Rev. Murdoch McLeod officiated at the church. The Masons had charge of the services at Tacoma cemetery."

Pavement Repaired.

The pavement on the south side of West Superior street between Fifteenth and Twenty-first avenues west has been repaired by the board of public works and to all appearances, the improvement will be a satisfactory one. It is probable that the north half of the street will be repaired this year. The total cost of the resurfacing of the paving is about $12,000.

Mrs. and Mrs. Lawrence of Port Arthur, Can., are spending their honeymoon in Duluth, the guest of West end friends.

Miss Helen Anderson has gone to the Twin Cities on a month's visit with relatives.

FREE TITLE TO SURVIVOR IS AGAINST THE LAW.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—J. A. O. Preus, state insurance commissioner, has served notice on Dennis E. Lane, a real estate dealer in St. Paul, that he is violating the law in offering to give, free of further encumbrance, title to lots where the buyer dies before full payment has been completed.

This is in line with the ruling of Attorney General Simpson recently made, to the effect that purchasers of household furnishings who are given a contract calling for title to their goods in case of death are receiving insurance, and the firm making such offer is acting contrary to law.

PATIENTS SAID TO BE ABUSED

Seven Attendants in Cook County Hospitals Discharged.

Chicago, Aug. 17.—Seven attendants charged with cruelty in the treatment of patients in Cook county institutions, have been suspended and formal complaint filed against them with the civil service commission as a result of President Peter Bartzen's investigation, begun Tuesday.

To obtain evidence against the attendants, President Bartzen of the county board had three special investigators "adjudged insane" and sent to the asylum for the insane at Dunning and the detention hospital. It was upon the reports made by these special investigators that the seven attendants were suspended.

The reports of the investigators give details of the alleged cruel treatment of patients. Pearl Miller, an attendant at the detention hospital, is accused of binding a wet towel around the neck of a woman patient and choking the victim until she bled at the mouth. This means is said to have been used when patients refused to eat.

Other methods said to have been used to discipline patients were to beat them over the head with a stocking containing a bar of soap, or with a pillow slip packed with soiled linen. One report describes how a woman patient named Lizzie Sharp was bound to a bench for seven days while the attendants read newspapers and played cards. Frequent cases are cited where nurses twisted patients' arms, struck them in the face and roughly handled them

This Week's Sunday School Lesson

WRITTEN FOR THE HERALD BY REV. J. S. KIRTLEY, D. D.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON: AUG. 20.

Jeremiah xxxvii, 4-21; Jeremiah Cast Into Prison.

THE CONNECTION.

Jehoiakim, who burned Jeremiah's message, lived six or seven years longer. He accepted the yoke of Babylon, but there were two parties—Egyptian and Babylonian—in the city, and the weak king was won over to the Egyptian party. That brought Nebuchadnezzar upon them, who spoiled the temple and took away seven thousand of their choicest men into captivity. That was about 606 and the beginning of the seventy years of captivity. The conqueror disposed of Jehoiakim in some way and put Jehoiakin, whose name differs by one letter, on the throne and in three months took him, with many others, away to Babylon, where he was kept in captivity thirty-seven years. On the throne Nebuchadnezzar placed Zedekiah. He was "a shadow king." Instead of remaining true to the pledges made to Babylon he began a revolt with the aid of Ammon, Tyre and Egypt. That brought Nebuchadnezzar down on them again, who besieged their city in 589 B. C., and after an awful siege, reduced the city and carried many more people into captivity. At one time the siege was raised, when Nebuchadnezzar went south to meet the Egyptian army under Hophra. Then the people regained their fanatical hope that Jehovah would interfere in some marvelous way to save them. Those who were in exile and those at home were nerving each other to the same wild hopes.

Jeremiah at home and Ezekiel over in captivity were urging the people to submit to Babylon, as the will of God and the very best thing for them. Of course, they were called traitors and were treated badly. The present tragical incident in Jeremiah's life was at the time the siege was raised and Nebuchadnezzar went off after the Egyptian army.

THE LESSON.

I.

He Dashes Their False Hopes—1-10.

"Now Jeremiah came in and went out among the people; for they had not put him into prison. And Pharaoh's army was come forth out of Egypt; and when the Chaldeans that were besieging Jerusalem heard tidings of them, they brake up from Jerusalem.

"Then came the word of Jehovah unto the prophet Jeremiah, saying, Thus saith Jehovah, the God of Israel, Thus shall ye say to the king of Judah, that sent you unto Me to inquire of Me: Behold, Pharaoh's army, which is come forth to help you, shall return to Egypt into their own land. And the Chaldeans shall come again, and fight against this city; and they shall take it, and burn it with fire. Thus saith Jehovah, Deceive not yourselves, saying, The Chaldeans shall surely depart from us; for they shall not depart. For though ye had smitten the whole army of the Chaldeans that fight against you, and there remained but wounded men among them, yet would they rise up every man in his tent, and burn this city with fire."

1. COWARDICE.—The king was scared. The besiegers had left the city and gone to drive back the Egyptians and the deluded people thought God had surely delivered them as when He drove away Sennacherib, yet the king turned to the man whom he knew to be true and asked him to pray to God for him. Without God no man is sure of anything.

2. COURAGE.—Jeremiah sends him a message specially given him by God. Note three things in the reply. He claims it from God; he utters it with calm confidence in God; he dashes their hope of relief. The Chaldeans will defeat the Egyptians and come back to finish up Jerusalem, with fire. This means that the king had brought destruction on the city by trying to throw off the yoke of Nebuchadnezzar. A fourth thing is also clear, God was bringing about their defeat as a punishment. He was on the side of the Chaldeans, using them as a scourge with His own people. It required courage in Jeremiah to say this to his king.

II.

He Is Imprisoned for His Faithfulness.—11-15.

"And it came to pass that, when the army of the Chaldeans was broken up from Jerusalem for fear of Pharaoh's army, then Jeremiah went forth out of Jerusalem to go into the land of Benjamin, to receive his portion there, in the midst of the people. And when he was in the gate of Benjamin, a captain of the ward was there, whose name was Irijah, the son of Shelemiah, the son of Hananiah; and he laid hold on Jeremiah the prophet, saying, Thou art falling away to the Chaldeans. Then said Jeremiah, It is false; I am not falling away to the Chaldeans. But he hearkened not to him; so Irijah laid hold on Jeremiah, and brought him to the princes. And the princes were wroth with Jeremiah and smote him, and put him in prison in the house of Jonathan the scribe; for they had made that the prison."

1. PRETEXT.—When he started out the north gate, called the gate of Benjamin, to go out home and get his share of the priest's income, or of his estate, an eminent official accused him of running away from the city to join the Chaldeans and that gave him and the others, whose position Jeremiah had opposed, a chance to handle him. And they used their opportunity.

2. PRISON.—They thought they were in great luck. Before putting him in prison they inflicted torture on him, not in an official way, through officials, but they did it themselves, it was such a pleasure. Our respect for the old man is not lessened by his emphatic denial of his guilt and his frank statement that they were lying, in their charges. The prison was a sort of adjunct to the residence of the secretary of state, and was a more personal means of torturing him. They could turn it into an entertainment.

III.

"When Jeremiah was come into the dungeon-house, and into the cells, and Jeremiah had remained there many days; then Zedekiah the king sent, and fetched him: and the king asked him secretly in his house, and said, Is there any word from Jehovah? And Jeremiah said, There is. He said also, Thou shalt be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon. Moreover Jeremiah said unto King Zedekiah, Wherein have I sinned against thee, or against thy servants, or against this people, that ye have put me in prison? Where now are your prophets that prophesied unto you, saying, The king of Babylon shall not come against you, nor against this land? And now hear, I pray thee, O my lord the king: let my supplication, I pray thee, be presented before thee, that thou cause me not to return to the house of Jonathan the scribe, lest I die there. Then Zedekiah the king commanded, and they committed Jeremiah into the court of the guard; and they gave him daily a loaf of bread out of the bakers' street, until all the bread in the city was spent. Thus Jeremiah remained in the court of the guard."

1. SECRECY.—Imagine the weakness of the king, when his princes put Jeremiah in prison without asking his permission and without allowing him a trial; when the king didn't dare to release him boldly, but in his fear of the mighty man, sends for him secretly and asks, in under breath, "have you had any other message from God?" Shame on such a king!

2. MASTERY.—We can see the scorn in the old man's face as he answers and tells the king he will fall into the hands of the king of Babylon and asks him what has become of the false prophets who have been telling him there was no danger. It is one of the most tender appeals to our human interest that he asks to be put in some prison where he will not die from the chill of the damp dungeon.

3. RELIEF.—Afraid to take his life or allow him to suffer too much, the weak king removes him to the larger court for prisoners and gives him an allowance of bread from the public bakery on "Bakers Row." Perhaps, even then, he was afraid of the disapproval of his corrupt courtiers.

WHAT THE MASTERS SAY.

It is the reproach that has been cast in all ages on all men who try to bring God's will to bear on national actions. The low-toned average mind always thinks that the preacher of lofty ideals is a dangerous person. Whoever sets himself against what the many want, or condemns their way of living, is a mischief-maker, a dangerous fanatic seeking to cast gloom over life, to take away mirth. And all the while Jeremiah's counsel would have saved Judah, and her true enemies were the "princes," who posed as her only real friends. They had not learned, and many among us have similarly failed to learn, that the only real friends of an individual or of a nation are those who peal in deaf ears. Do as God wills, and it shall be well with thee.—Maclaran.

It was a sign of Judah's frailty and folly, that so quickly she was wont to court the help of Gentile nations in times of peril. Sometimes her resort was to the Oriental nations, and sometimes to Egypt. Indeed, her wars were with all nations, and no matter which one invaded her, she would buy the aid of those next at hand, more than once engaging as an ally a nation which she had herself fought, and that, too, to fight a nation who had formerly been an ally. When we get among bad companions we will find that we cannot trust to any of them, and the one we run with today may be running after us tomorrow.—Hatcher.

PERTINENT QUESTIONS.

1. Is it possible for any man to be entirely true to God and not have enemies?
2. Is a brave prophet the highest need of every community now? If so, why?
3. Why is the denouncing of home sins the test of courage?
4. Does nearness to God confer special authority on one?
5. Has war ever brought blessings and how?
6. Why is inaction more injurious than mistakes that come from honest courage?
7. What is the greatest need of men in position and power?

GROWTH IN INDUSTRY

Number of Establishments Have Grown From 72 to 99.

Washington, Aug. 17.—A preliminary statement of the general results of the thirteenth United States census of manufactures of the city of Superior, Wis., was issued today by Census Director Durand. It contains a summary comparing the figures of 1904 and 1909, by city totals, prepared under the direction of William M. Steuart, chief statistician for manufactures, bureau of the census. The figures are subject to such revision as may be necessary after a further examination of the original reports.

The summary shows percentages of increase as follows: 41 per cent in the salaries and wages; 38 per cent in the number of establishments; 38 per cent in the average number of wage earners; 35 per cent in the value added by manufacture; 8 per cent in the miscellaneous expenses; 6 per cent in the number of salaried officials and clerks; 5 per cent in the capital invested; and 3 per cent in the value of products.

There is a decrease of 8 per cent in the cost of materials used.

There were 99 establishments in 1909, as compared with 72 in 1904, an increase of 27, or 38 per cent.

The value of products in 1909 was $6,574,000 and $6,357,000 in 1904, an increase of $217,000, or 3 per cent. The average per establishment was approximately $66,000 in 1909 and about $88,000 in 1904.

The value of products represents their selling value or price at the plants as actually turned out by the factories durnig the census year, and does not necessarily have any relation to the amount of sales for that year. The values under this head also include the amount received for work done on materials furnished by others.

	Census— 1909	1904	Per cent of increase, 1904-1909.
Number of establishments..	99	72	38

COAL FRAUDS ARE ALLEGED

Bullock and Houston Arrested in Pacific Coast Towns.

Portland, Or., Aug. 17.—Charged with conspiracy to defraud the government by securing a contract to supply coal to forts in Alaska in 1908 at an alleged excessive price per ton, John H. Bullock, former president of the John J. Sesnon company of Seattle and Alaska, was arrested in this city yesterday by United States Marshal Colwell.

Bullock was released later on $2,500 bonds, to appear before the United States district court in Tacoma.

It was because of his own connection with the alleged transaction that Capt. Jarvis shot and killed himself on June 23 last.

Coal Price Too High.

It is alleged that three years ago the Northwestern Commercial company and the John J. Sesnon company conspired unlawfully to force a high price of coal upon the war department for supplies for Forts Davis and Liscum, Alaska.

The alleged unlawful transaction was laid before the department of justice a year or more ago by J. H. Douglas, former auditor of the Commercial company, who was removed from office through the influence of Capt. Jarvis, a bitter quarrel having arisen between the two men.

Delegate James Wickersham of Alaska, on June 22 last, introduced in congress a resolution reciting these allegations and making certain others. Capt. Jarvis, who had faced death in many forms in the Arctic and wore the gold medal of congress for heroism, shot and killed himself in Seattle the next day.

Second Arrest Made.

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 17.—Charles E. Houston, manager of the Pacific Coast Coal company, was arrested here late yesterday on a federal warrant charging conspiracy to defraud the government in connection with contracts for furnishing coal to army posts in Alaska. Houston was released on bonds of $2,500.

MISSING GIRL IN DENTIST'S OFFICE

Jessie McDonald Is Found After Being Lost Eighteen Months.

San Bernardino, Cal., Aug. 17.—Breaking into the office of A. W. McDavid, a dentist, at midnight, Chief of Police Mespelt found huddled in a corner with a baby at her breast, Miss Jessie McDonald, a high school girl, who has been missing from her home for eighteen months. The girl declared she had been in subjection in a house adjoining the dentist's office.

Miss McDonald, who is 20 years old, was a pitiful figure, clothed in ragged garments and wasted almost to a skeleton. McDavid, who is a married man, was arrested on a statutory charge.

Miss McDonald declared she had been held in subjection by McDavid through hypnotic influence and had undergone awful suffering. Almost in the same breath she declared that she loved McDavid.

State's Attorney Goodsell declared that only at night, and then closely veiled, would McDavid allow her to leave the apartment. On these occasions he would take her buggy riding in the outskirts of the city.

The young woman gave birth to a son four months ago, for days at a time the infant has been her only companion, while the dentist was away with his wife and family.

Loss of Time means Loss of Pay

Kidney trouble and the ills it breeds means lost time and lost pay to many a working man. Mr. Balent, 1214 Little Penna St., Streator, Ill., was so bad from kidney and bladder trouble that he could not work, but he says: "I took Foley Kidney Pills for only a short time and got entirely well and was soon able to go back to work, and am feeling well and healthier than before." Foley Kidney Pills are tonic in action, quick in results—a good friend to the working man or woman who suffer from kidney ills. For sale by all druggists.

SENATE AGREES TO THE PUBLICITY BILL.

Washington, Aug. 17.—The senate, without division, agreed yesterday to the conference report on the campaign publicity bill and the report was presented to the house, action being deferred there. The measure will then be ready for the president's signature.

The bill as agreed to by the conferees includes the senate amendment extending the requirement for publicity of campaign expenses to primary and special elections and nominating conventions as well as to general elections.

The amendment limits candidates for senator to campaign expenditures of $10,000 and candidates for representatives to $5,000. The conferees disagreed to the senate amendment which would have forbidden any candidate from spending "a sum in the aggregate exceeding more than 10 cents for each voter in his district or state."

ASK RECEIVER FOR BURLEY CONCERNS.

Lexington, Ky., Aug. 17.—J. D. Grover, James W. Tacker and John F. Ford, Scott county tobacco growers, have filed a suit in the Fayette circuit court here asking for a receiver and an accounting from the Burley Tobacco company and the Burley Tobacco society.

It is charged that the companies which controlled most of the burley product of four states last year are insolvent, and that this condition was brought about by reckless handling of money belonging to poolers.

BRYAN SAYS TRUST INTIMIDATED ROOSEVELT.

Urbara, Ill., Aug. 17.—William J Bryan, speaking before a Chautauqua audience here, declared that Former President Roosevelt was "intimidated" by the Steel trust in consenting to the Tennessee Coal & Iron company merger. In this connection Mr. Bryan said:

"Placing the most favorable construction on Mr. Roosevelt's own words before the congressional investigation committee isn't it a pitiful, a pathetic fact, that such an organization as the Steel trust can be so all-powerful in this country as to walk into the office of the president of the United States and intimidate him with the fear of a panic into allowing it to carry out its designs?"

MARS AND SATURN IN CONJUNCTION NEAR MOON.

Cambridge, Mass., Aug. 17.—The Eastern heavens last night presented an unusual sight, that of the apparent conjunction of two planets—Mars and Saturn—near the moon. The planets, also appearing to the naked eye as a brilliant double star, were in fact about two-thirds the apparent width of the moon apart.

The spectacle was so unusual that Prof. E. C. Pickering, director of the Harvard college observatory, came from his summer home to supervise observations of the phenomenon. Photographs of the conjunction were taken at the observatory.

WATSON HAS INDIAN SIGN

Outcast Star Defeats Duluth in Second Contest By 6 to 2 Score.

Worman Pitches Poor Game and Is Found Freely By La Crosse.

La Crosse, Aug. 17.—Duluth was defeated yesterday by the score of 6 to 2, chiefly through the inability of the visitors to hit Lefty Watson, the Outcast star. Watson held the visitors pretty safe at every stage of the journey, while the home team had little trouble with the slants of Red Worman. In the absence of a regular umpire Johnson and Brenton officiated. The score:

The twenty-sixth man to face him, Erwin, Brooklyn's catcher, was the only one to get to first. The visitors bunched their hits and won easily, 9 to 0. Wagner hurt his right ankle by tripping over second base in the opening inning and is likely to be out of the game for a week.

RAJAH OF ST. LOUIS IS INJURED AGAIN.

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 17.—Philadelphia bunched hits with fielding and battery errors by St. Louis yesterday and easily won the game, the score being 10 to 2. In trying to touch out Lobert at the plate in the first inning, Bresnahan was badly spiked on the right wrist and will probably be out of the game for two weeks. Although Bresnahan dropped the ball he and several of the visitors protested O'Day's decision allowing Lobert to score, and the former, and Huggins, were ordered off the field by the umpire. Sherwood Magee played his first game since July 10, when his assault upon Umpire Finneran caused his suspension by President Lynch.

SUPERIOR DROPS LEAGUE LEADERSHIP TO PIRATES

Winona, Minn., Aug. 17.—Winona came back into the league leadership, after a day's visit to second place, by taking the second game of the crucial series between the two teams by a 3 to 1 score.

Wagner pitched great ball for the Pirates, holding the Red Legs to five hits, whiffing nine of the visitors and giving but one pass. Rhoades was wild and erratic. He was found for seven hits, two of these coming in the seventh inning after Rhoades had issued two passes.

Both teams played great ball in the field. Grogan made the only error charged against the visitors, making a misplay on a hard hit ground ball to the left of him. Wagner made the only bubble charged against the Pirates, failing to handle cleanly a sharply hit grounder.

Uncle Joe Killian donned the mask and pad for the afternoon and his catching was one of the features of the contest.

ST. PAUL OARSMEN TO HOLD A FALL REGATTA

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 17.—Under the leadership of Capt. M. M. Cochran, the members of the Minnesota Boat club are rapidly perfecting themselves as oarsmen and present indications are that the fall regatta will be most successful. This local event will be held in the latter part of September, but the members are very anxious to make it as great a success as the spring regatta, and consequently have commenced practice at an early date.

"Lapstreak" Feature Race.

The feature of the regatta will be a "lapstreak" or working boat race wherein two senior four and two junior four crews are practicing continually, and the race should be close and exciting. The club is famous for its successful four-oared crews, and the defeat at Duluth this year has caused the members to spend much time in the development of new four-oared crews, so that a better showing may be made at Winnipeg next year.

Race Senior Singles Oct. 1.

The championship senior singles race will be held Oct. 1, and a number of devotees of sculling are preparing themselves for this race.

The relaxation of rigid training rules, following the regatta at Duluth, has caused some of the members to spend time perfecting themselves in the art of swimming. This branch of the work is under the leadership of N. P. Langford, Jr., and regular lessons, including long distance swims, are given every noon.

SIR R. IS WINNER IN FEATURE RACE

Three Good Events on Opening Program at Columbus Meet.

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 17.—Three good races were featured here yesterday afternoon, fast time and close finishes keeping the spectators on their toes throughout.

Great interest centered in the Hartman Hotel stake of $5,000 for 2:13 pacers. After winning the first heat in the fast time of 2:04¼, Vernon McKinney acted badly and was distanced in the next heat, Sir R., driven by Murphy, going on and winning handily without a skip.

In the 2:05 trot, Brace Girdle showed wonderful endurance and after being second in the first heat and third in the second took the next three heats straight.

ARMSTRONG AND WHEELER MEET IN TENNIS FINALS

Veteran and Youngster Play for Right to Meet State Champion.

Dinwiddie Plays Well—Way of Virginia Wins Special Singles.

This afternoon the finals in the state tennis tournament are to be played. J. H. Wheeler will meet the youthful Armstrong in a contest that gives the right to the winner to contest with John Adams, state champion, for the title.

Both Armstrong and Wheeler have fought their way down to the finals by steady and at times brilliant tennis. Each man won a splendid victory yesterday, Armstrong defeating Courtenay Dinwiddie and Wheeler winning from the veteran Jayne of Minneapolis.

Armstrong has been generally picked as the winner of the tournament. In Wheeler he will met a heady and strong player, who knows every trick of the game and is ever alert to take instant advantage of every opportunity. While the majority pick Armstrong as the winner, every follower of the progress of the tournament believes the game will be the hardest fought of any of the week.

Yesterday afternoon brought together Wheeler and Jayne. While the two men were very evenly matched, Wheeler placed his returns nicely and time and time again won points by his accurate placing.

Wheeler also played the lines in nice shape and was most accurate in returning serves. The match was an interesting one to the spectators, and one in which jolly good nature shone forth.

Dinwiddie Plays Well.

The best game of yesterday was the one played between Joe Armstrong and Courtenay Dinwiddie of this city. As has been predicted by the closest followers of the different matches, Armstrong worked his way into the finals, but not before he had to play a strong and brilliant game to defeat Dinwiddie, who yesterday played some of the best tennis ever seen on the Duluth court.

Going into the contest against a champion, which is a handicap in itself to the average player, Dinwiddie refused to recognize the edge that most champions are supposed to possess, and played a strong and consistent game right up to the end of the third set.

Dinwiddie played, perhaps, the best tennis he has shown on a Duluth court. At times he actually outplayed the brilliant youngster from St. Paul. But then Armstrong would rally and show flashes of brilliant tennis that shaded the best efforts of Dinwiddie. It is to the credit of Dinwiddie that he forced Armstrong to play such brilliant tennis to win.

Armstrong took the first set, 6-2, and the next two sets by scores of 6-4 Dinwiddie took several of the games by showing superior tennis in placing and net play. The puzzling break of Armstrong's serve did not bother Dinwiddie as it has some of the other players, though undoubtedly the break caused of some of Dinwiddie's returns to fall outside the lines.

On the other hand, Dinwiddie played an excellent net game, bothering Armstrong by sure and accurate return of hard drives.

Play in the Doubles.

Play in the doubles started yesterday. From the present indications Burton and Armstrong and Wheeler and Jayne will fight it out. Wheeler and Jayne are a veteran pair, awfully hard to beat and playing with all the confidence in the world and excellent team work.

Ward Burton is a hard and clever player and teaming with Armstrong will also make this pair a combination hard to beat. Wheeler and Jayne defeated the Weinhagen brothers of St. Paul, after the brothers had disposed of Amundson and Colton, while Armstrong and Burton were busy winning from Haynie and Kennedy and Merrill and Le Sure, the former player taking the place of Sinclair.

Fitzpatrick and Mowry defeated Congdon and McBride, but not until after the Duluth men had given their opponents a rattling game and made them play hard tennis all the way through. The Duluth pair took the first game, 6-4, but were defeated in the other two contests by scores of 6-4, 6-2.

Clark and Cathcart, a strong combination, were given a hard contest in the second set of their match with Stillman and Craig. The visitors won the first game, 6-2, but in the second set the Duluth men came back strong and played a close and hard game, but lost 8-6.

Several of the games were drawn out yesterday, because some of the contests went into three sets. Because of this fact the special singles were played on the courts of the Northland Country club.

Virginia Man Wins.

E. I. Shepard of Winona won from Troutt of Two Harbors, 6-3, 6-1. Way of Virginia won from E. E. Shepard of Winona, 6-4, 6-4, and from Manville, Two Harbors, 6-1, 6-1, and then in the finals won from Neff of Virginia, 6-4, 6-4. The Virginia youngster showed some clever tennis and next year he may be heard from in the state tournament.

After the Armstrong-Wheeler match this afternoon, the players will be given a trip up the St. Louis river, taking dinner at the Spirit Lake branch and holding the annual meeting of the association there.

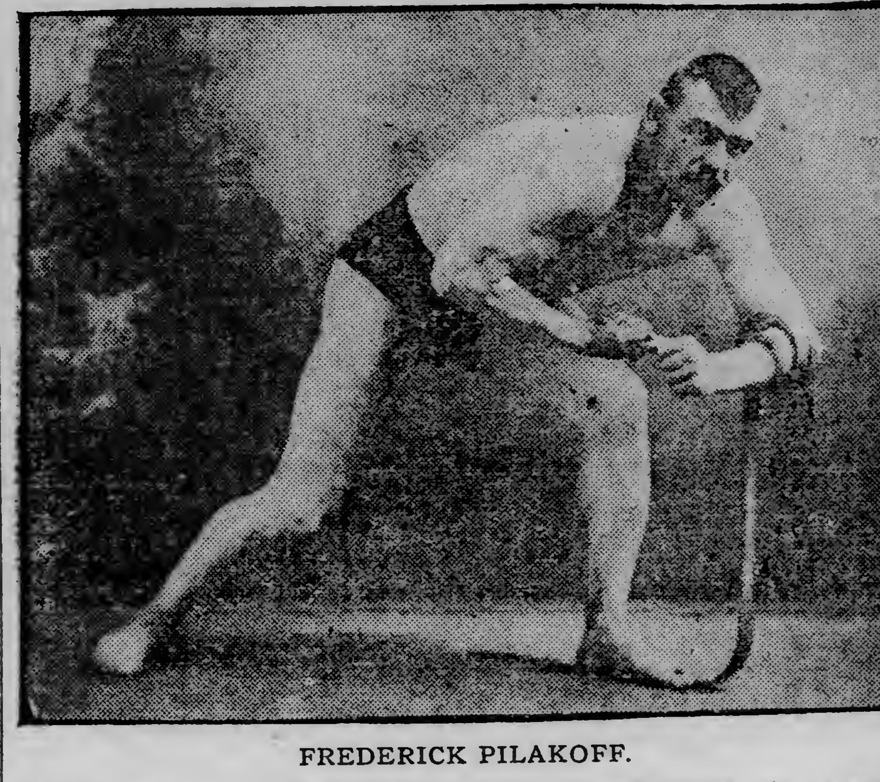
PILAKOFF WILL MAKE HIS BOW TO WRESTLING FANS



FREDERICK PILAKOFF.

At the big Auditorium, which will be specially cooled by huge electric fans this evening, Frederick Pilakoff, the Finnish Lion, will meet in a finish match John Soderlund, champion Finnish wrestler of the state, and in addition will give his exhibition of strength, which consists of a varied and highly interesting program.

Fans in this city have wished for some time past, since the big matches have been put on in Duluth, that they had some wrestler who would be big enough to meet the leading heavyweight wrestlers of the world. In Pilakoff Duluth appears to have this man, an athlete who has established a great name in Europe and who also made a big hit wrestling in the big cities of the East last season.

Hassan Abdallah, one of the various terrible Turks, who has been in the city for the past few days, promises to be at the ringside this evening and issue a challenge to the big Finnish Lion. Abdallah claims to have wrestled both Gotch and Hackenschmidt. At least the Turk will be one of the interested observers of the introduction to the wrestling fans of this city of Pilakoff.

Modern wrestling has come to be looked upon as a battle of brawn and cleverness. Wrestling is no gentle sport; it is one of the roughest of the games calling for strength, endurance and gameness. Pilakoff is a giant in stature and bulk and has a physique that will compare with any of the leading wrestlers in the world. Next to the great Hackenschmidt, he is probably one of the strongest men in the world.

Born in the same village where George Hackenschmidt first saw the light of day, Pilakoff has been trained in the European schools of wrestling. Hugely strong, he is another of those giants who have been the wonder of Americans.

Hackenschmidt, Zbyszko, Lurich and other of the mat men of Europe have been the wonder of followers of athletics in this country. In his tour of Europe Jack Curley stated that he saw many men on the other side of the pond wonderful in physique and prodigious in strength, like the fabled giants of mythology.

The giant Pilakoff is another giant who has traveled forth from the open door of Europe. He has been in this country but a year, wrestling in this country but a season, and yet in that time he has established an enviable record.

* * *

YESTERDAY we awoke to the fact that Superior was leading the league. Here is a league fighting for popularity in a season that has been one of the worst on record for minor leagues, with an executive either so indifferent or so care- that the official standing is not given out to the papers around the circuit.

The other morning the Duluth and Superior papers held a consultation in regard to the correct standing of the teams. To be perfectly frank in the matter, neither paper was positive. At several times the present season papers around the circuit have carried different standings of the teams.

Here we are in August, past the middle of the month, and we have had one official batting average issued, and that in the first part of the season. Practically no official communications have come from the president of the league, and the fans and writers around the circuit are at sea regarding the batting averages of the different players.

Just the other day a Detroit scout dropped into The Herald office. In a friendly chat the man scouting for Hughey Jennings' crew asked the batting average of Miller and Leber, as he intended looking the pair over that afternoon.

There was no way of telling the big league searcher of talent the clouting ability of the two players. He was told the truth regarding the state of ignorance we are bel- kept in. That's a fine thing to tell a man coming here to look over players.

This is an age of advertising. It pays to advertise, judiciously and intelligently. You can't really expect the fans around the Minny league to take a great deal of interest in the organization when the officials of the league, and the club owners can be held to their share of this blame, fail to keep the public even informed of the batting and fielding averages of the players of the various teams.

It isn't funny; it's a disgrace and a matter of dismal neglect. That a league should be run the way the Minny has been run the present season, is simply inviting disorganization. Each team of the league is supposed to have an official scorer and to pay that scorer for his duties. The failure to send out averages makes some of us wonder why these men are hired and why paid.

The criticism of an official is not personal or need not be in any sense petty. The executive of this league has certainly laid himself open to criticism. The club owners of the Minnesota-Wisconsin league, directors of the organization, are men interested in a business. From the viewpoint of the outsider one would think these men sufficiently interested in their business to demand of an official paid out of the resources of the league treasury, services calculated to serve the best purposes of the league.

There are generally two sides to every story. Around the Minny league circuit they are in many places blaming the fans for not turning out. Charity generally begins at the hearthstone. L've men are the ones that generally succeed in enterprises of any sort, from foreign missionary work to promoting prize fights. It is up to the directors of this league to drop some of the bush methods and to inaugurate some of the live methods that are at work in other minor leagues of the country.

This article isn't a knock; it is the plain truth stated in colors so drab that you couldn't see it in a dried out potato field.

NATIONAL MINES IN NEW ZEALAND

Resident of Antipodes Tells of New Public Ownership Plan.

Algernon Hutt of Christ church, New Zealand, was at the Spalding today on his way to the Mesaba range to view American methods of iron mining.

"At Christ church," said Mr. Hutt, "we are sluicing off surface gravels and clays overlaying the iron deposit. We prepare this ore for shipment to England. We have large deposits of magnetic iron. Much of it is in the form of black sand on our beaches which are evidently derived from the disintegration of hornblende andesites and more basic volcanic, rich in titaniferous magnetite.

"We have one deposit of about 70,000,000 tons of ore that is within seven miles of good coking coal. The labor people run things in New Zealand and they are talking about nationalizing our iron mines and working them for the people instead of allowing their development by individual capitalists."

PEOPLE ARE AROUSED.

Reported Bagleyites Wanted to Lynch Negro Assailant.

Bagley, Minn., Aug. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—It is currently reported that a crowd was organized here, a rope purchased and the spot selected for the lynching of Tramp Shine, colored, now in the Beltrami county jail, charged with assaulting Mrs. Gilbert Olson.

The lynching party is said to have been organized Friday evening and was ready to grab the negro and string him up between the hours of 12:30 and 1 a. m. This idea was abandoned at the request of the husband of the negro's victim to permit the law to take its course and by the pleading of a few citizens of Bagley, who strongly advised against an act of violence.

Finally the crowd dispersed and the negro was taken to Bemidji by Sheriff Anderson and safely lodged in the Beltrami county jail.

Since that time Sheriff Anderson has been collecting evidence and has returned from Mallard with all the missing links necessary in the chain of evidence which it is believed will convict Shine of the crime.

PURPOSE IS EVIDENT

Whittier Investigation Regarded as Effort to Oust Ringdal and Vasaly.

Animus Against Johnson Appointees Apparent in the Proceedings.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—It is now regarded around the capitol as a settled fact that the sole purpose of the Whittier investigation is the ousting of P. M. Ringdahl and C. E. Vasaly, Democratic members of the board of control and appointees of the late Governor Johnson.

The method of procedure in the investigation, the points on which emphasis is laid in the taking of testimony, the whole aspect of the proceeding, are taken by those who have followed the case from its inception, as certain indications that the administration in putting Superintendent Whittier on the carpet, is striking over his shoulders at the Democratic members of the board.

It was common gossip around the capital during the legislative session last winter that the administration was out for the scalps of Vasaly and Ringdal. It is now common gossip that the Whittier investigation was started as a means of getting the desired scalps. The investigation at every turn is showing animus against the Democratic members of the board and it is believed here that the vigor with which the prosecution is inspired, not by a desire to oust the superintendent, but by a determination to discredit the Johnson appointees on the board.

It is also reported that for some reason James J. Hill is anxious to see Ringdal and Vasaly deposed and that fact is believed to have something to do with the activity of the administration toward ousting them.

"SLUSH FUND" TO BEAT TRADE PACT

American Trusts Reported Preparing to Fight in Canada.

New York, Aug. 17.—A Washington dispatch to the American says: Definite information that a final resort to the use of a corruption fund has been determined upon to defeat reciprocity in Canada has been received in administration circles here.

Specifically, the lumber trust, and paper trust and the beef trust are in the field with any sum that may be deemed necessary to buy the Canadian electorate.

Again, specifically, the lumber trust will spend $1,000,000 to save the $1.50 tax on lumber, which will be wiped out if Canada, in the pending election, votes in favor of the reciprocity pact.

The headquarters of the boodle funds will be in New York, not far from the offices of the paper trust. A high official of the paper concern will be in charge of the campaign.

And so certain is it that these facts are beyond dispute that an investigation is already under way intended to trace the money back from the points of distribution in Canada to its source in New York.

Would Corrupt Canadians.

A plan of campaign has been mapped out, not ingenius, only, but dastardly in the double respect that it looks to the corruption of a considerable body of the Canadian electorate by the stirring up of racial and national prejudices, to the disruption, in fact of the friendly relations that exist between Canada and the United States.

The plan is to beat reciprocity on the ground that it is the forerunner of annexation. A propaganda is under way to show, or attempt to show, to the Canadians by innuendo, by the distortion of statements of statesmen and the press, by absolute forgery of public utterances, that there is concealed behind President Taft's reciprocity plan a purpose later on to force Canada to become a part of the United States.

These facts are known to administration officials here. And there is good reason to believe that they have been communicated to the officials of the Laurier administration at Ottawa.

Where Are Lobbyists?

For instance, it can be said that both the president and Speaker Champ Clark have been informed that a boodle fund is being raised. It is talked of freely in congress and in the hotels here. And a most significant fact is that of the great horde of lobbyists, who herded here during the reciprocity fight, not one now remains. They have winged their flight, bag and baggage, northward. In Canada these interests will join hands with the protected interests of the dominion in one final fight against the tendency toward the battering down of false barriers against the public weal.

LOCKS JAILER BEHIND BARS

Keeper of International Falls Lockup Not on Outside Nowdays.

International Falls, Minn., Aug. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Charles Ingrahm, who has been jailer here for Sheriff Forrer, is still in the lockup, but on the inside of the bars. This anomalous condition resulted from charges preferred against him.

The sheriff had removed the jailer for some trivial matter. After Ingrahm left to look for another job an inmate of the jail told the sheriff that Ingrahm in searching Engelbretson, the Bridgie township man who was taken to the insane asylum at Fergus Falls, had taken about $30 from the man, which he had not reported to the office. A warrant was immediately sworn out for Ingrahm on a charge of grand larceny in the first degree and he was soon back on the old job but on the other side of the bars.

Fitger's Beer

Brewed in Duluth For More Than 30 Years

Brewed to Be Best in Flavor, Purity and Healthfulness

MORE than thirty years ago Fitger's Beer was first brewed in Duluth. Duluth was chosen as the location of the brewery mainly because of the abundant supply of the finest water for brewing—Lake Superior water. Scientists tell us that this water has no equal for brewing purposes.

Year by year every department of the plant has been improved to keep abreast of the times, and today no more complete brewing establishment operates in this country. Several are larger, to be sure, but their refrigerating and technical equipment is no more modern. Then there's the Fitger knowledge of the best methods and the peculiar Fitger skill which produces a beer of individuality, so differently delicious that Fitger's Beer is famous across the continent.

Order a case for your home. It will be found a source of enjoyment and health. (r)

EDDY THINKS BEDE WILLING

Humorist's Relations With Uncle Joe Are Against Him.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—That J. Adam Bede of Pine City will become a candidate for congressman-at-large under the reapportionment bill just passed by congress, is the belief of Frank M. Eddy of Sauk Center, also a former congressman. Mr. Eddy has been in St. Paul the last day or two talking politics, assimilating some of the atmosphere at the capitol and getting an ear to the rail to see if he can distinguish gubernatorial rumblings in any quarter.

Mr. Bede, who was known as the humorist of the house a few years ago when he was helping make national laws, is away on a lecturing tour. In St. Paul recently, he gave no intimation to friends that he contemplated applying to the state at large to send him back to legislative halls, but Frank Eddy believes it more than an even chance that Mr. Bede will make the application. While he was defeated in his own district when he last ran, Mr. Eddy believes there is a chance of the state at large selecting him.

Says Bede Has Friends.

"Mr. Bede has many friends and admirers who would rally to him, if he chose to run," Mr. Eddy declared. "He is as well known, perhaps, as any Minnesotan who has been in public life."

Mention of his candidacy naturally recalled to local politicians the "standpat" alignments of the Pine City statesman. His friendly relations with President Taft and "Uncle Joe" Cannon are well known and admitted by him. It is problematical, of course, what his Taft leaning would mean to him, but it is certain that his admiration of the "hero of Danville" would cost him many votes unless "Uncle Joe" was renounced. Persons who know Mr. Bede well, however, will not concede the possibility of his renouncing Cannon, although he might declare his connections with the ex-speaker severed. Mr. Bede has been conspicuous in his absence from state politics the past two years, and his attitude on reapportionment, county option and similar measures cannot be held against him.

Sec. 4. The city clerk of the city of Duluth is hereby directed to cause notice to be published in the official paper of the city of Duluth, once in each week, for two consecutive weeks, giving notice of the time and place when the Common Council of the city of Duluth will receive and examine sealed proposals for the purchase of said bonds, the sale thereof to be at a sum not less than the par value thereof, with interest accrued to date of delivery, and the right to reject any and all bids to be reserved to the city of Duluth. Such sale shall be by popular subscription, and residents of the city of Duluth shall be preferred in case of bids otherwise equal, and any person including any actual resident of the city of Duluth may bid on one or more of said bonds in any one of the following named denominations, namely: $50, $100, $500 and $1,000, and if said bids shall be accepted the bonds issued shall be of the denomination called for in such bids. Where not inconsistent with such bids, the bonds shall be of $1,000 each.

Sec. 5. All bids for said bonds shall be without condition or qualifications. They must be sealed and have the name and address of the bidder on the outside of the envelope. No bid for any of said bonds will be opened, received or considered by the Common Council unless the bidder making the same shall have deposited (as a guarantee of good faith) with the city clerk before 2 o'clock p. m. on the day bids are to be received by the Common Council, a certified check on or certificate of deposit of a national bank, payable to the order of the city of Duluth without condition, for an amount equal to one (1) per cent of the full value of the bonds proposed to be bid for, or a good and sufficient bond in said sum, to be approved by the Common Council of said city, and conditioned that the party making said bid will, if awarded the sale, take the bonds and pay for them according to the terms of said bid and this ordinance, and in case of failure so to do the city of Duluth shall have the right to sue upon said bond and to recover the full face thereof, which shall be and in said bond shall be stated as being the sum agreed upon as liquidated damages in case of a breach thereof. And a condition of said bond shall be that the principal and sureties thereon expressly waive all questions of irregularity or illegality in any manner affecting the issue of said bonds, the intention of the bond being to provide for the payment of the said sum of money absolutely without any condition or defense thereto.

Said checks and bonds shall immediately be submitted by the city clerk to the city attorney for his opinion as to whether said checks and bonds conform to the conditions of this ordinance, and the bids of any person whose check or bond the city attorney shall deem to be not in legal form according to the terms of this ordinance shall not be received unless such bidder shall have said check or bond corrected to meet the requirements of the city attorney or deposit a new bond or check duly approved by said city attorney, before 7:30 o'clock p. m. of said day.

In all cases of bids received and not accepted, the check or certificates received therewith shall be returned. In case said bonds are awarded to any bidder and said bidder refuses to accept and pay for said bonds or any part thereof within ten (10) days after notice of delivery, said delivery to be made at the First National Bank of Duluth, the said amount of the certificate of deposit or check furnished to the city shall be retained by the city of Duluth as its own, as and for liquidated damages for the breach of the contract on the part of the said bidder.

In case any bidder furnishing such certificate of deposit or check shall take the said bond, said sum shall be credited to him on account of the payment thereof.

Sec. 6. Said bonds, when duly executed as aforesaid on behalf of the city of Duluth, shall, in accordance with the terms of the contract for their sale, made with the highest responsible bidder, be delivered by the city treasurer to the purchaser thereof on payment of the purchase price thereof to the treasurer of the city of Duluth, whose receipt shall be a full acquittance of the said purchaser, and said purchaser shall not be obliged to see to the application of the purchase money.

Sec. 7. The money derived from the sale of said bonds shall be placed to the credit of the Board of Park Commissioners of the city of Duluth, in the treasury of said city, and shall be used by it for the purpose only of acquiring and improving lands for public parks and parkways in the city of Duluth.

Sec. 8. This ordinance shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage and publication.

SHERIFF IS RETICENT

Refuses to Make Public Governor's Letter on Fight Question.

Eberhart Places Responsibility for Law Violation on Meining's Shoulders.

Sheriff Meining got the much-heralded letter from Governor Eberhart concerning the Brown-Gary prize fight this morning. But what his excellency said in his letter Sheriff Meining is not anxious that the public should know.

"No you can't see that letter," said the sheriff this morning. "You can say that it came all right and that the governor wants the fight investigated, and that he places the responsibility for the fight on the sheriff's shoulders. That is all I care to give out about the communication."

Mr. Meining has stated that he considered that the chief responsibility for the fight should have been placed on the shoulders of the Hibbing police department, rather than on the sheriff with the whole county to watch, and states that he is ready for an investigation, as he is sincere in his statements that he did not know where the fight was to come off.

Governor Eberhart has taken a lively interest in the progress of the fight game on the range since the Gary-Brown eighteen-round knockout fight was pulled off with no attempt at concealment at Hibbing last week, and as his utterances on the subject have been rather forceful during the meantime, it is probable that his communication to the sheriff is by no means a mild one. "There will be something doing" said the governor when he heard of the fight, and it looks as if he meant that something was to start in the immediate future.

DISPUTE TIES UP PASSENGER BOAT

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 17.—Though Capt. Alexander Clifford, 878 Congress street east, is half owner and manager of the famous old steamer Rutherford B. Hayes, his partner objected when he engaged a 14-piece Polish orchestra to furnish amusement for his patrons on the Fourth of July and the quarrel which has resulted threatens to tie up the old steamer for the remainder of the season.

The Hayes, one of the oldest and best known passenger steamers on the lakes, was sold by G. A. Boeckling, of Sandusky, to Capt. Clifford and his partner and the boat was transferred from Lake Erie to Saginaw bay. Capt. Clifford was managing owner and also master of the vessel. When his partner objected to the 14-piece Polish orchestra he quit the boat and hired another master in his place. Since then he has been seeking a settlement and last week the boat was seized by a United States marshal and held pending the settlement of a libel that Capt. Clifford has filed against her.

In spite of the libel, Capt. Clifford told the United States marshal office that the vessel had carried excursions. He asked to have a shipkeeper appointed and wants the boat to remain tied at its dock until his partner grants him an accounting and settles all claims.

The Hayes was built in 1876 and for many years plied between Lake Erie ports When launched she was considered the finest passenger craft on the lakes.

BUSINESS IN PACKAGE FREIGHT IS INCREASING.

Some improvement is reported in the shipments down the lakes, especially in flour, which has been received here from Minneapolis in large quantities for transportation East. In the line of package freight the business shows a slight improvement, with the prospects of greater improvement later on. The boats of the various transit companies have been handling on the trips both ways from 3,000 to 8,000 tons, which is considered fairly good business.

The Rochester of the Western Transit company is now on her thirteenth round trip from Buffalo, while the Superior, which will be here tomorrow is on her twelfth. The Buffalo will leave Buffalo on Saturday on the thirteenth trip.

F. H. Prince Is Libeled.

Toledo, Ohio, Aug. 17.—Claiming a fee of $10,000 for the efforts of the sandsucker Mary H. in putting out the fire which partly destroyed the steam barge F. H. Prince, off Kelly Island, Aug. 8, the Homegardner Sand company, of Sandusky, has been filed in the United States district court against the Prince for the amount named.

New Elevator Opened.

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 17.—The new 1,000,000-bushel concrete elevator building for Spencer Kellogg & Sons at Michigan street and the Buffalo river was formally opened Tuesday, when the steamer Robert Mills, with a cargo of wheat from Chicago, was the first boat at the new elevator. The structure has been in the course of construction for almost two years and was to have been completed early this spring. The contract price was $253,000.

Overhauling Freighter.

Tonawanda, Ohio, Aug. 17.—The package freighter Jessie Farwell, owned by William H. Follette, which has been in ordinary here during the last two years, is being overhauled at the Follette shipyards. She will go into commission soon.

The ferryboat Niagara, which operated for years between Buffalo and Fort Erie, now owned by the Wickwire Steel company, has been placed in commission.

Takes Flax Cargo.

The Thomas Adams of the Adams Transportation company left the port yesterday afternoon with 55,000 bushels of flax for Buffalo. On her trip down she will stop at Fort William, where she will take on the rest of her cargo, making about 200,000 bushels of flax in all. This is the largest cargo of flax that has been shipped this season.

Editors on Lake Trip.

Minnesota editors, fifty strong, will leave Saturday evening on the steamer Hamonic of the Northern Navigation company for Detroit on their annual outing. Lieut.-Gov. Sam Gordon will be in the party.

CASE CONCLUDED.

Decision in Two Harbors Aldermanic Contest Expected Early.

Arguments of the attorneys in the case of Irwin vs. Johnson, the Two Harbors aldermanic contest, were concluded last evening before Judge W. A. Cant in the district court. As the case is one which calls for an early decision, some ruling is expected during the next week.

The case is being watched with interest not only by the people of Two Harbors but elsewhere, as it will probably involve a decision on the validity of the recall of legislative officers under the Minnesota state constitution.

THRASHING YIELDS LOW

Reports From North Dakota Fields Cause Wheat to Advance.

Grade Is Low—Canada in Good Shape—Export Business Light.

Duluth Board of Trade, Aug. 17.—The wheat market went upward today on account of bullish reports of thrashing yields in North Dakota. September wheat gained 1¼c and December advanced 1⅝c. May was quoted at $1.05¼n, the opening figure on that option. Cash wheat was 1c over September, oats gained ½c, rye lost 1c, barley was stronger at 75c to $1.11, durum gained ¼c. Corn gained ⅜c.

Linseed was strong. Buyers found the market bare of offerings. September gained 4½c, October 5c and November 5c. Cash was $2.40.

Wheat felt the influence of poor thrashing returns from North Dakota and low grading of new wheat. Values had a fairly firm undertone and the market displayed a surface show of strength that perhaps was not a fair criterion of the underlying elements. Between the poor reports from North Dakota and excellent messages from Canada the trade was uncertain which way to turn. Values were largely influenced by the covering of shorts.

A wire from Rosenfield, Man., said that the harvest is in full blast and that the crop is satisfactory. Fields affected by rust will make good yields, said the message, but the grade will be injured. The crop is ripe and half of it is in shock. Unless rust spreads into new territory, wired Le Count, there is nothing alarming in the situation. Lyle's reports from Canada said that rusted fields indicate a good yield. The weather is favorable.

Thrashing returns from Comstock, Minn., gave 8 and 5 bu an acre, while one plot went 10 bu. Early wheat, wired Inglis from Fargo, will make a good yield between Grand Forks and Crookston. In the valley the yield will be small and will grade from No. 3 down, he declared. Some wheat near Mapleton, N. D., went 12 bu and another field ran 8 to 10 bu. Near Gardner 100 acres of blue stem went 7 bu. The first car of new wheat to arrive here was on the market today. It graded No. 2 northern and weighed 59 pounds a bu.

The wheat market was on an export basis, but the foreigner is not buying much on account of the labor situation in the United Kingdom, which is demoralizing business. Cables were lower. There are predictions of light world's shipments this week, which may have a hardening effect on foreign values.

Price Current said: Early corn very short, filling poorly, late will be heavy if weather favorable more than necessary to maintain present situation. Ohio and Illinois more favorable. Harvesting on spring progressing. Warm dry weather most desirable. Breaking winter wheat ground in many localities. Indications acreage will probably be increased. Late pastures and vegetables showing good growth.

Broomhall cabled Liverpool: Argentine estimated wheat shipments this week, 800,000; last week, 728,000; last year 1,160,000. Corn this week, nil; last week, nil; last year, 4,318,000. Our agent cables that the area under wheat this year is likely to exceed that of last year by about 5 per cent. The acreage under wheat last year amounted to 15,452,000 acres. The American cables were disappointing here and at opening values were ⅛d to ¼d lower with the undertone quiet. Following the opening, values advanced ¼d to ⅜d with some covering by shorts with sellers few. Buenos Ayres closed firm with their offers more firmly held and predictions of light shipments again this week. The market was dull and during the morning prices eased off from the high. The strike situation continues and is causing heavy depression in all business. The general undertone to the market was firm owing to general tightening up of foreign offers. At 1:30 p. m. prices were ⅛d lower to ⅛d higher than yesterday. Corn opened unchanged and continued dull during the entire session. The market was neglected.

CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Prices Advance After Opening Slightly Higher.

Chicago, Aug. 17.—The local wheat market advanced this morning, partly a natural reaction from the recent decline, and partly in sympathy with firmness at Minneapolis. A telegram from that city stated that arrivals of spring wheat are increasing in quantity, but the quality does not improve. September opened a shade higher to ¼@⅜c higher, at 89¼c to 89½c and advanced to 89¾@89⅞c on early buying.

The advance brought out increased offerings later but a reaction followed on cash demand, the close was firm with September ⅞@1c up at 90@90⅛c.

There was not much trade in corn, but prices advanced in sympathy with wheat. September opened unchanged at 64½c and sold to 64¾c.

Oats were sympathetically higher, September opening unchanged, at 41⅝c and selling to 41⅞c.

A little selling of lard was the only feature in an otherwise stagnant market. January pork opened 2½c under, at $16.22½; September lard, 2½c down, at $8.90; and September ribs, 2½c down at $9.

DECLINES IN LAST DEALS

Stocks Close Weak and Some Early Gains Vanish.

Bullish Rumors About Union Pacific Fail to Hold Market.

New York, Aug. 17.—Selling of stocks was resumed at the opening today with losses of a point and a quarter in Great Northern preferred and a point each for Reading, St. Paul, Missouri Pacific, Northern Pacific, Virginia-Carolina Chemical and Brooklyn Rapid Transit. There were heavy fractional declines in Union Pacific, American Smelting, National Lead and United States Steel. The only noteworthy gains at the opening were a point each for Canadian Pacific and Republic Iron & Steel preferred.

Sales of Canadian Pacific soon wiped out that stock's gains and the list sold off with a number of new low records, including Atchison, Reading, Lehigh Valley, the Hill Issues, Southern Pacific, New York Central, Amalgamated Copper and American Smelting. Offerings of Union Pacific were freely absorbed, however, and the strength of that stock which regained over 2 points, found its reflection in the entire market, which for the first time this week denoted earnest support together with extensive covering of short contracts.

In keeping with its recent course, the market became dull on the rally, the bears playing with extreme caution. Advices from London gave hope of improvement in the labor situation in the British provinces, but the general financial situation abroad was the subject of unfavorable discussion. Other developments, if not altogether encouraging, were at least negatively favorable. The firmness of Union Pacific, which increased its gain, together with United States Steel, was the noteworthy feature of the early session. Bonds were easy.

The market closed weak. In the very late dealings the list declined again despite reports that the Union Pacific company contemplated issuing a favorable statement. The selling was suggestive of bear attacks and wiped out the early gain with some issues, including United States Steel, Southern Pacific, Reading, Great Northern preferred, Northern Pacific, Lehigh Valley, St. Paul and Amalgamated Copper under yesterday's close.

HOTEL MEN TALK ABOUT INSURANCE

Question of Adoption of Iowa Mutual Insurance Plan Discussed.

Grand Forks, N. D., Aug. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Northwestern Hotel Men's association in convention here today discussed the recommendation of the Iowa Hotel Men's association for the adoption and promotion of mutual hotel fire insurance. The subject was debated at length yesterday.

Another matter up for discussion today is that of uniform legislation. Nebraska laws have been circulated among the association members here with a view to receiving indorsement. They include limited liability, the deadbeat and the travelers' laws. The deadbeat law makes a man's failure to pay his hotel bill prima facie evidence of guilt, whether or not he intended to defraud.

Late this afternoon the officers will be elected.

Thursday's Program.

The addresses scheduled for today follow:

Miller, Arnold's Park hotel, Lake Okoboji, Iowa; address, John C. Roth, St. Paul hotel, St. Paul; address, C. L. Kingsley, Irving hotel, Waterloo, Iowa; "How I Advertise My Hotel," Col. FEAR LYNCH LAW IN STATE CAPITAL

Detective Frazer's Slayer Is Spirited to Stillwater.

Stillwater, Minn., Aug. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Peter Juhl, escaped convict, slayer of Detective Frazer of St. Paul and companion of the late Jerry McCarthy, notorious outlaw, is again behind the walls of Stillwater prison. Juhl, following arraignment in St. Paul yesterday afternoon, was brought here shackled to two police officers. It is stated that feeling was running high in St. Paul against Juhl, and that he was hurried here as a precautionary measure.

Juhl's only comment, made to Warden Wolfer, was:

"I suppose I am here for life this time. I am now ready to be good."

Afraid of Lynching.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Fearing that Peter Juhl, the escaped convict who shot and killed Detective Frank Fraser in St. Paul last Saturday night, might be taken from the Ramsey county jail and lynched, Governor Eberhart got in communication with Adjt. General F. B. Wood of the state militia yesterday and notified him that he might be called upon for state troops within the next twenty-four hours.

The governor also called Sheriff John Wagener into conference and inquired what means had been taken to keep the prisoner in safety. Sheriff Wagener had twenty-one deputies guarding him.

Feeling against Juhl has run high ever since the killing of Detective Fraser. Assistant Attorney General Weeks advised the authorities that Juhl might be taken to state's prison at once without any legal obstacles arising, as he has an unexpired sentence there. Juhl escaped from Stillwater with Jerry McCarthy, the convict who shot and killed Officer Ohlinger in Minneapolis a few weeks ago.

FOUR NEAR TO DEATH.

Chicago Aviation Meet Scene of Some Narrow Escapes.

Chicago, Aug. 17.—Arthur Stone, driver of a Queen monoplane, was snatched from death at the international aviation meet here yesterday after hopes for his life had been given up.

Lincoln Beachy, after being driven far to the south and fighting his way back above the field, glided 3,000 feet in safety to the earth, after his engine had suddenly stopped.

James Ward had an equally hard task to make his way from far out over Lake Michigan, but descended safely in the field.

Stone's machine fell into the lake just at dusk. He leaped from the falling plane and was rescued when all but exhausted, by a motorboat after he had supported himself in the water for more than half an hour. His machine was not recovered.

The effect of Tuesday's tragedies was manifested plainly, both upon aviators and spectators. There was a noticeably smaller attendance, and even some of the free seats were unoccupied. The flyers grouped together and presented objections to further flying.

Examine Johnstone's Flyer.

Maj. Raeber of the United States signal corps, J. A. Baird, Jr., vice president of the Aeroclub of America, and James Stevens, an official of the Chicago International Aviation Meet association, have made a report of their findings after a minute examination of the machine in which St. Croix Johnstone met his death Tuesday.

This committee, appointed solely to determine if Johnstone's death was due to possible structural defects in the machine which he was driving, reported that there was no evidence of any such defects. Maj. Raber said that the wings of Johnstone's machine did not collapse nor did the engine explode.

If the road is built, it will be the longest straight highway in the state.

STEENERSON PROTESTS MAJ. SHUNK'S FINDING.

Representative Steenerson is taking exception to this decision and today filed a formal protest with the board of army engineers, in which he requested that he be granted an oral hearing early next December.

Washington, Aug. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Fred Smith of International Falls, Minn., is in Washington on a combination of business ad pleasure. He was shown about the capitol and some of the departments today by Representative Miller.

A NEBRASKA PANTHER CAVE.

Lincoln correspondence, Kansas City Star: A panther's den with ten kittens cuddled up in it was found a few days ago on the ranch of H. T. Richards, a few miles west of South Bend in Cass county.

Mr. Richards and some of his men noticed a cave in the side of the canon. After enlarging the opening one of the men, Grover Otte, entered. Back in the cave ten or twelve feet he found the ten kittens. When one of them was brought to the entrance it was found to be a baby panther.

Mr. Otte is now raising the kittens at his home. Since the discovery of the kittens neither of the parent animals has been seen. Several times a strange animal has been seen in the vicinity of South Bend and farmers complained about the mysterious disappearance of suckling pigs, lambs and chickens.

STRIKERS CLAIM TO HAVE PARALYZED THE BRITISH RAIL TRAFFIC

Situation Is So Serious Parliament Remains in Session.

Men Refuse Government Plan for Settling Differences.

Americans Suffer From Chaos Created By Big Walkout.

London, Aug. 18.—The fight between the railroad companies and the striking union employes is on in deadly earnest today. Thousands have obeyed the strike order and other thousands have continued to work. The companies are operating their principal trains under modified schedules.

The government and the board of trade are continuing their efforts toward peace, but the old deadlock between the unions and the managers appeared to have reasserted itself today.

The managers had a prolonged meeting with members of the board of trade, but as far as could be learned the railroad companies declined to budge from their stand of making no further concession beyond submitting the dispute to the royal commission suggested by the government.

Cities Are Armed Camps.

The chief cities of England are armed camps. The stations, workshops, signal posts, tunnels, bridges are guarded by soldiers. Clerks have been pressed into service to aid the non-strikers in moving the trains. Despite the efforts of the companies, freight traffic is demoralized and the shortage of food supplies threatens a famine at some points.

There has been rioting at Birmingham, Derby, Sheffield and at Llanely, Wales.

The government views the industrial war as so grave that parliament did not adjourn, as had been expected, today, but will continue, prepared to adopt any emergency legislation that is necessary.

Hand-to-Hand Fight.

At Birmingham sharp hand-to-hand fighting between the police and strikers occurred this morning.

The union leaders this afternoon expressed themselves as satisfied with the response to the strike order. They

FORTS AT FRISCO "SINK THE ENEMY"

Spectacular Feature of War Maneuvers Is Carried Out.

San Francisco, Aug. 18.—The first spectacular feature of the war maneuvers, which were begun Monday at the Presidio took place last night when three government tugs, simulating the probable movements of a hostile fleet, essayed to run the gauntlet of the forts protecting San Francisco. Attached to the tug Barrett, which brought up the rear of the attacking squadron, was a huge target, and into this the guns of Fort Winfield Scott poured a heavy fire. Though actual firing of shells was limited to Fort Winfield Scott, the "defenders" at Forts Barry, Wiley and Baker went through "all the motions" attendant upon the attempted repulse of a hostile fleet.

A battery of searchlights from the various forts picked up the tugs, and the big guns of Fort Winfield Scott were soon raining shells upon the trailing targets in sufficient numbers to have disabled a modern war vessel.

LYNCH MEN WIN THE FIRST ROUND

Printers' Factions Clash at San Francisco Meeting.

San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 18.—When the warring delegates to the International Typographical union convention settled down to the business of today's session it was to renew the struggle upon the result of which the retention in office of President Lynch was said to depend.

The administration forces won a decisive victory yesterday when they defeated a proposed amendment that provided the barring from office of any member found guilty of violating the law prohibiting participation in secret organizations within the union. The fight was reopened today when the arbitration agreement and the piece work referendum were called up for consideration.

Women Install Officers.

The new national officers of the women's auxiliary were installed today. They are: Mrs. C. E. McKee of Indianapolis, president; Mrs. R. J. Lowther of St. Louis, vice president.

Cleveland was chosen on the second ballot yesterday as the site for the next union convention, receiving 113 votes to Houston 106. On the first ballot Cleveland received 112, Houston 81, Vancouver 19 and Ottawa 12.

The proceedings of the day indicated that the piece work referedum vote of May 17 will be reconsidered. President Lynch, in speaking on a proposal to require the petition of 100 unions to initiate legislation instead of fifty, said he was in favor of the referendum, but not in cases like that of the recent vote.

SEEKS VAINLY TO HEAD OFF BRITISH STRIKE

DAVID LLOYD-GEORGE, Chancellor Who Met Representatives of Unions and Railroads in Futile Conference.

SAY IT IS UP TO THE HOUSE

Adjournment of Special Session Talked of at Washington.

Members of Congress Are Preparing to Leave Sunday.

Washington, Aug. 18.—The adjournment of the extra session of congress today rests entirely with the house of representatives. Chairman Underwood of the ways and means committee today expressed the opinion that it probably would not be possible to close the house business so as to adjourn tomorrow night, as suggested by senators, but said he thought the adjournment feasible Monday or Tuesday. He said the house would accept the senate amendments to the cotton bill, thus expediting the final getaway.

Progressives Doubtful.

The progressive Republicans, their battle-alliance with the Democrats broken in yesterday's victory of the Democrats through the political maneuvering of the regular Republicans, admitted today that no more general legislation is possible at this session, and some of them even contended it was doubtful whether it would be possible to close up the work already begun.

The consensus of opinion among senators of all shades of opinion was that whatever the exact date of adjournment, the session is practically at an end, and that all that can be done is to put the house in order for getting away, no more original work being possible.

The house vote on the vetoed wool bill today and the action of the body on the cotton bill practically will wind up its business. The Arizona-New Mexico statehood measure is not expected to take much time in either house, nor is the action on the free list bill, when it comes back from the president, expected to prolong the session.

Get Ready to Leave.

Many members of the house and senate are preparing to leave Washington Sunday.

Adjournment by the middle of next week by the latest, and passage of the cotton bill, with amendments including an iron and steel schedule, was the prediction today of Democratic Leader Underwood of the house.

"The cotton bill will be passed before adjournment," said Mr. Underwood. "As far as the iron and steel amendment is concerned, the schedule passed by the senate is not very far from the schedule as prepared by the ways and means committee."

WILL NOT GIVE UP HER VICTIM'S BODY

Woman Who Shot Husband Denies Demand of His Brother.

Denver, Colo., Aug. 18.—From her cot in a local hospital, Mrs. Eleanor Valentine, who shot and killed her husband here last Tuesday and then shot and seriously wounded herself, is directing a fight to prevent her husband's brother, Frank Valentine of Omaha, Neb., from obtaining the body of the man she killed.

Frank Valentine arrived here yesterday to take charge of his brother's corpse. Mrs. Valentine already had given directions regarding the disposal of the body, and the coroner declined to turn it over to the brother without Mrs. Valentine's consent, which she refused.

Valentine appealed to the district attorney's office, which upheld him, but the coroner stood firm.

WANT TO SEE FOOD RULINGS

House Investigators Will Ask for All the Records.

Taft Will Not Act in Wiley Case Until After Adjournment.

Washington, Aug. 18.—All records of the department of agriculture embracing copies of pure food decisions or regulations changed "through the protests of interested manufacturers," will be called for by the house committee that is investigating the charges against Dr. Harvey W. Wiley.

Dr. Wiley was again a witness today.

Dr. Wiley, who made the request for the records, explained that they were official printed regulations and decisions which had later been withdrawn and changed after the interested parties, the food manufacturers, had protested against them.

Dr. Wiley stated that Dr. Dunlap had had the opinion that no decisions of the food and drug boards were official unless he (Dunlap) signed them.

Asked what Solicitor General McCabe had to do with deciding what was whisky, Dr. Wiley said:

"I would rather let him state."

Told of "Poison Squad."

Dr. Wiley, describing his famous famous "poison squad experiments," said:

"I took up the experiments with borax first to get experience for what I considered more important experiments. I didn't think it was harmful when I began."

Dr. Wiley said that two of his reports on these investigations had not been published.

Dr. Wiley said he told Secretary of Agriculture Wilson all about the proposed employment of Dr. H. H. Rusby of New York.

"I wanted him to know all the features of the case before acting on it," said Dr. Wiley.

Wilson Approved Rusby Affair.

After the secretary had approved Dr. Wiley told of figuring out that $2,000 was too much for Dr. Rusby, and having the secretary reduce it to $1,600.

Again he denied that anything was said about Dr. Rusby working only eighty days a year as he presented the matter to Secretary Wilson.

President Taft does not expect to settle the Wiley case before the adjournment of the present session of congress.

The closing days of the session have presented to him so many important matters that the president has been unable to take up the case in detail. If adjournment comes within a few days the papers in the Wiley case will be taken up by the president to Beverly. He intends to read all the testimony offered before the house committee which is investigating the department of agriculture, and any other information bearing on the case which is available.

May Criticise Others.

That there may be some criticism of officials of the department other than Dr. Wiley, is the belief here today, although the president has spent but little time in discussion of the whole affair.

HAIL THRASHES PART OF ALBERTA GRAIN.

Lethbridge, Alberta, Can., Aug. 18.—A hail storm which traveled through Southern Alberta late yesterday destroyed probably a million bushels of grain. The worst damage was around Wilson and Sterling, southeast of Lethbridge, where several farms were completely thrashed out.

SPECTATORS IMPERILED

Chicago Coroner Orders Change in Aeroplane Flights.

Forbids Air Men to Pass Close Over Grand Stands.

Chicago, Aug. 18.—Coroner Hoffman today communicated with officials of the International Aviation Meet association, insisting that aviators be prohibited from flying too low over the heads of spectators in the grandstands.

There is a rule prohibiting this practice, but it appears that the efforts of the officials of the meet to enforce it have not been entirely successful.

Coroner Hoffman visited the meet yesterday for the first time, and was indignant when he saw Aviator James Ward fly less than 100 feet over the heads of spectators in the stands.

Danger to Spectators.

"If the officials of this meet are unable to stop this sort of thing, I think I can find a way to do it," said Coroner Hoffman. "It is positively dangerous. If the aviator should fall with his machine, a dozen people might be killed."

The officials of the meet have promised to use drastic measures to put a stop to the dangerous practice.

Beachey flirted with death again in his flight yesterday, and was forced to make another spectacular descent, from which even his brother aviators scarcely expected him to escape alive. When about 2,000 feet high, his engine ran out of gasoline. He brought the machine to earth by a steep glide and escaped unshaken.

As a result of the accidents which have marred the cross-water events, the course has been changed and future races will be flown along shore.

KNOX FAVORS HIGHWAY PLAN

Duluth Man Gives Representative Miller Views on Lincoln Memorial.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—Representative Miller today received a letter from R B. Knox of the Duluth Automobile club, urging him to support the proposition to construct a great highway as a memorial to Lincoln instead of a monument or arch to be erected in the District of Columbia.

There are four propositions to memorialize Lincoln. One which finds great favor is to construct a $2,000,000 monument to be located within the District of Columbia; another is to erect a triumphal arch. The former finds much favor, while the latter has a few supporters.

Turning to memorializing the memory of Lincoln in the matter of a great highway there are two propositions, one to construct a great highway to connect Washington with the Battlefield of Gettysburg, while the other is to build a highway to connect Washington and Richmond. As between the two highway propositions, probably the Washington to Gettysburg now seems to find favor on all sides, but on the other hand, the original promoters of a memorial stand for a monument of enduring and commensurate and imposing size to be erected within the confines of the city of Washington.

WIND PREVENTS ATWOOD'S FLYING

Air Man Is More Than Half Way Over His Course.

Cleveland, Ohio, Aug. 18.—With a 30-mile wind beating off Lake Erie all morning, it looked today as if Harry N. Atwood would not be able to make his scheduled 95-mile flight to Erie, Pa. Shortly after 12 o'clock, however, the wind began to die down and he announced that if there was no change in conditions, he would start for the Pensylvania line later.

Atwood, who already has covered ten and one-half miles more than half of the 1,265 miles of his proposed flight from St. Louis to New York to establish a new world's cross-country aeroplane record, said he did not expect to leave Cleveland until some time after noon.

If he lands at Erie for the night it will be the shortest one-day run he has made since he left St. Louis last Monday. However, he said if he found the weather favorable he might re-ascend at Erie and continue on to Buffalo. He probably will sail over Ashtabula, Ohio, without stopping, although there is a possibility he may alight there for a brief rest.

Atwood arrived in Cleveland yesterday afternoon. He covered 123 miles between Toledo and Cleveland in an actual flying time of 2 hours and 20 minutes.

"Nearly Went to Sleep."

"Just an easy canter," said Atwood as he stepped from his biplane in a park on the lake shore in the city. "I almost went to sleep with the monotony of it. In five days New York will see me hop over its tallest sky scrapers and glide into the sand of Coney Island."

The Bostonian is pleased with his progress. He has still 622 miles to fly to reach his destination in New York

INSURGENTS FAVOR PLAN

Lenroot Declares That Veto Was Due to Ignorance.

Three Hours of Debate on Reconsideration Is Agreed To.

FAILED BY 10 VOTES

Washington, Aug. 18.—The motion to pass the wool bill in the house over the president's veto was lost, 227 to 129, a two-thirds vote being required.

Washington, Aug. 18.—The wool tariff revision bill, vetoed by President Taft late yesterday, was called up in the house early today.

Democratic Leader Underwood moved at once that the house, on reconsideration, pass the bill over the president's veto.

The house agreed upon a three hours' debate upon Mr. Underwood's motion. Representative James of Kentucky led off in advocacy of congress carrying the bill over the veto.

Speech by Lenroot.

The support of the insurgent Republicans in the house to the Democratic plan to override the veto was foreshadowed in a speech by Representative Lenroot of Wisconsin, progressive Republican and close friend of Senator La Follette. Mr. Lenroot said the veto was based on ignorance, not information.

GET ALLEGED HEAD OF "ARSON TRUST"

David Korshack of Chicago Arrested at Vancouver, B. C.

Chicago, Aug. 18.—Word has been received by the Chicago police today of the arrest at Vancouver, B. C., of David Korshack, who was named as the head of an alleged "arson trust" in a confession made to Attorney Sullivan and the police by Leopold Dreyfus, president of L. Dreyfus & Co., wholesale clothiers, who afterwards committed suicide by shooting.

Leopold Dreyfus and his brother, Lazard Dreyfus, were arrested following an incendiary fire that partly destroyed the company's store, June 3. They were questioned by the police for hours, when Leopold broke down and made a written confession in which he admitted that the fire was incendiary and accused Korshack of being the head of an 'arson trust," which made a business of setting fire to buildings so that the owners might recover the insurance.

Committed Suicide.

After making the confession, Leopold Dreyfus shot himself.

Lazard Dreyfus and Korshack have been charged with arson, arson to defraud and conspiracy to do an illegal act. The police have been searching for Korshack ever since. He will be brought to Chicago immediately.

McCoy's father died about a month ago in Erie, Pa., and McCoy was advised by telegraph of the conditions of his father's will. He advertised for a wife and was flooded with applications from all parts of the United States.

"PADDY" TAKES STAND AND "TEARS INTO" DETRACTORS

Calls Other Contractors "Cry Babies" and Denies All Charges.

Says He Lost $20,000 on West Duluth Reservoir Contract.

The morning session of the council committee which is conducting the "paving scandal" bristled with interesting declarations.

"Paddy" McDonnell, characterized as the local "paving trust," had his inning and Hugh Steele introduced another letter containing some additional charges.

Interest centered in Mr. McDonnell, and those who had been waiting to hear him were not wholly disappointed. During the time he was on the stand he assailed Capt. D. E. Stevens of the school board.

He said that William Craig was after L. N. Case's job as manager of the water and light department. This Mr. Craig emphatically denied.

He denied that he had ever offered $1,000 to Osman not to bid on the Fourth street job, or that he had ever offered money to any one to influence contracts.

He said that he might have entertained city officials, but only in the course of his business as a "paving promoter" and contractor; that he may have taken them out in his automobile, and bought some officals drinks, but only when they might happen to be "with the crowd."

Disgrace to City.

He declared that the present investigation is a disgrace to the city.

He offered to give any one $500 for every dollar which they could prove he had accepted from the city of Duluth to which he was not entitled.

He claimed that he lost $20,000 on the West Duluth reservoir, of which complaint has been made, and said that he offered to put it in shape if there were any defects in it.

He declared that the time has gone by when any contractor can do inferior work.

He asserted that he has probably taken Osman and Steele "across the street" more than anybody else around the city hall.

He stated that Duluth is getting pavements 50 per cent cheaper than any other city in which he does work.

When first put on the stand McDonnell made a sweeping denial of using any undue influence to get favors from any city officials or employes. He stated emphatically that he had never offered $1,000 to Osman not to bid on the Fourth street job, as testified by Osman earlier in the hearing. He denied ever offering any contractor any money to refrain from bidding on contracts. He thought that Osman had been in his office, and said that he knows nothing of Osman coming to him to ask for the $1,000. He said that he has never threatened any inspector of the engineering department or put any inspector under obligations to him in any way.

Assails Capt. Stevens.

When asked about the Lake avenue curb, which was changed from granite to sandstone, he was bitter in his denunciation of Capt. Stevens, a member of the board. Capt. Stevens' name was mentioned in previous sessions of the committee in connection with this matter.

He asserted that Capt. Stevens had told everybody that he would see that he got the sandstone out of Lake avenue. The witness stated that he considered it a case of ingratitude on the part of Stevens, as in the past he had done him favors. He thought that Stevens had some grudge against him.

He was emphatic and positive in the statement that granite curb was not available at that time. He explained that he had not taken the matter before the board of education as a board, but had spoken to different members of the board as he met them, with the exception of one. He said that he did not know if he would have spoken to him if he had met him. He said that the change was brought before the council by Alderman Barnes, who was also a member of the school board. He said that he was willing to make the change from sandstone to granite, as it was only a matter of a few dollars.

Entertaining "In the Business."

McDonnell was asked at several different times as to the treating and entertaining of city officials. He said that entertaining is part of his business. He stated that he might have bought drinks for various city officials, as they might happen to be in the crowd. He explained that he entertains many officials from the outside and has an automobile to show them the pavements in Duluth. He said that he entertains the women as well as the men. He asserted that when he hears of any paving job he goes after it, and tries to convince the prospective purchaser of the merit of his goods. He declared that he entertains them, but that he does not consider that that is buying them.

Not Agent of Quarry.

McDonnell was asked if he is the agent of the Kettle River quarries in this district and if he gets a commission on the sandstone sold in this vicinity. He stated that he is not connected with them in any way, further than that he owes them a bill once in a while.

On the Fourth street job he said that there was a considerable fill, and added that in construction work quantities are liable to change materially. On Jefferson street he declared that a Telford base was put in, after which six inches of crushed rock was laid, both being rolled. He didn't think that it was remarkable that there had been an excess of over 6,000 yards of excavation on the West Duluth reservoir. He explained that a great part of the embankment had to be cut down. He said that it was an unusually difficult piece of work, the bottom being filled with water and quicksand. He declared that only first-class grades of cement were used in its construction. the concrete being mixed as required. He stated that the delay in completing the work was due to the impossibility of getting men and teams at that time.

McDonnell said that he is not in the habit of paying the overtime of inspectors of the engineering department. On Garfield avenue he asserted that the work had been pushed, the men working Sundays, and that the overtime of the inspectors had been paid through the comptroller and treasurer, the difference being deducted from his final estimate. He didn't think that he should be required to pay for their time, and said that he intends to put in a bill to the city for that expense.

Gives An Address.

After the committee had questioned McDonnell he was given permission at his own request to make some remarks, and delivered a short oration on the subject in general. He opened with the statement that he is proud of his record in Duluth as a contractor, and that he has not received a dollar to which he has not been entitled. He asserted that it is a shame and a disgrace that some men would be allowed to come before the committee and make charges which they cannot prove, labeling them "cry-babies."

"Osman has never paved a street in Duluth in his life," he continued. "How could I put him out of business? Steele has paid more attention to my contracts than he has to his own. The time has gone when a contractor can get by with poor work. Even if there isn't an inspector or a citizen on the work he has to do a good job. He has to in order to get work in other cities."

McDonnell said that he has been making repairs to the East Superior street job, and intends to make some more. On the Twenty-third avenue east job he said that he had done the re-surfacing after being ordered to do so and that he has not yet been paid for it. He stated that he has $50,000 to $75,000 invested in a plant and can do cheap work.

He gave it as his belief that the city officials of Duluth cannot be bought with a treat; that he always considered them first class men, and that he never knew the entertainment business to influence any of them.

When he had concluded Mr. Craig asked him as to the West Duluth reservoir, and if his position relative to doing good work and keeping it in repair did not apply to it as well as to the paving. He said that he had offered to repair the reservoir and later answered the interrogation in the affirmative. At that time he said that Craig is looking for Mr. Case's job, to which Mr. Craig promptly took exception. He contended that he had a right to question McDonnell as a tax payer.

Steele Presents Letter.

After some discussion the committee decided to hear the statement prepared by Hugh Steele. Attorney Crassweller said that he should have prepared his statement during the adjournment and presented it to the committee before the sessions were resumed.

Steele's statement reiterated his charge that big, blasted stone had gone into the Jefferson street fill. He claimed that it was dumped in there and only smoothed over before the crushed rock was laid. He alleged that the surfacing was not as thick as called for by the specifications. He stated that on the sewer which he had built at West Duluth he had been directed to make an extension of 466 feet, and that he had been paid several thousand dollars less than the engineer's estimate. He repeated the assertion that there are strips of wood in the expansion joints of the West Duluth reservoir and that the city officials have discriminated against him. He said that the charge that he has been slow in his work has not been substantiated. He claimed that McDonnell's final estimate on the Ramsey street paving was $47,845; that his bid was $42,846, and that the estimate was $38,752. He also stated that the final estimate for the Thirty-fourth avenue east reservoir was $70,671.43 and that the contract price was $63,021.50.

R. Murchison, clerk of the board of public works, said that the records show that McDonnell had been given an order to resurface Twenty-third avenue east. He said that was Aug. 8, 1910, and that Aug. 27 the minutes of the board show that the work was ordered by the board. He explained that there has been no official action by the board as a body, but that he had asked the several members if they were favorable and had been informed by them that they were. This was before the work was started.

E. K. Coe, present county engineer and former assistant city engineer, stated that he was not in the employ of the city at the time Jefferson street was paved and knew nothing about it. He said that he was in charge of construction of the West Superior street paving and that it had been done according to specifications. He knew of no undue influence being used upon any city official and didn't consider that Steele had been slow in the performance of his contracts.

A. J. Meidahl of the works board said said that he knows of no undue influence upon any city official or of money being used in any way to influence the award of performance of city contracts. He stated that he has been a resident of Duluth forty-two years, yesterday, and that he has never been to a theater, or that he has ever gone "across the street" with any contractor. He said that R. E. Patterson, a former member of the board, had ordered the repairs to Twenty-third avenue east and taken charge of the work. He knew of no official action ordering the work done. He declared that Steele was not given the contract for the paving of Second alley because he had been considered a defaulter. He said that Steele, to his knowledge, has not been slow in performing his contracts, qualifying this by saying that Steele has had only a couple of jobs since he has been connected with the board.

George J. Bloedel, appointed to the board last April, stated that he knows of no undue influence upon any officials or employes of the city or in the award or performance of any city improvements.

The indications, this morning, were that the sessions of the investigating committee would be concluded today. One of the members said that this is presumably the last day of the hearing.

MARINE

CANADIAN DOCKS FILLED

A coal dealer of Cleveland in reviewing the situation to a local vessel man, states that the shipments to Port Arthur and Fort William have been curtailed because the docks there are filled, and that the coal will now be shipped to Duluth in larger quantites, for with the removal of the duty on coal in Canada, the demands from the western part of the dominion are becoming very heavy, and the supply must all come through the Zenith City. Already there have been many large shipments made from here, according to coal dealers at the Head of the Lakes, and the orders are coming in rapidly. Much of it is going directly to British Columbia, the region where the Canadian coal fields are located. This is due to the big coal strike, now being waged in the mines about Fernie.

The Cleveland man also states that the ore sales are light and he predicts that within the next thirty days many of the boats will be put out of commission.

BIG CONSIGNMENT OF TEA RECEIVED.

The largest importation of tea ever made from Japan to Duluth was received in the city this morning for a local wholesale concern. It consisted of 541 packages, each package containing fifty pounds, making the entire shipment 27,050 pounds. The Duluth wholesale houses are doing a big business throughout the Northwest, and their importation lists are becoming larger and more frequent every month.

VESSEL OWNERS OPPOSE HIGH TAXATION VALUES.

Cleveland vessel owners are having a hard fight with the Ohio state tax commission which proposes to place a taxation value upon the freighters much higher than the owners deem just. At a conference of vessel men held recently in Cleveland a committee was selected to meet the commission in Columbus. At the meeting in Columbus the following vessel men were present:

Harvey D. Goulder, W. W. White, Col. J. J. Sullivan, A. H. Hawgood, Capt. John Mitchell, W. H. McGean, C. L. Mosher, W. M. Duncan representing the Gilchrist Transportation company, and E. D. Hartwell, auditor of Lake county, in which many vessels are listed for taxation.

As spokesman for the committee, Mr. Goulder asserted that he believed that the proper basis for taxing lake steamers would be not to exceed 25 per cent of the valuation fixed by the Lloyds as a basis for insuring. The Lloyd valuations, he said, were estimated on the tonnage of vessels at the rate of $53.50 per gross ton, the insurance premiums being 6 per cent on the valuation.

Mr. Duncan, the Gilchrist representative, however, differed with Mr. Goulder. He declared that if the tax valuations of the boats his company owns were taxed on more than 15 per cent of insurance valuations, the company would be practically forced out of business.

Obsolescence, changes in boat construction made necessary by changing conditions and inventions, was given by the vesselmen as a principal reason for valuing boats at below their construction cost.

A strong reason advanced by Mr. Goulder for a low valuation by the commission was the fact that many steamers built four or five years ago can now be replaced by reason of reductions in the cost of construction for three-fourths and sometimes one-half of the original cost. This statement was substantiated by Mr. Duncan, who said that recently a steamship building company had offered to reproduce a $400,000 boat for $300,000.

As a third strong argument against high valuations Mr. Goulder asserted that vesselmen are now operating boats with a capacity for a big boom year while the traffic to supply them with cargoes was hardly up to normal.

"These are reasons why these boats represent more potential than real value," he said. He then cited the boats of the Wilson fleet as proof. These boats, which averaged 7,000 tons, paying no insurance, were not making enough to pay their depreciation charges, he said. They will not clear more than 3 or 4 per cent on their construction cost, he declared.

Keen competition and resultant low freight charges were also advanced as arguments for moderate valuations by the Clevelanders.

DREDGING WORK IS BEING RUSHED.

The government dredging at Port Wing, in Flag river, which has been in progress since last May, is being rushed, and according to the report of the United States hydrographic office there is now available a depth of fifteen feet at low water, through the entrance channel and up to the north end of the lumber dock. Private dredging has been done along the lumber docks.

The turning basin just eastward of the inner end of the entrance piers has been enlarged by the government.

FORMER LAKE FREIGHTER GOING INTO OCEAN SERVICE

The steamer Portland, formerly the A. B. Wolvin, which was fitted out for sea service at the Ecorse plant of the Great Lakes Engineering works, is now on her way to the coast, with Capt. Ben Tripp, one of the best known vessel masters on the lake, as pilot. Capt. Fitchett, a salt water navigator, is master of the boat, but having no license to operate on the Great Lakes a qualified pilot is required to handle her.

The boat is now owned by a company known as The Portland, Incorporated, and will have the rebuilt vessel placed in the package freight business. No route has been selected for the new boat, and she may even be placed on the Pacific coast.

The boat was built as the A. B. Wolvin in 1900, in Cleveland, and was owned by the Pittsburg Steamship company and later by the Port Huron & Duluth Transportation company. Last spring she went into the possession of the Great Lakes Engineering works, which sold her to the Portland.

WILLIAM SMITH WILL BRING OUT NEW BOAT.

Capt. William Smith will be the master of the new freighter, the Harvester, of the Wisconsin Steel company, the lake representatives of the International Harvester company, which was just completed at the Lorain yards. The Harvester is now on her way to Duluth, on her maiden trip. She will be enrolled in Duluth, application having already been made. The papers announcing Capt. Smith as her master, were this morning received by the local collector of ports.

Returns From Canada.

J. W. Prindeville, general manager of the Chicago & Duluth Transportation company, returned to the city this morning from Port Arthur, where he has been since last Tuesday on business. He will leave this evening over the Omaha road for Chicago.

COTTON BILL IS PASSED BY DEMOCRATS IN THE SENATE

Regular Republicans "Put One Over" on the Insurgents.

Leave Chamber and Give Opposing Party Clear Majority.

Washington, Aug. 18.—A shrewd move by the regular Republicans, as unexpected as it was effective, suddenly threw the Democrats into complete control of the senate in their own night yesterday and forced them absolutely to abandon their coalition with the progressive Republicans.

Out of the chaos and uproar came a bill to revise the cotton schedule of the Payne-Aldrich tariff law. It was the bill as passed by the house, but saddled with amendments to revise the iron and steel, the cotton machinery and chemical schedules of the tariff law, coupled with a provision for reciprocal free trade in bituminous coal across the Canadian border.

The bill as amended will go back to the house and probably will be sent to conference. If it emerges from this ordeal and goes to the White House, it unquestionably will meet the fate of the wool revision bill, which was vetoed yesterday by President Taft.

Insurgents Enraged.

Democratic votes almost alone were cast in favor of the bill. The regular Republicans deliberately absented themselves from the chamber, and thus left their progressive colleagues in a hopeless position. The insurgents, taken completely by surprise, were thrown into a rage. Alternately they denounced what they termed the treachery of the Democrats with whom they had been in alliance, and inveighed against the regular Republicans for the part they had played in the new combination which had brought about a revolution in the senate as startling and sensational as the coalition which earlier had robbed the regular Republicans of their supremacy in the upper house of congress.

Senatorial Courtesy Abandoned.

In vain insurgents invoked forgotten rules of the senate to compel the regulars to attend and cast their votes. Senatorial courtesy, so long revered and jealously defended, was tossed to the winds. The insurgents charged that the Democrats had broken faith although in caucus last night the latter had determined to carry through an insurgent-Democratic program on the cotton bill, which would have included the adoption of a La Follette substitute for the measure. They insisted the Democrats had entered into an agreement or understanding with the regulars to leave the progressives in the lurch.

Neither the regular Republicans nor the Democrats would admit such an understanding existed, but Senator Bristow of Kansas boldly declared that he overheard a conversation between Senator Johnston of Alabama, a Democrat, and Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania, the regular Republican leader, that left no doubt in his mind.

The Democrats sought to relieve their new-found allies with a blanket motion of excuse from voting, but this plan failed.

Abandoned the Alliance.

Whatever the agreement, the results accomplished were both definite and decisive. The Democrats found themselves in a position where, for the sake of party consistency, they had to disregard completely their previous arrangements with the insurgents. These arrangements were based on the belief that the Democrats' house bill first would be defeated, and that then the Democrats and insurgents would combine to pass a La Follette compromise measure, just as was done with the wool schedule.

When the voting began there came a sudden realization that the Democratic bill would pass without the aid of the insurgents. Enough regular Republicans had walked out of the chamber to give the Democrats a clear majority and still maintain the necessary quorum.

The break in the senate coalition, which had made tariff legislation possible, was taken to mean the early approach of adjournment. The Democrats, it was said, already had set about to placate the insurents, but this was regarded as impossible after the events of the day. Without an effective working arrangement between these two elements of the senate, all further attempts at legislation would be useless. Senator Penrose predicted that the session would terminate with the week-end.

Fought to the End.

Amazement of insurgents at the unexpected developments changed to a fighting spirit that lasted until the last roll call was taken.

None of the insurgent leaders would discuss the situation last night in any of its phases. They felt that they had achieved a material victory in the adoption of the iron and steel amendment.

The regular Republicans made no attempt to conceal their delight at having put the insurgents in a position where they were compelled to vote against cotton revision at this time.

Senator Cummins rallied his insurgent colleagues to vote against his own amendment for an iron and steel tariff revision, when that amendment was offered by Senator Bacon. Senator Bristow helped to defeat his own amendment for a revision of the sugar schedule when it was offered in his absence by Senator Jones of Washington.

"Impossible," Said La Follette.

The insurgents saw they had been dropped out of the Democratic arrangement. Progressive Leader La Follette declared it was impossible for the insurgents to vote the Democratic bill, while the Democrats had agreed that if their bill was defeated they would be willing to support the La Follette measure.

As the progress of votes showed that the Democrats had been given a clear majority by the absence of the regular Republicans, the insurgents set out in an effort to get a vote on the La Follette compromise bill, which it had been expected would be adopted in place of the house bill. Senator La Follette finally offered his bill as a substitute for the house bill and the amendments that had been added to it. He appealed to the Democrats to vote for his substitute, declaring that the insurgents were yielding a good deal, but could not support the original bill.

The La Follette substitute received no votes beyond those of the insurgents. The Democrats voted against it, as did a handful of regular Republicans, all other Republicans either absenting themselves from the chamber or refusing to vote.

Then Came Final Vote.

Then came the final vote on the house cotton bill. Instead of the strong Republican vote which had defeated the house wool bill and the house free list bill, and had forced the adoption of compromise legislation in both cases, the vote showed that a strong majority was being rolled up in favor of the measure. Only the Democrats voted for it, but as the roll call progressed it became apparent that Republicans were sitting in the chamber and not voting, or were stepping back into the cloak rooms before their names were called.

Clapp With Democrats.

The amendments as adopted were:

By Mr. Bacon, to revise the iron and steel schedule.

By Mr. Simmons, North Carolina, reducing the tariff on cotton machinery to 30 per cent, adopted 34 to 22, progressive Republicans voting solidly with the Democrats, by Mr. Overman, North Carolina, revising chemical schedule, adopted 27 to 22, progressive Republicans all voting against it.

By Mr. Watson, West Virginia for reciprocal admission of bituminous coal across Canadian line, adopted without division.

Minnesota, and Works, California, Republican insurgents, and Jones of Washington, who has at times voted with the insurgents, all voting with the Democrats.

SAN FRANCISCO GRAFT INDICTMENTS QUASHED.

San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 18.—In accordance with the imperative writ of mandate issued by the district court of appeals, Superior Judge William P. Lalor has dismissed the indictments in the trolley bribery cases against Patrick Calhoun, Tirey L. Ford, Thornwell Mullally and William M. Abbott, officials of the United Railroads.

GOMPERS TALKS OF THE ENGLISH STRIKE.

Washington, Aug. 18.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, sees in the present labor crisis in England a revolutionary movement which will result in righting labor conditions in that country, which in his opinion have been unbearable for the past fifteen years Not only will its results be felt in the United States, Mr. Gompers says, but it will be felt in almost every country where labor has organized.

"The strike," he declared, "is but a vigorous manifestation of the spirit of the English laboring people against such conditions that have had them under a yoke for such a long period, and the indignation of the people will result in a complete victory for English organized labor.

"The time has come when they must rise against those conditions and take the matter into their own hands."

HOW TO KILL HOPPERS.

State Entomology Department Tells Farmers Best Methods.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 18.—The state entomology department has issued a large placard, headed in large black type, "Death to Grasshoppers and How to Kill Them," which states that in 1909 the hoppers were troublesome and increasing, and in 1910, more so—about two-thirds of the flax crop was lost—while this year they were very bad in the western third of Minnesota, from the Canadian border to the Iowa line.

Under the caption, "Future Outlook," the placard says: "Rather serious. The large numbers this year and the numerous quantities of eggs which will be deposited represent a prediction for greater numbers next year. The pest may increase alarmingly if weather conditions favor it and the farmers make no concerted action against it. Remember that any grasshopper may be as injurious as the Rocky mountain form if allowed to increase in large numbers.

"How to protect the field crops: Sodium arsenilic—used in South Arica with marked success—has given very satisfactory results in Minnesota, summer of 1911. Its use calls for early and concerted action on the part of farmers. Best results if applied when they are very young. The following formula best suited to Minnesota: Sodium arsenite, 3 pounds; water, 180 gallons; molasses, 1.5 gallons. Applied with ordinary horse sprayer."

Hopperdozer treatment also is described and fall plowing is advised. The placard is illustrated with a hopper, evidently of a musical turn of mind, perched on a fence near a field of wheat playing on an accordion. "In This Wheat By and By." The placard also pays a tribute to the state senators who were instrumental in passing the bill in the last legislature which appropriated $6,000 for use by the department in fighting the troublesome hopper for the biennial period.

STATEMENT BY LOVETT.

Stock Market Conditions Lead Him to Deny Rumors.

New York, Aug. 18.—President Lovett of the Union and Southern Pacific railroads, made the following official statement yesterday afternoon:

"Ordinarily it is not the function of a railroad executive to take cognizance of stock market conditions, and I am especially averse to it, but during the last ten days Union Pacific has been singled out as the object of such an extraordinary number of baseless rumors, so persistently reiterated, that it seems to me due our stockholders, whom such stories are designed to disturb, that I should state that there are no dissentions whatever in our board of directors; that the management from top to bottom is perfectly harmonious; that a change in the dividend rate has not been discussed or in any way considered, and aside from some rearrangement of any additions to our organization, as I sometime ago recommended, and which in due time will be made, no action has been taken or is contemplated out of the ordinary."

MARINETTE MIDDY FINALLY ARRIVES.

Marinette, Wis., Aug. 18.—Garret Day, the young naval cadet who disappeared on the way from Annapolis to Marinette to see his dying mother, has arrived here. His only explanation of the delay was that he had run out of money and had to wait until he could get some. His absence stirred up the navy department and the police of many cities along the route from Annapolis to Marinette.

NORWEGIAN MINE LOCKOUT SETTLED.

Christiania, Norway, Aug. 18.—The lockout declared by Norwegian mine owners on July 8, following a dispute over wages and conditions of employment, has been settled through the mediation of the government.

FOUR FAMILIES FOR ONE MAN

Meridan, Miss., Aug. 18.—How a man maintained four households for eighteen years, three in addition to that of his legally married wife, was revealed when F. L. Deason, who lives near Collinsville, was tried in the circuit court here. Three of the women in the case were sisters, Cricket, Dorsh and Ellen Cockren, and they were shown to be the mothers of sixteen of his children, in addition to his five other children.

How Deason was able to maintain these four families during the period of eighteen years without action having been taken against him does not appear from the record, but his neighbors profess that they knew nothing about conditions existing.

When the three women and Deason faced Judge Buckley they were accompanied by their children, and admitted their guilt. The women were given a sentence of one day each on the provision that they leave the county in sixty days. Deason was given sixty days in jail on one case, and three sentences of $500 and sixty days were suspended.

The three sisters reside close together, and at one time at least during their relations with Deason two of them were under the same roof.

Farmer Shoots up Church.

Lexington, Ky., Aug. 18.—Reuben Potter, a young farmer, of Warnock, Greenup county, attacked the congregation of Cooper church at Kehoe, Ky., emptying his revolver indiscriminately within the church, wounding Rance Cooper and Bryant White. He riddled the doors, window panes and walls of the edifice and then escaped to the mountains. The wounded men may recover.

FARMER WITH GUN STUMPS NORTHWESTERN.

Des Moines, Iowa, Aug. 18.—Camping on the top of a rail fence, with a gun between his knees and defiance written all over his grizzled countenance, L. C. Doran, a farmer living near Boone, has put to rout the entire Northwestern railroad system and frustrated the company's efforts to move three of its cars from a spur track which is located on his property.

Deputy United States Marshal George Bldwell went to Boone yesterday to see whether a writ of replevin can do anything to recover the cars for the railroad company.

The spur on which the cars are, runs from the company's main line to a coal mine, and crosses the farm owned by Doran. The mine has been abandoned and the company desired to remove the track.

A gang of men prepared to do the work, journeyed to the Doran farm, but found Doran sitting on the fence with his gun. He told them to let the cars alone. A switch engine was brought into action, and it developed that the car wheels had been chained to the track. The crew and engine returned to Boone without the cars.

Doran now has been made defendant in the federal court in a replevin action brought by the railroad company. The company wants its three cars, its 3.16 miles of track and its 1,900 ties and its 7,600 iron spikes.

IOWA NEGRO ACCUSED OF ATTACKING GIRL.

Boone, Iowa, Aug. 18.—Harry Perkins, aged 25, a negro, was captured by a crowd of nearly 100 angry miners near Ogden in Boone county yesterday afternoon, and brought to this city, where he was lodged in jail charged with an attempted assault upon Cilia Kouri, a Russian girl, near Ogden this forenoon.

The girl was in the habit of visiting the mining camps, selling articles of clothing, and was on her way to Mine No. 1, a mile from Ogden, when Perkins is alleged to have held her up.

Perkins was caught in a corn field about a mile from the scene. A charge of robbery has been preferred against him.

TWO FIREMEN IN CLEVELAND HURT.

Cleveland, Ohio, Aug. 18.—During a fire that partially destroyed the Fries & Schule department store on West Twenty-fifth street, the roof collapsed, burying Fire Chief C. B. Whyler and Batallion Chief M. F. Fallon beneath the debris. Frantic efforts by the firemen resulted in their rescue in a few moments. Whyler suffered a broken shoulder and two fractured ribs. Fallon's injuries were less serious. Several other firemen had narrow escapes.

HEINZE FINALLY SERVED WITH PAPERS IN SUIT.

Butte, Mont., Aug. 18.—After having successfully dodged process servers since his arrival in Butte Tuesday, F. Augustus Heinze, former copper king, walked straight into the arms of one in a hotel here last night. He merely smiled, submitting without comment.

Papers were filed in the district court Tuesday in a sensational suit against Heinze, in which Robert Lyons, as receiver of the Aetna Banking & Trust company, seeks to recover $250,000, alleged to have been secured through a criminal conspiracy and to the loss of the stockholders of the de-

EXHIBIT AT KANSAS CITY

Northern Minnesota Will Be Represented at Missouri Valley Fair.

Northern Pacific Railroad Company Gives Commercial Club Space.

The Northern Pacific Railroad company, through L. J. Bricker, general immigration agent, has offered the Duluth Commercial club the use of 400 square feet of floor space at the Missouri Valley Fair and Exposition at Kansas City, Sept. 23 to Oct. 8, for a display of Northern Minnesota products.

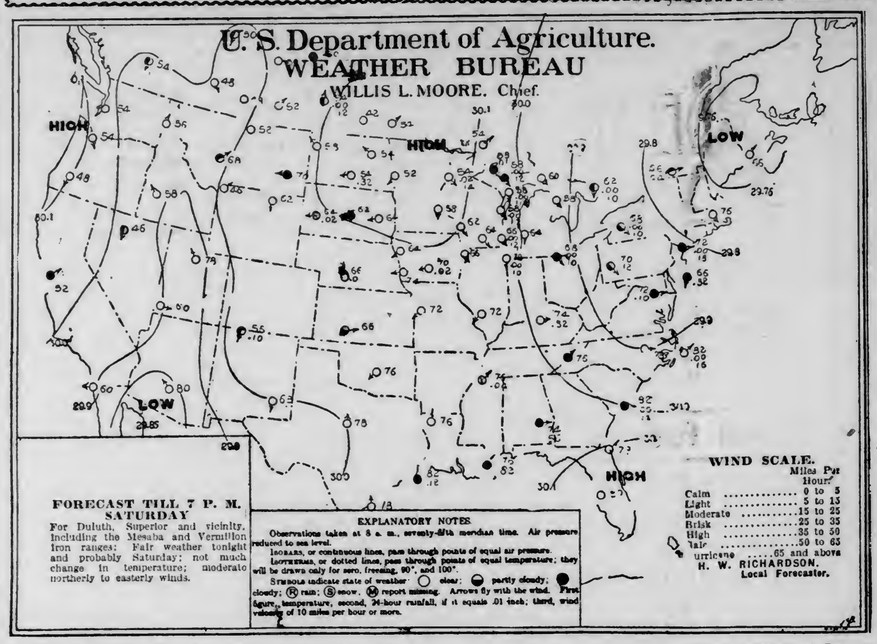
The club will gladly avail itself of the opportunity to reach Missouri valley farmers with a display of products from this section of the country. A portion of the Northern Minnesota exhibits at the state fair will be shipped to Kansas City after the Minnesota fair closes and will be arranged in an attractive manner in the space allotted.

St. Louis county and other Northern Minnesota counties will show some excellent products at the Minnesota state fair. The year has been an exceptional one for agriculture in this section and the production of garden products, especially, has been of unusual volume and quantity. State fair visitors who have been surprised in former years by the display from this section of the state will have their eyes further opened this year.

The opportunity to exhibit at Kansas City is one that will appeal to people interested in Northern Minnesota agricultural development. Many of the settlers coming to Northern Minnesota now are from the older agricultural states to the south. Northern Minnesota will be able to show the Missouri valley farmers some great agricultural possibilities and the exhibit should be of incalculable benefit to this section.

The railroads of the Northwest, with a newly awakened interest in Northern Minnesota, are preparing to advertise this region on a larger scale this year than ever before. Northern Minnesota agricultural enthusiasts and the railroads clashed a few years ago on the space allotted to this section in agricultural advertising cars. The railroads have seen a great white light of opportunity in this section since that time and last year this section was given a more adequate representation. This year it is expected that Northern Minnesota will be given the advertising its possibilities merit.

OFFICIAL MAP OF THE WEATHER



FAIR

Except for a brief shower last evening, there has been nothing to disturb the delightful weather conditions. The days are warm enough to be comfortable and the nights cool enough for refreshing sleep. The weather man is making himself a candidate for a string of real gold medals with settings of diamonds. Fair weather is on the cards for tonight and tomorrow.

The sun rose this morning at 5:09 and it will set at 7:14, giving fourteen hours and five minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"Slightly cooler weather prevails in the lake region, Missouri and Kansas, but in all districts except in the Northeast grain region moderately warm to hot weather was the rule during Thursday. Falling pressures are attended by rising temperatures from Utah northward to including Alberta and Saskatchewan. During the last twenty-four hours light rains fell over the Ohio valley, Middle Atlantic states, the lower Mississippi valley, Western South Dakota, Western Nebraska and Colorado, principally in connection with the low pressures centered over Maine and Arizona. At the Head of the Lakes fair weather may be expected to continue during the ensuing thirty-six hours."

James Henry Thomas, labor member of parliament for Derby and assistant secretary of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants, issued a statement in which he asserted that the strikers had almost paralyzed the whole railway system of the United Kingdom.

The military held possession of the stations along the lines, but not for the purpose at present of interfering in the strike except to protect men desiring to work and to guard the property of the companies.

Meantime the government continued its efforts to avert the general stoppage of the transportation service of the country.

Troops in London.

Some 20,000 troops arrived in Londor during the night and early morning found them encamped at points where they were able to protect the lines of communication according to a plan worked out months ago by a commission composed of railroad men and military men, appointed to adopt a scheme for protecting these lines in the event of a foreign invasion.

The plan worked perfectly last night and long before Londoners were about this morning the various military units were at their posts.

A little group of uniformed men from the signal corps took up a station in the dome of St. Paul's cathedral, from which they kept the different units in touch with the general staff at the war office.

Keep Parliament in Session.

So critical does the government regard the strike situation and so urgent may be the need of instant legislation, that the cabinet suddenly decided this afternoon that parliament should not adjourn today as had been arranged.

Chancellor David Lloyd-George, who was leading the government forces in the house of commons in the absence of Premier Asquith, made the announcement just before the lower chamber's session was suspended for lunch. He moved that the adjournment be delayed until Tuesday next, and this was agreed to.

During the session Mr. Churchill delivered a stern warning to the disorderly elements. He said that there had been no disturbances in London, but several attempts had been made to commit outrages against railway property. It was important that all should understand such acts were crimes of the most serious character punishable with penal servitude. It was early yet to measure the extent of the strike, but the government was taking all necessary steps.

Meeting of Strikers.

The first of a series of meetings arranged by the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants was held outside the Euston railway station this afternoon and was addressed by Assistant Secretary Thomas. He blamed the government for the strike and strongly appealed to all railroad men to join the great fight for emancipation. The speaker deprecated the rioting, which he said placed the strongest argument in the hands of their enemy.

"I am not going to boast without knowing that what I am saying is so," he said. "Scotland is already cut off. Railway traffic in Wales is absolutely stopped. There is no railway communication between Bristol and the channel ports, and within another five hours the whole railway system of the United Kingdom will be stopped. The railway unions are unanimous and they mean to fight to a finish."

This afternoon there have been no disorders at the chief railway depots and the duties of the soldiers were light.

Carry Caskets in Autos.

The lack of wagons to move coal necessitated the closing down of a number of collieries, thus adding thousands to the ranks of the idle ones. Some of the provincial railway staffs have been so reduced that clerks are acting as firemen and guards, while inspectors are driving locomotives. In many instances caskets were of necessity removed from the trains and taken to their destination in automobiles.

Sydney Buxton, president of the board of trade, who had an early morning call from Viscount Richard D. Haldane, secretary of state for war, again met the railroad managers, and the officials of the union today to consider the government's suggestion for the appointment of a royal commission which should investigate and report what amendments if any should be made to the conciliation agreement now existing between the owners and the employes, as explained by Chancellor David Lloyd-George in the house of commons last night. The suggestion was rejected yesterday by the men. The chancellor explained that the men had misunderstood the premier's proposal. It was intended, he said, to give them fair play and not "to lure out of their hands the great weapon of striking." The statement of the chancellor had much to do with preventing a more general response to the leaders' call for a strike. The men's leaders rejected the proposal again today.

Chaos at Liverpool.

At Manchester business today was at a standstill, as the teamsters were still out, while at Liverpool the chaos was complete. With the exception of a few incoming trains, all of which were late, the train service at Liverpool was practically suspended. The three passenger stations in that city were besieged with passengers and the platforms were piled high with baggage belonging chiefly to Americans who had gone there with the hope of securing passage to America on outgoing liners. The companies were finally compelled to discontinue selling tickets.

Throughout Wales, where the unions are strong, there was almost a total stoppage of traffic. No trains were able to get through to Fishguard.

As the day progressed more serious reports came in.

The threat to call a general strike of teamsters throughout the country is thought not likely to be enforced as the men appear satisfied with the settlement recently reached.

At Euston station today police escorted boxes containing strike pay from the station to the offices of the union.

"I'd rather be in vaudeville than star in the legit," is the title of a little song that William H. Macart hums to himself. Mr. Macart was for years featured in the big spectacles presented by Klaw & Erlanger. He appeared as principal comedian in such productions as "The Beauty and The Beast," "The White Cat" and "The Strollers." These were huge Drury Lane pantomimes produced in this country by Klaw & Erlanger, with from 400 to 600 people in the cast of each. In the companies were such actors as Harry Bulger, William H. Hodge, Joseph Cawthorne and Clifton Crawford. All of these men are now stars, heading big musical or dramatic companies, but Mr. Macart sticks to vaudeville. "It's surer and more profitable," he says. "I have had several chances during the last four years to get back in the so-called 'legitimate,' but vaudeville is good enough for me. I have had four years' steady and profitable employment, without losing a day that I did not want to lose, and never being forced to hunt for a new vehicle. There are no one night stands, and no fear of the company being stranded."

The Empress bill for next week will be featured by probably the most pretentious act ever brought to the Duluth theater. It is called "The Arts Mysteria." It is a big spectacle act, in which reproductions of the world's most famous masterpieces are shown by models. There are twenty people in the act, and they carry a carload of special scenery and lighting effects.

"Bright Eyes" will be the offering at the Lyceum theater for three nights and a Saturday matinee commencing Thursday evening Aug. 24, with the same big company of seventy-five musical comedy artists headed by the well known and most popular fun-makers, Cecil Lean and Florence Holbrook, that made the piece such a success at the New York theater, for over five months and was the offering at the Colonial theater, Chicago, for eight weeks to phenomenal business last year. It will be seen here in its entirety. Seats are now on sale.

COE VIGOROUS IN HIS DENIAL

Says He Had Resigned Before Jefferson Street Was Paved.

E. K. Coe, who was at one time assistant in the office of City Engineer McGilvray, is wroth at one of the statements quoted as coming from Mr. McGilvray at yesterday's investigation. In the report of Mr. McGilvray's testimony, he is quoted as saying that Mr. Coe was in charge of the Jefferson street job of paving.

"If Mr. McGilvray is correctly quoted, he certainly is mistaken," said Mr. Coe this morning. "At the time Jefferson street was being paved I was not even in the employ of the city, having before that resigned to take a position with the government engineers stationed here. If you refer to the comptroller's records you will find that is the fact, and that I could have had no connection whatever with the Jefferson street job."

HANCOCK SOCIALISTS TO ELIMINATE RED FLAG.

Hancock, Mich., Aug. 18.—Fears of a repetition next Sunday of the riots which occurred in Hancock four years ago when fifty Socialists attempted to parade the streets carrying red flags, have been set at rest by the announcement of the leaders of the Socialist party in this city that the plans for a red-flag demonstration Sunday had been abandoned. The Socialists will hold a parade before their annual picnic but the red flag will not be in evidence.

RETURNS FROM CONVENTION

Dr. W. H. Konkler Is Enthusiastic Over Denver Gathering of M. B. A.

Dr. W. H. Konkler, who with A. G. McKenzie of Virginia, and Dr. Jacob Nyquist of Cloquet, represented the Eighth congressional district at the national convention of the Modern Brotherhood of America at Denver last week, has returned home, and reports the most successful convention in the history of the order.

The convention was in session for four days last week, and besides the 194 delegates there were 3,000 visiting members of the order in the city. The Denver papers announced it as the biggest and finest convention that that city of conventions ever had entertained.

The four days' session was chiefly given over to a discussion of the insurance rates to be charged by the order, and several lengthy papers were read on this subject.

The city was in gala attire for the big gathering and the local branches of the order saw that the visitors were royally entertained. All of the visitors gained a most favorable impression of Denver itself, though Dr. Konkler says that the country surrounding it looks pretty barren compared with the apparent fertility of Minnesota. Dr. Konkler and a party of the delegates enjoyed the unique experience of playing ball in the snow on Pike's peak and before their return they visited the Grand Canon and other points of interest.

TAFT'S MESSAGE ACCOMPANYING HIS VETO OF THE WOOL BILL

Washington, Aug. 18.—In his message accompanying his veto of the wool tariff revision bill, President Taft said:

"I return without my approval House Bill No. 11019 with a statement of my reasons for so doing.

"The bill is an amendment of the existing tariff law and readjusts the customs duties in what is known as Schedule K, embracing wool and the manufactures of wool.

"I was elected to the presidency as the candidate of a party which in its platform declared its aim and purpose to be to maintain a protective tariff by 'the imposition of such duties as will equal the difference between the cost of production at home and abroad, together with a reasonable profit to American industries.'

"I have always regarded this language as fixing the proper measure of protection at the ascertained difference between the cost of production at home and that abroad, and have construed the reference to the profit of American industries as intended, not to add a new element to the measure stated or to exclude from the cost of production abroad the element of a manufacturer's or producer's profit, but only to emphasize the importance of including in the American cost a manufacturer's or producer's profit reasonable according to the American standard.

Kept Party Promise.

"In accordance with a promise made in the same platform, I called an extra session of the Sixty-first congress, at which a general revision of the tariff was made and adopted in the Payne bill. It was contended by those who opposed the Payne bill that the existing rates of the Dingley bill were excessive and that the rates adopted in the revising statute were not sufficiently reduced to conform to the promised measure.

"The great difficulty, however, in discussing the new rates, was that there are no means available by which impartial persons could determine what, in fact, was the difference in cost of production between the products of this country and the same products abroad. The American public became deeply impressed with the conviction that, in order to secure a proper revision of the tariff in the future, exact information as to the effect of the new rates must be had, and that the evil of log rolling, or a compromise between advocates of different protected industries, in fixing duties could be avoided and the interest of the consuming public could be properly guarded, only by revising the tariff one schedule at a time.

The Tariff Board.

"To help these reforms for the future, I took advantage of a clause in the Payne tariff bill enabling me to create a tariff board of three members, and directed them to make a glossary and encyclopedia of the terms used in the tariff, and to secure information as to the comparative cost of production of dutiable articles under the tariff at home and abroad."

Here the president quoted from his message of Dec. 7, 1909, requesting money to continue the work of the tariff board and stating the good results he believed would be obtained by scientific revision. Yesterday's message continues:

"A popular demand arose for the formal creation by law of a permanent non-partisan tariff commission. Commercial bodies all over the country united in a movement to secure adequate legislation for the purpose, and an association with a nation-wide constituency was organized to promote the cause. The public opinion in favor of such a commission was evidenced by resolutions adopted in 1909 and 1910 by Republican state conventions in at least twenty-eight states.

"In addition efforts were made to secure a change in the rules of procedure in the house and senate with a view to preventing the consideration of tariff changes except schedule by schedule.

Tariff Business Basis.

"The business of the country rests on a protective-tariff basis. The public keenly realized that a disturbance of business by a change in the tariff and a threat of injury to the industries of the country ought to be avoided, and that nothing could help so much to minimize the fear of destructive changes as the known existence of a reliable source of information for legislative action. The deep interest in the matter of an impartial ascertainment of facts before any new revision, was evidenced by an effort to pass a tariff commission bill in the short session of the Sixty-first congress, in which many of both parties united.

Majority Prevented Action.

"Such a bill passed both houses. It provided a commission of five members to be appointed by the president, not more than three of whom were to belong to the same party and gave them the power and made it their duty to investigate the operation of the tariff, the comparative cost of production at home and abroad, and like matters of importance in fixing the terms of a revenue measure, and required them to report to the executive and to congress when directed. Several, not vital, amendments were made in the senate which necessitated a return of the bill to the house, where, because of the limited duration of the session, a comparatively small minority were able to prevent its becoming a law.

"On the failure of this bill, I took such steps as I could to make the tariff board I had already appointed a satisfactory substitute for the proposed tariff commission.

"The board differs in no way from the tariff commission as it would have been, except in its ppwor to summon witnesses; and I am advised by the members of the board that, without this power, they have had no difficulty in securing the information they desire.

"The board took some months to investigate the methods pursued in other countries in procuring information on tariff subjects and to organize its force. In October, 1910, its work of investigation began with a force of forty, that has now increased to eighty.

Wool Schedule Needs Experts.

"If there ever was a schedule that needed investigation and elaborate explanation by experts before its amendment, it is schedule 'K.' There is a widespread belief that many rates in the present schedule are too high and are in excess of any needed protection for the wool grower or manufacturer. I share this belief, and have so stated in public addresses. But I have not sufficient data upon which I can judge how schedule 'K' ought to be amended or how its rates ought to be reduced in order that the new bill shall furnish the proper measure of protection and no more. Nor have I sources of information which satisfy me that the bill presented to me for signature will accomplish this result.

"Congressional proceedings make available for me no accurate or scientifically accurate information which enables me to determine that the bill supplies the measure of protection promised in the platform on which I was elected.

New Bill Compromise.

"Without any investigation of which the details are available, an avowed tariff for revenue and anti-protection bill is by compromise blended with a professed protection bill. Rates between those of the two bills are adopted and passed, except that, in some important instances, rates are fixed in the compromise at a figure higher, and in others at a figure lower, than were originally fixed in either house. The principle followed in adjusting the amendments of existing law is, therefore, not clear, and the effect of the bill is most uncertain.

"The Wilson tariff act of 1894, while giving the manufacturer free wool, provided as high duties on leading manufacturers of wool as does the present bill, which at the same time taxes the manufacturers' raw material at 25 per cent. Thus the protection afforded to manufacturers under the Wilson bill was very considerably higher than under the present bill.

Wilson Bill Troubles.

"During the years in which the Wilson bill was in force, the woolen manufacturers suffered. Many mills were compelled to shut down. These were abnormal years and it is not necessary to attribute the hard times solely to the tariff act of 1894. But it was at least an addition to other factors operating to injure the woolen business. It is the only experience we have had for a generation of a radical revision of this schedule, and, without exaggerating its importance, one pledged to a moderate protection policy may well hesitate before giving approval without full information to legislation which makes a more radical reduction in the protection actually afforded to manufacturers of wool than did the Wilson act.

"Nor does this hesitation arise only for fear of injury to manufacturers. Unless manufacturers are able to continue their business and buy wool from domestic wool growers, the latter will have no benefit from the tariff that is supposed to protect them, because they will have to sell in competition with foreign wools or send their sheep to the shambles. Hence, the wool grower is as much interested in the protection of the manufacturer as he is of his own.

Postpone Any Change.

"It may well be that conditions of manufacture in this country have changed so as to require much less protection now for the manufacturers than at the time of the Wilson bill; but in view of the possible wide suffering involved by hasty action based on unsufficient knowledge, the wise course, in my judgment, is to postpone any change for a few months needed to complete the pending inquiry.

"When I have the accurate information which justifies such action, I shall recommend to congress as great a reduction in schedule 'K' as the measure of the protection, already stated, will permit. The failure of the present bill should not be regarded, therefore, as taking away the only chance for reduction by this congress.

"More than 1,000,000 of our countrymen are engaged in the production of wool and the manufacture of woolens; more than $1,000,000,000 of the country's capital is invested in the industry. Large communities are almost wholly dependent on the prosperity of the wool grower and the woolen manufacturer.

Should Go Slowly.

"Moderately estimated, 5,000,000 of the American people will be injuriously affected by any ill-advised impairment of the wool and woolen industries. Certainly we should proceed prudently in dealing with them, upon the basis of ascertained facts, rather than hastily and without knowledge to make a reduction of the tariff to satisfy a popular desire, which I fully recognize, for reduction of duties believed to be excessive.

"There is no public exigency requiring the revision of schedule 'K' in August without adequate information, rather than in December next with such information. December was the time fixed by both parties in the last congress for the submission of adequate information upon schedule 'K' with a view to its amendment.

"Certainly, the public weal is better preserved by delaying ninety days in order to do justice, and make such a reduction as shall be proper, than now blindly to enact a law which may seriously injure the industries involved and the business of the country in general."

MARSE HENRY "NOT NEEDED"

Veteran Warrior of Kentucky Voices His Own Political Fate.

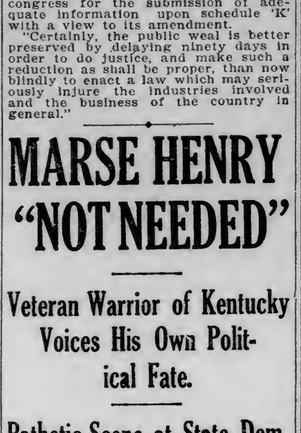
Pathetic Scene at State Democratic Convention at Louisville.

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 18.—One of the most pathetic incidents in many years of Kentucky's political history was that enacted in Louisville at the platform convention of the Democratic party, when Col. Henry Watterson, known the country over as "Marse Henry," apparently sang his swan song as a leading factor in Kentucky Democracy.

It may be that the colonel will yet prove to be a powerful agent in his party. It may be that his own prediction at that time will prove false. Certainly there will be many who will rejoice should they prove to be the case, for Marse Henry has many admirers, and if he should be able to return to leadership he would gain many more. But at the time of the convention it certainly looked as if, to use his own expression, Col. Watterson was declared "dead and damned and buried by competent authority and orderly procedure."

"No Longer Needed."

At that, the procedure was hardly orderly. Feeling ran high, and there was much commotion throughout the convention. The only moment when real quiet existed was at a point in Col.



"MARSE" HENRY WATTERSON.

Watterson's speech when the old warrior's voice grew low, and those nearest him saw his lips quiver as he said:

"I am getting old. It seems as if I am no longer needed by my party. But I will always be a Democrat. If I am ordered into the ranks I will shoulder my musket and follow McCreary if he goes to hell."

As Col. Watterson sat down, a deafening cheer rent the air and cries of "Marse Henry," "Marse Henry," again threw the convention in disorder.

Mr. Beckham's name was then taken up and uttered from hundreds of lips. He was the opponent of Mr. Watterson, who centered attention in the duel of words. It was some time before he could proceed after he had come forward on the platform.

Hissing Was Terrific.

The hissing was terrific, but Mr. Beckham held his ground, hands clenched, and unflinchingly told the delegates he would wait upon them. Then they let him talk.

He urged the necessity of party harmony. The county unit, he said, was an absolute necessity if the party is to win next election time. When he had concluded speaking the noise subsided after a while and the motion was made to adopt the committee's report. The call of the roll was asked. Much handshaking was indulged in when the result was announced, a majority of 153 for a county unit.

Col. Watterson's fight was for a local option plank in the Democratic state platform. The amendment offered by Mr. Watterson to the report of the resolutions committee was beaten by a vote of 667 to 514.

It was the wish of Former Senator James B. McCreary, nominee for governor, that a county unit plank be included, and although many of the delegates preferred local option, they voted according to the standard-bearer's wishes in the interest of harmony.

Features of the session were the speeches of Mr. Watterson, advocating local option as a substitute plank for county unit, and Former Governor J. C. W. Beckham's speech in behalf of county unit.

When Mr. Beckham, chairman of the resolutions committee, announced that body was ready to report, interest at once became tense. Little interest was manifested by the delegates as the chairman read off the various planks which the committee recommended for inclusion in the platform. When he read that portion of the report referring to the extension of the county unit there was a vociferous outburst, co-mingled with hisses, hoots and cat calls.

Signal for Pandemonium.

No sooner had Mr. Beckham concluded than Henry Watterson sought recognition from the chair. It was the signal for pandemonium. The aged warrior raised his hand, imploring quiet, but it was fully ten minutes before Chairman Rhea succeeded in bringing about quiet.

"I come in peace, not in war," the veteran's first words were clear and ringing. He paused and strode restlessly up and down the platform. The situation grew tense.

"All the fighters in Kentucky are behind me," was his next utterance. This in spite of the fact that ten members of the resolution committee had said: "We favor the extension of the county unit." His challenge, however, brought forth another outburst and chaos seemed imminent.

Mr. Watterson offered his minority report, calling for the inclusion of a local option instead of a county unit plank in the platform. He urged its importance. He said the party would do well to stand by its ancient moorings.

"Always a Democrat."

The warrior's voice grew low. Those who sat near him saw his lips quiver as he said:

"I am getting old. It seems as if I am no longer needed by my party. But I will always be a Democrat. If I am ordered into the ranks I will shoulder my musket and follow McCreary if he goes to hell."

COULDN'T GET CENTRAL.

So Citizens Investigated and Found Bedbugs Living on Wires.

Hollidaysburg, Pa., Aug. 18.—Hollidaysburg was robbed of telephone service this morning. Subscribers "ting-a-linged" at their receivers in vain, for the central office was mute to the most frantic "hellos" of the lawyers, doctors and business men.

Bed bugs were the cause of it all. The pesky little vermin got behind the switchboard at the central office, bred, waxed fat and prospered. They had made a banquet of the paraffine on the wires and electric equipment, and stopped all the after-dinner speeches of the subscribers.

After a gallon of bed bug exterminator had been used by the linemen Hollidaysburg was once more on the telephone map.

GAG LAW FOR CAPITAL.

Senator Works Wants Details of Crimes and Accidents Suppressed.

Washington, Aug. 18.—If a bill introduced in the senate by Senator Works of California, is passed, it will be unlawful to publish in the District of Columbia any detailed account of any murder, suicide or other crime or alleged crime or accident.

The bill makes it unlawful to print details other than a mere statement of the fact that such a crime, tragedy or accident happened, or is alleged to have happened, without details or comments of any kind. Heavy penalties are provided for violation of the law.

In talking of the bill Senator Works said it was high time to call a halt on the publication of details of crime. He said it excited others to crime, and tended to injure the morals and sensibilities of those that read such details.

GOING UP!

Sauerkraut Makers Say Year' Cabbage Crop Is Short.

Sandusky, Ohio, Aug. 18.—According to reports submitted to the National Association of Sauerkraut Manufacturers, in annual convention at Cedar Point, this year's cabbage crop will fall from 25 to 30 per cent short of last year.

The Southern and Western crops are failures on account of drouths. Rain is badly needed in the Ohio cabbage-growing districts, wherein failure will mean a material advance in the price of sauerkraut next winter. The sauerkraut men declare the odorous viand, once the poor man's dish, is now a great favorite with the rich.

Bellefontaine, Ohio, Aug. 18.—John Allen, aged 55, was stricken with apoplexy in a bank here as he was drawing money with which to go on a vacation. He died within an hour.

S.S.S. FOR SCROFULA NATURE'S PERFECT CURE

Swollen glands about the neck, weak eyes, running sores and abscesses, pale, waxy complexions and frail, poorly developed systems, are the most usual ways in which Scrofula is manifested. In some cases the blood is so filled with the scrofulous germs that from birth the disease shows its presence. In other cases it is held in check during young, vigorous life, but when the system begins to weaken, especially after a spell of sickness, the disease will often manifest itself in some form. S. S. S. is Nature's perfect cure for Scrofula, made entirely of healthful roots, herbs and barks, a perfectly safe medicine for young or old. *S. S. THE EVENING STORY

A MAD RIDE

By Joseph R. Reham.

Down in Texas, before the railway days, narrates a cattle rancher, we were accustomed to drive our cattle into Colorado and let them graze slowly across the great buffalo range to the railway. Once we left the home ranch with 3,000 head of steers. There had been excitement over a gold find in the mountains, and our rangers had stampeded, so that we took the trail with only the foreman and two "cow punchers" to handle the herd of cattle. In addition to these was the negro teamster cook, a little slip of a lad, and myself.

The rangers were no better or worse than the average, rovers who had come from nobody knew where, and were likely to disappear in the night. But "Old Seth" as the foreman was called, was well known over the whole range country as a "bronco buster," a rider of fractious ponies, and an expert with the lariat.

The "Kid," as we called the lad, had drifted one evening into our camp from toward Kansas. He explained that his mother was dead, that his father had taken to drink, and that he had run away from home after a beating from his father. Old Seth constituted himself protector of the lad, and the little fellow followed the grizzled foreman like a collie, and, if at night the play grew too rough, Seth's "Let that kid alone!" was sure to bring consideration. He was a quiet, obliging, little fellow, and soon grew in favor.

For two weeks we had followed the trail, herding by day and camping at night by foul water holes, with no more than the usual incidents of hard riding, dusty plain, and standing off the wolves. "Wake me, Seth, when your watch comes," the boy would say, and each night he rode at the old man's heels round and round the herded cattle.

It was late October, and the weather was fine. One evening we rounded up a short distance from a little settlement. The two rangers rode into the place, and did not return.

It was noon of the following day before we had the cattle ready to move on again. The outfit had been short handed before, and now the loss of the two rangers made it doubly difficut to handle the herd. The day had been warm, and whirlwinds of dust were forming in great columns about us, rising to a far height and sweeping majestically across the plain, sure harbingers of storm.

These made the cattle nervous and restless. As we rode round them a white cloud swept up from our ponies. The steers saw it, bellowed, bunched in fright, while the cloud became a column, swayed, danced off a little caught up a fragment of paper, then, whirling and rattling, suddenly darted toward the cattle.

A hundred rangers could not have held them. There was a bellow; a roar of feet, and with tails up, they stampeded toward the south. It was down grade, and they ran for twenty miles, with Seth and me and the boy at their heels. By night we had circled them into a little canon which opened across the plains.

For some time before the sun went down a long yellow feather had lain upon the horizon to the north; now it began to rise and spread. The sky grew dark with flying dust. The wind burst upon us with fury. It grew colder and colder, while snow fell thick and fast before the howling gale. A blizzard was sweeping the plains, and our mess wagon and blankets were a day's journey away.

The cattle crowded together in the canon, and we found such protection as was possible under overhanging rock. Soon not an object was discernible; but out of the blackness, on roar of wind and driving snow, came the incessant bellowing of cattle, and now and then rattling of horns and fierce trampling of hoofs.

Old Seth took off his coat and wrapped it about the boy. Then he went out, and in the darkness managed somehow to rope a steer, and with its hide we made shelter in the cleft of a rock, and found warmth.

But the cattle scented the fresh blood and began to bellow and move restlessly, and after a little the wolves and coyotes answered. They were howling and yelping far out on the plains, on the bluffs above, and before morning were snarling and fighting over the carcass near by. Not a thing was visible in the darkness, but their sniffing could be heard as they passed close about us, and the doleful wallings of the big gray wolves rose high above the roar of the wind.

With the first dawn the boy shot one of the wolves upon the carcass of the steer, and the others ran off. The cattle crowded into the far end of the canon, under shelter of the bluff, still excited from the panic, and growing restless for water. It was doubtful if our line of three, spread across the lower canon, could hold them from stampede, for the coyotes and wolves, with persistent clamor, still watched our movements from the bluffs around. But the storm had passed. The morning was clear and still.

"We'll never manage these cows till the wolves are driven off," said Seth at last; and leaving him and the boy guarding the lower canon, I climbed out to do what execution I could. Again and again I fired, killing some and frightening others that ran off upon the plains, leaving red trails on the new fallen snow. I tramped around to the head of the little cannon, and was standing, quietly observing my comrades and the brown backs of the cattle massed below, when a wildcat walked out of a hole in the cliff and stood suddenly facing me.

In a moment I had dropped my gun and fired. The cat tumbled over, gave a bound, sprang out into the air and went down, with a great yowling, upon the backs of the cattle. Instantly they turned down through the canon like a flood in a mill race.

Seth was in the saddle. "Ride! Ride! Ride!" I heard him call to the boy. The lad was tightening his girths, and did not see the danger nor comprehend Seth's warning till the horse broke loose and left him standing in the open; and then when he saw the onrushing herd he stood motionless, paralyzed. They would sweep over him like a flood from a broken dam. I did not see Seth turn back, but suddenly the little fellow was caught up by the belt, swung into the saddle, and Seth and he were spurring away before the stampeding cattle.

The horse stumbled with its double load, then was up again in the midst of the panic stricken steers. Again and again I saw the pony rear as the struggling long-horned brutes crowded upon him and under him.

The boy was in the saddle and Seth had slipped back upon the haunches of his beast. As I looked, he sprang from the pony to the back of a steer, and it was evident his rope was about its horns. Then the pony went down, and for a moment man and boy seemed to have vanished under the grinding hoofs. Then Seth straightened up again, still astride his steer, the boy in his grasp, limp and helpless, while the whole mad, roaring mass swept in a flood round the bend of the canon.

Running across the level ground, I came where I could see them again from the bluff. The cattle were scrambling up the sloping hillside beyond. A black path lay beaten along the new fallen snow where those thousands of hoofs had passed, and out on the open plain the herd turned, with horns presented, awaiting the enemy which had sprung so suddenly from out of the clouds.

The boy's pony, riderless, had galloped free, but the horse that had fallen was nowhere to be seen. The roaring flood had passed over him. Down the canon, on the back of the steer, Seth and the kid rode from the fury of the stampede—the steer plunging in terror and mad rage, the man bending and heaving at the rope twisted about its long horns, while behind him the lad clung upon the tossing flanks.

Across the rocky ground and sand bars, into prickly cactus, madly they raced, till, with a plunge, riders and bellowing beast tumbled headlong. Hastening as fast as clinging snow would permit, I came where they law—Seth pinning down the maddened steer as he lay astride its neck, the boy stretched where he had been flung.

"Horse's feet balled in snow; he couldn't stand," was all Seth said. But the boy, lying limp and trembling, added:

"Horse could ha' carried Seth all right if he hadn't come back for me!"

"APPLAUSES" MARKED IN UNDELIVERED SPEECH.

Washington, Aug. 18.—Fourteen "applauses" and one "loud applause" appearing in an undelivered speech by Representative Littlepage of West Virginia, printed in the Congressional Record by unanimous consent, has brought Mr. Littlepage into the limelight again Republican Leader Mann, holding up the record of Wednesday's proceedings, asked unanimous consent that the Record be corrected. Representative Henry of Texas objected and moved that the matter be referred to the committee on printing. Mr. Mann demanded a roll call and the Henry motion was carried, 172 to 128. The vote was practically on party lines.

ACCUSED OF MURDER, WOMAN SAYS ACCIDENT.

Marinette, Wis., Aug. 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mrs. Mary Wertelgwski who is in jail here charged with the murder of her husband has retained W. B. Quinlan to defend her. The woman sticks to her original story that the injuries which caused his death were the result of his falling down stairs.

MANY CITIES SEEK RELIEF

Commission Plan of Government Is Widely Adopted.

Kansas Has More Such Municipal Bodies Than Other States.

Washington, Aug. 18.—Country-wide interest in the commission plan for the government of cities is reflected in the great number of letters of inquiry received by Senator Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma. The senator is high authority on the plan and a zealous advocate of its adoption. His activity has made him generally known and badly governed citizens naturally turn to him for advice.

Citizens who complain of the old form of municipal government, with its complications of councils, commissions, and numerous executive officials, assert that personal responsibility for inefficiency or misdeeds is a phantom impossible of discovery. They have, usually, a fairly clear notion of the benefits received by many cities from the commission plan and they ask for facts bearing up its practical application. A showing that surpasses many of the inquiries is the large number and varied character of the towns and cities that have adopted the plan. They dot twenty-six states and New Mexico and are to be found in all sections of the country. In a list of about 125 cities and towns governed by commissions, Alabama leads with the substantial cities of Birmingham with a population of 132,685 and Montgomery, 38,136.

Twenty-three in Kansas.

Kansas leads with the largest number of towns and cities under the plan—the total being twenty-three. The largest of these is Kansas City, Kan., with a population of 84,331; Wichita, 52,460, and Topeka, 42,692.

Iowa has eight cities, with Des Moines, which has won more than a national reputation through its success in commission government; Burlington, Cedar Rapids, Davenport, Fort Dodge, Keokuk, Marshalltown and Sioux City. The population of these cities ranges from 14,000 to 86,000. Sixteen Illinois towns are governed by commissions, the largest being Springfield, with a population of 51,678; Rock Island, 24,335; Moline, 24,109; Decatur, 31,140, and Jacksonville, 15,326.

California can boast of eight commission plan cities, the three largest being Oakland with 150,174 population, Berkeley, 40,434, and San Diego, 39,578.

Texas Boasts Thirteen.

Texas shines with thirteen cities and four towns governed by the commission plan. These include Dallas, 92,104; Houston, 78,800; Fort Worth, 73,313; Galveston, 36,981, and Austin and Beaumont, having more than 20,000 population. Spokane and Tacoma, thriving Washington cities, have the commission. Spokane has a population of 104,402, and Tacoma, has 83,743.

In West Virginia, Huntington, 31,161; Parkersburg, 17,843, and Bluefield, 11,188; in Kentucky, Newport, 30,305; in Michigan, Port Huron, 18,863, and three other cities; in Massachusetts, Gloucester, Haverhill, Lynn and Taunton, from 24,000 to 89,000; in South Dakota, Sioux Falls, 14,094; Aberdeen, 10,753, and eight other towns; in Wisconsin, Eau Claire, 18,310, and Appleton, 16,773, and in dozens of other cities the plan is in successful operation. Salt Lake City, Utah, capital of the state, and Memphis, Tenn., are in the list.

Two in Minnesota.

In other states the record shows Idaho, one city; Colorado, two; Louisiana, Maryland, New Mexico, Oregon, one each; Minnesota, Mississippi, two each; North Carolina and North Dakota, three each, under the beneficent rule of the plan. Buffalo is the largest city that has adopted the commission plan, but it has not yet placed it in effect. A number of other cities have voted to adopt the plan in some form, but have not placed it in operation.

DULUTH ADVERTISED BY MOVING PICTURES.

Duluth is getting her share of advertising out of the so-called travel festival of the Lyman H. Howe motion picture company and wherever the exhibition appears, two films are shown from the Zenith City.

Writing to his brother, B. F. Higgins of the Y. M. C. A. of this city, C. F. Higgins sends a program of the moving picture bill which appeared the week of Aug. 7 at the Lyric theater in Philadelphia.

One film which is shown is of the ski tournament of Feb. 12, 1911, at Chester creek hill. On this picture, John Rudd, the somersault jumper, is shown in one of his daring leaps and the series also include views of Anders Haugen of Chippewa Falls, Wis., who broke the American record by jumping 152 feet.

Another film which was shown at the Philadelphia theater was of the Duluth Aerial bridge. On the program, it is explained as "a method of transportation, which in no way impedes traffic through the Duluth ship canal. The bridge has a clear height of 135 feet and will permit the passage of the highest masts. It is 393 feet long."

WRIGHTS START SUIT ON AEROPLANE PATENT.

Chicago, Aug. 18.—An appeal to the United States court to settle a claim that is said to bear the same relation to the aviation world that the Selden patent case did to the automobile world, has started here. Suit was filed by the Wright company in the United States district court against the International Aviation Meet association, its officers and members, claiming an infringement of patent by every one of the two-score aeroplanes at the meet, and asking prospective profits and damages.

J. N. Miller, counsel for the Aero Club of America, is here, and it was said that organization would fight the suit. Harold F. McCormick and other officers of the local association were directed to answer the summons the first Monday in October.

EAGLES MAY LOWER MEMBERS' AGE LIMIT.

San Francisco, Aug. 18.—Preparatory to the convention of the Fraternal Order of Eagles here next week, the judiciary committee and board of trustees of the grand aerie are holding meetings today to discuss important questions that will come before the organization. The question of recognizing women's auxillary clubs is receiving considerable preliminary attention. Another movement on foot contemplates changing the minimum age limit of members from 21 to 18 years.

Red Wing Wrestler Hurt.

Red Wing, Minn., Aug. 18.—Floyd Dimert, 20 years old, was seriously hurt in a friendly wrestling match with John Kemp, 19 years old. Dimert fell, striking an iron railing with his forehead. He was taken to the city hospital and did not regain consciousness until several hours after. The injury may result seriously.

ASTOR TO SUE ASSAILANTS?

Legal Action Against Beraters of Marriage Is Hinted At.

Sister of Bride-Elect Gets Irate Over Dr. Richmond.

New York, Aug. 18.—Miss Katherine Force, elder sister of Madeline Talmage Force, has given an inkling of the attitude of her family and of Col. John Jacob Astor on the sensational attacks upon the forthcoming Astor-Force alliance by Rev. Dr. George Chalmers Richmond of Philadelphia.

"Don't these bitter attacks on the part of Dr. Richmond call for an answer? Don't you want to say a few words about them?" was asked.

Miss Force's eyes flashed. She tapped viciously upon the pavement with her dainty parasol.

"You bet I do," she replied hotly. "But if I did you couldn't put my words in the newspaper. If I were a man—" she broke off with a dangerous expression in her eye.

"Does Col. Astor contemplate legal action against Dr. Richmond?"

Cloth Protects Him.

"The man's cloth is the only thing that protects him from some other than legal action," replied the young woman.

MADELINE FORCE,
Who Is To Become Mrs. Astor.

The arrival of the Norma with Col. Astor, Mrs. Force and the Misses Force on board was not as merry an affair as their departure for Newport a week previous. Unusual precautions were taken to avoid the over-curious.

Col. Astor, attired in a light blue sack suit, a nobby straw hat, swinging a bamboo stick and carrying under his arm his favorite Airedale terrier, Ignatz, dashed into the house. In a moment he reappeared at the door accompanied by his fiancee. The two attempted to elude the assembled agents of publicity by making off in a taxi. The taxi, however, was surrounded and the colonel realized he was cornered.

"Don't you think there has been too much said already?" he replied when asked about the wedding. "What can I say?"

"Don't you care to reply to Dr. Richmond?"

Astor's smile changed to an ominous frown.

"I have absolutely nothing to say on that subject," he snapped.

"Will your marriage be hastened in view of this publicity?"

"I cannot discuss this matter," he replied.

Miss Force, who had been an interested listener to the mild heckling, here leaned forward and seized one of the colonel's coat sleeves.

"I wouldn't say anything more, colonel," she advised in a quiet but authoritative tone.

Willing to Tie Knot.

Terre Haute, Ind., Aug. 18.—Justice of the Peace "Tommy" Smith has written to John Jacob Astor, offering his services in the performance of the marriage ceremony, saying: "I would not consider the time or expense in going wherever you wished if you do not desire to come to my office."

Justice Smith was elected to office while he was in jail for contempt in not making a divorce alimony payment. He said that it was better to remain in jail for the time being because it kept him out of the reach of the fellows who begged from candidates.

After the election he disposed of his alimony trouble. He has been making a special effort to be a "marrying squire," and has "marrying parlors."

BOAT ROCKER DROWNS.

His Companion, Who Cannot Swim, Is Rescued.

Cleveland, Ohio, Aug. 18.—Herbert Weber rocked the skiff while boating with another lad and was drowned. His companion, although unable to swim, was rescued.

Weber, who was 10 years old, had been camping with his boy friend at Carl Stine's farm along Rocky river with Weber's father. While the father was away the boys procured the rowboat and paddled about on the river.

Young Weber rocked the boat despite his compainon's protests and it upset. Weber, although he could swim, was taken unawares, got his lungs full of water and drowned.

The boy companion clung to the boat with one hand and tried to reach Weber, but could not. His screams brought help and he was saved.

SAYS THEY ARE "BAD" ACTORS

Rich Southerner Claims Vaudeville Trio Did Him for $1,800.

Albany, Ga., Aug. 18.—A pretty little woman, who wears a short hobble skirt and says her name is Lucille Singer of Philadelphia, and A. D. McCoy, who says he is from Trenton, N. J., are under arrest here charged with having secured $1,800 from Marion Bass, a wealthy turpentine operator, by working a "badger game" on him. The authorities also are looking for Graham White of Trenton, N. J., who, it is alleged, aided in robbing Bass.

The two men and the woman claimed to be vaudeville actors with a week's lay off and stopped here.

Bass fell in with the trio and says he was fleeced of $300 in a game of cards. Then Bass accompanied the girl to a room in a leading hotel. He says while he and the girl were drinking McCoy broke into the room, gun in hand, claiming to be the girl's husband and threatening to shoot. Bass says he feared he would be killed and prevailed on the injured husband to accept $1,500.

McCoy, White and the girl tried to get away as soon as they got Bass's money. White succeeded, but McCoy and the girl were arrested. The Singer girl admits McCoy is not her husband. Bass is one of the wealthiest men in South Georgia and is married.

MIRROR HER UNDOING.

Ohio Runaway Girl, Who Dressed as Boy, Is Found.

Toledo, Ohio, Aug. 18. — No girl need hope to be a successful cowboy unless she can rid herself of the eternal feminine, judging from the experience of 16-year-old Maudie Myers of Canton, Ohio, who ran away from home because she was fascinated by life in the Wild West, as displayed in motion pictures. She is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Myers of Canton and she ran away with Leo and Howard Griffith, 15 and 18 years old, respectively, of the same city.

The Myers girl, with the boys, were detained at Napoleon. The girl had attired herself in boy's clothing, and, with her companions, had started for the West to become a "cowboy."

The girl went under the name of "Sammy" Myers. When they arrived in Napoleon their luggage consisted of a razor, pair of shears and some "makings."

The undoing of the party was the girl, who persisted in carrying a small pocket mirror. When they were met on the street in Napoleon by the chief of police the mirror dropped from her hand, and this gave the clew to the police. The trio were taken to the police station, where the girl admitted her sex. The boys declared she had lured them from their homes. The trio on leaving Canton traveled in a box car, in which the other occupant was a negro. Once the girl's sex was nearly disclosed by her laughter.

The girl told Detective Delehanty here that she enjoyed her novel experience. Her parents brought her skirts with them and she discarded the male attire.

TAP THE GO-CART

And the Family Gets Drinking Water It Is Sure of.

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 18.—A man and a woman were waiting for a train in the union depot. Close beside them was a baby carriage. To the casual observer it was just a common, ordinary baby buggy. If the conveyance were noticed closely, however, it would have been seen that on one side of the vehicle was a long, narrow tank, resembling a gasoline tank on a motor cycle. Presently the father leaned over to the baby's resting place with a collapsible cup in his hand. He turned a little faucet, which was hidden by scroll work on the carriage, and filled the cup with water.

"It's just a little scheme of mine to have good drinking water all the time we have the baby out," said the father, Keith Farley, a young farmer from Illinois. "We are afraid of public drinking fountains for the sake of the baby's health and our own. So I made a flat tank and fitted it in the side of the buggy. It is composed of two compartments, one for ice and the other for water. It is narrow so we can fold up the carriage when we get on or off trains."

Pastor Resigns Because Salary Will Not Keep Family of Ten.

Lebanon, Ind., Aug. 18.—Declaring that the high cost of living and the low pay to clergymen have forced him to action, Rev. E. T. Greenleaf, pastor of a circuit of three churches, carried his resignation to the conference of his denomination at Muncie. His pastorate was over Milledgeville, Mt. Zion and Corinth congregations of the Methodist Protestant church.

Dr. Greenleaf holds that, while the salaries of country ministers have not advanced perceptibly in a half century, the cost of woolen clothing, of fuel, of homes and of edibles has gone up many per cent in the last few years.

Rev. Greenleaf is the head of a family of eight. He and his wife frankly tell the story of their situation. He said that he would have to quit serving the Lord in any sort of professional capacity unless the conference should see fit to arrange his duties so that he may take up some worldly occupation "on the side" which will get bread and butter for his family.

HOT-WEATHER DIARRHEA

In the summer people of all ages are very subject to "running of the bowels." Germs get into the food or water, find their way into the intestines and keep irritating them so that there is a constant desire to have movement. It is very weakening, destroys appetite, disturbs sleep and produces an itchy feeling that many suppose to be piles. There are many "quick cures" for this aggravated form of dysentery, but they usually contain a narcotic, and that is dangerous. Others try salts and laxative waters, but they have no permanent effects. It takes a remedy with ingredients such as are combined in Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin to drive out the trouble-causing germs, to clean out the intestines, to strengthen the stomach and enliven the liver. Ordinary remedies cannot do this, but it is a well known fact that Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin does do it. Thousands use it every summer for this very purpose. Go to your druggist today and buy a 50 cent or $1.00 bottle and see what it will do for you. It is guaranteed to do what we claim or money refunded. WOMEN MAY AVOID OPERATIONS

By taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The following letter from Mrs. Orville Rock will prove how unwise it is for women to submit to the dangers of a surgical operation when it may be avoided by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She was four weeks in the hospital and came home suffering worse than before.

Here is her own statement.

Paw Paw, Mich.—"Two years ago I suffered very severely with a displacement. I could not be on my feet for a long time. My physician treated me for seven months without much relief and at last sent me to Ann Arbor for an operation. I was there four weeks and came home suffering worse than before. My mother advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I did. Today I am well and strong and do all my own housework. I owe my health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and advise my friends who are afflicted with any female complaint to try it."—Mrs. ORVILLE ROCK, R. R. No. 5, Paw Paw, Michigan.

If you are ill do not drag along until an operation is necessary, but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

AN EXPERT TELLS HOW IT FEELS TO FLY

"Beaumont," French Air Man, Tells Sensations of the Aviator.

Many aviators have described their sensations while in flight in the last few years, but none more vividly than Lieut. Conneau, one of the famous experts of the French navy. Under the name of Andre Beaumont he has been the victor in no less than three of the international cross-country aviation contests this year—the Paris-Rome, circuit of Europe, and circuit of England. In describing how it feels to fly recently, Lieut. Conneau said:

"On my return from my three great voyages by air—The Paris to Rome race, the circuit of Europe, and the circuit of England—I endeavor to set down the birdman's sensations during a great cross-country flying race. It is difficult enough in all conscience to discern and analyze one's own emotions, and especially to define them with requisite correctness, even when these are emotions which other men have already known and experienced.

"But here is a domain which is totally new to humanity, both for the spectators who observe the flight of man from below and for the airman who today is beginning to try his wings, there is something almost audacious in seeking to lay bare a state of mind which is still unprecise, a mentality not yet conscious of itself. But since I must be thus daring I will try to penetrate for the first time the mysterious grotto where the birdmen jealously hide their emotions, their anguish, and their joy.

Just Men, After All.

"First of all, then, let me remark, people must remember that we who fly are men like the rest. Therefore the sensations we have in accomplishing the almost superhuman feat are profound and intense, and it is even by reason of the depth and intensity of these sensations that we are often incapable of understanding them. In point of fact I know more than one airman who would be far less puzzled to cover a hundred miles in full flight than to face an interview on this delicate subject.

"I gather up all my courage, then; I spring into my monoplane; I switch on the contact; the propeller flies round dizzily; I give the signal, metaphorically, to let go, and, with the map of Europe before my eyes, I rise into the air in search of my impressions, scattered over the route between Rome, Paris, Utrecht, Brussels and London. For our impressions have wings, too, and I shall need all the speed and suppleness of my machine to grasp them in their flight.

"Here are three of them already on my road through the air, always the same, familiar to all airmen, varying in intensity according to the day, the weather, or one's state of mind—they are the anxiety at the start, the enthusiasm and the ardor of the contest, the manifold emotions of full flight, and, finally, the immense joy, the involuntary cry of victory at the finish.

An Anxious Moment.

"Just look at airmen when they are about to go up. They do not speak, or hardly at all; their attention is absorbed by the minute examination of the machine to which they are about to trust their fate; they go over everything in silence—the state of the wings, the levers controlling the rudder, the elevating plane, and the warping; the condition of the motor, above all things, this metal heart which gives life to the frail framework of wood, canvas, and steel. This is not the moment, my dear young ladies in search of autographs, to ask the airman to sign picture postcards!

"Then there is the scrupulous toilette while the airman dons the ungraceful panoply of the most graceful of sports, the paper gloves and socks to ward off the cold, the overalls, the Balaclava helmet, the goggles, the woolen comforter—in short, the bizarre get-up which gives one the appearance of a being from another world, a Martian, or a man in the moon, as they are described in books. Next the compass and the map have to be attentively examined. Does the map run all right on its rollers? And so on—a host of other technical details into which I need not enter here.

"The Pitiless Hour."

"At last the pitiless hour has arrived. Everything is ready. It is time to start. Amid the deafening roar of the motor the aeroplane snatches itself out of the hands of the men holding it back and hurtles along the ground. Then it hops and suddenly rises with a slide into the air, describing a graceful ascending curve as it leaves the ground. Arrow-like it darts straight toward an unknown point on the horizon. The irregular jolting and shaking caused by the unevenness of the ground as the aeroplane dashes to its ascent from the earth are succeeded by a soft gliding sensation which defies definition; the anxiety and anguish of the start have vanished to make room for a feeling of repose, of absolute solitude. The man has disappeared; he is now a bird!

"He rises, but he has not the impression of rising. As in balloon ascents, one has the impression that the earth is sinking beneath one. People seen far below look like very mobile little black points, then only groups can be seen, then one is only conscious of the black mass of the spectators.

Everything Dwindles.

"Everything blends together and dwindles away. Houses look like dice thrown on a billiard table, the largest cities seem like Lilliputian towns, the bas-relief melts away, roads, rivers and railways appear to wind their way in a child's model landscape toy. Only the sea and lofty mountains are spared in this wholesale diminution, and they always impose on the airman respectful admiration mixed with a very little sentiment of fear.

"Intoxicated by the sight, the airman mounts and mounts, his machine pointing upward. Far beneath him the distant earth lies flattened out. Human sounds no longer reach his ear, deafened by the motor's roar. Suddenly, appalled by the utter sense of solitude, he rights his machine and planes horizontally over the hills and hollowed valleys.

"There are no more roads, nor bridges, nor barriers; forests, marshes, and lakes exist for the airman no more: the road is straight and clear in all directions, and on every side. It is then that man has the real sensation of flying, of having at last left the earth, of having conquered the air as he has conquered the ocean, moving in it, playing in it, at his fancy, with a machine of his own invention, obedient to his slightest gesture, rising, falling, wheeling, and diving with the grace and lightness of the bird.

Loves It For Its Danger.

"The danger? But it is for the very reason of the danger that man loves flying. It is because his fair young conquest threatens at every instant to destroy him that man loves it. Man loves flying as he loves his mistress. But in the great cross-country races man has yet another delight. He has not alone the sensation of fighting against air's treacherous element, but of striving in it against other men, winged like himself, with a destination to reach like great migratory birds.

"The emotion caused by his victory over the ar is heightened by the ardor of the strife to be the first to reach that little plot, as yet unknown to him, where, however, he knows other men await him, first with anxiety, then with astonishment, and lastly with enthusiasm at seeing two white, two human wings, at the hour appointed barring the heavens for the first time.

"That is the airman's most impressive moment. When, for the first time, he sees the great bare space where he is about to rest his wings, when he has recognized by signs familiar to him—the flying flags, the white cloths spread as a signal over the ground, the bonfires lit to guide him, the crowd pressing about the barriers—that he has reached the goal of his race by air, it is then that he is caught at the throat by an intense emotion, so sweet, yet so strong as to make him forget the anguish of the start and the perils of the journey.

When the Goal Is Reached.

"And when this final goal is a city, when this city is a capital, when this capital is the cradle of humanity, when it is Rome, the feeling is so overwhelming that a man may be allowed to enjoy a moment of pride. Anguish, joy, pride, fright, isolation, hope and despair alternating; struggles, disasters, mourning, victories, and, dominating all, the tenacious instinct of self-preservation—such are the sensations experienced in the great cross-country flying races. Therefore may it be said of them that they are the intense image of human life."

KEEN ABOUT BIG DITCH

Stimson Is Enthusiastic After His Visit to Panama.

Says Everybody Should See Canal in the Making.

Washington, Aug. 18.—Henry L. Stimson, secretary of war, is one of the keenest of the keen on matters relating to the Panama canal. He and Mrs. Stimson, accompanied by Gen. Clarence E. Edwards; chief of the insular bureau of the war department, have returned from an inspection tour of the Panama canal and Porto Rico. The secretary will report of his observations to the president.

"I wish every American citizen could make a visit to the canal zone before next spring," said Secretary Stimson.

"I want everybody who possibly can do so to go down there before the great artificial lake to be formed by the Chagres river covers the splendid stretch of engineering work that has been done along that part of the canal. As soon as the lake is formed, and this will occur before next summer, the tropical jungle will sprout almost over night. Thereafter the carping critic who has not seen the work when it was exposed will prate about graft and so forth because the jungle will hide so vast an expanse of canal that it will be hard for the uninformed to understand what was done with tens of millions of dollars that will have been spent on it.

Hard to Appreciate It.

"I had my first view of the tremendous work going on there on this visit. It is so stupendous and majestic that it is extremely difficult to comprehend it until after a thorough study of it has been made. I spent ten days in the canal zone. I tried to see everything there was to be seen and hope I did.

"Every engineering problem there has been successfully solved and the work will be completed ahead of the date estimated when it was first undertaken. In fact the whole canal will be ready for use quite a time before January, 1915, the date set for its completion.

"In healthfulness the canal zone surpasses any place in the United States. I heard the buzz of a mosquito only once while I was there."

Secretary Stimson met the joint fortifications board at Panama and went over with its members the details of their work there. Islands at both entrances to the canal were selected as sites for the heavy fortifications authorized by congress. The secretary expressed himself as much pleased with the evidences of peace and prosperity in Porto Rico.

SAVES ON STOCKINGS.

By Economy Mrs. Trude Gets Along on $200 Worth Monthly.

Chicago, Aug. 18.—"Economy is beauty's handmaiden. Extravagance leads to want and no woman in want can be beautiful," says Mrs. George A. Trude, who was sued for a bill of $27 for one month's supply of face powder. It was such a trifle that it was overlooked, she says. Here is a typical list of "beauty wants" made out by Mrs. Trude which she classifies as necessaries annually:

Perfume and toilet waters, $600.
Face powder, $450.
Manicure bills, $200.
Hair dressers' bills, $350.
All other cosmetics, miscellaneous, $275.
Total, $1,875.

"The idea of any dealer who caters to society women becoming alarmed over a $27 face powder bill is ridiculous," said Mrs. Trude at her home. "I often give an order for twice that amount at one time.

"Perfume bills often run into the hundreds of dollars."

Mrs. Trude says she practices economy in all of her buying. It keeps her silk stocking bill down to $200 a month. By buying carefully, she says, her hats do not cost her more than $1,200.

HARD TIMES FOR "HAPPY JACKS"

Newport Hears That Geraghty Tried to Borrow $5,000 and Couldn't.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 18.—Although there are no indications that Cupid has winged his way out of the balmy Springfield, Mass., air via the window route, it is reported here that poverty is knocking at the front door of the "Happy Jacks." Newport hears with many a flutter of the heart that the gallant young husband of Julia French (the upper crust just can't call her Mrs. Jack Geraghty) has solicited a loan from H. E. Pender, the garage owner who assisted the young couple in their wild cross-country dash last Tuesday night.

Furthermore, it is even whispered that Mr. Pender has refused the loan, and that the devoted bridegroom may be forced to cut short the honeymoon and get out and rustle. Those who claim an intimacy with "Happy Jack" say he is some rustler, too.

Then, too, the elder Geraghty, despite the fact that he takes his exercise driving four-in-hands, can write his name to a four-figure check without materially affecting his bank balance.

Now that hope of a reconciliation between the Amos Tuck Frenches and their beautiful newly-wed daughter has been abandoned, at least for the time being, Newport has turned to the more practical side of the affair. Statisticians have figured that the pursuit of the "Happy Jacks" before and after the marriage has cost Mr. and Mrs. Amos Tuck French and Mrs. French Vanderbilt at least $5,000.

Mrs. Samuel J. Wagstaff, of Babylon, L. I., and Newport, sister-in-law of Jack Geraghty, is suffering from a fracture of the arm, sustained when the crank of her automobile struck it. Mr. and Mrs. Wagstaff, in their fast automobile, were among the searchers for the eloping Miss French between New York and the Connecticut line Tuesday night and Wednesday morning.

ROUGH ON WRITERS.

English Libel Laws Are Being Strictly Interpreted.

London, Aug. 18.—Truly the lot of those who write for a living in these modern days is a hard one. It may be objected that it is luxurious compared with that of the writing men of a former generation who starved in a garret, but if the garret writers earned little, at any rate they were allowed to keep it. If the tendency to strain the libel laws which has been so notable in the English law courts recently is not checked it will soon take all that even a Hall Caine could earn to satisfy the lawyers and the plaintiffs.

As far as I can see, the only safety for the modern author lies in the elimination of all names from his books. We probably shall see something like this before long: "—— gazed into——'s liquid eyes, 'I love you——,' he said." Even then, I doubt if he would be safe. The dash might be interpreted variously as "Blank" or "Dash" and Mr. or Miss Blank or Dash might come forward to sue for damages—and get them, too.

Just for Instance.

And this isn't a bit far fetched, as is shown by a case decided in the law courts this week. One of the big serial foundries in London publishes what is known as the Answers Library. It issues a thriller every week, which is sold for 2 cents and is widely read by maids of all work and grocers' boys. Each new thriller is advertised lavishly and the advertisements generally contain quotations from the most thrilling bits of the story.

A few weeks ago one of these quotations referred to a situation in which "Miss Chester, money lender and contributor to Society Scandal," compelled one of her victims to disclose secret letters. Now up in Manchester, 200 miles from London, there happens to be a Miss Chester, who lends money to workingmen's wives. She saw one of these advertisements and she also saw her chance. It is true she never contributed to any paper in her life, but she was Miss Chester, money lender, and that was enough. The author of the story, the editor and the publisher all swore that they never had heard of any one called Miss Chester, but that didn't matter. A jury awarded to Miss Chester $375 damages.

Dickens Was Lucky.

Cases like this make one wonder what would have happened if there had been juries like this in Dickens' time. There is hardly a name in Dickens that you can't duplicate in everyday life. I believe it is a fact that Dickens took all his names from life. When he ran across an unusual or striking name on a shop sign he made a note of it and in due course it appeared in one of his novels. The same was true of Thackeray and all of the great authors of the last generation and the same is true of most modern writers, but under this interpretation of the law they are all liable to be cast in damages.

IN THE SHARK'S BELLY.

Tin Cans, Cap, Pipe and Boots Are Among Other Things.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 18.—Leonardo Romano brought in this morning a 2,000-pound man-eating shark which he fought from 10 o'clock yesterday morning until after dark last evening. Romano was hauling his trawl off middle bank, when the head of the blue-back shark came over the gunwhale.

The Italian was alone in the boat. He would have cut the trawl loose, but as the monster was attached to one of the first hooks, to do so would have meant to lose all his gear and fish. Romano hitched the trawl line to a cleat and started his gasoline engine, hoping the shark would either get tired out or possibly ground up by the propeller. The shark swished his tail into the propeller and the engine stopped running. The Italian had then been struggling with the fish for over an hour.

When the big fish was about all in the fisherman got the noose over its head. Once the noose was drawn tight it was an easy matter to choke the shark to death. Romano helped the fish to his end with his short-handled fish knife. Besides the coil of rope there was taken from the shark's stomach this morning three full-grown codfish, one tinker mackerel, four haddock, a section of a swordfish's sword, part of a tin can, a man's cap, seven fish hooks, a clay pipe and a boot.

MESSAGE FROM THE DEAD.

Hatch Cover Carved By Shipwreck Victims Is Found.

Galveston, Tex., Aug. 18.—A hatch cover indicating that it was part of the lost American schooner Faor, wrecked in a hurricane last year in the gulf, has been picked up on the West Texas coast by a fisherman and is preserved as a last message from the six dead sailors who went down.

On the cover is the name E. J. Whiteman, cut with a knife, and below this are inscriptions dated from Sept. 26 to Oct. 4. The first message says: "Six days after waterlogged, without food or water, suffering intensely." On consecutive dates the writer, in scrawling scratches, indicated the suffering of the men and departing reason. One tells of the death of "Bill." On the date, Oct. 1, appears the words: "God help all; good-by to wife, mother, babies." The records show that this schooner was wrecked with six men on board and all lost.

NO QUARREL WITH BOARD

Rev. J. A. McGaughey Says He Does Not Criticise Directors.

Has Learned They Did Not Know He Was Assured $5,000.

To the Editor of The Herald:

Since the board of directors of the local Y. M. C. A. have seen fit to issue a signed statement regarding the conduct of the affairs of the association, it seems quite fitting that I also should state my position.

When one has spent eleven years in a pastorate and withdraws to do work among men only to remain three years, the public seems to think they have a right to inquire why. All that I have said publicly has been in answer to that query.

My reasons for withdrawing made at the time of my resignation were:

First—That the budget had been lowered each year.

Second—That the rooms used for Bible study, the breakfasts club, and other religious activities, were being taken for dormitories.

Third—That the doing of personal work in the dormitories was objected to.

The above facts remain uncontroverted. The budget, as the record will show, has decreased each year as follows: 1909, $4,890; 1910, $3,900; 1911, $2,535. These amounts are exclusive of money raised by subscriptions for foreign work.

The Bible study rooms are being converted into dormitories and will soon be for rental. For these reasons, without going into detail, I felt justified in withdrawing.

No Quarrel With Board.

I have no quarrel with the management, if their sound business judgment indicates that the above is a just proportion of the total amount voted for the work this coming year, but I was led to believe that much more would be available for this special work, and would never have entered the work without the assurance of a large and increasing budget and a definite arrangement of rooms in which to prosecute the work in the building. It may not mean much to the public in general that a man settled and happy in a pastorate was induced to break those ties, which mean so much to the average minister, and enter another work only to find his hands tied by lack of sympathy and financial support. But I do not wish to be understood as criticising the board for I have learned that they were not informed that I was assured of at least $5,000 a year for the religious department, with an assistant as soon as I needed one. I am trying to take my disappointment without growing bitter and do not now wish to say one harsh word, and am only asking that you try to put yourself in my place.

One other matter which I wish to set aright. In the discussion of this subject frequent reference has been made to a comparison between the religious and other departments. I wish to have it clearly understood that I made no such complaint. I certainly am in favor of physical work and wouldn't see one dollar taken from this important feature. I am in hearty sympathy also with the educational and social work. The promised financial statement now in print will show how much has been spent in these departments and need not be referred to at this time.

In conclusion I wish to say that I have not lost faith in the opportunity that the association has for religious work among men and trust that the day may soon dawn when with enlarged funds and a clearer understanding of the greatness of the work they shall enter the open door. This has been the dream that has spurred men on as I have sought to solve the industrial problem. In the meantime let a critical public refrain from censure until they supply the board with funds for the task. J. A. McGAUGHEY.

Since the above was written I am reliably informed that the budget for next year has been materially increased by the board of directors.

PHARMACISTS TO FOUND MAGAZINE

Sectional Meetings Are Held By National Association.

Boston, Aug. 18.—Sectional meetings which concluded the program of the fifth day of the fifty-ninth convention of the American Pharmaceutical association today were of much technical and practical interest to the large number of delegates attending. It was voted to found an American journal of pharmacy to replace monthly bulletins and printed proceedings, and James Beal, professor of pharmacy at Pittsburg college, was elected editor.

A committee has drafted a general national syllabus for all boards and schools in the United States with the discussion of question papers to be set in licensing examinations and with new methods of testing the purity of drugs.

SEES METEOR RISE OUT OF THE PACIFIC.

San Francisco, Aug. 18.—A meteor which climbed out of the sea like a sky rocket, traveled through a great arc and disappeared, was reported here by the liner America Maru upon its arrival from the Orient yesterday.

Meteors generally move toward the horizon. This one, Capt. A. G. Stephens of the America Maru said, had a great fiery head and a long tail. It was seen Aug. 11. A copy of the ship's log, with a description of the phenomenon, has been forwarded to Washington.

CAMPAIGN IN CANADA HOT

Herron, Conservative, Gives Out Pro-Reciprocity Statement.

Laurier Talks in Quebec and Borden in Ontario.

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 18.—The Liberals completed their ticket in Manitoba last night, nominating Dr. Molloy again in Provencher. In Saskatchewan, R. S. Lake, the only Conservative returned from that province, was renominated for Q'Appelle, and W. Roston, a former member, was selected by the Saskatchewan Liberals. Dr. Clark, the Liberal member in Alberta, was again chosen in Red Deer.

John Herron, a popular Conservative member in Alberta, who declared that he favored reciprocity with the United States because every one in his constituency is out for it, issued the following statement at McLeod, Alta., last night, explaining his anomalous position:

"I want to say that I am going to voto for reciprocity for these reasons: After the question had been launched last winter, I began to get many letters from my constituents asking me to support reciprocity. I wrote home to the people in my district asking them what the general opinion was toward it.

People Want It.

The farmers' unions have voted in favor of the agreement practically unanimously; town councils and boards of trade have indorsed it; influential farmers and business men have expressed themselves as being in favor of the agreement. I received only a few letters opposing it, and so I decided it was my bounden duty to support what I believe my constituents desire. I cannot recede from that stand, no matter whether I get a vote or not.

"I see dangers in reciprocity, but I see enough good in it to influence my choice. The greatest advantage, in my opinion, is that if the people do not find it to work to their advantage, it can be cancelled by a stroke of the pen."

Laurier in Quebec.

Three Rivers, Que., Aug 18.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the premier, opened his campaign in Quebec here last night before a great gathering and was cordially received. His speech was an exposition of the benefits reeceprocity would bring to Canada, and he also spoke in defense of the government's national policy, which has been made an issue in Quebec by the opposition.

"I tell you," said Sir Wilfrid in the course of his speech," that what concerns the opposition today is the defeat of Laurier; that is the only policy they have.

"What has political life to offer me?"

"I shall be 70 years of age in a few weeks, and I can assure you that for twenty years past I have scarcely known what rest meant. I do not know how much time for work is left me, but for fifteen years I have done all that was in my power for my country, and in this fight I will say, without attempting to prophesy, that if I were a betting man I would put up all my money that the old cock will win."

Borden in Ontario.

Simcoe, Ont., Aug. 18.—Following the visit of Premier Laurier here Wednesday, R. L. Borden, leader of the conservatives, descended on this town last night and replied to the reciprocity arguments of the premier.

With reciprocity, he said, the advantages would be with the United States farmer and not with the Canadian. Press and public, even in the United States, believed firmly that Canadians would not be willing to go into the treaty were they not prepared for annexation, and he declared the treaty was, therefore, the beginning of the end of the British empire.

"My Liberal friends," continued Mr. Borden, "will you not tell Mr. Taft that Canada has not forgotten the British ideal and that reciprocity within the empire is good enough for the people of Canada? To you, young men, I appeal—sons of pioneers, sons of those who gave up everything to cling to the old flag."

Foster Re-Nominated.

Toronto, Can., Aug. 18.—George F. Foster, the financial critic of the opposition, was re-nominated for parliament by the Conservatives of North Toronto last night. He is one of the foremost speakers in Canada and has been one of the most bitter in opposing reciprocity with the cry of annexation. Edmond Bristol, a prominent lawyer, was nominated for Central Toronto.

Wife of Aviator Gets Him Before Court in Chicago.

Chicago, Aug. 18.—James Ward, one of the entrants in the international aviation met, who was arrested on a warrant charging abandonment as he stepped from his flying machine in Grant Park yesterday afternoon, appeared in the court of domestic relations today and obtained a postponement of the hearing until Aug. 23. Mrs. Ward and child were in court and objected to a continuation.

CASE CONTINUED.

Attorneys Argue for Two Hours on Shea Disclosure Order.

The Washburn-Shea case came on for hearing before Judge Dibell in district court this morning, and the arguments of the attorneys were resumed. No decision was made by the court as to the propriety of the proceedings now pending to enforce an examination of Andrew J. Shea as to his assets, and the case adjourned until 10 o'clock on Aug. 26.

It is contended by Attorneys J. B. Arnold and H. W. Dietrich for Mr. Shea that the bankruptcy proceedings commenced by Shea after the institution of the present action were of such a nature as to make the granting of a stay in the present proceedings proper and within the jurisdiction of the court. Mr. Washburn was very emphatic at this morning's hearing in pointing out that on the defendant's past conduct, even though a stay was proper in the discretion of court, there was very little in the case to warrant such leniency.

ACCIDENT WAS HOAX

Duluth Pastor Demonstrates That He Has Sense of Humor.

Women Faint When "Girls" Struggle in the Water.

Very Rev. Arthur H. Wurtele or Trinity Pro-Cathedral has a delightful sense of humor.

Yesterday the 600 or more passengers on the Steamer Columbia witnessed what they thought was a narrow escape from drowning.

Two youths dressed as girls went out in a canoe to meet the boat as it was passing up the river with the members of Clan Stewart and their families aboard, and when the swells from the boat struck them, the boys upset the canoe. A boat then put out from the Spirit Lake branch of the boat club and rescued the "girls."

Meanwhile the Columbia was stopped. Women aboard screamed and several fainted. Two men peeled off their coats and sprang toward the sides of the boat prepared to jump overboard and rescue the young women, but they were restrained by others who suspected a hoax. In a moment it was seen that the "girls" were clinging to the upturned canoe, and they were soon picked up by the boatman.

Mr. Wurtele then stepped to a telephone, and notified The Herald of the "accident" and the heroic resoue by the boatman. He had been standing on the dock and the boys are said to be members of his camping party.

A highly humorous sequel would be for a canoe with two genuine women in it to upset some day on the river, and to have men stand on the dock and watch with a smile while they struggled, suspecting another hoax. That will provide some delicious comedy, as the women struggle in the water, and finally sink with a gurgle.

Officers of the boat club today expressed their strong disapproval of such a hoax, and said it was done without their knowledge or sanction. They have always taken every precaution to prevent accidents. The members of Clan Stewart were also indignant, and severely censured those who were responsible for it.

THE WHITTIER AFFAIR.

A dispatch to The Herald from St. Paul, published last evening, stated that the belief is prevalent there that the real animus of the vindictive attack upon Superintendent Whittier of the Red Wing training school is the desire of the state administration, or of somebody back of it, to bring about the dismissal of P. M. Ringdal and C. E. Vasaly, the Democratic members of the state board of control, and to supplant them with others more to the liking of those who are pushing the prosecution—which long ago became persecution.

The Herald has believed this from the start, and it believes it now. That is why, when it appeared that the administration intended to ride roughshod through all restrictions of law and decency to accomplish its purpose, The Herald protested. The Herald demanded fair play and a fair trial for Whittier, and it called the attention of the state to the shame and peril of dragging the board of control into personal and party politics.

Balked then in its intention of "getting" Whittier and the Democratic members of the board of control in this offhand manner, the administration, because it had to, submitted the case to a hearing. Also because it had to, it made the board of control the tribunal before which the hearing was held.

When the case was submitted for hearing, The Herald ceased to discuss it, believing that the proper thing for all parties to do was to leave the whole matter to the outcome of a hearing which must, from its very nature, be open and thorough.

The Herald would not be discussing the case now were it not for the fact that those who started out to "clean out" the board of control are finding their courage once more, and in advance of the conclusion of the hearing and the finding of the board, are launching their thunders upon the heads of their intended victims, Whittier, Ringdal and Vasaly. The purpose behind the whole thing has become so plain that anybody can see it, and the hearing, because of the venomous attacks made by those friendly to the administration and by a few honest but misguided newspapers, has degenerated into a farce.

Manifestly, this new outburst is due to the fact that the hearing has not gone to the satisfaction of those intent upon using Whittier as a bludgeon against Ringdal and Vasaly. They hoped to get evidence justifying not only the discharge and humiliation of Whittier, but the discharge and humiliation of the men Governor Johnson appointed to the board of control, one of whom is its chairman and both of whom are among the best and ablest men that ever sat on this board. Disappointed in this, they appear to be seeking to make noise enough to becloud the issue, and to justify them in taking action regardless of the evidence.

Whittier, though a mere incident in this vitally important matter, is a man and a citizen, and he is entitled to fair play and a fair trial. He is not getting these before the public, and he cannot get them so long as a few newspapers, some stirred up by those active in the plot and others innocently misled, are hounding him before the hearing is concluded.

But the really vital thing in all this is not Whittier or the state training school, but the broader and deeper question of whether or not the people of this state will sit quiet and witness the success of an attempt to drag the board of control, which has full charge of the many state institutions, full control of the expenditures of large amounts of money every year, and supervision over the appointment of hundreds of state employes, into the ooze and filth of partisan politics.

PRINTERS AS STUDENTS.

The typographical union is one of the oldest and most progressive of labor organizations, and it has many notable things to its credit. It has done nothing more praiseworthy, however, than the work it is now engaged upon of providing trade education for its members.

Booklets are at hand, supplied by the technical educational commission of the international organization, describing this important function which the union has taken upon itself, and they are extremely interesting.

The instruction is given by correspondence, and it inculcates the principles that underly good typography, which have been developed after many years of experimental work by the Inland Printer. The course is endowed by the International Typographical union to such an extent that it is sold to students for less than the actual cost of tuition.

In the booklet at hand are specimens of work done by students before they took up the course, and specimens of the work they are doing now. The comparisons show—if it needed to be shown—that a compositor can benefit greatly by instruction through correspondence.

The course has been in operation a little over three years, and more than twenty-three hundred students are enrolled. Added to the burial benefit, the old-age pension, the home for infirm members and the Colorado tuberculosis sanatorium which the International Typographical union conducts, this new plan of technical education by correspondence shows the broad spirit of progressiveness that has always actuated the organization.

It is a plan that other labor organizations might well imitate to their advantage. There are no crafts in which there is not at all times a lively demand for skilled and expert craftsmen. There are few craftsmen in any branch of industry, no matter how long their experience, who cannot improve their work, and thereby improve their chances for promotion and better pay, by digging into the theories and rules that govern their craft and by sitting at the feet of those who have mastered the general principles as well as the practice of a trade.

While there are always men out of work, there is always a shortage of first class workmen in all lines. Matters have to be pretty bad indeed when an artist in his line, whether it is typography or typewriting, cannot find a job. In every craft the complaint is that there is a lack of really skilled and competent workmen. Never is there enough of this class of workers in any line to meet the demand; and seldom does it happen that the real expert is unable to command a higher wage than his associates.

It is a pretty dense worker who cannot draw a lesson from this condition, and a pretty sluggish one who will refuse to profit by it.

If you feel that you could increase your proficiency by study and hard work, go at it. If you are so proficient that you can't get any further ahead you are about the only man in the world in that fortunate position. If you think you are, you'd better analyze that thought and see how much ignorance and conceit it pans out.

There is a demand always for the best men in every craft, and never is that demand satisfied. Such men can command better pay and position than those who are "just ordinary" and are satisfied to stay so.

The typographical union, in taking up this work of technical education, shows a wise realization of this fact, and a progressive desire to be of real and abiding benefit to its members.

DEFENDING THE "INDEFENSIBLE".

President Taft has done badly by his country, his party and himself in vetoing the bill reducing the enormities of "Schedule K," the wool tariff.

In his Winona speech he rightly declared this schedule to be indefensible. Yet he defends it now in exactly the manner those who benefit by its oppressions would wish.

Whatever the wool bill is, it is not an unfair and unwise reduction. If anything, the reduction it makes is too small. Under the wool schedule as it stands the people are paying shamefully high prices for shamefully inferior goods. No citizen in this land should hesitate to act when he has the opportunity that the president had to remedy this intolerable condition.

There is no need of waiting for the tariff board's report. If that report, when it comes, suggests further changes in the wool schedules, they can be made. In the meantime, the people had a right to whatever relief they could get from the wretched iniquity of the Aldrich-Payne schedule; and the president has withheld that right for reasons purely technical and partisan.

The president has been badly advised again, and his veto of the wool bill will prove to be the greatest mistake of his administration.

A BRITISH AUTOCRAT.

The revolution in British government brought about by the passage of the lords' veto bill is more far-reaching than it seems at first glance.

Not only is the house of lords, with all its incrustations of tradition and snobbery and privilege, reduced to the level of the kingship as a mere reminiscence of what used to be, but the premier is raised to the most commanding position ever occupied in British government by anybody since the long process of shearing the kingship of its power first began.

The prime minister becomes master of the house of commons, master of the house of lords, master of the king, who serves merely to carry out the will of this real ruler.

In America the situation would be paralleled, somewhat roughly, if Speaker Clark were absolute master of the house of representatives, which acted according to his bidding; if the senate were deprived of the power of overruling the action of the house; and if the president were deprived of his veto and compelled to act as Speaker Clark dictated.

An autocracy? Apparently a complete one, and most powerful.

And autocracy—one-man power of any kind—is dangerous.

But Great Britain is not in peril. Not in the slightest degree. On the contrary, carrying though it does a burden of privilege and caste that grows lighter every day, Great Britain is as pure a democracy as the world possesses; and in its struggle upward it can see the beacon light of real popular government and real popular liberty grow brighter as it draws closer hour by hour.

Seems paradoxical, doesn't it? But it's very simple.

While the prime minister's power is greater than that of the commons, greater than that of the lords, greater even than that of the king, there is a higher power still, and a power that is absolute and final—the power of the people.

For the prime minister holds all these honors and wields all this power only so long as the people wish—and that is only so long as he represents them.

Let the prime minister of Great Britain, for all his mighty powers and honors, take one step against the will of his mighty master, the people, and—poof!—he and his powers and his honors and the structure of government he has built up will vanish as a snowflake vanishes before the midday sun.

The final power, the absolute power, the power that neither court nor king nor lord nor commons can gainsay, rests with the people.

And the people are safe and sound and just and wise in the aggregate, even though there may be vain and selfish and silly and knavish among them.

By the provisions of the veto bill the lords cease to have any voice in the passage of bills relating to money, and they can merely delay but not defeat the passage of other measures. Sole authority rests with the prime minister as to what bills shall pass the house of commons.

It is a mighty revolution that has come over Britain, when the king is a mere shadow and an echo of the prime minister's will, when the prime minister rules the parliament, and when the people rule over all.

The other day an Indiana man killed himself because his wife was too affectionate, and now a Kansas woman is suing for divorce because her husband did nothing but kiss her and read and write love poems. Evidently the affinity managers sometimes get their wires crossed.

THE OPEN COURT

(Readers of The Herald are invited to make free use of this column to express their ideas about the topics of general interest, but discussions of sectarian religious differences are barred. Letters should not exceed 300 words—the shorter the better. They must be written on one side of the paper only, and they must be accompanied in every case by the name and address of the writter, though these need not be published. A signed letter is always more effective, however.)

LINDBERGH AND THE MONEY TRUST.

To the Editor of The Herald:

Early last month Representative Charles A. Lindbergh of the Sixth Minnesota district, placed before congress a resolution calling for the appointment of a special committee to investigate the banking trust in this country. The resolution is now before the house committee on rules, and that committee, according to the Associated Press, has decided to report it favorably, and probably to recommend that the subject be turned over to the monetary commission instead of to a committee especially created.

This resolution goes to the very heart of the whole trust evil, and has more importance to the country at large than any other proposal or proceeding now before the government, yet it has had practically no attention from your publication. The purpose back of it profoundly affects the whole body of our population in their most intimate daily affairs, because the trust it brings into question is back of all the trusts now being investigated. No correction of trust evils will mean much while this central and dominant trust remains. No restraint of trade can equal the restraint directly and indirectly exercised by the banking power of New York and its allied interests. Through the operations of that interest, community funds are diverted from the needs of the communities themselves, and made to furnish life blood to Wall Street speculation. As Representative Lindbergh pointed out in offering his resolution, over 80 per cent of the country's money is controlled by about three thousand individuals and institutions, and kept away from the channels of development and exchange through which the life blood of the country's legitimate industries must be derived. The banking trust is none the less central in power for its being intangible and having no formal organization. Its acts and their effects are easily traceable through the performances of its agents, high and low, and clearly show a conspiracy far more dangerous than any organized trust of any kind. That power, arbitrarily controlled by a few men whose offices are within three or four blocks from Broad and Wall streets, actually holds the producers and legitimate merchants of the West and Middle West in a condition of serfdom, from which they can be emancipated only by forcible action on the part of the government, and to force such action is the object Mr. Lindbergh has in view.

Why is it that Mr. Lindbergh's call and declaration are attracting so little attention from the press? It is easy to understand that ordinary business concerns are afraid of the banks, which have all credits at their mercy, and are not obliged to give reasons for injuring a man's business by denying his just requirements. But is that true also of the newspapers? Here is an issue, the most important since the Civil war, lying practically unnoticed. The monstrous evil aimed at cannot go on. In the ordinary course of events, if not corrected, it will force the creation of a new party that shall take the place of the decrepit old ones, and do to the money slavery what the old Republican party did to that other slavery from which the country suffered until it could suffer no longer.

Without public pressure, the house committee may be expected to do what all committees heretofore have done—bow to orders from New York. If it refers the resolution to the monetary commission or any other creature of the Aldrich plan, it will die a lingering death. The Aldrich plan itself is specially designed to confirm the head of the banking trust upon the country's money, and goes to such lengths as would practically give the banks control of the United States treasury with power to drain our money into foreign lands, in any time of stress, or whenever it liked. The disaster it would impose would crack the very bones of the nation.

Mr. Lindbergh needs and deserves the earnest support of every honest man and every honest, fearless newspaper. Those who do not give it are either traitors or cowards. Have you looked into the matter? Where do you stand? Be very sure the time is very near when an accounting will be asked of you in answer to that question. You ought to be alive enough to speak before that day comes, for when it comes it will usher in a revolution from which the stranglers of our country, and those who sympathize with them, will not emerge.

BUYING BY PECK AND BY THE POUND.

To the Editor of The Herald:

In the issue for yesterday I read in the Open Court column the law of Minnesota for weights per bushel of the different grains and vegetables. The gentleman who signs himself an old subscriber mentions the fact that many of the things that consumers buy from the dealers by the peck do not hold the weight. I saw a peck of potatoes weighed, brought from one of the stores the other day, and the weight was 12½ pounds. I have lived in the Western states for nearly twenty-five years and during that time I have not seen nor heard of any bushel or peck measure being in use. The farmer disposes of his grain, potatoes, and vegetables by weight, and the dealer quotes and sells by weight. If I was to remain in these parts and be under obligations to buy by the bushel and peck, I would demand full weight. And I would demand and ask the state legislature to pass a law forbidding the use of that fraudulent peck measure. Why complain about the high cost of living? Can you afford to let people rob you? We in the West would not tolerate such high handed robbery. Very respectfully yours,

A WESTERNER.

JOY RIDING AND PICTURE THEATERS.

To the Editor of The Herald:

In last night's editorial "A mother's plea," after saying "you can go to the picture show and be home before dark," you ask, "Why then should the mother find the night so long while she is waiting for her daughter to come home?" and as an answer to that question I would say that probably the cause of her long vigil is the auto craze for I believe that with the advent of the automobile, there has grown up a worse menace to our young girls than any public dancing academy or picture show and that is joy riding during the dark hours of the night with men of no social standing. Only the other morning I found three young girls with escorts waiting in an alley at daylight. My first attention was called by their boisterous conduct in the auto. I have also seen auto owners turn young people out of their cars at midnight a number of times, the chauffeurs having abused their privilege of personal use of the autos, to give joy rides to young, giddy girls who could only see a good time in the escapade and do not realize the extra risks they take when they are rushed out into the country away from police surveillance during the small hours of the night with or without a lady companion who may be a confederate of the young men, the evil being augmented by the inexperience of the young girls and the auto craze which even attacks the daughters of the poor who must steal a ride at night if they ever have one.

Duluth, Aug. 18. JACK PLANE.

But Dick Only Kisses the Ladies.

Springfield Republican: One of our most interesting exhibits is Capt. Hobson, Y. P. On no account should Admiral Togo miss him.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Judging By the Past.

St. Cloud Times: Governor Eberhart promises that there wil be "something doing" because Sheriff J. R. Meining of St. Louis county did not stop a prize fight somewhere on the range. The threat about "something doing" is for newspaper consumption. It is a safe guess that the sheriff will keep his job.

Always.

Brainerd Tribune: It is always a good time to boost for Northern Minnesota.

A Credit to the State.

Sauk Center Herald: The Redwood Falls Sun, whose editorial utterances are inspired by Frank Clague, is worrying lest Joe Keefe, Democrat, will be returned to the lower house of the Minnesota legislature next year. Clague has plenty of troubles of his own, without sticking his finger into some one else's pie. He might have been governor had he toted fair, but everybody knows what happened the term he served as speaker of the house. As for Joe Keefe, he's about the fairest, squarest and ablest man who ever represented Redwood county in the legislature. The people love him for the enemies he has among the "gang" Republican politicians in his home bailiwick.

Yes, Several.

Nashwauk Herald: Is there one newspaper in the state that sanctions Governor Eberhart's administration? If there is, it is not on the Herald's exchange list.

They Haven't Yet.

Little Falls Herald: There is a rumor floating around that the Great Northern and the brewery folks do not quite agree as to who should be the Republican candidate for governor next year. If there were a proper primary law the Republican masses could settle the matter themselves.

Give Him Time.

Cass Lake Times: Some of the newspaper boys think Sam Gordon has permitted his gubernatorial boom to blossom too soon, and that when voting time comes the flower, now so attractive, will have faded. We don't think so. Sam is a printer as well as a politician, and if the posey fades and goes into decay, he will have another ready to blossom at the right time. But we are not sure that a Republican, however honest and correct of principle, can stem the tide of free political thought next year. The Republican party is badly broken, its head has lost the respect and love of the rank and file, and this condition, however much may be done to prevent, will work sad carnage with the old machine. Freedom and political equality is in the air and pervades every nook and corner of the realm—a bad time to reckon on what any party can do.

A Progressive Needed.

Aurora News: Some of the most influential weekly newspapers in the state are hot after the scalp of Governor Eberhart, most notable in the list being the Northfield News. Eberhart is universally accused of lack of initiative, and generally regarded merely as the mouthpiece of the Minneapolis-St. Paul multi-millionaires. Minnesota is a progressive state and should have a progressive in its principal office.

Good Advice.

Roseau Region: The Eighth congressional district, in which Duluth is, should make an extreme effort next year to elect a congressman who has the ability and moral standing to reflect credit upon the district and state. Congressman Miller has signified his intention, according to reports, to quit, and the district should seize the opportunity to select its best man to succeed him, as the importance of this district demands nothing less.

Corals, on the "Maine."

The warrior ship had moored beneath the waves.
Its tangled depths were crowded thick with graves;
Each jewelled sword had bent a shattered knee
Before the rusting sabres of the sea.

True patriots could not let their heroes lie
Without one glance of pity from the sky;
So delved among those caverns of despair,
And all the ghosts of ruin slumbering there.

No gleaming triumph of the builder's toil,
But one demoniac moment served to spoil;
And hearts long loved and cherished night and day,
Were in a midnight tempest swept away.

It was a lesson to our minds—alas!
That warning; how or when it comes to pass,
This world must heed the universal touch,
And fall in Ruin's ever-waiting clutch.

But lo!—amid that sad and silent place,
Were tiny craftsmen of the coral race!
Those unobtrusive "tollers of the sea"—
Those builders of the islands yet to be.

With placid thrift, they plied their wizard-trade,
Close-clinging to the fragments War had made,
As if those had been summoned to their call:
They knew not that the wrecks were wrecks at all.

It was a lesson to our hearts!—with Joy
We felt that Ruin is in God's employ;
And there are builders that we cannot see,
Erecting grander worlds for you and me.

It was a lesson to our souls!—above
The gloomy graves of those we loved and love,
The joys they sought, our martyred lads may know,
On spirit islands, fashioned long ago

What Will It Profit Him?

Minneapolis Tribune: The Tribune knows mighty little about politics. That makes it shy about advising or criticizing anybody but President Taft, who has shown himself perhaps the only person in the country who knows less.

That gives us boldness to ask what it will profit a president strongly committed to tariff reduction to go before the people for re-election on the record of two moderate tariff reduction bills, vetoed by him, passed over his veto by a Democratic house and sustained only by a Republican senate in whose organization and control neither he nor the people retain much confidence. We leave the free list bill out, as cheap and tawdry politics.

Recall history so fresh that the merited wounds of public men who broke promises and betrayed the people still bleed. The Republican party promised tariff reduction and increased it instead. The people turned them out of the house and cut down their majority in the senate.

A Democratic house merely keeps Republican promises of moderate tariff reduction, not even trying to enact its own platform of tariff for revenue only. The Republican president who signed the betrayal vetoes the fulfillment, even the bill relieving monopoly oppression he himself denounced as indefensible. What treatment should he expect when the people who made the house strong enough to overcome his veto get around to him?

Taft is a fine ruler of all the people but his party politics is bumblepuppy

He Made Good Easily.

Puck: There were once two boys, James and John. James was impetuous. "I will refrain from taking what doesn't belong to me, first, last and all the time!" he declared, and so lived and died in obscurity.

But John was vastly more crafty. "I will take whatever isn't nailed down, and then, in the fullness of my years, I will give it back!" quoth he, and became a philanthropist whose name filled the earth.

THE DEMAND FOR AN EXTRA SESSION.

Crookston Times: One of these bright mornings the people are going to wake up with a start and without waiting for their morning coffee, or taking something stronger in its place, will go after the railroad rate proposition with a big hickory stick and the belaboring will not be stopped till a certain coterie, which will include some judicial as well as railroad heads, are cracked.

"War is Hell," said a great general, but the mother whose dead son or husband is brought home, realizes it more than the woman who had neither son nor husband in the ranks.

So it is with the railroad rates. People become incensed when they pay 75 cents for a ride to East Grand Forks where they paid 50 cents before the Sanborn ruling.

And the Times realizes just what it means when today it required $93.57 to pay the freight on a car load of paper from Grand Rapids, Minn., to Crookston, where the freight on a similar car, carrying the same amount of paper, has in the past cost but $76.06, or an increase of nearly 25 per cent. The percentage of increase on some classes of merchandise, however, is still higher, and the passenger rate is increased 50 per cent, or one-half, all over the state.

Pleasant, isn't it, to pay this tribute which conditions do not justify?

With the passenger rates, defenders of the increase say: "Well, you can travel for 2 cents a mile yet if you want to buy a mileage book." True, this makes it nice for wholesale houses who have to furnish transportation for their men who do nothing but travel and for others whose business requires a great deal of traveling, but where does the farmer come in who wants to take a run to St. Paul or to the county seat to pay his taxes? He is simply forced to pay tribute to the railroad companies first, and then pay his taxes if he has money enough left.

The demand for a special session of the legislature to even these matters up should be granted. An increase in the gross earnings tax or an increase on something should be made, and it should be made large enough to wipe out every dollar of the steal the roads are perpetrating in this state and enough more to make the penalty felt good and strong.

It is such brazen increases in rates which force the payment of unjust tribute by the farmers and laboring classes, which make men bitter and which arouses a spirit of fight and revenge which sometimes cannot be controlled, and when this feeling expresses itself the men in high places grow peevish and call the people unreasonable.

Unreasonable! Forsooth! What else can be expected? When a man is forced to submit to having the railroads stick their hand in his pocket and rob him openly, is he going to submit without a protest? And when it goes from bad to worse should the people be expected to sit idly by and not strike back?

No, they should not and they will not, and as the Times predicted some time ago, the railroads, and any one else who had a finger in the robbery of the people, will answer for the crime, for it is nothing else but a crime.

Governor Eberhart should call an extra session and allow the people, or their representatives to turn a trick of their own, which will force those with temporary power to rob the people, to realize that there is a reckoning time.

Two minutes later Binks, the Brave, was breaking records on the moonlit highway. He did the hundred yards under ten seconds, and at the end of a half-mile sank exhausted by the wayside.

Alleged Virginia Elopers Arrested on Eve of Leaving for California.

Hibbing Italian Follows Officer With Knife and Gets Into Trouble.

Hibbing, Minn., Aug. 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—James Hawkins and Mrs. Mary Johanki of Virginia will not enjoy a trip to California—not at this time. They were arrested in a local hotel where they were stopping last night, by the police on advices from the Virginia police, and are being held pending the arrival of an officer.

It is said they were on the first lap of an elopement trip when the ruthless hand of the law stepped in and nipped their romance in the bud. The woman, who has been twice married, admitted to The Herald correspondent today that she did not love her second husband, and intimated that if the police had not interfered she and her new-found lover would now be on their way to the land of flowers. The woman is good-looking and is said to have had children by her first husband. Hawkins is keeping mum. The details of the affair will be aired in the Virginia police court, where the couple will probably be taken tonight.

Italian Carried Knife.

Officer John Shea probably had a close call from being cut in the back last night by one of the three Italians he arrested and escorted to the city jail for being drunk on the streets. The officer took Rocco Coritonallo, Frank Paltrillo and Sam Demant, all sons of Italy, to jail for drunkenness. Demant followed the officer and the other two and persisted in carrying his right hand in his pocket. At the jail office his action aroused suspicion and his hand was pulled out. It was holding an opened pocket knife, and the officer believes Demant meant to cut him when a favorable opportunity presented itself.

The other two Italians were this morning fined $15 each and costs for drunkenness. They paid from a roll of $80 between them. Demant will be held until this evening, when he probably will also be fined for drunkenness, as there is no other charge against him but it is anticipated Judge Brady will impose a heavier fine than on his companions.

CHURCHMEN MAY FORM BALL LEAGUE

Six-Club Organization Comprised of West Duluth Congregations.

A baseball league comprising the English speaking churches of West Duluth is now being talked among the churchmen of the western suburb and already four organizations have expressed their willingness to join the movement.

The interest taken in the series of games between the Oneota Methodists and the Westminster Presbyterians, which was finally decided in favor of the Calvinists, is largely responsible for the movement which has been started to organize a church baseball league.

The four churches that are willing to join are the Merritt Memorial M. E., the Westminster Presbyterian, the Asbury M. E., and the West Duluth Baptist. In order to make a suitable schedule, it would be necessary to have at least a six club league. Two other churches, either from the West end or West Duluth, will be asked to fill the vacancies.

The success of a similar league at Superior the past season has shown that the idea is a practical one and can furnish amusement and recreation for those concerned during the summer months. At West Duluth, there are many followers of the national game, who take an interest in the clean sport.

If a six club league is formed, three baseball fields would be necessary and these are available at Fifty-second avenue west, Merritt's field at Oneota and a plot of ground near the Asbury Methodist church. Each team would probably play two games a week.

The matter will not be pushed until next spring when the association will probably be formed. It is also suggested that a field meet for the churchmen be held early next spring, prior to the opening of the baseball season.

The Westminster Presbyterian church ball team has accepted a challenge from the West Duluth Baptists for a game. It will be played Tuesday evening on the Fifty-second avenue west grounds.

Survivors of Quantrell's Command in Annual Reunion.

Blue Springs, Mo., Aug. 18.—In a grove on the outskirts of this town, the steadily dwindling troop of survivors of the Quantrell band of guerrillas, the famous border fighters of Civil war days, began their annual reunion today. Of the seventy-five survivors of the band now believed to be living, about fifty attended. The reunion will last two days.

AVIATOR ST. HENRY CANNOT PAY DEBTS

Well-Known Northwestern Birdman Files Petition in Bankruptcy.

Fargo, N. D., Aug. 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—A petition in bankruptcy was filed in the United States court here this morning by "Lucky Boy" St. Henry, the aviator who has been giving exhibitions in the Northwest this summer, for the Curtiss company. The bills were incurred while he operated a garage in Carrington, this state, three years ago, and hotel bills later. He admits owing $4,000 and says he has nothing with which to settle. Among his creditors are Fresno hotel, $400; Hotel Nicollet, Minneapolis, $400 and the Hollis Electric company, Minneapolis, $400.

OFFER TO PAY THE MINIMUM

Soo and Central Would Make Peace for Tearing Up Rails.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Soo and Wisconsin Central railroad lines have filed a petition in the Washington county district court offering to pay into the state treasury $4,600 in full settlement of the suit wherein they were charged by the attorney general with having unlawfully torn up their tracks in North St. Paul, without permission of the state railroad and warehouse commission.

The roads admit that the tracks were torn out Nov. 26, 1910, and remained out until Dec. 17. They declare they knew of no law requiring them to get permission of the railroad commission before discontinuing service, and that as soon as they learned of it they replaced the tracks.

A copy of the roads' answer, or offer, has been forwarded to Attorney General Simpson. He said this morning he did not know whether the offer would be accepted or not. The sum proffered is the minimum penalty provided by law. The maximum would approximate $23,000.

CADETS BACK FROM CRUISE

U. S. S. Gopher Reaches Harbor After Two Weeks' Annual Trip.

Boys Made Fine Record, With High Ratings in Drills.

Shortly before 3 o'clock today the United States training ship Gopher, with 125 members of the two divisions of the local Naval Militia aboard, steamed through the ship canal, after her annual two weeks' cruise, with all hands tanned, and hearty, and glad to get back to the home port again. The boat was greeted with a chorus of whistles from all the vessels in the harbor and from the factories along the water front.

She was sighted when about twenty miles out at about 1:30 and her progress was watched by numbers of Duluthians, who had friends on board, from that time until she dropped anchor in the harbor.

With the exception of two storms, one the severity of which was sufficient even to make the "old timers" a little sick, the trip was an uneventful one. It was a trip to Chicago, with stops at some of the most important harbors, where the boys showed themselves as real naval cadets.

Throughout the trip the boys were kept busy drilling, and at no time were they out of good form. They showed especially good form when Commander Davis, who has charge of the entire lake fleet, visited the ship on Lake Michigan, and from information received here, it is understood that the commander was well pleased with the showing the Duluth boys made.

It is upon Commander Davis' recommendation that a bigger and better vessel for the Duluth harbor can be secured, and so the officers and crew were particularly anxious to please him.

When the Gopher entered Chicago, she was given a big reception by the vessels of the harbor.

MORE LAND FOR SALE.

New Law Increases Amount of Property to Be Sold for Taxes.

There will be a large addition to the number of pieces of property which will be sold for taxes in St. Louis county this fall. Up to this year property delinquent for the taxes of 1901 and prior years was sold at the regular annual tax sale for an amount no less than 50 per cent of the total amount of the taxes due.

The new 1911 law extends the time to 1906 and previous years. It also provides that property delinquent for taxes prior to that date may be sold for less than half the accumulated taxes provided the county commissioners approve the sale.

MOTHER OF FIVE ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

Ely Woman Found Hanging in Shed By Her Husband.

Mrs. Josephine Rova of Ely nearly ended her life early yesterday morning by hanging, and was only saved from death by the quick work of her husband, John Rova.

Rova was roused early in the morning by a noise in the woodshed of his house, and missing his wife, who had been acting strangely for some time, he hurried to the shed to see what was the matter. He found his wife hanging from a two-by-four across the roof of the shed, with a clothes line around her neck and her feet clearing the floor. She was nearly strangled when he arrived, and her eyes and face still show the effects of the pressure of the rope around her neck.

Rova reported the matter to the police, and Chief John Brennan of Ely brought the demented woman to Duluth this afternoon. Rova was desirous of accompanying the chief, but had to remain at home to care for the family of five children. At 4 o'clock this afternoon Mrs. Rova will be examined before Judge Gilpin to determine whether she shall be committed to Fergus Falls. The cause of her condition is unknown.

NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST

WOULD PAY THEM MORE

Retiring Attorney General Favors Increasing Department Heads' Salaries.

Attorney General, Secretary of State, Treasurer and Auditor Underpaid.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—On the eve of his retirement from office, Attorney General George T. Simpson is outspoken in his belief that larger salaries should be paid many heads of departments in the Minnesota government. He believes the salary of the attorney general should be $10,000 a year instead of $4,800; the state treasurer should be paid $5,000 instead of $3,500, the secretary of state a similar sum, and the state auditor should receive $8,000 instead of $4,200.

"There has been collected by the attorney general's department within the past two years more than $2,000,000," Mr. Simpson said. "I have argued five important cases in the United States supreme court. If a private attorney were to carry the practice I have carried for the state, he would be earning at least $50,000 annually. And yet Minnesota pays less than $5,000! I am not complaining of the salary that has been paid me because I knew what it was and knew what to expect when I ran for office. But I do believe that my successors should be remunerated for the work they will do. The task in the attorney general's office is gigantic, and it will kill a man to stay with it any great number of years.

State Treasurer's Responsibility.

"The responsibility in the state treasurer's office, in the office of the secretary of state and the state auditor is great. But the pay in each is small. More especially is the state auditor entitled to more money because of the varied important duties entrusted there."

At the last meeting of the legislature Mr. Simpson declined an increase in salary for himself when he was urging the senate committee on public accounts and expenditures to recommend an increase in salary for his assistants. The committee did recommend the increase that the attorney general asked, and also advocated increasing his pay, too. Mr. Simpson protested against it, fearing, he said, that advocating an increase for him might jeopardize the passage of the bill increasing the pay of his assistants.

"I knew what my salary would be when I ran for office," he explained, "and if I do not like it, I can resign."

Long Contemplated Resigning.

This remark, made at that time, is taken to indicate that even as far back as the legislative session, he seriously contemplated retiring from public service. It is true, the raise suggested for him was only $200 a year and it was thought by some at the time that had it been $2,000 or more he would have aproved it. But rather than take chances of preventing his assistants getting an increase, he declined the one offered him.

A bill providing for an increase in the salary of Walter J. Smith, state treasurer, from $3,500 to $5,000 a year, lost. It passed the senate with little or no oppoistion, but was smothered in the house. The remark of Attorney General Simpson that he "knew what the salary would be and if he didn't like it he could resign," was quoted in debate when the state treasurer's increase was up and was one of the reasons for the measure's defeat. It is possible now that the attorney general's recommendation that the treasurer should be given $5,000 will be heeded at the next session.

ARMOUR NO. 1 MINE TO SHIP IN 1912

Property Near Ironton Being Placed in Condition to Send Ore.

Ironton, Minn., Aug. 18.—At the Armour No. 1 mine one block northwest of here, a large space has been cleared for a stockpile.

This land has been leased by the mining company for fifty years. The power house with its four smoke stacks and its battery of four boilers has been completed. The steel head frame is in position. Drifting is being done at the 200-foot level.

Mine to Ship in 1912.

The mine will enter the shipping lists in 1912. About 600 feet east is the Armour No. 2 mine. The power house is also one of a battery of four boilers and it is almost completed. As the mine is only under lease for a period of thirty years every effort will be made by the mining company to get out as much ore as possible. This mine will also ship next year. On the very city limits of Ironton three drills of the Mattson and Helmer Exploration company's interests are busily mapping out another ore body which will enable another mine to be located 1,000 feet south of the Armour No. 1. About a quarter of a mile east is the Thompson mine of the Inland Steel company, on land leased from Thomas Keating.

LIVING IN DULUTH.

Missing Couderay, Wis., Girl Said to Have Eloped Here.

Couderay, Wis., Aug. 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—The mystery surrounding the strange disappearance of Myra McClaine, the comely daughter, aged 18 of an engineer employed in a local mill, has been explained by the announcement that she eloped to Duluth with a young man, married him and they are living in the Zenith City.

About six weeks ago the parents appealed to Sheriff Clark and District Attorney Williams of Sawyer county to assist in the search for the missing girl and she has finally been located in Duluth. It was strongly suspected at the time that she had eloped with the young man from Amery, Wis., which has proved true as they are married and are now living in Duluth.

ENGINEER RALPH LIKES DITCH WORK

Will Join Party From Thief River in Looking Over Ditches.

Thief River Falls, Minn., Aug. 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—State Engineer George Ralph has been here arranging for a tour of the state ditches in the territory north and east of Thief River Falls. He states that all the contracts for the state ditches in the northern portion of the state are being rapidly and successfully completed and that first class work is being done.

The dry season last year and the moderate rains which have fallen this summer have made ideal conditions for the construction of the ditches and no trouble will arise as to the proper construction of any of the great drainage problems.

He is enthusiastic about the benefits which these propositions will accomplish and commends the work being done on the county and federal ditches; or at least, on those draining federal lands.

He will be one of the party of twenty-five who will be the guests of the Thief River Falls Commercial club tomorrow on the auto trip through the drained lands to Grygla, northeast of this city thirty miles. This trip will be an eye opener to those who believed that this rich level farming country could not be drained and marked like the blocks on a checker board with beautiful highways, constructed from the dirt excavated from the big ditches. The party will be in the field for three days visiting all the ditches and portions of this recently drained territory.

SUE SENATOR'S GRANDSON.

Issac Stephenson's Relative Defendant in Big Damage Suit.

Marinette, Wis., Aug. 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—An action of damages has been started against Howard George of Marinette, a grandson of Senator Isaac Stephenson, for injuries alleged to have been sustained by Arnold Schultz of Kaukauna and Ernest Gannegan of Marinette, who it is alleged were run down by the defendant's automobile, while driving on the Peshtigo road on the night of July 30.

It is alleged that the George car, driven by its owner was traveling at a high rate of speed without lights. Schultz sued for $500 and Gannegan for $1,000. The horse which the young men were driving was knocked down and Schultz and Gannegan were brought to the Menominee River hospital in an unconscious condition.

DISCHARGED VETERAN SUES SOLDIERS' HOME.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—George M. Nash, discharged from the Minnesota Soldiers' home May 11, 1910, on the charge that he was a trouble maker, has begun a suit against the board of trustees, Quartermaster Milo K. Williams and Col. F. H. Barnard, former commandant, for $5,000 alleged damages. He is joined in the suit by Lucy A. Nash, his wife. The case was filed in the Hennepin district court.

The complaint alleges that they were "unlawfully and maliciously" discharged and since then have been refused reinstatement. It is further alleged that the only means of support they have is a United States pension of $20 a month and an allowance of $4 a month from the state of Minnesota, which is inadequate for their support.

EXPECT SMITH WILL QUIT BOARD OF REGENTS.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—Friends of C. A. Smith, member of the board of regents at the University of Minnesota and head of the large lumber interests, which bear his name, are looking daily for the resignation of Mr. Smith from the board of regents, inasmuch as Mr. Smith has removed his household goods from Minneapolis, and has taken up a residence at Oakland, Cal.

This summer Mr. Smith has made his home at Lake Minnetonka. For some years past he has spent much of his time on the Pacific coast.

STUDENTS TO DRILL IN STATE FAIR HALL.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—At a meeting of the state fair board yesterday, permission was granted the state agricultural school to use the livestock pavilion on the fair grounds for drilling purposes during the winter months. A strong effort was made to get a bill through the legislature last winter providing an appropriation with which to build a drill hall at the farm school, but it failed.

It was decided at the meeting to make room for exhibits of apples grown for commercial purposes, and to have them exhibited in 10-bushel lots. A Minneapolis company has offered a prize of a $100 loving cup, and the fair board will offer four additional prizes.

Mrs. Perry Starkweather and Mrs. Dean Liggett appeared before the board to urge that space be set apart for the federated women's clubs, and that an appropriation be made for entertaining women visitors. No action was taken on the request.

WOMEN MAKE TRIP THROUGH WILD SECTION.

Walker, Minn., Aug. 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mrs. Gustave Kulander and Mrs. F. A. Dare returned Wednesday from a 200-mile lake cruise through Northern Minnesota lakes, having traveled through a region which has never been visited by woman tourists before as far as is known. Crossing Leech lake for twenty-five miles, the women proceeded with Indian guides up the Boy river into Boy Lake, through innumerable other lakes and streams far from the trend of advanced civilization. The trip was made in a 22-foot gasoline launch equipped with a 7-horse power motor, rowboats being used to navigate the smaller streams.

Crosby Building Cottages.

Crosby, Minn., Aug. 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—George H. Crosby is constructing ten cottages here and they all have been engaged before being completed. The Soo depot is almost completed and will be ready Sept. 1. The Rogers-Brown Ore company has commenced construction on five cottages in Ironton and eight in Cuyuna. The village council of Deerwood has elected Cuyler Adams, Jr., son of Cuyler Adams, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of a member.

DIVORCE ENDS ROMANCE.

Former Ada Man Separates From Wife in Montana.

Ada, Minn., Aug. 18.—Last week at Butte, Mont., Mrs. Ellen Mackel was granted a divorce from her husband, Alex Mackel formerly of this place.

Mrs. Mackel is given the divorce and separate maintenance, being granted alimony of $80 per month. Mackel a few years ago rescued a young woman from under the wheels of a street car at Seattle and quickly made her his wife—and now Alex says that the street car is not the proper craft in which to embark upon the sea of matrimony.

DULUTH LUMBERMAN EXAMINING FIRE DAMAGE.

International Falls, Minn., Aug. 18.—E. C. Coleman of Duluth, president of the Wisconsin Timber company, owners of some 15,000 acres of timber east of here, principally in St. Louis county, arrived in town Tuesday with a bunch of cruisers and has since gone up lake with them to start the work of ascertaining how much of their property was damaged by the fires last fall. It has been estimated that practically 1,000 acres were burned over and it is to estimate the exact loss, which at best is a large one, that Mr. Coleman and party are making the trip at this time.

Blind-Piggers Fined.

Alexandria, Minn., Aug. 18.—Sheriff Kent and County Attorney Larson paid an official visit to Kensington, one of the dry villages of Douglas county, and arrested John Nicholson and Leonard Peterson on a charge of selling intoxicating liquors without a license. Both men pleaded guilty and were fined $70 and costs.

DULUTH DOCTORS WIN FROM SUPERIOR DOCTORS.

In Superior one day this week the Duluth doctors trimmed the Superior doctors at baseball. Did it quite to the queen's taste, too. Just a 7 to 0 score—that was all. A glance at the lineup shows why there is mourning in Superior medical circles just now. Judson pitched a star game, so they say, while the support he received was of the A-1 gilt-edged brand.

Omaha, Neb., Aug. 18.—With semi-finals in the championship flight of the trans-Mississippi golf tournament on the program, today was expected to bring out the greatest gallery thus far seen on the course. Harry Legg, Minneapolis, was scheduled to play Jerome Magee, Omaha Country club; Jack Rider and Howard Adams, a Des Moines pair, were to meet in the other match.

Play in other flights also was of great interest and excellent golf was promised. The consolations with men who were beaten in the first flight held the interest during the early morning hours, while an afternoon professional match was expected to receive its share of attention.

JOE ARMSTRONG WINS FROM VETERAN WHEELER

St. Paul Youngster Outplays Older Opponent in Brilliant Match.

Doubles Down to Semi-Finals —Wheeler Heads Association.

Joseph Armstrong yesterday afternoon won the state tennis tournament and the right to meet John Adams, present state champion, by taking three straight sets from J. H. Wheeler, the veteran of many a hard-fought match. Armstrong won 6-2, 7-5 and 6-0.

Probably never on a local court has there been such brilliant tennis exhibited as that played between the two stars of the tournament that reached its climax yesterday afternoon. It was fitting that this grand exhibition of the sport should have come when it did and should have been witnessed by the largest and most appreciative gallery of the week.

Armstrong's play was the most brilliant the youngster has shown here. His returns were for the most part sure and accurate and he played the lines closer than in any of his previous games. But where the youngster excelled the heady veteran opposed to him, was in his hard and fast drives that in many cases found Wheeler too near the net to play on, much less to return.

Wheeler Plays Strong Game.

To Wheeler must be given credit for playing the best tennis he has exhibited in any of his games. It can be truthfully be said that Armstrong had to play brilliant tennis to win and that Wheeler had to play the very best game he has shown yet to hold Armstrong anywhere near even.

The second set was the closest of the three and there were times when Wheeler outplayed his opponent. In the second and third games of the second set Wheeler seemed to have the jump on the young star and brought round after round of applause by some of the pretty places of the week.

Armstrong opened the second set by taking the first game and then Wheeler rallied and played the best tennis of the entire match, taking the next two games. Armstrong took the fourth and then played some of the best tennis he showed in the fifth inning, winning a love game. Wheeler again rallied and took the sixth and seventh games. Armstrong took the eighth and Wheeler the ninth, then Armstrong gathered strength and won the last three games of the set.

Armstrong Gains Strength.

Wheeler tired somewhat in the third set and Armstrong seemed to grow stronger. The drives of Armstrong were beautiful in their execution and Wheeler did not seem able to play any ball, either in the back court or at the net, that Armstrong was not able to play and in most cases return successfully. Armstrong played a straight hard drive in most cases, but he played both the back court and the net with equal facility and had Wheeler covering a large amount of court. He had the veteran moving so much that he was able to make many points on open court shots.

Unless the state championship match between John Adams and the youthful Armstrong proves a more brilliant exhibition of the game than the play of yesterday, it is very doubtful if Duluth people will, for some time to come, see any better playing than that of yesterday.

Doubles to Semi-Finals.

Play in the doubles brought the Shepard brothers of Winona, Burton and Armstrong, Fitzpatrick and Mowry, and Wheeler and Jayne into the semi finals. The Shepard brothers took a game from Davis and La Bree, 6-4, 8-6, while Burton and Armstrong won from Way and Neff in the morning by scores of 6-1, 6-3. Fitzpatrick and Mowry won from Clark and Cathcart after three sets of hard and close tennis, the sets going 6-4, 7-9, 7-5. As Wheeler and Jayne had previously won from the Weinhagen brothers, the results of the play brought the four pairs down to the semi-finals.

In the consolation singles E. E. Shepard defeated Ingalls, 6-2, 3-6, 7-5. Fred Weinhagen won from Mowry, 6-2, 6-3. Graff won from Craig, 6-2, 6-3, and Abbott, Congdon, McBride and Jones forfeited.

Election of Officers.

Following the game between Armstrong and Wheeler the tennis players went on the picnic up the river. The annual meeting followed the fun at the Spirit Lake branch. J. H. Wheeler was elected president, with Ward Burton of Minneapolis, vice president. C. K. Dickerman and C. F. Graff of this city were chosen as directors, with E. I. Shepard of Winona, John Adams and Joseph Armstrong of St. Paul, and Dr. E. T. Poehler of Minneapolis. The election of the secretary was left in the hands of the directors.

The state championship match between Adams and Armstrong will come tomorrow afternoon, following the cleanup in the doubles, according to the announcement made yesterday.

STOCK FARM FUTURITY

Purse of $4,500 Is Feature at International Breeders' Meeting.

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 18.—The stock farm futurity for 3-year-old trotters with a purse of $4,500 is the feature on today's program of the International Breeders' big independent meeting now on here. This is the eleventh renewal of this event. Colorado E. won the race last year and sent the best time since the event was inaugurated, going a heat in 2:05¾.

In addition to the futurity there will be three other paces, the 2:06 pace, a 2:09 trot and a 2:18 pace, each for a purse of $1,200.

The most impressive feature of the second day of the race meeting here yesterday was the breaking of the world's record in the King stake of $3,000 for 2:04 pacers.

This was the day for the Hoster-Columbus Brewers' stake of $10,000 for 2:15 trotters, and this always draws a great crowd to the track, today's attendance being probably the largest ever.

As a racing attraction the King stake outshone the rich trotting stake. It was the first on the card and brought together again Earl Jr., and Independence Boy, the pair who have already fought it out several times this season.

Favorite is Nosed Out.

Earl Jr., was made the favorite, but Independence Boy was heavily played as he is a Columbus owned horse. The field consisting of Major Mallow, Walter W., and the Abbe, was almost neglected.

In the first heat Independence Boy set the pace into the stretch where he was challenged by Earl Jr., and the pair fought it out side by side to the wire, Independence Boy pushing his nose in front in the last two strides and gaining a hard-fought victory.

In the second heat Major Mallow led until the stretch was reached and then Independence Boy and Earl Jr., again shot to the front and passed under the wire so close together that it required the verdict of the judges to know that Independence Boy had won again.

In the third heat Independence Boy shot to the front on the upper turn, gaining a long lead which Earl Jr., could not overcome giving the Columbus horse a victory in straight heats

The time made in this race was phenomenal. The first heat was the slowest, 2:02¾. The second heat was a second faster and the third was in 2:02 flat. The average time was one-sixth of a second over 2:02 and this is claimed as the world's record for the three heats in a race, beating the average of the three heats paced by these horses at Cleveland last week by a quarter of a second.

CUYUNA BASEBALL CLUB CLOSES SUCCESSFUL SEASON

Cuyuna, Minn., Aug. 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Cuyuna baseball club has just closed a highly successful season. The team played seventeen games and won eleven, thus establishing a percentage of .647. The teams representing Aitkin, Crosby, Brainerd, Deerwood and Moose Lake were the ones taken on by the local boys. The team has been ably managed by A. Levant and well supported by all the citizens.

SOX AT HOME SATURDAY FOR SEASON'S WINDUP

Tomorrow afternoon at Athletic park the White Sox will open their long at-home series of games, which is expected to put the locals up within fighting distance of the two league leaders.

The Sox will start with Rochester tomorrow afternoon. There will be only three games. Then comes La Crosse for three games on the local lot, with Winona following and then Eau Claire. Following the series with Eau Claire the Sox will go to Superior for three games and then the season will end in a blaze of glory with the Superior Red Sox, who hope to be running in the lead at that time, playing the last three games of the season at Athletic park.

With Duluth playing good ball at the present time and the race between Winona and Superior the prettiest that the Minny league has ever witnessed, the closing games at Athletic park promise to eclipse all the attendance records of the season.

We are racing nip and tuck with Eau Claire, and for that reason the three games with the former champions will be filled with interest. Then comes the games with Winona. These contests will probably draw some of the banner crowds of the season, for the eyes of the fans around the circuit will be centered on Duluth during these three games.

Also, the games with Superior will be the most interesting and the most dramatic of the season. If Superior is in the lead, and the Red Legs should be, fans throughout the state, wherever interest is taken in the Minnesota-Wisconsin league, will watch the bulletin boards, inning by inning, for the results of the games.

It is very likely that baseball interest will be aroused at fever heat in the two cities at the head of Lake Superior, and it is very likely that these six games will break all Minny league records for a double series attendance.

FINNISH LION MAKES A BIG HIT WITH CROWD

NEVER in the history of athletics in Duluth have the fans seen a man like Frederick Pilakoff, the Finnish Lion, who showed before a fair crowd at the big Auditorium rink last evening. In wonderful physique, in quickness and in the marvellous feats of strength he performed, Pilakoff made a decided impression upon his audience.

Some idea may gained of the strength of the giant when it is stated that with one hand he bent 250 pounds over his head and to full arm lift. An iron beam of several inches in thickness was bent over the massive neck of the giant by something like twenty men, some of the spectators coming on to the stage to assist in performing this trick.

John Soderlund, the young Finnish heavyweight wrestler from the range, though a giant in physique and as strong as a young bull, was really a baby in the hands of the man who has achieved victories on the wrestling mat over some of the best wrestlers in Europe. Pilakoff gave his young opponent all the chance in the world, but broke holds with ease, and surprised the audience by the wonderfull speed and agility he possessed. Pilakoff won the first fall in eight minutes and the second in seventeen minutes.

Coming to Duluth practically with no claims, Pilakoff asked to be judged on his merits, and last evening there wasn't a man left the big Auditorium but who believed that in the Finnish Lion Duluth has one of the best wrestlers in the country. Possessing a wonderful body and giant legs and arms, the giant simply shook himself out of his holds and stood on his feet. The strength of the big man is almost unbelievable, and those who watched his work will watch with interest what he does against some of the stars that he will be matched with the coming season.

The program opened by the giant tearing two decks of ordinary playing cards in two. Then he took a long steel bar and bent it as an ordinary man would bend a piece of tin, around his wrist. He threw a fifty-pound weight into the air and caught it on his muscles. He bridged on his powerful neck, holding two large men on his chest and then lifted from the floor a 200 pound dumb bell.

In a straight lift, the giant lifted two weights, one a bar bell and the other a ball weight, above his shoulder. The two weights came to 250 pounds. He bent a solid bar over an inch in thickness in his teeth and also had a bar much thicker bent across his head. But when he bent the bar of several inches across the back of his neck the audience marvelled at his wonderful strength.

Before the wrestling match, Hassan Abdallah, a wonderful Turk, was introduced to the audience and issued a challenge to Pilakoff through big Tom McGuire. Little is known of the Turk, and his record also shows practically nothing. He has been wrestling local talent in the Cobalt district of Canada, and Duluth is one of his stops.

Though Pilakoff's immense strength and quickness, for he bounded around the mat like a big cat, completely smothered the hard working Soderlund, the wrestling match time and time brought applause from the audience, which marvelled at the strength displayed by the Finnish Lion, but naturally sympathized with the under man.

Pilakoff had a European salute that made a hit with the audience. The big man, like a boy in spirits, has wrestled in Russian Finland, his native country; France, Germany, and even in South Africa, where he met the great Laurich in a big open air tournament, and he has the manners that are seen in many of the travelers from the other side of the pond.

Many of the countrymen of the Finnish Lion were present last evening and a little impromptu reception was held after the match. Pilakoff became acquainted with many of the Duluth Finnish people, the first opportunity the giant has had to meet many of his countrymen of this city.

Starting later in the present season the officials of the Greater Duluth Athletic association plan to bring to Duluth some of the greatest stars of the mat world, believing that Duluth now has a wrestler who can meet any man in the world on equal footing and give the lovers of clean and well conducted wrestling the best mat sport that has ever been given in this city.

BELVASIA IS WINNER

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 18.—The King George stake, valued at $5,000 for 2:12 trotters, the feature event at the track across the river, yesterday afternoon went to Belvasia, driven by Walter Cox. Belvasia won the first heat handily over Chatty Direct. Arlo Leyburn was second when Cox got into a pocket. The third heat found Belvasia again in a pocket, but got free at the far turn and rushed under the wire first. Al Stanley, who finished fourth, was placed last for pacing.

Major Wellington, favorite in the 2:09 trot, was distanced in the second heat, the race being won by Muda Guy.

Ernest, with Cox in the sulky, easily disposed of the field in the 2:15 pace, winning in straight heats. Cope, the Canadian horse, was the contender. Owing to scratches, the 2:09 pace was declared off.

Ed Geers worked The Harvester a mile in 2:05, the last quarter being covered in :29½.

MOTOR BOAT RACES AT THE BOAT CLUB.

There will be a handicap motor boat race at the Duluth Boat club main house on Saturday, Aug. 19, in which all owners are urged to enter boats. Handicaps will be taken from the best time made by each boat over the course in any official race during 1910 or 1911.

If every boat in this race exactly equals her previous best record, the boats should all cross the finish line together.

Here is the call issued:

"If you can get a little more speed on Saturday by putting on a new wheel, using more lubricating oil or better judgment in turning buoys, you have as good a chance to win as the next fellow.

"Report in person at the judge's stand at or before 3:30 p. m., where you will compare your watch with the starter's watch, which you will find hanging just outside the window. You will then be given a number for your boat and a card with your starting time.

"A gun will be fired on the starting time of each boat. Keep track of the time and don't start on the other fellow's gun. If you cross the line ahead of your gun you will be disqualified.

"First boat over the finish line wins the race, so open her up and do your best. Get your entries in at once to Dr. D. H. Day, Phoenix block, for the race starts on time if only one boat is ready.

"Don't kick on your handicap. It won't do any good. If you don't thoroughly understand the 'overlap rule' about turning buoys be sure and ask the official starter, nobody else, to explain it.

"Nobody is going to hunt you up to get your entry or to give you your number. You will have to do all that yourself, but it will be easy for everything you need or want to know you will find at the judge's stand at 3:30 p. m. sharp.

"First prize, two pearl handled pocket knives.

"Second prize, a D. B. C. pennant.

"And a lot of fun for everybody."

The price is not given out. Baskette is leading the American association pitchers. He will report at the close of the American association season.

WILL VISIT OVER FIFTY TOWNS

Duluth Trade Excursion Train Scheduled Through Nineteen Counties.

Fifty-five towns in nineteen counties will be visited by the special train of the Duluth jobbers and manufacturers next week. At some of the towns, the visitors will remain only five minutes, or long enough for the band to play a little and for the Duluth men to meet a few of the merchants. In other towns, stops of about an hour will be made, and one night will be spent at Bemidji and the other at Alexandria.

The different counties to be visited are St. Louis, Carlton, Aitkin, Crow Wing, Cass, Hubbard, Beltrami, Clearwater, Polk, Red Lake, Pennington, Mahnomen, Becker, Ottertail, Douglas, Pope, Stearns, Morrison and Millelacs.

The special will make a wide swing around the Soo line. The farthest point from Duluth to be visited is Callway, which is 307 miles from this city. Moose Lake, the first stop, is forty-nine miles out of Duluth.

Most of the towns to be visited are on the new branches of the Soo line and are consequently new towns, with comparatively few people. They are thriving communities, however, and are growing rapidly. They all have trade possibilities for Duluth and the jobbers of the city intend to cultivate their friendship while the towns are young.

STRIKE SETTLED; COPPERS ADVANCE

English Troubles Simplified—Shorts Scramble to Reach Cover.

The copper market went upward today in sympathy with the general list which bulged on account of the reported settlement of one branch of the English strikers. Shorts ran to cover. The market was dull and nervous in the forenoon but in the afternoon it was strong and buoyant.

Judge Lovett's statement that there is no dissension in Union Pacific had a good effect on the market. The veto by the president of the wool tariff revision was beneficial from a market standpoint as it removes from the market a disturbing element. The fear of a dead-lock in the Moroccan situation and further complications induced foreign liquidation in the early hours but this factor was soon overshadowed by more favorable news from other sources. The possibility of an early adjournment by congress is favorably regarded.

Sergeant & Seymour, a fairly important brokerage firm on the New York stock exchange, failed today but the effect was not noticed in the market. Banking support was reported today to be more noticeable than for some time.

The local market was listless. Denn sold at $5.06¼ and Combination Keating at 33c.

Amalgamated fluctuated within the range of $60.75, $61.12½, $60.87½; $61.37½, $61, $62 and $61.75. Butte Coalition sold at $15.75 to $16, Calumet & Arizona at $48 to $49, Giroux at $5, $5.12½ and $5, Greene at $6.62½, Ojibway at $5.50, $5 and $5.50, North Butte at $24.25 to $25.50.

The Aanconda management is so well satisfied with the results being obtained from the hoisting of ore by compressed air that it has determined to enlarge the compressor plant to a sufficient capacity to provide power for all the company's mines.

* * *

The station at the 2,800-foot level of the North Butte has been completed and cross-cutting will begin immediately to get between the fault planes encountered on the 2,400-foot level and which later developments have shown to diverge widely with depth. If good ore is encountered between the planes, the ore body should prove of such dimensions as to leave little question as to the future of the mine.

Ojibway continues to center all activity in ground tributary to the No 1 shaft, cutting out stopes and drifts in preparation for mill test. The date of the test has not been definitely decided, but it may be expected that operations will be in full swing before the end of the year. Shaft work ceased some time ago. No. 1 shaft is down about 1,650 feet and No. 2 about 1,920 feet.

R. C. Allen, state geologist of Michigan, declares that one-third of the copper produced in Michigan is now mined and sold at a loss. The average copper contents of the ores mined in Michigan is about 1 per cent, or 20 pounds of copper to the short ton. This figure, multiplied by the prevailing price for the metal, gives a value of about $2.50 for the finished copper in a ton of Michigan ore, and that $2.50 per ton must pay for the breaking of the ore in the mine, its hoisting to the surface, milling, smelting, refining and marketing. While Mr. Allen refuses to discuss the ethics of the Calumet & Hecla merger, he claims that a decisive step toward cutting the cost of production must be taken, and soon, if the Michigan copper industry is to continue to compete with other producing sections. He believes that merger is a move in this direction.

Unless all ordinary reasoning is out, says the London Statist, good American securities are worth studying. Last week we laid before our readers a comprehensive consideration of the American railway position, and we need but refer our readers to that for a selection. The American crops are all good. There will be no difficulty on the part of the United States in getting what gold it may require. Money in the United States is now abundant and cheap. There is no reason to apprehend that it will become scarce during the year. Lastly, the United States is so happily placed that even if there are to be political troubles upon the continent, the United States need not meddle in them if it does not choose.

Inspect Chloride.

Chloride sprinkling districts in Duluth were inspected yesterday by G. A. Dole of Minneapolis and R. H. Pierce of Rochester, N. Y., representatives of the company which manufactures the Solvay calcium chloride, which has been used quite extensively in Duluth the present season. They found that it has not been a success on some streets because the highway was too thickly covered with dust when it was applied, or because it had not been applied properly. On the majority of streets they thought it was giving satisfactory results. They stated that in other cities it is proving a success.

Walsh Committed.

James Walsh, former detective on the Duluth police force, has been committed to the state asylum at Fergus Falls, a victim of the drug habit. He is not insane, but he is committed in the hope that forcible isolation may result in his ultimate cure.

Editors Coming.

The members of the Minnesota State Editorial association will be in Duluth for a few hours tomorrow before leaving on the steamer Hamonic for their annual excursion down the lakes to Detroit, Mich. They will not arrive until late in the afternoon and will leave later in the evening. While here they will be entertained at dinner at the Commercial club. Lieut.-Governor Sam Y. Gordon, editor of the Brown's Valley, Interlake Tribune, president of the association, will be in the party.

Laundrymen Coming.

A party of about fifty laundrymen from the East, are expected tomorrow on the lake steamers, and will leave over the Great Northern for St. Paul to attend the annual convention of the National Laundrymen's association, which will be held there.

Alaska Man Not Coming.

Rev. E. P. Newton of Alaska who was planning a visit to Duluth this week and who was to have preached at Trinity pro-cathedral Sunday has been forced to postpone his visit here.

SEASON FOR "PUTTING UP"

Housewives Busy With Crab Apples, Peaches and Plums.

Weakness Is Shown in the Butter and Egg Markets.

Canning and jelly-making are at their height just now and the housewives are busy filling their shelves for the winter. Crabapples, peaches and wild plums are receiving attention, although some are still "putting up" blueberries and raspberries.

The "transparent" crabapples are on the market now priced at 50 cents a peck, or $1.75 a bushel. These are the choicest kind for jelly.

Fine large California peaches are also on the market for 25 cents a basket, or $1 a crate.

The wild plums are fine this year and are selling at 85 and 90 cents a peck. They have been more plentiful than usual this season. Michigan plums at $1.25 a peck are also good for canning.

Blueberries are selling for $2.25 a case and the wild raspberries, still to be purchased from the pickers, are bringing higher prices this year than in former seasons.

Cooking apples for 25 cents a peck are also to be had in the stores.

The variety of fresh vegetables remains about the same this week and the prices have not varied to any extent. Most of the small vegetables, such as wax and green beans and peas are still 10 cents a quart. Tomatoes are selling, for 10 cents a pound or 25 cents a basket, and cucumbers are two for 5 cents. Kohlrabi are now on the market also for four for 10 cents, and the green corn on the market this week is the white corn selling at 20 cents a dozen.

In the wholesale market buyers made a demonstration against the maintenance of butter prices in the last few days, claiming that values were held at an unwarrantable level. The result was an easier tone in prices. Curtailment of purchases following an upturn in prices also worked advantageously in the egg trade, and the firmness was displaced by an easier tone. Other changes in produce quotations included a further reduction in the price of potatoes, seasonable declines in the cost of Michigan fruits, and a drop in prices of chickens. The general trade has been of generous volume. City retailers and country buyers have taken their full quota of offerings. Receipts have been sufficiently large to make a voluminous business.

For some time butter jobbers have followed Elgin creamery men in adding to the cost of butter. During the period in which these prices were maintained, buyers held that values were too high and were causing a contraction of the consumptive demand. Jobbers, on the other hand, asserted that they were forced to buy their supplies on an Elgin basis, and that they could not do business without sustaining a loss unless they sold on the same basis.

Steadily accumulating supplies in cellars, more favorable weather for production and a fear that a colipse of the price range might be brought about caused jobbers to take a broader view of the situation, and the market immediately assumed an easier undertone with a shading of prices.

Egg dealers enjoyed an exceptionally active business in the first half of the week. Their efforts to advance prices met with rebuffs on the part of buyers, and later values were shaded.

Heavy receipts of Minnesota potatoes in this market knocked the props from under the potato market and prices took a slump. The downward movement of values was accelerated by the fact that consumption was restricted by the high prices which have been in effect for the last two months. Despite the decline, prices are still too high for an unrestricted trade, and dealers believe further reductions will be made.

Sweet potatoes came forward in larger quantities and sold at a decline. The season is early for this vegetable and the trade is not especially broad. More activity is expected to follow further reductions in prices. Green vegetables have been in fair supply, and the sale has been moderately active without any price changes of importance.

DULUTH SCHOOLS TO OPEN SEPT. 5.

Assignment of Teachers Being Made—Taking School Census.

Two weeks from next Tuesday, the schools of Duluth will re-open. Supt. Denfeld is now busily making his assignment of teachers, with the usual vexatious eleventh hour resignations to make the task a difficult one. The teaching staff is about complete, however, and teachers are available for the places which may be vacated between this time and the opening of school, so that when the children gather Sept. 5, every teaching position will be filled.

The Jerome Merritt school will be the only new building to be occupied this year. The other buildings have been gone over thoroughly during the vacation period, but no very extensive work was required in any and the summer activity has been confined to decorating and repairing.

The school census is being taken and will probably be completed next week. The city has been divided into about twenty districts and the work is being done by teachers. The information required is only the name, age, name of parent or guardian and residence of each child of school age, so that the enumerators are able to make good progress.

PUBLICITY BILL IS READY FOR PRESIDENT.

Washington, Aug. 18.—The house yesterday adopted by 282 to 27 the conference report on the campaign publicity bill. The report already has been adopted by the senate and the measure will go to the president at once.

The action of the house was taken in spite of a strenuous protest by a few Southern members, who insisted that the primary election feature of the bill was an infringement upon states' rights.

It requires that all candidates for the senate or house, either in general elections, primaries or nominating conventions shall file statements of their expenses not more than fifteen nor less than ten days before the election or nomination.

Expenses of candidates for the senate are limited to $10,000 and those for candidates of the house to $5,000, and candidates are required to say what positions of honor they have promised in an effort to gain votes.

DENTIST WHO DETAINED GIRL IS OUT ON BONDS.

San Bernardino, Cal., Aug. 18.—Dr A. W. McDavid, the dentist who is alleged to have held Miss Jessie McDonald prisoner in a cellar-like room adjoining his office for fifteen months, was arraigned yesterday on a statutory charge, and released on $1,000 bond.

Miss McDonald pleaded that leniency be shown the physician who attended her at the birth of her baby four months ago. She would not divulge his name, saying he attended her out of pity. The physician did not file a birth certificate.

Miss McDonald said that she would testify against the dentist when he was brought to trial.

SIOUX CITY NEXT YEAR

Iowa City Selected as 1912 Meeting Place for Northwestern Hotel Men.

Manager Lee of Spalding Hotel, Duluth, Speaks About "Organization."

Grand Forks, N. D., Aug. 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Northwestern Hotelmen's association which ended its annual meeting here last night voted to meet next year in Sioux City, Iowa, and before adjourning elected the following officers: F. J. Taggart, Omaha, Neb., president; state vice presidents, W. Pocock, St. Paul, Minn.; C. A. Klaus, Jamestown, N. D., J. C. Venable, Lincoln, Neb., W. F. Pascoe, Rapid City, S. D., and W. F Miller, Davenport, Iowa. Secretary and treasurer I. A. Mediar, Omaha, Neb.

Duluth Boniface's Address.

Edwin H. Lee, manager of the Spalding hotel in Duluth, delivered one of the principal addresses yesterday. Mr. Lee's talk was on "Organization," and he favored it unconditionally, pointing out very forcibly just what could be accomplished along these lines by hotel men of every order.

Mr. Lee condemned unsparingly the hotel man "who conducts his hotel behind a red light," and pointed out that they must not admit him to their organizations.

"If there are but two hotels in a town," said Mr. Lee, "let the two men at the head of these hotels get together, talk things over, and let each of them realize that whatever helps him to better his business condition, helps his competitor, and that whatever helps his competitor helps him; that their business interests are identical; that unfriendly competition is detrimental to both. If there are more than three or four hotels in a town or city, let those at the head of them form a local hotel association, and in forming it, let them remember above all else to be friends, and to put aside petty jealousies and the thought of unfair competition in a business way. Let them have their meetings; let them have them often, formal and informal, and at these meetings let every man tell the truth. The day for frankness in business as well as in diplomacy has come. Let each one bring up for discussion that which is of mutual interest and which concerns him most in a business way. Let all that locally in any way affects the hotel business, either for good or bad, be discussed. Let the local association go further and discuss matters of interest to the hotel world at large. Let each member of this local organization be brought to a realization of the fact that his business interests are identical with those of every other member; that whatever benefits one, benefits all; that among the hotelkeepers of any town or city there is a real community of interest, and that much can be done to benefit the business of all and indeed to further the progress of their city or town.

Favors Local Organization.

"If I could but persuade the hotel men of every town and of every city—not referring at all to the larger cities—to organize locally, and could make them realize the good that such an organization would do them—and I am talking now in dollars and cents—we would soon have all over this great Northwest local organizations each of which would be a power in its own community, and when the members of these local organizations came to know what they themselves could do and were doing in their own town or city, they would not have to be urged, or perhaps I should say drafted, into membership in the larger organization. If the hotel keepers of the state of Minnesota had realized the truth of what I have already said as I realize it, we would not have had at St. Paul on the 25th day of June last a scant twenty hotel keepers meeting in annual convention, but 200 live wires, interested in their own welfare, interested in their mutual welfare, interested in the success of hotel keepers all over the state of Minnesota; and if the states of Iowa, and Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota and Minnesota were locally organized, we would not have here at Grand Forks today a scant 150 hotel men, but 600."

LABOR DAY OBSERVANCE

Parade, Speeches and Picnic Features on the Program.

Speaker of Day Not Selected —Order of Unions for Parade.

Duluth's union labor forces are preparing for the annual observance of Labor day, Sept. 4. The usual program of a parade in the morning, followed by speeches, games and other picnic features at the Union Labor pavilion at Fairmont park, will be carried out. The committee in charge of the celebration consists of Richard Jones, chairman; W. R. Thomson, Joseph Miller, Theodore Kintz, Peter Marandow, Louis Schriner, A. Vannierre, Abe Jappe, Frank A. Boreen and H. E. Trudeau.

No speaker of the day has been selected. An invitation has been extended to one of the most prominent union labor speakers in the country, but the committee is doubtful of its ability to obtain his attendance. Several other prominent speakers are under consideration, however, and the speaker finally selected will be one with reputation and ability.

H. E. Trudeau will be chief marshal of the parade and he will be assisted by W. R. Thomson heading the second division and Jospeh Miller heading the third division. There will be a band at the head of the first division and another heading the second division. The fife and drum corps will head the third division.

The parade will start promptly at 10 o'clock in the morning, the first division forming at the courthouse. The second division will fall in at Fourth avenue west and the third division at Third avenue west. The parade will move east on First street to Second avenue east, then down to Superior street and west on Superior street to Eighth avenue west where special cars to Fairmont park will be taken.

Efforts are being made to get out a good representation of each union for the parade. It is expected that every union in the city will be represented and the committee is endeavoring to make the parade a greater demonstration of the strength of union labor in Duluth than any previous Labor day parade.

Crosby, Minn., Aug. 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—About $12,000 was disbursed by the Rogers-Brown Ore company and the Inland Steel company on Tuesday, Aug. 15, the regular monthly pay day. This does not take into account the sums paid out by the forty or more drills working in the vicinity of Crosby employing over 200 men at high wages.

HOTEL MEN ARE STALLED

Freight Train Derailment Delays Arrival of Visitors in Duluth.

Entertainment Program for Visit Here May Not Be Carried Out.

Two special cars attached to the regular Great Northern train that runs between Grand Forks, N. D., and Duluth are standing idle, or at least were up until noon today, somewhere north of Cass Lake on the northern division of the Great Northern railway.

In these special cars are the members of the Northwestern Hotel Men's association, which has just completed its annual session at Grand Forks. These delegates are on their way to Duluth, the guests of the Duluth Hotel Men's association. When will they arrive? No one has any knowledge on the subject.

The schedule under which the hotel men started from Grand Forks, provided for their arriving in Duluth this morning. They would have been met at the train and taken to the various hotels for breakfast. Then a steamboat would have taken the hotel men up the St. Louis river and around the lake. Luncheon and other good things would have been served on the boat. Dinner at the Duluth hotels and then a theater party, as well as an automobile ride around the city, would have completed the day's program.

The hotel men were to have left on the late train this evening. Whether they can be persuaded to remain over tomorrow and have the original program carried out, will not be known until the belated train arrives and the plans are made known.

Freight Train Derailed.

Delay was caused by the derailment of a freight train. The passenger train was not in the least damaged, and the only unpleasant feature about the delay is the nice things the hotel men are missing. That is quite enough. Incidentally, if the hotel men refuse to remain over, Duluth will miss a lot of advertising, for these hotel men are a live lot and the best boosters in the world.

The Duluth Hotel Men's association, a young organization that is already making itself felt in the affairs of the city, spread itself on the program, and here comes a freight derailment and spills all of the plans.

Henry Ribenack and Edward Ribenack, proprietors of the Hotel Lenox, have arranged to have a large number of automobiles at the Lenox this afternoon, and if the belated train bearing the jolly Northwestern hotel men arrives, the delegates and guests of Duluth will be taken around the boulevard and be given an opportunity to see something of the city.

DEAF AND DUMB FAKER CAUGHT

Writing "Right" for "Write" Discloses Mendicant's Knowledge of Sound.

Deaf and dumb fakers are frequent in the city of late and a number of them have been arrested by the police. One of them was caught this morning by a slip he made in writing out the card on which his pitiful appeal was written. It stated that he had been "learnt to right" by his parents, having been born deaf. The person to whom this was presented happened to think that, to one born deaf, the words "write" and "right" would not seem very similar and he would never think they were pronounced alike.

The arrest of the faker followed, and he was sentenced to ninety days in jail in municipal court this morning. Another faker of similar character was caught last week, after he had collected $16 in one morning's He also got ninety days.

The police are anxious that all such cases be reported to them as they are desirous of ridding the city of the offenders and making it a notoriously unhealthy place for the fake mendicant of all varieties.

"ORRIE" JOHNSON IN BIG LUMBER DEAL.

S. O. Johnson, formerly of Cloquet, a son of the late S. S. Johnson, millionaire lumberman of this state, was interested in one of the largest lumber deals ever pulled off in the West, according to the San Francisco Examiner. Mr. Johnson is well known in Duluth as "Orrie" Johnson, and many of his friends here might not recognize him as "S. O."

A recent issue of that paper said that $750,000 was recently paid to the First National Bank of Eugene, Or., by Mr. Johnson, now a resident of San Francisco, and G. X. Wendling, who are the leading stockholders in the Johnson-Wendling Lumber company, a $3,000,000 corporation. The cash was paid for timber owned in Western Oregon. The Southern Pacific is building a road over which the timber will be logged.

Mr. Johnson is also vice president of the Weed Lumber company, and president of the Klamath (Or.) Development company. His partner, Mr. Wendling, is president of the California Pine Box & Lumber company and a director in the Weed Lumber company.

PRESS WAGS FINISH ANNUAL GATHERING.

Boston, Aug. 18.—After a week of pleasure and sight-seeing about this city, the fun-makers of the country in attendance at the annual convention of the American Press Humorists' association brought their visit here to an end today. They were the guests of Thomas W. Lawson at his Dreamwold estate at Egypt before departing for their homes.

Many of the jokers partook of Boston baked beans here for the first time and left with a promise not to make them the excuse of any more jokes. Before adjournment the members selected Detroit as the next convention city. Newton Newkirk of Boston was elected president of the association; George Fitch of Peoria, vice-president, and Edgar A. Guest of Detroit secretary-treasurer.

DE LA BARRA OBJECTS TO BEING NOMINATED.

City of Mexico, Aug. 18.—Nominated for the presidency by one party, suggested for office by another and anticipating that the Catholics, now in convention, would choose him as their candidate, President de la Barra last night issued a manifesto protesting against such action. He declares his unwillingness to accept such an honor and urged the citizens of the republic to select his successor and permit him to retire at the close of his provisional incumbency.

FINE GYPSY FAKIRS.

Band Fleecing Farmers Near Barron, Wis., Caught.

Barron, Wis., Aug. 18.—A band of gypsies that have been flimflamming people in this section have been routed by Sheriff Rossbach and the ringleader fined.

Their method of operating was to ask to see a person's pocket-book or money and handkerchief so they may bless the money and make it increase many fold. By quick slight of hand movements they managed to extract a five, ten or twenty dollar bill as the case may be, wrap the pocket-book or money in the handkerchief and put it in the owners' pocket or about their clothes and tell them they must not look at it until sun goes down or it will break the charm.

W. A. Gehrman, a farmer on Hay river, was a victim Wednesday, when he looked at his money he found he was short $10, hence the arrest which cost the thieves the return of Gehrman's $10 and a $38 fine and costs.

C. Mercer of Rice Lake was fined $20 and $6.40 costs for using a net in a trout stream. Deputy Game Warden A. I. Hulbert made the arrest.

COULDN'T STAND "KIDDO."

So Young Woman's Escort Shot Offending Acqnaintance.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Aug. 18.—Stephen Jones, who attempted to kill James Kewen on a street in Lockland, was arraigned before Mayor Clifford Brown on a charge of shooting with intent to kill.

Jones had very little to say concerning the shooting, but what he did say gave those who heard him the impression that he considered it a chivalrous act to draw on Kewen and attempt to kill him when the latter had addressed Miss Laura Johnson, whom he was escorting him, as "kiddo."

It is said that he knew Kewen was a married man. Jones is said to have secured a divorce from his wife several years ago. He has lived in Lockland for the past ten years and has borne an excellent reputation.

Jones waived examination and Mayor Brown bound him over to the grand jury in the sum of $5,000. Failing to give bond he was committed to the county jail.

UXORICIDE TRIAL HALTS FOR TWO MARRIAGES.

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 18.—The preliminary hearing of Charles Mowery, charged with the murder of his wife, was interrupted twice in one afternoon by the entrance of a young man and woman—a different couple each time. Each time Justice Casimir J. Welch said: "Excuse me a moment, please," and stepped down from his bench and went into his office. There he performed marriage ceremonies for Charles Hubbard and Jeanette Van Gorp and for Marion L. Stowell and Telitha Smith. All live in Jackson county.

RAILROADS

LABORERS TO CANADA

Special Trains Run Over Canadian Northern to Harvest Fields.

Many Men Needed to Gather Crop in Western Provinces.

This afternoon a train of seven coaches left over the Duluth, Missabe & Northern and will be taken over by the Canadian Northern at Virginia, for the Canadian Northwest, filled with laborers who will enter the harvest fields. There were over 360 in the party. Last night a special train of ten coaches carrying 460 men left for Canada. The parties were brought from Eastern Canada over the Northwestern line.

The demand for laborers in the Canadian harvest fields is becoming greater every day and special efforts are being made by the Canadian railroads to get men to go to the fields. Many special trains have already gone up there, carrying in all about 20,000 men, but it is said that at least 30,000 more men are wanted. A special rate of $5 is now made to Winnipeg, and many men are taking this opportunity to get to the territories.

The crops in Western Canada are said to be almost perfect, and the estimates of the amount of the harvest is set from 200,000,000 to 250,000,000 bushels. Much of this will be shipped to the east through Duluth while Minneapolis will receive a large quantity for flour.

PAINTINGS OF GLACIER NATIONAL PARK RECEIVED.

The local office of the Great Northern this morning received fourteen pictures of the paintings made of various points in the Glacier National park, Montana, through which the road passes. The road some time ago engaged a painter of some note to paint the scenery in that park, which is said to be one of the finest in the United States, and copies have been turned out in large numbers. They are being distributed among the offices of the company, and in large hotels and public buildings.

Pardee Visits Duluth.

Edward L. Pardee, assistant passenger agent of the Omaha, is in the city today from St. Paul, on his first visit since he was promoted to that position recently. Mr. Pardee is one of the most popular young railroad men visiting this city, and as he has been connected with the road for several years he has many friends at the Head of the Lakes. He states that the passenger business has been heavier this year than ever before, and many of the trains have had to be enlarged.

TO TEACH VALUE OF HUMAN LIFE

Railroad Issues Pamphlet in Nine Languages Regarding Dangers.

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 18.—Millions are being donated to insure peace between nations, but the number of lives lost in wars today, with fighting continually going on in some corner of the world, is nothing compared with the annual record of fatalities due to trespassing on American railroads.

Thousands of lives are sacrificed every year as the result of trespassing on railroad property. Ignorance or carelessness on the part of the trespasser is responsible for most of this. The railroads are bending every effort to cut down the awful toll of death by posting signs and maintaining police patrol, but they will never be completely successful without the co-operation of the general public.

Every densely populated industrial center near a railroad is a death center. The working classes in crowded districts and tramps furnish the majority of victims. Railroads say people must be taught to have more respect for their lives and safety. With education of this kind in view, the Pennsylvania railroad is preparing pamphlets in eight or nine languages. These will be distributed in schools with instructions to the pupils to take them into their homes. The board of education of the state of Pennsylvania has promised its aid, and similar boards in other states will be asked to lend their support in disseminating this literature and having it read aloud in classes.

The assistance of clergymen has been solicited, and from hundreds of pulpits the danger of trespassing has been preached. From the good roads trains run by the Pennsylvania railroad through rural districts, and in the farmers' granges the warning has been sounded. In 1905 it was estimated that there were 500,000 tramps in the United States and that their depredations cost the railroads $25,000,000 annually. At that time the Pennsylvania railroad instituted a vigorous campaign against these marauding nomads that swarm over the country every spring, pillaging, terrifying housewives, lighting fires that wreak untold damage, and sometimes committing murder when their right to live as they please at the expense of society is challenged. As a result of this, and the educational campaign, the number of persons killed while trespassing on the railroad's property in violation of the law, has been gradually reduced from 887 in 1905 to 585 in 1910, and the number injured has fallen from 794 to 582 in the same time. To put these figures in another way, in 1905 the railroad was killing trespassers at the rate of three a day for five months of the year, and two a day for the remaining eleven months, while in 1910 the number sacrificed had decreased to two a day for seven months, and one a day for the other five. The number injured is but slightly less.

SECOND RAILWAY TO HUDSON BAY PLANNED.

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 18.—Plans are afoot for a second railway to Hudson bay. J. D. McArthur, the Winnipeg railroad builder, who has been awarded the contract for building the Hudson Bay railroad by the dominion government, has purchased the charter of the Edmonton, Dunvegan & Peace River Railway company, and is arranging for surveys for the new road.

AMONG RAILROAD MEN

General Passenger Agent J. B. Hanson of the Missabe railroad is in the city.

A. M. Fenton, assistant general freight agent of the Omaha road at Minneapolis, formerly of Duluth, is among the Minnesotans witnessing the aviators' contests in Chicago this week.

W. Stapleton of Saskatoon, Sask., district passenger agent for the Canadian Northern, who has been in the city the past two days arranging for the labor trains, will leave for Winnipeg tonight.

J. H. McKinnon, commercial agent for the Canadian Northern at St. Paul, has been in the city for the past two days on business for the company.

SUPERIOR

MUST "SHOW" THE OWNERS

Special Inspector Hired to Watch Paving Work in Superior.

P. McDonnell, the paving contractor now in the spotlight in connection with the so-called Duluth paving scandal, will have to "show" the property owners of Belknap street, Superior. A few weeks ago he was awarded the contract for the paving of that street, but recently the property owners have expressed their dissatisfaction, claiming that he is not living up to the specifications.

At a meeting of the property owners yesterday an inspector was hired to keep close tab on the work and to report to the firm of Hanitch & Hartley, lawyers, who have been retained by the property holders to see that the contractor "lives up" to the specifications.

Today the city engineer of Superior received a communication from the property owners stating that such action had been taken, and asked that the city inspectors be on the alert. The claim was made that McDonnell's men were not mixing the concrete according to specifications.

The Belknap street paving job is one of the largest pieces of work which has been ordered in at Superior for some time past. Several blocks are to be paved with asphalt at a cost of $65,000. There were several bidders for the work, but "Paddy" succeeded in landing it.

DULUTH AND SUPERIOR MILITIA IN SHAM FIGHT.

It has practically been decided that there will be a monster sham battle between Company I of the Wisconsin National Guard and one of the companies of the Duluth militia, Minnesota National Guard, the exhibition to be one of the features of the Douglas county fair next month. There will be but little expense connected with the battle and it is thought that it will be a good drawing card.

SUPERIORITES REVIVE Y. M. C. A. MOVEMENT.

The movement to establish a Y. M. C. A. with a suitable home in Superior, which was started several years ago, but which was dropped, will again be revived this fall. An effort will be made to raise a fund of $100,000 to erect a building and buy a site. A public meeting may be called in the near future to make plans for a campaign to raise funds.

New Crematory.

Health Commissioner McGill was appointed by the board of health last evening to look into the matter of the proposed city crematory and to report back to the board the cost of the improvement and recommend a suitable site. The cost of the crematory has been figured at $25,000 and Twenty-eighth street and Hammond avenue has been suggested as a possible site.

Silver Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Flagstad celebrated their silver wedding anniversary last evening at their home in Billings Park, a host of friends and relatives attending the affair. Mr. Flagstad is a former county clerk and was married twenty-five years ago in Superior. Among the out-of-town people who attended were: Mrs. Alex Paulson of Chicago, Mrs. John Flagstad and daughter of Eau Claire and Martin Carlson of Eau Claire.

THIRTY INJURED IN WRECK ON BIG FOUR.

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 18.—Thirty persons were injured, some of them seriously, today when Big Four train No. 46, one of the fastest in the service, was ditched near the Ohio State Hospital for the insane, just west of Columbus.

The more seriously injured are all Ohio people.

The wrecked train is known as the New York and New England Special, and leaves Cincinnati at 8:30 for New York, being due in Columbus at 11:40 a. m. As the train rounded a curve at the Grand View avenue crossing with the Toledo & Ohio Central tracks, the front trucks of the second coach climbed a switch point and the car was derailed.

NEXT TOURNEY AT MINNEAPOLIS

Minikahda Club Will Entertain Trans-Mississippi Golf Association.

Omaha, Neb., Aug. 18.—At the annual meeting yesterday afternoon of the Trans-Mississippi Golf association, the Minikahda Country club, Minneapolis, was awarded the privilege of entertaining the golfers next year, on invitation of Wendell Hertig, on behalf of that club. The following officers were elected: Frank A. Woodard, Denver, president; R. W. Hodge, Kansas City, vice president; Wendell Hertig, Minneapolis, secretary-treasurer.

Record-breaking golf continued yesterday to feature the play in the trans-Mississippi tournament. Nearly every player in the championship flight was around par and bogey was forgotten.

A big gallery of the day followed Harry Legg, the present title-holder, and Walter Fairbanks, the Denver veteran.

Despite a handicap of two holes in the forenoon card, Fairbanks squared his match at the end of the first turn in the afternoon. They halved the tenth hole, but on the eleventh Fairbanks missed a heavy putt and from that time on began to draw his balls and his opponent was soon dormie 5.

The fifteenth hole was halved and with it went the match to Legg.

EDDIE WALSH HERE.

New York Battler on Trail of Duluth Fighters.

On the very day of the announcement of the governor of this state that there would be no more fighting around this section of the woods, comes little Eddie Walsh of New York, travel-stained but eager for battle.

Eddie came in yesterday with his manager and immediately began hunting trouble in the local lair of the gladiators of the mitt game. Walsh was over at Superior in the afternoon patiently and hopefully trying to coax Curley Ulrich into battle. His efforts were futile, according to the statement of his manager, 9-

Walsh fights at 142 pounds and claims to have fought some of the best boys in the country. But with the governor's letter not yet cold, and the declaration of the sheriff that fighting is through, it does not look as if the boy from New York would have very much chance to get into action.

COMMISSION TO FIX ASSOCIATION'S STATUS.

Chicago, Aug. 18.—President Chivington of the American association stated today that the story from Indianapolis to the effect that the American association will not renew its agreement with the National association of major leagues was mainly a repetition of what had been printed last year.

Mr. Chivington said the American association notified Secretary Farrell that it was not bound by the agreement after Sept. 6, 1911. The American association on Aug. 1, presented a petition to the National commission and the status of the American association after Sept. 6, will be determined by that body.

She was designed by Sir John Thornycroft, to lift the British cup from America. She has two twelve-cylinder motors developing 350-horse power each.

BULGE COMES AT THE CLOSE

Wheat Put Up By Poor Thrashing Yields and Buying By Millers.

Export Business Heavy--Winter Wheat Sold to the Continent.

Duluth Board of Trade, Aug. 18.—Wheat was jerked out of its somnolent condition after noon today when a buying spurt ran shorts to cover and carried values sharply forward. Continued reports of poor thrashing yields in the Northwest, large export business and a strong demand for wheat by millers at the leading cash markets caused the rally.

September wheat advanced 2c and December went up 1⅞c. Cash was 1c over September, durum, rye and barley were unchanged. Oats lost ½c.

Linseed was weaker. September lost 4½c, October and November declined 5c. Cash was $2.40, unchanged. Foreign markets were stronger.

Wheat was steady today. The cereal lacked life and there was no ginger in the market. Thrashing returns from North Dakota were not good and the quality of wheat coming to market is poor. The bulls think the thrashing reports will show up a bigger shortage in the yield of that state than was expected. They did not express their sentiments in the market however and were undecided as to which way to turn.

Winter wheat is on an export basis and the continent bought No. 2 hard today. The United Kingdom did not manifest much eagerness for American wheat, the labor troubles there continuing to disorganize business and restrain grain buyers from making purchases.

Argentine news continued favorable. The increase in acreage in that country is estimated at 5 per cent. Reports from Germany were not favorable. World's shipments show a decrease from last week. The Argentine movement is smaller while Australia shows a big increase.

The milling demand for wheat was fair and flour business is said to have improved. The poor quality of spring wheat that is coming to market is causing a good demand for choice stuff.

Canadian reports continued exceedingly favorable. Harvesting in Manitoba is in full swing and results are satisfactory.

MARKET GOSSIP

Bradstreets' clearances—Wheat, 3,507,000 bu; corn, 298,000 bu.

Broomhall cabled from Liverpool: The Argentine wheat market is steady in sympathy with foreign markets and the demand moderate. Arrivals from the interior are increasing with the quality satisfactory. The corn market is easy with holders realizing. Reports regarding the wheat crop are satisfactory.

The Liverpool wheat market responded to the firmness in American cables and at the opening prices were ¼d to ⅜d higher and during the early morning further advanced ½d to ⅝d with the undertone strong. Unfavorable reports are being received from Germany as result of the drouth and Armour sent bullish reports regarding the damage in the American Northwest, which caused shorts to cover freely. English country markets are strong and 1½d to 3d above and the strike situation is now very serious which has demoralized business at all United Kingdom posts. The whole market is very nervous with buyers cautious and all European offers and otherwise firmly held. The continent continues to absorb all offers freely. At 1:30 p. m. the market was strong ⅜d to ⅞d higher than yesterday.

Corn opened firm ¼d higher in sympathy with America and firmness in wheat. Later October further advanced ⅛d with the undertone firm and trade nervous.

Broomhall cabled from Liverpool; Broomhall estimates the wheat and flour shipments for the week, exclusive of North America at 6,000,000 bu, against 6,040,000 bu last week. Of this total Europe will take about 5,760,000 bu. Arrivals of breadstuffs into the United Kingdom will aggregate about 4,000,000 bu. He predicts that there will be moderate decrease in the quantity of breadstuffs on passage to the United Kingdom. The Indian wheat shipments this week, 552,000 bu; last week, 680,000 bu; last year, 1,658,000 bu. Australian, 976,000 bu against 520,000 bu, against 560,000 bu. CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Opens Strong But Prices Fall When Covering Stops.

Chicago, Aug. 18.—Wheat started higher on strong cables and reports that the continent is taking all wheat offered, but when cautious shorts had ceased covering prices fell off. September wheat opened ⅛@¼c to ⅜@½c over yesterday at 90¼@90½c, and declined to 89⅞c. The volume of business was small.

Prices declined on fine weather and the favorable outlook in Canada, and disappointing cash sales here. September closing ⅛@¼c under at 89⅞c.

A fair shipping demand and uncertainty as to the crop held corn steady. Trade was quiet. September opened a shade up at 65c and sold to 65⅛c.

The close was firm with September a shade up at 65c.

Oats were dull but firm with corn, September opening ⅛@¼c to ¼c over yesterday at 42@42⅛c to 42⅛c.

Provisions were quet but firm on a light run of hogs here and in the West. January pork opened 15c higher at $16.45, but sold off to $16.37½. September lard opened 7½c up at $9.02½, and September ribs 5c higher at $9.12½.

Cotton Market.

New York, Aug. 18.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 4 points to a decline of 2 points. A private crop report making the condition 83 per cent against 90.5 at the end of July was considered moderately bullish, but its influence was offset by the unfavorable English labor situation, the increasing new crop movement, and expectations that detailed weather reports today would show the rains privately reported in Texas yesterday. Some of the leading trade interests seemed to be giving the market support, but there was a good deal of scattered selling, and prices eased off to a net decline of about 5@7 points during the early trading.

Spot closed quiet, 10 points higher; middling uplands, 12.50; middling gulf, 12.75; no sales.

Futures closed steady; closing bids: August, 12.31; September, 11.38; October, 11.33; November, 11.33; December, 11.40; January, 11.35; March, 11.44; May, 11.53; July, 11.54.

London Stocks.

London, Aug. 18.—American securities opened steady and a fraction higher today. Fair buying orders were executed during the first hour and prices continued to advance. At noon the market was steady and from ¼ to 1¼ higher than yesterday's New York closing.

Midway Horse Market.

Minnesota Transfer, St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 18.—Barrett & Zimmerman report: Trade is again quiet, and all classes met with slow clearance. A number of inquiries are being received from horse consumers who expect to be in the market next month. Receipts limited to two carloads. Values continue to tend downward, but dealers claim that the recent rains have helped farmers ou on the feed question, and they are not as willing to sell their horses as ten days ago and values are as low as they will get probably.

STRENGTH IN WALL STREET

Gains at Opening Increase and Advances Hold Well.

Close Is Strong With Active List at Higher Level.

New York, Aug. 18.—Some very striking gains were registered at the opening of the stock market. St. Paul advanced 2½, Northern Pacific 2, Great Northern 1¾, Southern Pacific 1½, Union Pacific 1⅜, with gains of a point or more in Reading, Lehigh Valley, Canadian Pacific, Missouri Pacific, Rock Island preferred and United States Steel.

Opening gains were soon increased, Union Pacific advancing 2½ points over last night. That stock was the barometer of the list because of the reassuring statement issued by the management yesterday. It was noticeable, however, that the activity which accompanied the rise was in scant proportions to that which attended the recent declines. Prices shaded some from the top, due perhaps to profit-taking, but the tone continued strong.

Advances held quite generally during the early session, subject to small short recessions as the short interest manifested a renewal of activity. The Union Pacific statement was undoubtedly a factor in checking the decline. So far as could be seen, however, it was not productive of any considerable amount of investment buying. United States Steel was offered for sale on every fresh outburst of strength, and this fact was associated with the proposed tariff revision in the steel industry. The critical labor situation in England was reflected in some selling from London. The one feature of the bond list was a 2-point decline in American Tobacco 4's. The bond market was generally steady.

The market closed strong. The entire active list moved up to a higher level in the last hour. Especial strength was shown by Union Pacific, Reading, Lehigh Valley, Atchison, United States Steel and in fact all the speculative leaders. The movement was more sustained than any of the day and resulted in numerous net gains of 2 to 3 points.

ALL SETTLERS NOW IN LINE

With only a few more days to wait until the opening of the Fond du Lac lands, the line in the corridors of the Federal building, before the local land office, is becoming more settled than ever before. Heretofore the members of the line have not been at their posts much of the time, having secured some friends, their wives or children to take care of their places.

At a meeting held during the first part of the week, the men and women agreed that every person, in order to keep his place must be in line all the time. This agreement went into effect yesterday, and since then the corridor has been well filled.

The opening will be made on Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock, when 8,884 acres of land will be put on for settlement or filing. There are now fifty-seven men and women in the line, but it is expected that more will be added to the waiting list before the opening day.

AFTER LAW VIOLATORS.

Game Wardens Are Watching for Illegal Hunters.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—With the approach of the duck shooting season, deputy game wardens throughout Minnesota are arresting many poachers and confiscating their guns and ammunition. The lakes and streams are reported by deputies to be swarming with fat, delectable mallards, teals and canvassbacks, and their luring calls have caused the arrest of a score or more of hunters.

In the office of the state game and fish commission this morning seven shotguns, taken from the "sooners," four of which were of the double-barreled variety, one single barreled and two pump guns.

"We probably will be getting more," S. A. Rider, executive agent of the commission, said, "as we're watching closely this season for violators of the law."

KILL AT FIFTEEN MILES.

Next New Naval Gun Will Hurl 2,000-Pound Projectile.

Washington, Aug. 18.—The United States navy is planning a new 16-inch gun which will make the present world-beating 14-inch gun obsolete.

The navy has just finished one of the fourteen-inch guns, but it has heard that some of the nations, Japan especially, are building the same caliber to keep pace with the situation in case the world is awakened from its dream of peace.

The plans for the new gun have been made by Admiral Twining, chief of the bureau of ordnance. The admiral says that the length will be sixty-seven feet. It will carry a shell weighing 2,000 pounds and will be effective at fifteen miles, thus proving that the horizon cannot put a limit to modern naval science.

The fourteen-inch gun fires a shell weighing 1,400 pounds and has a range of eleven miles.

PUTS BAN ON THE CRADLE.

"Don't Rock the Baby," Says Chicago Health Office.

Chicago, Aug. 18.—Do not rock your baby.

This is the latest edict issued by the Chicago health department, and it is to be communicated to mothers by the visiting nurses of the department.

The so-called "self-rocking" cradle is particularly under the ban. This cradle, which is a mechanical apparatus that runs by springs and is wound up like a clock, is said to be a cause of nervous diseases in young children, and, in the opinion of the city's experts, is to be avoided as highly dangerous.

One official of the health department spoke of the clock work cradles as "the devil's own contrivance."

NO. 1 DIES; WIDOW GETS $1,000; NO. 2 STEALS IT.

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 18.—A thoroughly discouraging honeymoon tale was recited at local police headquarters when Mrs. Orville Crowder, bride of a week, told Chief Lindsey that she had just returned from Kansas City minus husband and $1,000 cash, which she turned over to him when they began their wedding trip.

"I don't care about the man, but I want the money back," said Mrs. Crowder, when she told the chief concerning her husband's alleged desertion.

Before her marriage to Crowder Mrs. Crowder was Mrs. Chris Terstead. Her husband was killed when a flywheel let go at the plant of the Ahrens & Ott Manufacturing company. She filed suit for damages, collecting $1,500 on a compromise basis. It was part of this money that was used to finance her second honeymoon.

To the police she described her second husband as being 26 years old, weighing 145 pounds and about 5 feet 6 inches tall, and a "smooth talker." Crowder is a molder.

Advertising serves the double purpose of creating a demand and telling where it may be supplied.

COUNTY ROAD MEN ARE INTERESTED

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—Under the new good roads law passed at the last session of the legislature, county commissioners are taking more interest in the construction and maintenance of roads than heretofore, and are willing to work with the state commission to better the state highways.

This was the assertion of George W. Cooley, state highway engineer, who returned this morning from Litchfield, where he met assistant engineers in a conference.

"It was the best meeting of engineers I ever attended," Mr. Cooley said. "We held six sessions, had one stereoption exhibit and discussed the new road laws. Road and bridge construction, maintenance and superintendence were our chief topics. The meeting acted as a sort of school of instruction. We made no plans for any certain line of work, but discussed them all in general."

Would Borrow Roads.

Frank W. Gilbert, vice-president of the Spokane, Wash., good roads association, has written L. W. Hill, a member of the state highway commission, asking that the model roads exhibit prepared for use at the state fair be loaned to the association for its annual convention. Mr. Hill forwarded the request to Mr. Cooley, who decided this morning he would refuse it because it is needed here. Oregon, Wyoming and Idaho also have asked for the exhibit, and all have been refused.

"LOVE LETTERS" AUTHOR DEAD

Chicago, Aug. 18.—Mrs. Myrtle Reed McCullough, author of "Lavender and Old Lace," "Love Letters of a Musician," "Love Affairs of Literary Men," and many other books, was found dead at her home in Chicago Thursday night and reports to the police indicate that death was caused by an over dose of sleeping powders, taken with suicidal intention.

Mrs. McCullough's body was found by Miss Anna Larsen, her maid, to whom she left a note and a check of $1,000. Mrs. McCullough was 37 years old and was born in Chicago.

Preuss, state insurance commissioner, has gone to Milwaukee to attend the convention of the insurance commissioners of the United States, which will be held there Aug. 22, 23 and 24. Mr. Preuss speaks the morning of the second day on the subject, "Policy Loans."

SAYS UNCLE SAM IS BAD CHARACTER

Manitoba Attorney General Talks About War With States.

Says Cancellation of Reciprocity Would Cause Fight.

Campbell Denounces Laurier's Assertions as Nonsense.

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 19.—Attorney General Hon. C. H. Campbell of Manitoba, Conservative, at a public meeting last night, attended by a great crowd, made perhaps the most interesting statement of the evening in referring to Sir Wilfred Laurier's statement at Simcoe, that the reciprocity pact could be repealed within one year when he said:

"Was ever such nonsense talked by a prime minister? To repeal the pact within a year would cause great affront to the United States and to the people of the United States. It would disturb business of the United States, and the states, on one pretext or another, would pick a quarrel with Canada and force war on us."

Bank Account Challenge.

A. C. Rutherford, late premier of Alberta, this morning issued a challenge to Hon. Frank Oliver to have both their bank accounts submitted to a judge of the supreme court for examination. This challenge is the outcome of a statement by Mr. Oliver that he understood that Mr. Rutherford had a bank account bigger than $69,000, and he suggested that it should be thrown open to the public.

DEPORTATION FOR MOTHER-IN-LAW

Husband Calls Her Trouble-Maker and Wife Agrees With Him.

Philadelphia, Aug. 19.—Among the passengers who sailed from here today for Liverpool on the steamer Merion was a mother-in-law who had been "turned down" by her son-in-law, and was being deported by the government because she was likely to become a public charge. The mother-in-law is an English woman and her son-in-law is a resident here.

When the woman arrived here last Monday on the Merion to make her home with her daughter, the son-in-law protested to the immigration authorities against her being landed. In his formal protest he declared the mother-in-law, who had visited him before, to be a perpetual trouble-maker, objectionable in many ways, and that it was impossible for him to live under the same roof with her. His wife joined him in the formal objection to her mother.

The mother-in-law being well up in years, and the son-in-law refusing to receive her, there was nothing left for the immigration officials to do but deport her.

NEW RECORD FOR HEIGHT

Oscar A. Brindley Rises 11,726 Feet in His Aeroplane.

Ward Nearly Furnishes Another Fatality at Chicago Meet.

Chicago, Aug. 19.—Oscar A. Brindley, soaring higher from the ground than any aeroplane ever before had been, yesterday set a new world's record at 11,726 feet. Phillip O. Parmalee followed him in the air, passing the former American record and reaching 10,863 feet before he was forced to descend.

The baragraphs were corrected by Capt. Clarence Culver of the Fifth United States cavalry and certified by the execute committee of the international meet as correct.

While Brindley, Howard Hill, Parmalee and Beachey were high among the clouds, finding safety in their altitude flights, James Ward and Earle Ovington, flying at comparatively low levels, both had narrow escapes from death. The propeller of Ward's machine broke into a hundred pieces as he flew before the grandstand. Pieces of wood penetrated and tore the canvas planes, but the aviator held tight

Joyful Demonstrations Accompany Action at Lisbon.

Lisbon, Aug. 19.—The national assembly completed and signed the Constitution of the Republic of Portugal at 1:35 o'clock this morning. Great crowds surrounded the building where the assembly met, and waited for hours for the expected announcement. When this was received there were joyful demonstrations.

PUBLICITY BILL BECOMES LAW

President Signs Act Aimed at Political Corruption.

Washington, Aug. 19.—President Taft today signed the campaign publicity bill.

The bill requires publicity of all campaign funds before election and extends the publicity features to primary campaigns and nominating conventions. It limits the amount candidates may spend to $5,000 for congressional candidates and $10,000 for senatorial aspirants. Candidates are also required to make public all pledges of political appointments. The bill of course applies only to congressional elections.

ABANDONED WHALING BARK IS IN DANGER.

Cuttyhunk, Mass., Aug. 19.—The whaling bark Bertha, which was abandoned by her crew after running on Sow and Pigs ledge, six miles off this island last night, was being swept by heavy seas at dawn today, and appeared to be in danger of breaking up.

The Bertha was returning to New Bedford with 700 barrels of oil, a part of which belong to another vessel, when she grounded on the sunken ledge. Her crew left her.

TOGO READY TO GO TO NIAGARA

Boston, Mass., Aug. 19.—With nearly restored health, Admiral Count Togo, who is touring the United States, arose early today and expressed the belief that he was well able to start for Niagara Falls this afternoon.

Shortly after breakfast, Admiral Togo received a call from Capt. Coffman, commandant of the Charlestown Navy Yard, at his hotel. Immediately afterward Admiral Togo called on Lieutenant Governor Frothingham at the state house, and on Mayor Fitzgerald at the city hall.

The principal issue of the grand aerie will be that of state autonomy, carrying with it opposition of the election of Frank E. Herin of South Bend as president.

FORMER HOUSE OF POET TO BE MOVED ACROSS CONTINENT

Former Home of Joaquin Miller, (Poet of the Sierras) Washington, D. C.

HOUSE AT WASHINGTON, D. C., FORMERLY OCCUPIED BY JOAQUIN MILLER.

Joaquin Miller's former home at Washington, D. C., is to be moved to Oakland, Cal., the present home of the "Poet of the Sierras." The greater part of the wood included in the cottage was originally brought from Oakland, and the stone is the same that was used in building the Washington monument. It is through the efforts of Congressman Knowland of California that the arrangements for the removal of the Miller cottage have been made.

JOSEPH R. KNOWLAND, Representative From California.

COTTON BILL IN HOUSE MONDAY

Senate Amendments Will Be Presented Unchanged.

Washington, Aug. 19.—The house ways and means committee today decided, by strict party vote, to report favorably the cotton tariff revision bill as amended and passed in the senate, and to call it up for passage Monday.

Members of the committee predicted adjournment of congress by Tuesday night.

SOTHERN AND MARLOWE WED

Co-Stars Unite Fortunes During Engagement in London.

New York, Aug. 19.—Announcement is made at the offices of Sam S. and Lee Shubert that they have received a cablegram from E. H. Sothern, the actor, telling of his marriage in London Thursday with Julia Marlowe, his co-star. It was the bride's birthday.

Mr. Sothern and Miss Marlowe closed their engagement in a Broadway theater on July 4 last, two weeks before the engagement was to have terminated, and it was then rumored that they intended to marry. The rumor, however, was denied. They sailed for Europe July 15.

Virginia Harned obtained a divorce from Sothern at Reno last October on the ground of desertion. Miss Marlowe has also had one previous matrimonial experience. In 1894 she married her leading man, Robert Tabor, but obtained a divorce from him in January, 1900.

FISHERMAN DIVES AND GETS "MUSKIE"

Recaptures 22-Pound Fish in Tomahawk Lake.

Rhinelander, Wis., Aug. 19.—D. Satcher of St. Charles, Minn., who is spending his vacation at Tomahawk Lake, caught a twenty-two-pound muskellunge in an original manner. He had hooked the big fish and being unable to haul it into the boat, shot at it. The bullet cut the line in two. Not desiring to lose the giant fish, Satcher dove into the water, secured the end of the line, and dragged the "muskie" to shore in spite of its struggles.

TO ADJOURN ON TUESDAY

Virtual Agreement Reached By the Leaders in Congress.

Mann Says Session May Last Two Weeks Longer.

Washington, Aug. 19.—[illegible] journment of the extra session of [illegible] gress at 5 p. m. Tuesday was virtually agreed upon at a conference today between Vice President Sherman, [illegible]nator Penrose and Democratic Leader Underwood of the house.

The conference resulted in Mr. Penrose's decision to introduce a resolution providing for adjournment that day, Mr. Underwood agreeing to make every effort to complete the legislative program of the Democratic house Monday. This action closely followed a formal announcement on the floor of the house by Mr. Underwood that, while he could make no promise in advance, he saw no reason why adjournment should not be had by Tuesday or Wednesday.

Mr. Underwood was the storm center of questions from both Democrats and Republicans regarding the legislative windup plans. During the discussion Representative Lenroot of Wisconsin, progressive Republican, announced that the cotton bill, as amended by the senate, would receive no support from the progressive Republicans.

Mann Is Doubtful.

Republican Leader Mann pressed Mr. Underwood for a positive assurance as to what he proposed to do when the president vetoed the cotton bill.

Mr. Mann declared that if the session continued until Tuesday he would not look for adjournment for two weeks. He said it was necessary to know whether to keep the Republican members in town. Mr. Underwood candidly advised him to hold his forces. Mr. Underwood indicated that he did not wish to say in advance whether an attempt would be made to pass the bill over the veto.

Mr. Garner of Texas, Democrat, insisted that the house should pass the new statehood resolution and the cotton bill and adjourn at 11 o'clock tonight.

Mr. Underwood replied that there was no occasion for unduly rushing important business, but that it was improbable that there would be any attempt to over-ride the veto.

Made no Promises.

Mr. Underwood was careful to avoid committing himself not to take advantage of any opportunity that might be created, at a crucial moment by Republican absentees.

Republican Leader Mann introduced a joint resolution directing the vice president and speaker of the house to adjourn congress at 10 o'clock tonight, but this was tabled on motion of Representative Shackleford of Missouri by 106 to 66.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug 19.—Asking for a lunacy commission for Harry Kendall Thaw, now confined in the Matteawan hospital, New York, a petition has been filed in the common pleas court here in behalf of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, his wife. Judge Davis admitted the petition. Attorney Francis Rawls of Philadelphia stated that Thaw's income is $60,000 a year, and Mrs. Thaw, being without means, is entitled to a share of this amount.

HOPE TO END RAIL STRIKE IN FEW DAYS

British Authorities Are Working to Bring About Peace.

Train Service Is Not Completely Stopped By the Walkout.

Workers in Other Lines Hostile to Railroad Men's Course.

London, Aug. 19.—The strike declared by the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants and three allied societies was attended with comparatively little rioting today, though the afternoon brought reports of bloodshed at Llanelly, Wales, where troops fired upon a mob, killing two and wounding a third.

Shortly before this news was received here the home office issued an optimistic bulletin on the strike situation.

The chief railway companies of England are living up to their promises to maintain restricted train services under the protection of soldiers and the police. Trains were running this morning on all lines although in greatly reduced numbers.

A fair percentage of the men remained loyal while a large number of applications were made for work by outsiders. Even some of the union men continued at their duties being reluctant to strike while negotiations for a settlement were proceeding. A few local unions adopted resolutions not to strike until some decision had been arrived at between the government leaders and the railway managers.

COAL MAGNATE IN HIS HEN-COOP

Hoosier Has Rich Man Arrested as Chicken Thief.

Evansville, Ind., Aug. 19.—Frank Guenther, vice president of the Banner Coal company here, a well-to-do citizen, has been arrested on the charge of stealing chickens. He was released on bail.

Guenther is 56 years old, has a wife and several children, and has always borne a splendid reputation. He collapsed when taken to the police station.

Several nights ago Jack Pogue, who lives next door to Guenther, claims he caught Guenther in his chicken house. He says Guenther offered him a large sum of money if he would not give him away.

The police searched Guenther's premises and found 400 prize hens in his back yard. During the past week between $5,000 and $10,000 worth of chickens have been stolen in Evansville.

UNION'S BAN ON CHOP SUEY

Printers Say Members Should Not Patronize Chinese.

International Body Closes Meeting at San Francisco.

San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 19.—Delegates to the International Typographical union, in convention in this city since Aug. 14, completed their labors today, finding but little work before them when the last session was called to order. All important matters were disposed of yesterday when the delegates gave emphatic evidence of their confidence in the administration. "Insurgents" lost on every occasion where they attempted to obtain condemnation of the decisions of President Lynch.

The convention today indorsed the proposed arbitration act reported by the executive council and to be submitted to the American publishers for signing on Jan. 1, 1912. The proposed agreement, which is for five years, is intended to replace the present agreement, which will expire in May 1912.

Many delegates will leave tonight for Los Angeles, where a two-day program of entertainment has been arranged by the Los Angeles local.

Ban on Chop Suey.

The convention passed a resolution expressing as the sense of the convention that all members of the union should refuse to patronize Chinese laundries, restaurants and other establishments. Local unions are authorized to assess fines for violations. The resolution was introduced by Delegate G. M. Sheldon of Lowell, Mass.

It was voted unanimously to cancel the $5,000 note from the Hatters' union held by the Typographical union, and

West End Youth Still Languishing in the Windy City Jail.

Locked up securely behind the bars of a Chicago police station, Conrad Knutsen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Knutsen, 318 North Twenty-seventh avenue west, and a member of the local Naval Reserves, was forced to miss the boat when it left Chicago last week, and not having money enough to pay his fine he is still languishing behind prison bars.

Knutsen is said to be only 16 years of age, though he must have appeared older and have given his age as greater than this to secure an enrollment in the reserves. Members of the crew say he appeared to be at least 19 years of age.

In Chicago he got shore leave and started to take in the sights of the town. On South Clark street he encountered a negro "spieler" in a moving picture show, and the two got into a lively altercation which ended in the negro hurling Knutsen through a window. The pair were arrested charged with disorderly conduct and immediately haled before a judge who sentenced Knutsen to pay a fine of $15 and costs, amounting in all to $22.50, or to spend a few summer days in the jail.

Knutsen did not have enough money with him to pay his fine, and the good ship Gopher sailed away and left him locked up without funds or friends. His parents received a letter from him yesterday asking for funds to secure his release.

His friends expressed much indignation at the idea of the officers' leaving the lad without any funds or means of getting home when his release is secured and say they may take the matter up with the governor.

CRITICISMS OF DULUTH

One of the Early Residents Finds Some Fault With City.

Too Many Non Producers and Too Much Extravagance Here.

Edward C. Baumann, who was particularly prominent in Duluth's public life during the early 90's managing Henry Truelsen's first campaign on an independent ticket, and being in charge of the Duluth Gas & Water company for a number of years, has been spending the last few weeks in the city and will return tomorrow to his present home in Springfield, Mo.

Mr. Baumann is pleased with the progress Duluth has made since he left here, but he has some criticisms to offer.

"Duluth has become the 'city beautiful,' with clean, well paved streets, fine parks and grand driveways," he said this morning. "Its appearance to the newcomer is metropolitan far in excess of what, from its size, might be expected. The growth is not up to its importance, however, because of the failure of its people to develop and settle its surrounding agricultural country. Agriculture is the basis of all wealth, it being everlasting, while mines and timber become exhausted. The soil remains and keeps on producing wealth if properly utilized.

"I find here a depression in business more serious than in any city that I have visited recently. I believe its cause lies in the fact that you have too many drones, too many people not actually engaged in business, not producing anything, but living on their wits, buying copper stock and selling it on a rising market when times are good, and living off the legitimate business men when times are poor, weakening them. They are a serious economic loss to the community.

"Further, you in Duluth are too wasteful, and live beyond your means. You squander vast sums in high living that should be employed along industrial lines and in the settlement and development of the surrounding country. You send out annually a great deal of money for country produce that could be raised at home of better quality."

DULUTH MAN GETS FIVE-YEAR TERM

Waterloo, Iowa, Aug. 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—Tom McCoy, a horse thief was captured Saturday afternoon at Gladbrook after he had stolen a horse and buggy from G. A. Barron, Thursday afternoon, waived a trial and pleaded guilty before Judge Franklin C. Platt in district court yesterday. An indeterminate sentence of five years, the minimum allowed under the Iowa law for larceny, was imposed upon him. McCoy is 37 years of age, and gives his home and birthplace as Duluth, Minn.

The police state that a number of years ago there were two McCoy brothers in the city, both of whom had police records, having been arrested several times for various offenses. They think it probable that Tom McCoy, mentioned in the above dispatch, is one of them, but as no description is available, they cannot be certain.

VISITS ARIZONA MASCOT.

F. M. Murphy Visits Property and Is Impressed With Showing.

It is reported from Crown King, Arizona, that F. M. Murphy, the railroad magnate and mining man of Prescott, Ariz., accompanied by his consulting engineer, came up in his private car last week for the purpose of looking after his private interests in the Crown King district, and incidentally, to make a trip to the Arizone Mascot. He seemed to be very surprised and delighted over the progress of the work at the Mascot and in an interview in one of the Prescott papers, which Mr. Murphy gave on his return home, he speaks very highly of the Arizona Mascot and predicts a great future for this mine.

Mr. Murphy having been away from Prescott for a long time, and this being his first visit to the Bradshaw mountains for months, was very much impressed with the great changes that had taken place since last he was up there; especially was he impressed with the big force of men at work in getting the ground at the Arizona Mascot ready for the big cyanide mill that is being built there this summer and fall.

C. A. Graves of the Duluth Testing Laboratory received a case of samples from the Arizona Mascot this week. These samples were picked and shipped to him by Dr. James Flemming of Cloquet and was sent here to be assayed. There were nine samples in all, representing all parts of the mine, and it is understood that the values averaged unusually high.

SCOTTISH PEARLS.

London Globe: A number of people in Scotland make a livelihood by searching for the precious stones which are occasionally to be found ensconced in the interior of fresh water mussels. To a lesser extent it is also carried out on some English and Welsh streams, but none of these is so prolific in pearl bearing as the northern rivers.

There are authentic records of Scottish pearls being found which rivaled any the Orient has produced so far as translucency and flawlessness are concerned. A writer of the eighteenth century states that £20,000 was a moderate estimate of the value of pearls then fished annually from Scottish rivers; while it is a matter of history that a German who formed a syndicate of fishers in 1865 acquired stones to the value of £12,000 in that year alone. But the industry is not so remunerative nowadays.

Lighting Talks

NUMBER 52 DULUTH, AUGUST 19, 1911

Concerning Capitalization

Some time ago somebody who did not know what he was talking about told somebody else that the electric lighting system, or in common parlance "the plant," owned and operated by the Duluth-Edison Electric Company could be "duplicated" for $685,000.

This being believed by certain credulous but misinformed people, these same people were ready to believe and to promulgate the rumor that this company is "grossly overcapitalized." No doubt some of them really thought they were doing the community a service by spreading that rumor.

That rumor is false, and it is to the interest of the community as well as of this company to have its falsity exposed. THIS COMPANY IS NOT OVERCAPITALIZED. We have nothing to hide about our capitalization, or the cost of our plant, or any part of our business. We want everybody in Duluth to know the truth.

Duluth is a growing city, and this company has helped and encouraged its growth by providing electric lighting service in every part and section of the City. That cannot be done without large expenditures of money. Our construction account alone from 1901 to the present time amounts to $804,385.29.

That means that in the last ten years this company has actually spent FOR NEW CONSTRUCTION AND EQUIPMENT ALONE the sum of $804,385.29; and this takes no account of the construction charges of the first 17 years this business was in existence, before 1901.

The present actual working capitalization of this company, including all outstanding bonds and all stock on which dividends are pand, totals $2,324,000.

But in addition to this, a large part of this company's earnings have been used for construction and the purchase of new equipment, so that the total cost of our plant (to June 1, 1911) has been $2,907,863.41.

Now while the prices of electrical machinery and of copper wire are much lower today than a few years ago, it is an incontrovertible fact that if the City had been building this plant when we built it the City could not have bought any of those necessary things any cheaper than we did. We know that it would have cost the City more than it has cost us to build this plant.

Do YOU think that this company's plant could be "duplicated" for $685,000? Such talk is arrant nonsense.

ALICE BONDS ARE HELD UP

Federal Court Injunction Prevents Range Village From Making Issue.

George L. Burrows of Michigan, Secures a Restraining Order.

Alleging that a few residents in the village of Alice are attempting a high-handed scheme to get something for nothing, George L. Burrows, through his attorneys, Washburn, Bailey & Mitchell, yesterday filed a petition in the United States court asking that the officers of the village be restrained from issuing bonds for $150,000 for the construction of a water and light plant and for the installation of water and sewer systems. The injunction was served on the officers of the village last evening ordering them not to proceed with the installation of the plans.

The petition sets forth that there are less than ninety-three legal residents of the village, although the population is in the neighborhood of 500. Most of the inhabitants are men who shift from place to place, he states, and the shacks they live in are of a temporary character.

Alice is a little village south of Hibbing, with limits adjoining. Burrows claims that those people living in the northern part of the "so-called village of Alice," do all their trading in Hibbing and are dependent upon Hibbing and that the incorporation of Alice was unnecessary.

The village of Alice was incorporated, the petition sets forth, as a result of an election held in April, 1910, at which twenty-six votes were cast. The incorporation, Burrows avers, was a scheme to secure the improvements in three forties, two miles south of Hibbing, which were platted some time ago at the expense of all the other territory which has not been platted, but which is valued much higher on the assessment books, as upon that part of the land is the Scranton mine.

The officers of the village are Solomon Barnett, president; Oscar Widstrand, clerk; Jerry Archambault, treasurer; G. W. Mewhinney, W. Wegeler and Chirles Faulk, trustees, and they are made the principals in the petition. At a recent meeting these men decided that bonds should be issued for the water and light plant and the two system and put the matter to a vote. Fifty-two voted for them and four against.

The valuation of the three forties which have been platted is given at $28,000, while the rest of the property is valued at $1,500,000. The issuance of the bonds, Burrows claims, would mean that 98 per cent of the cost of the improvements proposed would have to be borne by the property which would not be benefitted.

NEW RAILROAD FROM THE NORTH MAKES PROGRESS THROUGH CITY

Construction work on the new line of the Duluth, Winnipeg & Pacific through West Duluth is progressing. Most of the trestle work has been put in and it is expected that within six weeks the steel for the overhead street crossings will be put in.

The contract for the steel bridge work has been let to the Wisconsin Bridge & Iron company. This contract applies to the division south of Virginia. Several bridges have already been completed and the contractors are now engaged in placing the steel at the Spirit Lake crossing with the D. M. & N. railway at Milepost 10.

In West Duluth there will be a number of street crossings over which there will be built steel bridges. The first one will be erected over Fifty-ninth, avenue west and others will be placed at Fifty-eighth, Fifty-seventh Fifty-sixth, Central and Fifty-second avenues west.

The Central avenue crossing will be 180 feet long and will intersect both Central and Grand avenues. At Central avenue as well as all of the other intersecting streets, the concrete piers to support the steel work have been laid and everything is ready for the steel contractors.

The permanent wooden trestle work extends from Fifty-ninth avenue to Forty-eighth avenue and from Forty-eighth to Forty-sixth, the structure which has been put up is only temporary and a train fill will be made.

It is expected that the work on the bridge at Oneota street and Forty-ninth avenue west will be started within a short time, as the material is already on the ground. This bridge will be constructed of steel and will be 400 feet long. It is being constructed for the city by the railroad.

LUNDSTEN'S BODY IS RECOVERED

West Duluth Man Drowned in the White Iron Lake.

The body of Alex Lundsten, aged 28, who was drowned Sunday afternoon at White Iron lake, seven miles north of Ely, will be brought to West Duluth this evening.

Lundsten lived at 316 North Sixty-first avenue west where he is survived by a widow.

The body will be taken after its arrival here, to the undertaking establishment of M. J. Flliatrault, 5415 Ramsey street, where the funeral will be held at 2:30 o'clock Monday afternoon, Rev. Gustaf Oberg will officiate and burial will be in Oneota cemetery.

Lundsten worked as cook in a camp at the outlet of the lake. He was returning from Ely Sunday afternoon and in crossing the lake, his boat overturned. The boat was discovered float ing upside down the next morning, but the body was not recovered until yesterday, when Clarence Graham, an assistant to M. J. Flliatrault dragged for the body.

Besides his wife, Lundsten is survived by no other relatives living in the city. Conrad Johnson of 214 Devonshire street is a brother-in-law.

In the district below the Minnesota river and west of Mankato, Mr. Towner says that the grain crop is a failure on account of the excessive heat and the drouth of the early summer. In the northern and eastern districts, however, the crops are much better.

BIGGER GUN FOR CROOKSTON CAMPUS.

Washington, Aug. 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—Representative Steenerson today called at navy department and obtained consent for the loan of a 6-inch cannon, to be shipped from the Norfolk navy yard to Crookston, for ornamental uses upon the campus of the agricultural college. A 3-inch cannon was first assigned to the college, but this was not satisfactory, the college authorities desiring a "bigger" gun, and now Mr. Steenerson gets permission for the loan of the larger cannon.

ATWOOD SPENDS DAY IN IDLENESS.

Erie, Pa., Aug. 19.—Harry N. Atwood, near Fairview, made a trial flight today and came down again. He says the air is bad and he will not attempt to start for Erie before 3 or 4 o'clock this afternoon, and perhaps not today at all.

What he called one jump, brought Atwood from Cleveland, Ohio, to Swanville yesterday afternoon and landed him eighty-four miles nearer his destination in his picturesque aeroplane flight from St. Louis to New York. Atwood was to have come on to Erie, but a lack of gasoline forced him to land eleven miles west of Erie. He glided safely into a corn field in the twilight. His biplane spent the night moored beneath the trees on the lake shore.

WALHALLA IRON & STEEL CO.

No. 225 Manhattan Building,
DULUTH, MINNESOTA.

Incorporated in Minnesota. | Capital Stock, $500,000. | Shares, $1.00, Par Value.

THE GENERAL PUBLIC recently was startled by an announcement in the Duluth papers that A NEW IRON RANGE had been discovered in Northern Minnesota.

The new iron field is located in a region traversed by the Whiteface and Paleface Rivers, St. Louis County, Minnesota, 12 or 15 miles south of the Mesaba iron range, and about 45 miles north of Duluth.

To a small group of wide-awake men, veritable "live wires" in business and financial circles, the recently reported discovery of A VIRGIN IRON FIELD was no surprise. THEY KNEW ABOUT IT MANY MONTHS AGO. For months past, they have been acquiring likely holdings. Today, the cream of the new iron field is tightly held. One Duluth company already has started exploration work. A PROSPECTING SHAFT IS DOWN OVER 50 FEET and unverified reports state that material is being hoisted of a character amply warranting high excitement.

Much of this region is smooth and level. The glacial drift is heavy. Outcrops of rocks in place are not frequent. The "dip needle" is used in prospecting. The belt is identical with the Cuyuna iron range rather than the Mesaba iron range.

Very early in the quiet rush for lands on the new range, Duluth men of reputation, financial responsibility and business foresight gained control of over 5,000 ACRES OF THE VERY CHOICEST MINERAL HOLDINGS IN TOWNSHIPS 54-17, 55-17, 54-18, 55-18 AND 56-18.

Then the Walhalla Iron & Steel Company was organized to own these lands and to explore them for iron. The lands have been deeded to the said company. There are no options or leases. The titles are perfect, without any conditions whatever, and stand in the Company's own name.

THE ORIGINAL OWNERS PRIZED THEIR RESPECTIVE PROPERTIES SO HIGHLY THAT THEY INSISTED ON TAKING STOCK IN THE WALHALLA IRON & STEEL COMPANY IN PAYMENT, RATHER THAN CASH.

Experts now are closely looking over the holdings of the Walhalla Iron & Steel Company, for the purpose of more accurately learning the merits of each parcel, and to select the most favorable places for doing the first exploration work. This exploration work will be done by drills and test-pits.

The Walhalla Iron & Steel Company also is investigating choice holdings on the older Minnesota iron ranges and, if satisfied as to merits and other conditions, will acquire such properties that seem to be sure things. THE COMPANY IS FIRMLY DETERMINED TO OPEN UP PERMANENT, PRODUCING, PAYING IRON MINES. TIME, ENERGY, SKILL AND CASH WILL BE USED FREELY TO THAT END.

TO PROVIDE further funds for carying out the plans and purposes of the undersigned company, a block of Fifty Thousand (50,000) shares of capital stock of said company, hereby is offered for subscription at par, $1.00 per share. Said shares when issued shall bear no personal liability, be fully paid and non-assessable. Further information, if desired, will be cheerfully given.. Call on or address—

FIGHTING FOR ROOMS

Duluth Hotels Unable to Accommodate Crowds of Tourists.

Every Local Hostelry Filled and Waiting Lists Are Established.

Hotel rooms were at a premium today, and nearly every one of the larger hotels had a waiting list. Tourists flooded the town today, hundreds of them coming in by boats and several more hundreds dropping in on the trains.

Up to a late hour this afternoon the Spalding was short just sixty rooms, while the clerks of the Holland were wishing for eighteen more beds, and the St. Louis management was at a loss to know how to accommodate all who wanted space.

The Lenox was filled to the garret and the McKay was almost swamped. It was a big day for the hotel proprietors, and the visiting hotel men from the Dakotas looked on with almost envy to see the way people clamored over each other to get to the desks to sign themselves up for rooms.

All summer the hotels have been filled, and all the managers report that it has been the best season ever enjoyed at Duluth. It merely shows the growing importance of the Zenith City as a summer resort, for hundreds are spending their vacations here, while other thousands pass through the city on their way East or West.

WEATHER MARKET IN COAL TRADE

Retailers Are Buying Only When Need for Fuel Arises.

The Black Diamond, the official organ of the coal industry, in its issue of today says:

"The coal operators of the nation are in a quandary. They are trying, without success, to get a line on the mental processes of the retail dealers. The latter, about two weeks ago, began a belated movement to buy storage coal against fall and winter needs. Now the retailers have stopped buying because the weather has turned warm. The puzzling point with the operators is what influence the weather in August has upon the need for coal in winter? Was the recent buying in anticipation of immediate needs or was it merely precautionary? The action of the retailers in shutting off buying seems to indicate that they hoped that furnace fires were going to be started instantly.

"The result is just a little annoying to the coal producers. Certainly it is highly indicative of what the demand this fall and winter is going to be. It begins to appear now that the retailers and others having been disappointed on two or three previous occasions are going to pursue a hand-to-mouth policy. They are going to buy coal only when they have immediate and imperative need for it. That means a weather market, pure and simple, throughout the remainder of the coal year. If this is followed to its logical conclusion, we will have a strong rising market with every downward turn of the temperature and a soft spotty market with every rise of the thermometer. With such market propensities to contend with it seems the part of wisdom for the operators to keep the supply of coal so elastic that they can, upon a moment's notice, expand or contract production.

"One thing that is perfectly apparent is that the domestic demand went up sharply and then fell off quite as abruptly. It went up during the period of cool weather and the commentators gave as the reason for it that a cold July predicted a cold winter. Then when the thermometer rose again the demand fell off, and the retailers said that maybe they were mistaken as to what the winter was going to be."

MILL CITY DRUMMER JUMPS TO HIS DEATH.

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 19. — Paul Darst, aged 44, a Minneapolis traveling man, jumped from the window of his room on the second floor of a local hospital today and was instantly killed. It is said he was temporarily insane.

HOTEL MEN ON JUNKET

Visitors to Duluth Given a Royal Reception By Local Bonifaces.

Enjoy Trip About Harbor and Visit to the Theater.

Say the visiting hotel men are having the time of their lives!

Today they are the guests of the Duluth Hotel Men's association, and the fact that they were a day late in arriving here, is being made up for today.

They are a jolly, genial and goodly bunch. Some of the bonifaces are accompanied by their wives, and the ladies in the party are enjoying the trip just as much as the men. This morning the hotel men and the women of the party were taken up to the entrance of the St. Louis river, then back to the harbor and around the horn in the steamer Plowboy. The trip was one ideally calculated to show the visitors the great natural harbor at the Head of the Lakes and to suggest the immensity of the commerce.

The visiting hotel men were taken to the St. Louis for lunch, where covers were laid for over fifty guests. This afternoon there will be an automobile ride around the city, the members of the party going to the Hotel Holland for dinner. The evening program will be taken up with theater parties and other forms of entertainment that are being planned at the present time by the hotel men.

Some of the visitors will leave on the late train this evening, and some will remain over. The very fact that so large a delegation remained over today, after the delay that held the party for a delay of over twelve hours, is due to the boosting ability and personal influence of the Duluth hotel men, who pointed out that Duluth was the one best city in the West, that it had ideal spots of beauty, and that when it came to entertaining visitors, there was no city in this part of the country that had anything on the town located at the majestic head of Lake Superior.

Sport on Steamer.

There was some great sport on the steamer this morning. Edwin H. Lee, managing director of the Hotel Spalding, was one of the first to be put through the initiation exercises. Some hotel man with firm hand and steady purpose tied a hankerchief over the face of the Duluth hotel man. A rope was then tied around his body and he was told that he was to be compelled to walk off the deck of the boat.

Slowly they led the victim along the deck, telling him to be careful and step clear of the sides of the boat. With nervous and hesitating step the Duluth boniface proceeded, until he ran up against the deck railing, when the bandage was removed.

Harry Pocock of the Hotel Ryan of St. Paul, large and imposing, was placed in the temporary guardhouse for the simple reason that he became too strenuous for the rest of the gang assembled on the forward deck. It required reinforcements to get the St. Paul man through the door, but he was finally shoved through.

Col. William Anderson, who has been with the Rome hotel of Omaha for years, is one of the distinguished members of the visiting delegation. The colonel is one of the Beau Brummels of the hotel business. He could qualify for the part without change of costume at any time. He has been one of the interested delegates, and is having the time of his life. He is a great booster for Omaha, for these hotel men are some of the best boosters that have ever come to this part of the country.

Irwin A. Medlar of the Mid West Hotel Reporter of Omaha, a publication devoted to the interests of the hotel trade, is with the visitors. Mr. Medlar runs a live and up-to-date publication, and he came on the present time for the purpose of giving a first-hand account of the proceedings.

It might be said that the trip of the visitors to this city is going to be productive of a lot of enthusiastic boosting for Duluth. Again, if the convention in 1913 comes to Minnesota, it is very likely that Duluth will land it.

Minnesota had the convention last year, it being held in Minneapolis. North Dakota had the convention just over, and for that reason Iowa was in line. Davenport was in the field, but Sioux City took it away from that town and also away from Des Moines.

Now when it comes the turn of Minnesota to hold the annual meeting of the hotel men, the delegates to the present convention are going to have a very warm place in their hearts for Duluth, because Duluth is today doing her best to make the men feel at home, and also to show them that this city is amply qualified to entertain visitors in the best manner possible.

LAUNDRYMEN IN DULUTH

Members of National Association En Route to Minneapolis for Convention.

Stand for Cleanliness for Patrons and for the Laundries.

Guests and Duluthians who sauntered through the Spalding lobby today were subjected to a searching scrutiny. The collar that bore signs of doing a second day's service without a fresh application of starch or the shirt that carried a spot as small as the head of a pin, was looked upon disdainfully and with fine contempt by many who scrutinized.

The laundrymen are in town—not the laundrymen who are here every day, but laundrymen from many cities. About fifty of them arrived this morning on the steamer Hamonic, and they are leaving on different trains today for Minneapolis, where the annual convention of the National Laundrymen's association will be held next week.

"Cleanliness" is their slogan and they want it distinctly understood that the slogan is not for their patrons alone. They stand for cleanliness for themselves—in person and in business. They stand for the spotless laundry and the spotless linen. A laundry as clean as the clothes it returns to their patrons, in other words.

The National Laundrymens' association is campaigning for the uplift of the laundry business. The business has grown to great proportions and is slowly but surely relegating the home washtub to the scrap heap. As a business, it must keep up with the times and modern machinery, modern buildings and fair treatment of employes are in the new order of things.

DR. WILEY IS EXPECTED

Winkjer Thinks Secretary Wilson Will Also Be in Duluth.

Governor and Minnesota Delegates Are Coming in Special Car.

J. G. Winkjer, the Minnesota dairy and food commissioner, said at St. Paul this morning that he had received no word from either Secretary Wilson or the department of agriculture or Dr. Wiley, the government food expert, but he expected that both would be here for the convention of the National Association of State and National Food and Dairy Departments next week.

Minnesota delegates to the convention will come to Duluth in a special car, attached to a regular train, leaving St. Paul Sunday evening.

Among those who will travel in the special car are Governor Eberhart, Commissioner Winkjer, W. F. Houk, state labor commissioner; W. J. Smith, state treasurer; M. J. Moriarity and E. B. Helberg, inspectors from the state dairy and food department; Julius Hartvet, chemist from the dairy and food department; John Gardner, assistant state labor commissioner; Dr. H. M. Bracken, secretary of the state board of health.

Many of the delegates to the convention are expected to arrive in Duluth tomorrow. The convention will open Monday morning, when Governor Eberhart and Mayor Culhum will deliver addresses of welcome and one of the visiting delegates will respond. The convention will continue for four days and will be addressed by pure food officials from almost every state in the Union.

RAILROADS

LOW RATES FOR STATE FAIR

Northern Pacific Announces Rate of One and One-Half Cents.

The Northern Pacific railroad has announced that for the state fair, which will be held at Midway, beginning on Labor day, the round trip fare will be $4.50. This makes a rate of 1½ cents per mile, and is better than that offered when the 2-cent rate was in full force.

The road also announces that here after party rates will be in force, whereby parties of ten or more may secure tickets for St. Paul and Minneapolis for $3.75 each, and parties of twenty or more may secure transportation to the Twin Cities for $3.

Rates for parties of twenty or more are also made to Stillwater, the price per ticket being $3.10.

CANADIAN TOWNS FEAR DULUTH

Fort William and Port Arthur People Are Opposed to Reciprocity.

W. D. Burr, district freight and passenger agent for the Omaha returned this afternoon, on the steamer Hamonic from Fort William and Port Arthur, where he has been on a business trip for several days. He also visited the range on his way up.

He reports that the two Canadian lake ports are strongly against reciprocity, and that every effort is being made by people of these towns to down the agreement between the two nations, for they claim that it will mean the loss of much business which will come to Duluth.

While there he reports that trainloads of working men were being shipped from Eastern Canada to the Western fields for harvesting. During three hours, three trains of fifty-two coaches carrying about 1,500 men passed through Port Arthur. The Canadian roads are doing all they can to ship the thousands of men needed, and are making use of many of the American roads because they cannot give all the necessary accommodations for so large numbers.

MORE LABORERS.

Party of 200 Passes Through Duluth for Western Canada.

Three more cars of laborers arrived in the city last evening over the Northwestern line bound for Western Canada, and will leave this evening for Winnipeg, over the Duluth, Missabe & Northern and the Canadian Northern. There were more than 200 in the party.

Spurs to Coal Docks.

Arrangements have been made between the Carnegie Coal company and the Northern Pacific Railway company, whereby the latter will put in a number of spurs from the main line from West Duluth to Superior, at about Central avenue, to the docks which the coal company is about to erect there.

On the dock about five tracks will be laid, and it is believed that two or three spurs will be needed, one or two being branches for the storage of cars. The definite arrangements as to the number have not been made, but it is now up to the engineering department of the two companies to complete the plans.

Clerk Gutterson Resigns.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 19.—(Special to The Herald.) — A. W. Gutterson, who has been a clerk in the office of State Treasurer Walter J. Smith, has resigned to go into private business. He succeeded his father in the treasurer's office under Former Treasurer Dinehart.

MOWER COUNTY FIRST

In Enrollment at This Summer's Teachers' Training School.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—It cost $27,633.80 to conduct teachers' training schools in thirty counties from four to six weeks this summer, according to figures that have been compiled by State Supt. C. G. Schulz. Conducting thirty-two teachers' training schools last summer cost $30,525.95. In addition, lecture work was provided for many which cost $1,372.38, making the total expenditure $31,898.33.

The enrollment this summer was 3,368, and the average daily attendance was 2,564. The total enrollment last year was 4,337.

Outside of the university farm school where the attendance this summer was 919, the training school in Mower county led the list in having the largest enrollment, 250. The smallest enrollment was in Lincoln county, where only 35 attended.

CASS LAKER'S CLOSE CALL.

Jumps Through Screened Window to Escape Bakery Fire.

Cass Lake, Minn., Aug. 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—Fire, at 4 o'clock this morning, destroyed the entire stock of the bakery and confectionery of Hugh Druary. The fire caught in the kitchen and spread to the confectionery causing a small loss on the building. A man named Drury sleeping in another room nearly was suffocated. He made his escape by jumping through the screened opening. The loss is $1,500; covered by insurance.

PENNINGTON COUNTY OFFICIAL LOSES WIFE.

Thief River Falls, Minn., Aug. 19.—Mrs. Peter Wold of Pennington died Thursday from tuberculosis. The funeral was held yesterday from the Swedish Mission church in this city. Mrs. Wold was the wife of County Commissioner Peter Wold. She is survived by a large family. The funeral of Andrew Wold, one of the very first settlers to enter on homestead lands in the early days in this section of the state, who was killed in a runaway, was held yesterday. Interment was at Greenwood cemetery.

SORE HEAD.

Chicago News: "Well, Rumbelow, I understand you've been playing in great luck," said a neighbor. "They tell me your father-in-law left you a fine team of horses."

"So he did," replied Rumbelow, indignantly. "He went and left his really valuable property to his sisters and cousins and aunts and then unloaded those blamed horses on me. Yet I always treated that man the best I knew how, and I don't see why he had it in for me."

"Well, of all the black ingratitude! Is there anything wrong with the horses?"

"No, they're fine animals, but what do I want with horses? Now that I have them in my barn, all the neighbors will be chasing over here to borrow them and I'm mad because I won't lend them. Do you know what horse feed costs? Just go down to the feed store and look at the hay and oats on the remnant counter and see the prices and then you won't wonder that I am not luxuriating in sunny smiles.

"I was getting a little money ahead and was figuring on putting it in the new postal savings bank and buying a few of those government bonds at intervals, and just when everything seemed rosy and I was regarding the future with confidence that father-in-law of mine died and left me those horses, and now I'll have to blow every cent I can raise for stuff to feed them! They eat like boa constrictors and it keeps a man busy handing them refreshments."

"Then, why don't you sell them?" asked the neighbor.

"My wife won't stand for it. She's full of sentiment and she says we'll keep those horses till they die, even if we have to sell them. Now she insists on having a new carriage and a nickel plated harness, and the minute I go into the house she begins harping on that subject, and there won't be any peace until I have got my substance at the harness store. I tell you, there's a conspiracy against me. I've been trying for thirty years to start a bank account, and whenever I seem to be on the verge of realizing my ambition somebody puts a spoke in my wheel and I have to start all over again.

"Some of the meanest tricks you ever heard of have been played on me by my wife's relatives. A few years ago an uncle of hers died and wreaked his spite on me by leaving me a Kansas farm. I was doing well then in town here and had a first class position in a laundry. My wife insisted that I should throw up that job and move to the farm. She talked a lot about getting close to nature's heart and about new mown hay, and of jocund farmer boys driving their teams afield. I'd have thought after listening to her for a while that life on a farm beats a ride on a merry-go-round.

"Well, I was so easy that I quit the laundry and went to that farm, and the minute I got there the biggest drought in the history of Kansas made its appearance. For three years there wasn't enough rain to moisten a postage stamp. Everything shriveled up and the fishes left the creek and crawled all the way to the drug store to get a drink. It was awful! A farmer couldn't raise anything but Hail Columbia, and he hadn't energy enough to raise that.

"I brought my family back to town here and we were so poor we had to live in a tent for two months while I worked on the streets with a shovel. Just as I was getting on my feet my wife's brother died and left me his prize St. Bernard dog that had taken the gold medal at several beach shows and forty-eight hours after I got him that dog went mad and bit a lot of horses and cows, and it took me two years to pay the damages.

"I survived that catastrophe and things really seemed to be coming my way. I have a good situation and am out of debt and had $18 saved up toward an account in the postal savings bank, and just when everything seemed serene and the sky was cloudless my father-in-law dies and leaves me those everlasting horses! How can a man fight against such luck as that?"

LIGHTHOUSE WITHOUT A KEEPER

Washington Post: "What do you think of a perpetual lighthouse, needing no keeper and yet as regular in its flashes of light as one maintained by the government?" asked Albert D. Van Wyck.

"This natural light never fails, and that means much for navigation. It is a volcano on the island of San Salvador. This volcanic lighthouse is about eight miles inland from the port of Acajutla. It is a veritable pillar of cloud by day and the flash of its light by night has been valuable to mariners for years. It can be seen far out at sea and a burst of flame has gone upward every seven minutes without the variation of a second for many years.

"A lighthouse fee is collected of all vessels that put in at the harbor nearest the volcano and no skipper objects. He knows that the volcano is more reliable than the lighthouse kept by human beings on other coasts and the novelty of the light is worth the price charged by the government.

MARTY O'TOOLE IS THE COSTLIEST MAN IN GAME

Is Marty O'Toole, the sun-topped slab sensation of the age, worth the combined sevices of Eddie Collins, Tyrus Cobb, Nap Rucker, Frank Chance, Grover Alexander, Joe Jackson and Tris Speaker? Here is presented a delicate riddle for the dope students. If such happens to be the case loyal rooters and patrons of the Pittsburg crew will hail the saint with deserved acclaim.

Still, $22,500 seems mountain high when one stops to consider the paltry sums paid for the above-named group, every member of which ranks in stardom in the two major circuits. The combined prices involved in the deals whereby this galaxy of triple X talent clambered into the upper circles reads $3,500, or $19,000 less than the nest egg delivered for Mike Kelley's spitballer. Hence the query, is O'Toole worth the money?

King Tyrus Cheap.

Statistics show where Cobb, recognized by most baseball authorities as the greatest expenent of the game ever uncovered, cost the Detroit club $600. Back in the noise-ridden days of 1906, when the Cubs and White Sox collided in their series for the championship of the sun, moon and stars, the Tiger management loaned Eddie Cicotte, pitcher, now a member of the Boston Red Sox, to the Augusta, Ga., club for the privilege of buying any athlete on the club at the close of the season.

Bill Armour, manager of the Detroits, has his choice of the field, but he wasn't sure of his footing when he clapped his eyes on Cobb and Clyde Engle. Taking the gambler's chance, Armour singled out Cobb simply because he fancied the tremendous speed of the Cracker boy. Engle elbowed his way into fast company three seasons later, and is now playing a swell game for the Boston red hose.

Alexander Only $750.

Grover Cleveland Alexander, the iron man of the Phillies, who has been pitching miracles against all the other clubs of the National league, meeting with success save in tussles with the Cubs, cost the Quaker City magnates $750, but in his first three times out the former star of the Syracuse, New York state league club, more than won his spurs and by later mowing down ancient enemies to the Philadelphia machine earned for himself three or four substantial salary boosts.

Tris Speaker, one of the most sensational outfielders, as well as a hitting star of the first water, came to the Boston Red Sox fresh from the Texas league via the draft route for $750, and the Hub City never boasted a diamond hero with a stronger following than this easy-going, carefree swatter, whom Ed Walsh styles the greatest batsman in the history of the game.

Jackson Left $1.10 Berth.

Joe Jackson, breaking away from the cotton mills of the sunny South, where he earned $1.10 per day for services rendered, got his start as a national pastimer with the Greenville club of the South Carolina league, where he reported for spring practice in 1908. Not long after Connie Mack paid $900 for the mill boy and finally after he did report Joe ran out and after a still hunt "Socks" Seybold found his man. Jackson was then turned over to the Savannah club of the South Atlantic league, and in 1910 Philadelphia sent him to New Orleans, where he fairly sizzled through the Southern circuit.

In order to bolster up his outfield Mack turned over his string on Jackson to the Cleveland Naps for Bris Lord and a cash consideration. The close of the Southern campaign of 1910 found Joe cavorting about in the same attire worn by Nap Lajoie, Cy Young and other noted Forest City athletes.

Many college stars have broken into the big leagues, but few have shown the class of Eddie Collins or Jack Barry, or Chief Bender of the champion athletics. Manager Mack took this trio out of school and developed each youngster without turning over a penny for the transfer. Collins was a Columbia university star and signed with Connie after he had begged Muggsy McGraw in vain for a berth with the New York Giants.

Chance Cost Nothing.

Speaking of the truly greats who bounded to fame from college baseball diamonds brings to mind the case of Frank Chance, the Cub leader. It was while "Husk" was reading up on the fine points of dentistry at the Cooper school, San Francisco, that his baseball fame earned him a job in fast company, and the men who landed the latter day maker of champions didn't pay a solitary penny for the young backstop. Chance recently admitted he broke in for a salary of $1,200, which was big money in those days.

THREE ENGLISH BOATS ARE AFTER HARMSWORTH CUP

Several weeks ago—eight or ten, perhaps—the largest vessel in the world, and the largest one ever built, entered New York harbor. It was the Olympic of the White Star line—a ship 882.5 feet long, with a displacement of 66,000 tons, driven by engines of 30,000-horse power. The cost of building this vessel was something enormous, running to several millions of dollars. Just what she cost is probably not known to any one excepting builders and owners. She came across the ocean at a speed approximating twenty-two nautical miles per hour. She came on the ordinary mission of commerce, bringing passengers and freight, and when she left New York a few days later she went on a similar mission.

There is now on the way across the ocean from England, another vessel, British built, as was the Olympic, which presents something of a contrast to that queen of the ocean. She is known as Maple Leaf III. She is 40 feet long from tip to tip. The term "displacement" seems almost out of place in respect to so small a vessel, but a naval architect's calculation shows that the figure is probably not less than five nor more than six tons. The motive power consists of two internal combustion engines, or gasoline engines, as they are usually known, of 400-horse power each, making a total of 800-horse power. The cost of building this boat is not known, but it was probably considerably in excess of $30,000. She has run a single mile at the rate of 49.5 nautical miles, or 57 land miles, per hour. She comes, together with two other boats—Pioneer and Zigarella—to try to recapture from America the British international trophy for high speed motor boats, commonly known as the Harmsworth cup.

If the Olympic, the largest ship afloat, were equipped with engines as large in proportion to her size as are those of Maple Leaf III, she would have nearly 10,000,000 of horse power, and if her cost were in proportion to that of the little boat the figures would run close to $300,000,000. This comparison simply illustrates the fact that in an effort to attain the highest possible speed on the water there is no limit in the amount of money that racing men will spend. But there is justification in the enormous expense of building high-speed racing boats, in that by means of it a vast deal of information of real value to the commercial field becomes available.

Must Beat Forty Miles.

Those who follow the development of racing motor boats closely, are of the opinion that in ten races for the British International trophy, to be held at Huntington, L. I., on Aug. 24, 25 and 26, the winning boat will have to make considerably more than forty nautical miles an hour, and perhaps as much as fifty nautical miles. If any such speed is attained it will be the result of the closest kind of study and exhaustive experiment on the part of mechanical engineers and naval architects, reinforced by an almost unlimited expenditure of money, and when it has been attained at such cost, the boat making it will be of practically no value for any purpose other than the making of speed. But the knowledge gained as to the form of boat best suited to easy driving; of the weight of motor per horse power; of the relations of power of motor to size and form of boat, will be of immense value to the naval architect and boat builder in the designing and building of boats to be used for every-day purposes. Those who are old enough to remember Puritan, Mayflower and Volunteer—the three defenders of the America's cup, designed by Burgess in 1885-86, and 1887, also recall that many boats of the Gloucester fishing fleet planned by the same naval architect in the years immediately following, showed a vast improvement in earning power, and ease and comfort of operation over the older boats. It is also known that fishing vessels recently built by Crowninshield and others, in which are embodied ideas developed in the building of racing yachts, are better boats than those of the day of Burgess.

It is a fact, too, that the runabout motor boats of today, twenty to thirty feet long, capable of carrying from three to eight or ten people, and of making from fifteen to twenty-five miles an hour; boats that are equipped with motors that are almost as reliable as steam engines, and almost as flexible in control; boats that may be had at moderate cost, embody in construction and equipment ideas that have been developed and tried out in the building of high speed racing boats, in which there has been absolutely no consideration of cost.

A striking example is the runabout Peter Pan II, built this year in New York waters. She is twenty-six feet long, five feet wide, and is equipped with a forty-horse power motor of the "medium duty" sort. She will carry six or seven people. In a race she has made more than twenty-seven miles an hour, and has defeated boats with more than double her power. Her hull is a modified hydroplane, an adaptation of that of a high-speed racing boat. And the cost of this boat was moderate.

Ten or twelve years ago one who contemplated acquiring a motor boat of any sort was compelled to allow about $100 per horse power as the cost of motor. Today there are gasoline motors of many kinds and sizes that are to be had at as low a figure as $20 or $25 per horse power. Such engines are not of the highest type, nor of the greatest efficiency, nor of the most perfect condition of design and finish, but they are serviceable motors, doing the work that is required of them fairly well, and there are thousands of them, almost hundreds of thousands of them, in use, especially on interior waters in this country. Likewise ten or twelve years ago the weight of the average motor was from thirty to forty pounds per horse power. At present the weight of ordinary motors is from fifteen to twenty pounds per horse power, while racing motors of ten pounds per horse power are considered rather heavy, and engines weighing no more than five pounds per horse power may be readily procured by those who are willing to pay the price.

Ten or twelve years ago the marine gasoline engine was a crudely designed and generally speaking a roughly built machine, and by no means a reliable one. The motors of today—not all of them, to be sure, but most of them—are efficient and reliable machines, designed by mechanical engineers of the highest degree of skill and training, and built in factories equipped with the newest and best machinery. Some part of this great improvement is properly to be credited to the growth of interest in motor boats — which, in turn, has been stimulated by racing—but a great deal of it is due to the knowledge gained through the building of racing hulls and engines for men who have been ready to pay any price for an increase of speed. Such knowledge has been especially valuable in the building of small boats, and it is the small craft in the way of the motor boat—that is to say, the forty or forty-five foot decked cruiser and the twenty or twenty-five foot runabout—that appeal to the vast majority of people.

RED BAND AND DRIVER SUSPENDED FOR YEAR.

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 19—At a meeting of the judges officiating at the four-day race meet of the Milwaukee racing association it was decided to suspend Red Band, the brown mare and her owners, Pelter and Richardson of Madison, Wis., and driver Sacker for one year.

The judges claim the horse was pulled in the third heat of the 2:25 trot yesterday. When Homer Ross was put behind the mare in the fourth and fifth heats, she won easily.

Fight at Davenport.

Davenport, Iowa, Aug. 19.—Harry Trendall of St. Louis and Jack Redmond of Chicago are scheduled for a fifteen-round fight before the Davenport Athletic association here Sunday, Aug. 20.

Players Sold.

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 19.—Pitcher Larry Cheney and Third Baseman Eddie Lennox of the Louisville American association team, have been sold to the Chicago Nationals. Both players will be delivered at the end of the American association season.

CATCHING WHALES IN NETS.

They catch whales in net down around New Zealand. The big fish is a conservative creature, according to a writer in the Wide World, and keeps it sea tracks with almost as much regularity as an ocean liner.

It is supposed that they go north by one route, and it is known that they later return south by a familiar track which brings them in touch with land. Like ships in tropic seas, their six months sojourn in line waters has given the whale a thick crust of clinging barnacles and long hamper of green sea grass.

Many account for the presence of the monsters inshore by a desire to rid their bodies of the intolerable itch of the parasites. These they dislodge by rubbing against the rocks strewn thickly in the landward passage.

However this may be, a fair number of the traveling whales, hugging the shore more closely than their fellows, pass through a narrow channel just under Cape Brett, that separates a cluster of outlying rocks from the mainland. This is the spot chosen for the placing of the nets.

No ordinary fisherman's gear will serve. The nets used to stop a monster swimming with the momentum of a hundred ton mass of bone and sinew are necessarily out of the common.

With a stretch of 500 or 600 feet and a depth of 200 the nets, meshed to seven feet and made of three-eighths inch wire rope, are hung on strong wire cables buoyed by huge floats and drogues. From high vantage posts along the coast watchers scan the sea for the first sign of the distant spoutings that herald the approaching school.

At the cry of "There she blows!" out go the steam launches to place the nets, three in number, that suffice to close the narrow channel. These, unanchored, are allowed to float loose, the ends of each slightly overlapping. Kept taut by their own weight, they hang stretched on the float line, an invisible curtain of wire mesh barring the water run.

When the nets are in position the launches and attendant whaleboats, with their crews, take up their stations at some distance to watch for the upheaval and dancing float line that marks the striking of a whale.

Often a whale's presence is first indicated by great masses of broken barnacles and torn sea grass that come floating upward to the surface as the whale, floundering among the rocks of the sea floor, eases himself with delighted scratchings in the depths.

In the boats all is tense expectancy and ordered preparation. Harpoon guns are loaded and made ready, lines are carefully flaked down in the tubs, knives are looked to and everyone is on the qui vive. Suddenly a sort of shudder runs through the sea. There are tossing billows and wild commotion away by the bobbing float lines. "Hurrah! she's struck!" is the cry.

Away go the boats, each racing to be first fast to the struggling fish and so earn the bonus that rewards the winning crew. A mighty, gray black head, entangled in a clinging web of wire, rears from the water. Up, up it goes till a huge bulk of body towers a good fifty feet in the air, its side fins thrashing wildly in a smother of foam. It curves in an arch and then like an arrow down go whale and net together for the sound.

Not for long though. The upward drag of bunched net floats and its necessity for breath bring the fish quickly to the surface—a spouting, wallowing mass; mad with rage, wild with terror of the unknown clinging horror that enveloped it.

Bang! bang! go the guns from each boat in quick succession. Both irons are home and well placed. A wild quiver of lukes and fins, and the whale either sounds again or races along the surface, towing the boats after it at express speed. But the net holds fast, and at each new effort for freedom the victim becomes more helplessly wound up than before.

Soon exhausted with futile struggling, the whale comes to rest and there is a momentary cessation of the mad fight, as the leviathan pauses for breath. Huge panting air gasps are plainly audible at a distance of half a mile.

The crews are quick to seize the opportunity. With the lancemen ready in the bow the boats sweep in one on either side. "Steady with the lance." "Now!" Eight-foot steel blades drive deep for the heart behind the pectoral fins.

A shiver, a hissing spout of water and blood, a wallow and roll of the huge wire tangled carcass, flashes of red and white foam in the sunlight and the black heave of a twenty-foot fin that for one dread instant, scimitar shaped, a falling wall of bone and sinew, hangs over the boat and its occupants. The boat's crew back out like lightning, just in time. Down crashes the mighty flail, missing its blow by a bare foot. There is a roar and clap of many thunders, and jetting spurts of spray leap high into the blue.

The boats, backed clear, still hang to the lines, the crews watching events and waiting the end. It may be that the dying whale will sound again or race in a final effort. But the lances have got home. A few more wallows of despair, the great tail flukes thrash the water with lessening force, and presently the huge body, inert, lifeless, lies quietly on the surface. Hawsers are made fast to the dead whale, and while the boats return to their stations to watch the remaining nets it is towed by the launch to the flensing jetty ashore.

BORROWED LORD CHANCELLOR'S ROBES.

"Cheek" in the June Strand: On one occasion a gentlemanly appearing individual walked boldly up the steps of St. Stephen's, passed the various officials, turned into the house of lords passage, and in a self-possessed manner entered the robing room.

"Lord Normanby's robes."

The attendant looked surprised.

"But, my lord——" he began.

"I know it's absurd," said the stranger; "but my tailor cannot finish my robes in time, and I must attend this sitting. Lord Normanby was so kind as to offer—— You understand?"

"Oh, certainly, my lord," responded the rober, obsequiously.

The crimson and ermine was produced and donned, and the pseudo peer strolled into the house, where a few peers were waiting, administered a series of affable nods right and left, and finally took his place on the woolsack. For full thirty seconds he sat there, while those present tried to collect their faculties. Then he slowly arose and, remarking to the clerk, "How stupid of me! I now remember I have an appointment elsewhere," retired from the chamber. In the robing room he remarked, "Thank Lord Normanby, and tell his lordship I have just recalled a pressing appointment with the king."

"Yes, my lord. What name?"

"What name?" echoed the other, in assumed astonishment. "What name? Really, my good fellow, you must be careful—very careful. It does not do to forget yourself in this assembly. But I will overlook your slip this time. Good morning."

That evening it was known at the beefsteak club that Banister, the actor, had won a bet of £50.

A CONGREGATION OF ONE.

London Globe: In his younger days the Rev. Sir Cameron Lees, D. D., was a Highland missioner in a scattered territory and passing rich on £40 a year. On one occasion on the Sabbath day the windows of heaven opened and there was a deluge on a small scale. The young minister of course was at his post, but only one member of the congregation had the courage to turn up, an old farmer. Cameron Lees suggested that in view of the terrible weather they should adjourn to his study and hold their devotions there.

"No, no," said the old Highlander. "It is written, 'Where two or three are gathered together in My name there am I also.' You are one and I'm one, so there's the two, and we'll have the service as usual." And there was a service for a congregation of one.

HAD THEIR DOUBLES.

London Chronicle: Many celebrities have had their doubles. Grant Druff records that he found "Prof. Schrader so ludicrously like Huxley that I went up and shook hands with him at Lady Alford's." There was a strong physical resemblance between Tennyson and Leslie Stephen, in spite of a disparity in years, and between Jules Ferry and Whiteley, the universal provider.

Edmund Yates was so like the late Shah of Persia that his photographs were sold in Brussels as the shah's when Nasr-ed-Din visited that city. Sir Laurence Alma-Tadema used to have a double in George Du Maurier. So closely did they resemble each other that a lady a: dinner one night addressed Du Maurier as Sir Alma, and assured him that he was "really not a bit like that Mr. Du Maurier, as people tried to make out."

It is open to the fictionist who deals in doubles to point to many instances in real life. King George and the Czar of Russia could exchange parts without anybody noticing the physical difference. The Duke of Norfolk and the late George Manville Fenn were almost exact duplicates in outward appearance. And two such artists in different ways as Anthony Hope and Edward German were in their earlier years again and again mistaken for each other.

They were hardly "doubles," but there was a remarkable resemblance between Tennyson and Dickens. Comyns Carr in his "Eminent Victorians," tells how he once showed the poet a pencil drawing which Millais had made of Dickens after death. Mr. Carr himself had been struck by the resemblance the portrait bore to Tennyson, and was curious to see if the poet would notice it. Tennyson gazed at it intently for a minute and then exclaimed, "Why this is a most extraordinary drawing. It is exactly like myself."

WIPING OUT A HAWK FAMILY.

Hagerstown correspondence Indianapolis News: Climbing a large hickory tree to the height of eighty feet, Raymond Knapp destroyed a hawk's nest and killed three young hawks which it contained.

Fifteen years ago a pair of unusually large chicken hawks built their nests in this tree on the farm of John Holler. Seven years ago the mate bird was captured. The next season the mother bird returned with a new mate and each season since they have returned to the nest in this tree.

Mr. Holler and other farmers in the neighborhood lost hundreds of chickens through the depredations of the old birds, but every effort by the farmers to capture them failed.

Knapp watched for some time for a chance to shoot the parent birds, and failing in this he determined to destroy the nest and the young. The nest was four feet across from the outer edge and the walls were twelve inches in thickness and firmly built. The birds, which were not able to fly, measured twenty-three inches from tip to tip of their wings.

DIG FOR GOLD TO PAY FOR BUILDING.

Placerville correspondence San Francisco Chronicle: The local lodge of Odd Fellows has engaged in mining at the site where its new building is being erected. While workmen were excavating for foundations for the building a rich prospect of gold was discovered on bedrock. A sluicebox was put in and all dirt excavated is being run through it to extract the gold. Good values are being taken out daily, and the total sum will amount to a large figure. The lodge will use the gold toward paying for the building.

When excavating was first started a gold coin of early mintage was found. It is engraved on one side, "Augustus Humbert, United States Assayer, 1852," and on the other side "United States of America, $10, 884 thous." One side contains an eagle and the other a beautiful scroll. Such coins are rare now and worth a large sum.

Fifty-six people, representing forty-two firms, have signed for the trade excursion to be held on the Soo Line next week under the direction of the wholesalers' committee of the Duluth Commercial club.

It is expected that before the train leaves Tuesday morning, the number will be increased to seventy-five, for a number of firms, which will surely be represented, have not yet reported to the club.

Reports from the towns along the route of the special train indicate that the people are taking kindly to the idea of the party of Duluth business men visiting them. STATE FAIR EXHIBITS ARE CONVINCING PROOF OF GREATNESS OF DAIRY INDUSTRY

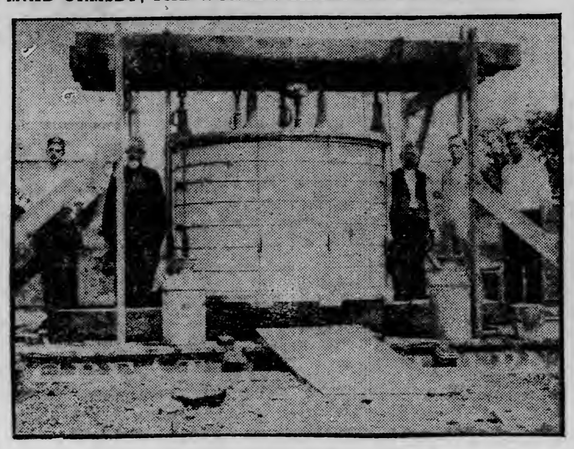
RELATIVES OF PIETERTJE MAID ORMSBY, THE WORLD'S CHAMPION BUTTER COW.

The Minnesota state fair will furnish convincing proof of Minnesota's right to the title of the bread and butter state. Not only will there be on exhibit at the 1911 state fair the largest cheese in the world, the champion dairy cow of the world and several exhibits that show Minnesota's pre-eminence, but there will be the greatest general display of dairy products ever seen in the Northwest.

A letter from F. W. Murphy, one of the directors and superintendent of the dairy department, conveys the information that all of the space in the dairy building has been taken and that he will be wholly unable to take care of further applicants. Heretofore the building has been sufficient to care for all who cared to make exhibits. This year not only is all the space taken, but several large exhibits that should properly be in this building have been assigned space outside and from now on applicants for space will be refused.

The unexpected growth in this department is an added showing of Minnesota's development along dairy lines and makes easily believable Prof. Haecker's estimate that within the last twenty years the value of the dairy products of the state of Minnesota has increased from $7,000,000 to over $50,000,000.



THE WORLD'S LARGEST CHEESE.

HEARING IS COMPLETED

Contractor Hugh Steele Is Last Witness Placed on Stand.

Mayor Urges Need of More Rigid Requirements for Inspectors.

With Contractor Hugh Steele charging Attorney Arthur Crassweller with asking questions tending "to cover things up" and charging that the probe has not gone deep enough, the council committee, which has been investiating the "paving scandal" in the council chambers of the city hall, concluded its sessions yesterday afternoon.

Steele was the last witness and was also first. He declared that he is not satisfied with the work which has been done by the committee; that it could have gone into the matter more fully; that Attorney Crassweller, representing the committee, could have asked questions which would have gotten more information from the witnesses, and that the general tendency has been to try to cover things up.

Steele stated that he didn't see how a contractor could be expected to state that he had been bribing any inspectors, and that the inspectors could not be expected to take the stand and testify they had been subjected to any undue influence.

Attorney Crasweller asked him how it would have been possible to go into the matter any more fully than had been done by the committee; asked him how else the investigation could have been conducted, or to suggest which questions which might have been put to the witnesses. He wanted Steele to give a single example of how any witness might have been handled differently. Steele said that he didn't know and that he wasn't expected to know, as he is not an attorney. He asserted that he does not consider himself on trial.

Steele and members of the committee discussed the West Superior street paving again, going over some of the previous ground. Steele claimed that he fulfilled his contract when he laid the pavement according to specifications and can be held only for defects of workmanship and material, and not for anything caused by an improper foundation under the paving. The question resolves itself into a legal matter which can only be settled by the courts. Steele admitted that he had been advised to have an attorney at the hearing, but said that he didn't feel himself obligated to go to that expense.

When Steele left the stand, Chairman Scott asked if there was anyone else who had any charges to prefer or any questions to ask. He announced that "now is the time" to do it, and if anyone had nothing to present, "let them keep quiet hereafter."

As a result of the investigation Mayor Cullum sent a letter to the civil service commission relative to inspectors. He stated that it has appeared that perhaps some of them are not fully up to the requirements, and that if the present examination is not sufficiently rigid, it should be made harder.

TRADE SENTIMENT IMPROVED

New York, Aug. 19.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade today says:

Sentiment is improved at Boston, with a prevailing belief that business will soon be much better.

Dry goods jobbers report a fair demand and orders are well distributed. Indications appear of expansion in industrial activity, although curtailment is still drastic at cotton mills. Men's wear woolen mills, however, are booking a good volume of business, shoe factories are busy and wool trading is brisk. Manufacturers in Philadelphia are buying cotton and woolen goods to some extent, while wool sale houses there are busy with preparations for fall and report inquiries are very encouraging.

The wool market is more active and very firm. With industrial plants increasing operations to a moderate extent, there is more optimism in commercial lines at Pittsburg and wholesalers of dry goods, notions and shoes receive good orders for future delivery. The outlook for fall in the wholesale dry goods and notion market is exceptionally good.

Dealings in retail lines at Chicago were favorably stimulated by the large numbers of visitors attracted by the aviation meet. Wholesale operations include a wider variety of fall, winter and holiday goods and road and mail orders compare well with this time last year. Improvement appears in certain lines at Cincinnati, notably dry goods and groceries, and there is a much better inquiry for pig iron, with considerable actual business placed. Cleveland reports that trade in nearly all retail branches is slow and unsatisfactory and dealings at wholesale show no especial activity. Building operations are still brisk, however, and several permits for large new structures have been issued.

Wholesale business continues quiet at Minneapolis, with orders being placed for immediate requirements only. The general undertone throughout the Northwest is good, and stocks of merchandise are not burdensome.

Abundance of rain has repaired much of the early damage by drouth and thrashing returns are proving better than expected. Some improvement is noted in wholesale trade at St. Paul, buyers operating with more freedom in dry goods, clothing, hats and caps and furnishings.

NEW GARBAGE WAGON MARKS BEGINNING OF MUNICIPAL SYSTEM

THE NEW GARBAGE WAGON.

The accompanyin- picture shows the very latest, most up-to-date and sanitary, 1912 model garbage wagon that can be obtained. It is the new vehicle obtained by the city health department for the collection of garbage in the contral portion of the city, replacing the old wagon used for this purpose, which prov d too small for the work required.

The old wagon more than paid for itself during the time that it was at work, a small fee being charged for handling the garbage. The new wagon is absolutely water tight and odor tight and is the most sanitary method known for handling the waste products of the city.

The financial success which has attended the operation of the old vehicle leads the health department to hope that on the showing made with the new, appropriations can be secured to maintain a complete garbage collection system throughout the city.

A DEMOCRACY'S POLLING PLACES

The Campaign to Use Public Buildings—How Patronage Has Prevented Economy—Selection of Election Officials.

By LOUIS H. PINK,
Member of New York Bar.

(Exclusive Service the Survey Press Bureau.)

Is it not odd that in a republic the supreme act of self rule should be performed in manner haphazard and in places unfit?

The surroundings of churches of all creeds and denominations are dignified and quiet, usually beautiful. Often the achitecture is imposing. The chambers of legislature and judicial bodies the world over are in keeping with the important functions there exercised.

How different the polling places, where the destiny of party, of city, state and nation is determined. In New York city the polls are usually in small cigar stores or barber shops selected without regard to their fitness for the purpose or the convenience of the voters.

Each year $125,000 is spent for the rental of these places, much of which could be saved if it were not for patronage. In all sections of the city are public schools, libraries, courthouses, municipal office buildings, department headquarters and other structures owned by the public; why not use them for the most sacred of all public functions?

It is important that voting be conducted amidst dignified surroundings, free from the shadow of the control of the district political leader and his followers. A place well lighted, properly ventilated and sufficiently spacious is essential. There are but few neighborhoods where dishonesty and trickery at the polls still obtain. But so long as even the possibility of corruption and of the misconduct of election officials exists, opportunity for fraud must be minimized. Honesty must be made easy, not hard. Fraud, trickery, undue influence, which might easily be possible in a placed crowded, dark, out of the way, would be most difficult in a public building such as a school or a library. Election officials and the police would be placed upon their good behavior.

Loud-mouthed officials, brow-beating and bullying voters; the hustling in of men to vote on others names in the crowd and confusion; the lining up of repeaters and men falsely registered from lodging houses; the unfair domination of the primaries by the faction in power—all these would thrive with difficulty in a building consecrated to the service of the people.

In a recent report to Mayor Gaynor by Raymond Fosdick, commissioner of accounts, the present method of selecting polling places is scored. "The election law," says the commissioner, "provides that the board of election shall designate the polling places for party primaries, for registration and for general elections. By a custom long established, this function has virtually been adjucated in favor of the party organizations, and the selection of polling places has become a source of patronage for district captains. According to the method now in force, the Republicans are allowed to designate the polling places in the odd-numbered districts. Aside from a superficial examination by the police as to the size of the polling places thus chosen, no check on the designations of the political parties is exercised by the board of elections. The adequacy and shape of the room, the question of ventilation, the location of the poll in the election district—in short, the consideration of the comfort and convenience of the voters themselves appear to be left by the election officials, without investigation, to the representatives of the two dominant political parties."

Commissioner Fosdick's investigation showed that in several instances the room where the booths were placed was so small that watchers had to remain outside the guard rail where they could not properly perform their work. Conditions in the Second assembly district of Brooklyn were especially deplorable, the polling places being small, unsuited for the purpose and inconveniently located.

The United Neighborhood guild, a social settlement located in this district, has offered to the board of elections the use of its buildings as polling places free of charge, and at the same time has petitioned that the schools, libraries and other public buildings in the district be used so that a trial may be had, with the object of extending the use of public buildings to other parts of the city should the experiment prove successful.

Not only the selection of the polling places, but the entire election machinery is out of gear. Election officials should not be camp followers of the district leader but experts in their line.

The law requires the board of election to hold an examination for candidates for inspectors, poll clerks and ballot clerks, both as to their knowledge of the English language and of the provisions of the election law. Last year it went through the form of holding an examination, but little intelligence was required to pass, as the candidates were permitted to converse openly and written lists of answers were given out to the candidates. The answers in all of the papers were identical. New blood has been infused into the board by Mayor Gaynor and a repetition of this farce is unlikely.

It is the idea of Commissioner Fosdick that business men, bankers and law clerks should be chosen for election officers. He suggests that the hours of registration should be changed "so as to substitute for the present four days of registration (between the hours of 7 a. m. and 10 p. m.) a week of registration (between the hours of 6 p. m. and 10 p .m. on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, and from 7:30 a. m. to 10:30 p. m. on Saturdays). This change would increase both the number of available men from whom election officials can be selected and the opportunities for the voters to register and at the same time would make possible the use of schoolhouses for polling places.

The board of elections is not properly equipped to hold examinations. These should be placed under the civil service commission. When a candidate passes he should be placed upon the eligible list and, during good behavior, should be assigned year after year. At present the officials are selected for one year only and must be chosen from lists supplied by the Democratic and Republican parties. Usually the officers are sent to duty in the districts where they reside. This is unfortunate, as the personal element weighs heavily. The officials should enforce the law impartially. If they were unknown to the voters, to the local politicians and the police, there would be less danger of bias or fraud. It is essential that some of the officials know the voters of the district to guard against repeating and false registration, but for this very purpose the party watchers are by law created and may stand within the guard rail.

The short ballot, government by commission, direct nominations, better polling places and the selection of election officers from the civil service list—when these have come to pass then can we rightly say "the people do rule."

POET'S MONEY WILL GO TO CHARITY.

Chicago, Aug. 19. — Mrs. Myrtle Reed McCullough, the authoress and poetess who killed herself, left an estate of more than $200,000, according to friends. This sum will be left to eight Chicago charitable institutions.

A coroner's jury returned a verdict that Mrs. McCullough committed suicide by taking an overdose of a sleeping powder while temporarily insane from insomnia and depression. Earl H. Reed, a brother of Mrs. McCullough, testified that he had heard that his sister did not get along well with her husband. He said she was subject to fits of despondency, and that he was satisfied that her death was caused by an overdose of the drug, which she used to produce sleep.

FATAL RACE RIOT IN NEW YORK CITY

White Man Is Killed By Negro Who Escapes in Confusion.

New York, Aug. 19.—One man, a white, was killed and many others injured in a race riot between whites and blacks in Harlem last night. Charles McKegney, a clerk, was shot and killed by a negro in a hallway near McKegney's home.

The race riot started early in the evening when a white man and a negro accidentally collided on Second avenue. Soon volleys of stones began to be exchanged between the crowds of whites and blacks, the disorder continuing until the fatal shooting. Police reserves put an end to the fight, but failed to learn the identity of the murderer.

Resistance of the Atmosphere.

The resistance of our atmosphere materially retards the rain drops in their fall. Hail stones, aerolites, etc., which fall through the air, would be dangerous but for its retarding effect. Dropping from their height, if there was no atmosphere, a rain drop would fall with enough velocity to penetrate the human body full length. Were it not for golden grain belt beers, many a badly nourished person would not now have their full strength and vigor. That's why they make friends everywhere. FARRELL ON STEEL PLANTS

Head of U. S. Steel Talks on Pittsburg, Gary and Duluth.

President Farrell of the United States Steel corporation in an interview at Pittsburg, Pa., recently referred to the importance of steel plants in this country, other than those in the Pittsburg district, in the following language:

"Pittsburg, secure in the knowledge of the prominent position occupied by its industries, can afford to be indifferent to the natural rivalry of other places, which is entirely commendable, in so far as it relates to a natural desire to 'boost' one's own district, plant and business.

"This country is great enough to support several large producing centers, and it is natural that, as the trade and population of the country extend westward and southward, Chicago, Gary, Duluth and Birmingham should each have a relative measure of importance, leaving the great and continually growing East and Central West and the world-wide markets as the consuming field for the Pittsburg district. The industries here are admirably located and, in addition to the enormous comsumptive field which will always exist in the East and Central West, which it will continue to serve, it must not be forgotten that it is favorably located for the export trade of the world."

WANT TO USE POWER.

Twin City Mayors Urge Congress to Amend Power Bill.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 19.—Mayor J. C. Haynes of Minneapolis, Mayor H. P. Keller of St. Paul and John Lind of the board of regents of the University of Minnesota have telegraphed the Minnesota delegation in congress urging the members to use their efforts to amend the Underwood water power bill so that municipalities and state institutions may be favored in the matter of disposing of power generated by government dams. The Twin Cities and the University want power from the new high dam to be built in the Mississippi river near Fort Snelling.

HIS ECZEMA GONE AND BOILS CURED

Eczema Began When Three Weeks Old. Arms, Shoulders and Breast a Solid Scab. Boils Broke Out During Teething. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and He Was the Picture of Health.

"My son was about three weeks old when I noticed a breaking-out on his cheeks, from which a watery substance oozed. A short time after, his arms, shoulders and breast broke out also, and in a few days became a solid scab. I became alarmed, and called our family physician who at once pronounced the disease eczema. The little fellow was under his treatment for about three months. By the end of that time, he seemed no better. I became discouraged. I dropped the doctor's treatment, and commenced the use of Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and in a few days noticed a marked change. The eruption on his cheeks was almost healed, and his shoulders, arms and breast were decidedly better. When he was about seven months old, all trace of the eczema was gone.

"During his teething period, his head and face were broken out in boils which I cured with Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Surely he must have been a great sufferer. During the time of teething and from the time I dropped the doctor's treatment, I used the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, nothing else, and when two years old he was the picture of health. His complexion was soft and beautiful, and his head a mass of silky curls. I had been afraid that he would never be well, and I feel that I owe a great deal to the Cuticura Remedies." (Signed) Mrs. Mary W. Ramsey, 224 E. Jackson St., Colorado Springs, Colo., Sept. 24, 1910.

Although Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a liberal sample of each, with 32-page booklet on the skin and hair, will be sent, post-free, on application to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. 5B, Boston.

THE PITY OF IT!

It is straining charity about as far as it will reach to call President Taft's veto of the bill reducing the wool tariff a blunder.

It is a blunder of statesmanship, and a political blunder, too. It means that the American people must remain awhile longer under the heavy burden of a tariff tax which the president himself has condemned as indefensible, and which is abhorrent to every rule of taxation, every theory of protection, and every sense of justice.

It is charity to say that it is a blunder. It is only fair to add that it is an inexcusable and an indefensible blunder.

Nor does the veto message justify it. Condensed, the president's excuse is that the Republican platform, on which he was elected, declares for duties that will equal the difference between the cost of production at home and abroad, together with a reasonable profit to American industries; and that until the tariff board reports on the cost of manufacturing woolen goods here and abroad there is no way to determine this difference, and therefore no way to fix the proper duties.

Never was there a plank more vicious than this which proposes to guarantee profits to one branch of enterprise under a government which does not even guarantee to willing labor the right to have work at any wage.

Never was there an excuse more feeble than that which the president offers for choosing, in the absence of the more or less valuable information expected from the tariff board, to condemn the American people to remain under the burden of tariff duties which he has condemned as indefensible, and which those less mealy-mouthed have condemned as wicked, vicious, tyrannical and destructive of free government.

The difference between cost of production means, of course, labor cost; since in the amazing hypocrisy of the Republican organization it has always professed to maintain the tariff for the benefit of labor.

It is true that it is difficult, in advance of definite information, to determine the difference between the labor cost of producing woolen goods. But what can the president, or any defender of the president or of the system of tariff taxation of the many for the benefit of the few which he is protecting, do with this fact: that there is no duty in Schedule K, and no duty in the bill which he has vetoed, that is not greater than the total of labor's share in the cost of producing woolen goods?

What has it to do with the difference in cost of production when tariff duties ARE GREATER THAN THE TOTAL LABOR COST OF PRODUCTION?

And why should any man who has the people's welfare at heart veto a bill which, while reducing these outrageous duties, still leaves them greater than the total labor cost of production?

And what is the need of waiting for the tariff board's report when these facts are already available?

According to the census bureau the wages paid in woolen manufactures amount to 20 per cent of the value of the product.

The duties on woolen goods range under the Aldrich-Payne bill from 40 per cent to 165 per cent. They are 71 to 165 per cent on blankets—highest on the blankets of the poor and lowest on the fine blankets of the rich. They are 70 to 155 per cent on women's and children's dress goods—highest on the clothing of the poor and lowest on the fine clothing of the rich.

Though labor gets but 20 per cent of the value of the products of the wool manufacturing industry, the tariff duties average 90 per cent.

And yet the president of the United States has vetoed a bill reducing these duties, on the ground that he must learn the difference between the labor cost of production here and abroad before he can permit the sacred schedules of the Aldrich-Payne bill to be touched!

MONKEYING WITH CHANCE.

Every normal human being has in his makeup something of the spirit of taking chances. Not only the legitimate chances of the commercial world in which a man acts on his best judgment and stakes his investment funds on what he believes to be a winning venture, but the kind of chances in which he stands to win or lose vastly more than he puts into the proposition, in which a single turn of the cards or dice or the market will determine whether he is to be "flush" or "busted."

It is the prevalence of that spirit that gives occupation to most of the leeches that gain a living by their knowledge of human nature, and the way in which they flourish in spite of efforts to put them down proves the accuracy of their knowledge.

It is not uncommon to hear of men who have gone against chance and won. It is less common to hear of those who have done so and lost, for the very reason, probably, that that class is so numerous that the experience causes comparatively little comment. But once in awhile a case comes to light that is sufficiently striking to bring home the lesson of caution to others who may feel tempted to monkey with chance. Such a case is that of George R. Herringer, who was practically ruined by flurries in the Chicago wheat pit in 1906. He ended his experience broken in health and fortune, and has just completed a long rest and search after physical recuperation.

"Suh, it was a humdinger of a beating I got," was Mr. Herringer's comment to a reporter who talked with him the other day at Syracuse, N. Y. Then he gave the young man some wholesome advice, thus:

> "There is nothing in it for the small operator. I was considered passably shrewd in my time, but they sheared my fleece. Every small gambler is a neophyte, when combating with the big fellows, with their millions behind them to gain their end. There's the same fascination in it as in fast motoring, though; as in seeing the bases full in the ninth inning and the best hitter on the home club facing the best pitcher of the opposition; the same thrill that one experiences when some fleet horses swing around the final turn of a race course and head for the wire. But it never gets you anything, and, son, I should know."

It is easy to say that this is just an expression of the fear of a man who has been bitten. It is more than that—it is a statement of an exact truth. The small operator takes even greater chances than "the big fellows," for he has to depend for success on the manipulations of men who act without his knowledge either of their plans, actions or motives. Mr. Herringer got into the market with some half million dollars back of him, yet called himself a "small" operator. If he was bound to be bitten with that amount of capital, what chance has the $20 or $30 a week clerk? None. And the "small" man who has good judgment and uses it will keep out of the game.

DEATH IN THE AIR.

The aeroplane, besides affording much entertainment and excitement, is costing many human lives.

Figures published in The Herald last evening showed that the conquest of the air has taken a heavy toll already this year. Though the aviation season is barely under way, more deaths have come out of it than during all of last year.

The impressive table published last night showed that forty-one persons had been killed up to Aug. 15, with the year only a little more than half sped. Some of these were balloon men, but thirty-five deaths were due to aeroplanes.

There is a price to be paid for everything, and perhaps this is the price the world must pay for the conquest of the air.

If aviation turns out to be practical, and affords easier and better means of traveling, thus improving the lot of humanity, a reasonable and necessary loss of life is none too great a price to pay.

When a man loses his life in the effort to benefit his fellows, by losing it he makes his life worth while; so the loss is not always total.

It is better to die in achieving something worth while for humanity than it is to live long and selfishly and uselessly.

But when lives are lost as a mere incident to providing entertainment, as the case seems to be with some of those who have been killed in exhibition flights, there is no compensation for the loss, and the thing is going too far.

And these are valuable lives that are being lost. A man to be an aviator must have courage, nerve, physical and mental resources, ingenuity and personality. At the present stage of the art of flying the air-machine is no place for a mollycoddle.

Such men as these are worth much to society. Their lives should not be jeopardized needlessly.

They are jeopardized needlessly when the necessity of earning money to keep up their experiments drives them to do dare-devil feats in the air to satisfy the craving of an over-entertained public for thrills and excitement.

At the present rate, judging from the results of the Chicago meet where two men were killed and several others had narrow escapes from death, the aviation exhibition is getting on the same plane as the deadly automobile meets against which public sentiment has turned after they had claimed many lives.

It is not good for the public to be diverted by spectacles that are chiefly interesting because death hovers over them and may be expected to pounce upon a victim at any moment.

It breeds morbid and brutalizing tastes to witness such spectacles.

Neither do these exhibitions advance the conquest of the air.

If aviation promises real benefit to society, governments ought to stand the expense of experiment. Then there will be no need that men actually trying to make the aeroplane of practical use shall hazard their valuable lives to entertain the public.

THE COURTS AND THE RECALL.

President Taft's veto of the resolution providing statehood for Arizona and New Mexico on the sole ground that he objects to the provision in the proposed Arizona Constitution for the recall of judges is pretty certain to create widespread discussion of the advisability of this extension of popular control over government.

It will be rather a pity if there is so much of this discussion as to detract from the consideration due to measures of popular control regarding which there is a wider agreement, and which are certain anyway to be taken up before the judicial recall.

The initiative, the referendum and the recall of executive and legislative officers are still subjects of debate, but there are many evidences that the people are coming to favor them, and the more vexed question of judicial recall might well be left in abeyance until these other factors in real democracy are thrashed out and tried. After trying direct legislation and the recall for executive and legislative officers the people will be in a better position than they now are to decide whether or not they wish to extend the recall to judges as well as to governors, mayors, congressmen and legislators.

In the meantime, the courts themselves can do much to lessen the demand for the judicial recall by proving themselves free from leanings that create disrespect for the courts and that foster the desire for greater popular control over judges.

The Portland Oregonian, which opposes the recall of judges, nevertheless reads the courts a timely lesson. "The misdeeds of the courts," it says, "have brought upon them the threat of a much worse evil, which would make them as susceptible as a legislative body to every passing breeze of public opinion. The best defense the courts can make is to reform their methods, as some of them have already begun to do, and the best thing the friends of a fearless judiciary can do is to combine for such reform in the laws and rules of procedure as will facilitate such reform.

"The courts need to administer justice according to law as interpreted by reason and common sense. They should use law as a means to justice; they have hitherto too often subordinated justice to law. They should give justice promptly, and to that end should suppress the long-winded, hair-splitting, contentious lawyer who raises technical points in order that he may prolong litigation and tire out an opponent. The judges let the lawyers run the courts; they should run the courts themselves. If the judges wish the people to respect the courts, they should prove a title to respect. If the American judiciary occupies a lower place in public esteem than that of any other civilized country, it is the fault of the judiciary, and the judges must lead in the movement to bring about a change for the better. The recall would send it still lower in the scale; it is for the judges to raise it higher."

Though scathing, and perhaps too sweeping, this indictment is true, and the advice is sound and wise. If there is agitation for closer control of the courts by the people, there must be some reason for it; and the way to avoid the judicial recall, which most lawyers, all judges and many people profess to believe would trail the courts in the mire of abject dependence upon popular whim, is to remove that reason.

If the campaign for the reform of the courts and of court procedure will take on a livelier movement, it will go far toward quieting the agitation for the judicial recall.

THE SEVEN-SENATOR BILL.

Judge Hale of the Minneapolis district court has taken under advisement the suit brought by Representative Fowler of Minneapolis to test the constitutionality of the bill passed by the legislature at the last session proposing a constitutional amendment limiting the number of senators that any one county may elect to seven, regardless of population. He announced that he would pass only on the issue of constitutionality, and that his decision might be expected in September.

In any event the case will go to the supreme court, and it should go, for final decision, to the supreme court of the United States.

The Herald was inclined to doubt the advisability of taking refuge in the courts against this infamous measure. It had and still has confidence enough in the good sense and fairness of the people of Minnesota to believe that it would be rejected by them most emphatically.

But, the suit having been brought, The Herald hopes that it will be pushed until the last lingering doubt about the constitutionality of such a measure as this is dispelled.

If this is a government by and for all the people, the decision in this case will determine it, so far as the courts are concerned. If this is a government by some of the people and not by all of the people, the decision will determine that, too.

For our part, we do not feel so impressed by the point raised about the unlawful manner in which this measure was juggled to passage through the legislature as we do by the fundamental issue involved of whether or not there is room in the American system of government for the principle that humanity living in cities is not entitled to the same voice in public affairs as humanity living in the country.

The way those back of this bill procured its passage was illegal enough, and it is putting it mildly to say that it was highly improper. The rules require that both houses must be in session when a measure goes from one to the other, and these rules are wise. The seven-senator bill was rushed from the house to the senate after both houses had adjourned, as we recall it; and this was absolutely abhorrent to the spirit of the rules.

But we should be far from satisfied if the seven-senator bill were to be declared unconstitutional on that ground alone. That would simply mean that it would be brought up again and passed—perhaps—in proper form; though it is hard to believe that after they have had a chance for sober second thought and for conference with their constituents those who voted for this shameful measure would vote for it again.

What ought to be determined by this litigation is whether it is possible to discriminate against a part of the people of this or any other state because of their place of residence.

For many years, in this matter of legislative representation, this state has discriminated against that part of its people who live in Northern Minnesota, to such an extent that the voting power in the legislature of a resident of the North is about one-fifth the voting power of a resident of the South.

That condition is shameful enough, and it is to the lasting disgrace of the state and everybody concerned that the legislature at its recent session failed to provide a remedy by passing a just reapportionment bill.

But if upon this inquiry is heaped the deeper shame that those so unfortunate as to live in cities shall be denied their just share of representation merely because they do live in cities, then will the state's perfidy and dishonor be made complete, and it may well hang its head in disgrace.

Here's a hearty welcome to the Minnesota editors, and may their lake trip be without a flaw of discomfort.

One of the dinners given Admiral Togo in New York recently is said to have cost $100 per plate. It is not surprising his stomach has gone on a strike.

John D. Rockefeller has changed a fast chauffeur for a slower one. John D. does not desire to pass away suddenly even if the dissolution of Standard Oil has been ordered.

JOY RIDING AND ITS DANGERS.

To the Editor of The Herald:

I agree with the position of "Jack Plane" in his communication to The Herald last evening that mothers who are anxious for the welfare of their daughters should be even more careful about allowing them to go "joy riding" in automobiles than attending moving picture shows. My observation is that the automobile is so much worse than even the picture show that the two can hardly be put on the same basis of comparison. I have noticed that there seems to be a general craze among young girls to go riding in the machines. They are so crazy about it that they lose all sense of propriety and go out with men whom they have never seen before. It is not a polite statement to make, but any one with a grain of common sense knows that ninety-nine times out of a hundred men are not taking those girls out without subjecting them to temptation. The automobile, in the wrong hands, can be the cause of the ruin of more girls than any other single modern agency.

HILLSIDER.

Duluth, Aug. 19.

My Kindhearted Boss.

My boss is just as fine a man
As you would care to see.
He told me when I first began
He thought a lot of me.

He takes such interest in my work,
And stints not in his praise.
Not only would I scorn to shirk
But work on holidays.

He calls me in each Christmas eve
And says, "Boy, listen here;
You've done good work, and I believe
We'll keep you one more year."

"Oh, thank you, sir," I humbly say,
He shakes me by the hand;
Then I go back to Ledger J,
And work to beat the band.

He never yet has called me down,
As o'er the books I pore,
Really, sometimes I wish he'd frown
And cuss a little more.

I love kind words, but Hully Gee!
They don't pay grocer's bills;
I'd rather have him swear at me
Than hand me hot air pills.

Each year he seems to grow more kind,
I really like my boss;
But my stool vacant he will find
Unless he comes across.

Some women marry for love, some for a home and a few to spite the other woman.

The reason so many men get married is because they are too tender hearted to refuse.

Marrying a man to reform him is like trying to make a satisfactory omelette out of a bad egg.

The woman who knows how to spank a baby properly didn't acquire the knowledge through a correspondence school.

Every time a new barber comes to town all the bald men drop in to see if he can't suggest something that will make hair grow.

Stonewall Jackson.

One striking feature of Mary Johnston's new novel, "The Long Roll," is the intimacy with which she brings out the personality of the Confederate generals. The following extract narrates the first meeting of Stonewall Jackson and Ewell:—

Jackson's greeting was simple to baldness. Ewell's had the precision of a captain of dragoons. Together they entered the small mill office, where the aides placed lights and writing materials, then withdrew. The generals sat down, one on this side of the deal table, one on that. Jackson took from his pocket a lemon, very deliberately opened a knife, and, cutting the fruit in two, put one half of the sour treasure to his lips. Ewell fidgeted, then, as the other sucked on, determined to see the ball rolling, "Damn me, general! If I am not glad to have the pleasure at last—"

Jackson sent across the table a gray-blue glance, then gently put down one-half of the lemon and took up the other. "Why the deuce should he look at me in that damned reproachful fashion?" though Ewell. He made another start. "There's a damned criss-cross of advices from Richmond. I hate uncertainty like the devil, and so I thought I'd ride across—"

"General Ewell," said Jackson gently, "you will oblige me by not swearing. Profanity, sir, is most distasteful to me. Now, you rode across?"

Ewell swallowed. "Rode across—rode across—I rode across, sir, from Swift Run Gap, and I brought with me two late dispatches from Gen. Johnston and Gen. Lee. I thought some expression, perhaps, to them or your opinion—following the late victory and all—"

The other took and read, laid down the dispatches and applied himself to his lemon. Presently. "I will telegraph tonight to Gen. Johnston and Gen. Lee. I shall advise that you enter the valley as first intended. As for Richmond—we may best serve Richmond by threatening Washington."

"Threatening Washington?"

"At present you are in my district and form part of my command. You will at once move your troops forward a day's march. Upon receipt of advices from Gen. Johnston and Gen. Lee—and if they are of the tenour I expect—you will move with promptness to Luray."

"And then?"

"With promptness to Luray. I strongly value swiftness of movement."

"I understand that, sir. Double the distance in half the time."

"Good! When instructions are given, it is desirable that those instructions be followed. I assume the responsibility of giving the proper instructions."

"I understand general. Obey and ask no questions."

"Just so. Be careful of your ammunition wagon, but otherwise as little impedimenta as possible."

"I understand, sir. The road to glory cannot be followed with much baggage."

Jackson put out his long arm, and gently touched the other's hand. "Good! I should be surprised if we didn't get on very well together."

Little Surprises.

Chicago Tribune: "Mr. Shunk, I find that this line fence encroaches about five inches on your property. I am going to move it back."

"Hold on, mister, you don't have to advertise your lost pocketbook. You will see by an ad we printed this morning that it has been found."

"Pardon me for breaking it for you abruptly, Blithers, but you have been so faithful an employe that we are going to give you a month's vacation this year."

"Why are you trying to get rid of that mining stock, you lunkhead? Don't you know they've struck pay-dirt?"

"You don't need to look so scared, madam; the tooth is out."

"If you insist on my naming the day, Jack, how will next Thursday do"

Bismarck Tribune: Senator Bailey of Texas has resigned another job. This time he leaves the national monetary commission. The regret is that his resignation from the senate cannot be recorded.

THE GREAT JEWISH RACE.

Israel Zangwill in the Independent: This extraordinary race arose as a pastoral clan in Mesopotamia, roved to Palestine, thence to Egypt, and after a period of slavery returned to Palestine as conquerors and agriculturists, there to practice the theocratic code imposed by Moses (perhaps the noblest figure in all history), and to evolve in the course of the ages a poetic and prophetic literature of unparalleled sublimity.

That union of spirituality, intellectuality and fighting power in the breed, which raised it above all ancient races except the Greek, was paid for by an excessive individualism which distracted and divided the state. Jerusalem fell before the legions of Titus. But—half a century before it fell it had produced Christianity and thus entered on a new career of world-conquest. And five centuries after the destruction of Jerusalem, its wandering scions had impregnated Mohammed with the ideas of Islam. Half the world was thus won for Hebraism in some form or other, and the notion of "the Jewish mission" triumphantly vindicated.

Today there is no center of authority, whether religious or political. Reform itself is infinitely individual and nothing remains outside a few centers of congestion but a chaos of dissolving views and dissolving communities, saved from utter disappearance by persecution and racial sympathy. The notion that Jewish interests are Jesuitically federated or that Jewish financiers use their power for Jewish ends is one of the most ironic of myths.

There are no subjects more zealous for their adopted fatherlands, indeed they are only too patriotic. There are no Ottomans so Young-Turkish as the Turkish Jews, no Americans so spread-eagle as the American Jews, no section of Britain so Jingo as Anglo-Jewry, which even converts the Chanukah celebration of Maccabaean valor into a British military festival. Of the two British spies now confined in German fortresses one is a Jew. Rachel, the child of a foreign pedler in a Paris slum, teaches purity of diction to the Fauborg St. Germain; Sarah Bernhardt, the daughter of Dutch Jews, carries the triumph of French acting across the Atlantic. A Hungarian Jew, Ludwig Barnay, played a leading role in the theatrical history of Germany, and another, Von Sonnethal, in that of Austria. For if, like all other peoples, the Jews can only show a few individuals of creative genius, a Heine, a Spinoza, a Josef Israels, a Mendelssohn, etc., they flourish in all the interpretative arts out of all proportion to their numbers.

They flood the concert platforms, whether as conductors, singers or performers. As composers they are more melodious than epoch making. Till recently unpracticed in painting and sculpture, they are now copiously represented in every gallery, and movement, though only rarely as imitators.

Indeed, the Jew is a born intermediary, and every form of artistic and commercial agency falls naturally into his hands. He is the connoisseur par excellence, the universal art dealer. His gift of tongues, his relationship with all the lands of the exile, mark him out for success in commerce and finance, in journalism and criticism, in scholarship and travel. It was by their linguistic talents that the adventurous journeys of Arminius Vambery and Emin Pasha were made possible. If a Russian Jew, Berenson, is the chief authority on Italian art, and George Brandes, the Dane, is Europe's greatest critic, if Reuter initiated telegraphic news and Blowitz was the prince of foreign correspondents, if the Jewish Bank of Amsterdam founded modern finance and Charles Frohman is the world's greatest entrepreneur, all these phenomena find their explanation in the cosmopolitanism of the wandering Jew. Lifted to the plane of idealism, this cosmopolitan habit of mind creates socialism through Karl Marx and Lassalle, an international language through Dr. Zamenhof, the inventor of Esperanto; a prophecy of the end of war through Jean de Bloch, an international institute of agriculture through David Lubin, and a race congress through Dr. Felix Adler. For when the Jew grows out of his own ghetto without narrowing into his neighbor's he must necessarily possess a superior sense of perspective.

As a physician the Jew's fame dates from the Middle Ages, when he was the hearer of Arabian science, and the tradition that kings shall always have Jewish physicians is still unbroken. Dr. Ehrlich's recent discovery and Dr. Haffkine's inoculation against the plague in India are but links in a long chain of Jewish contributions to medicine. Nor would it be possible to mention any other science, whether natural or philological, to which Jewish professors have not contributed revolutionizing ideas. The names of Lombroso for criminology, Benfey for Sanscrit, Jules Oppert for Assyriology, Sylvester for mathematics and Mendeleiff for chemistry ("The Periodic Law") must suffice as examples.

In law, mathematics and philosophy the Jew is peculiarly at home, especially as an expounder. In chess he literally sweeps the board. There is never a contest for the championship of the world in which both rivals are not Jews. Even the first man to fly (and die) was the Jew Lilienthal.

But to gauge the contribution of the Jew to the world's activity is impossible here. To mention only living Jews, one thinks at random of Rothschilds, with their ubiquitous financial and philanthropic activity; Sir Ernest Cassel, financing the irrigation of Egypt; Jacob Schiff, financing the Japanese war against Russia and building up the American Jewry; Herr Ballin, creating the Hamburg-American line; Maximilian Harden's bold political journalism, the Dutch jurist Asser at The Hague conference, or the American statesman and peace lover, Oscar Straus; the French plays of Bernstein, or the German plays of Ludwig Fulda, or the Dutch plays of Heyermanns, or the Austrian plays of Schnitzler, the trenchant writings of Max Nordeau, the paintings of Solomon and Rothenstein, of Jules Adler and Max Liebermann, the archaeologic excavations of Waldstein, Hammerstein building the English opera house, Imre Kiralfy organizing our exhibitions, Sidney Lee editing the Dictionary of English Biography, Sir Matthew Nathan managing the postoffice, Meidola investigating coal tar dyes, the opera of Goldmark, the music plays of Herr Oscar Strauss and Humperdinck (Herr Max Bernstein), the learned synopses of Solomon Reinach, the sculpture of Antokolsky, Mischa Elman and his violin, Sir Rufus Isaacs pleading on behalf of the crown, Signor Nathan polemizing with the pope, Dr. Frederick Cowen conducting one of his own symphonies, Michelson measuring the velocity of light, Lippmann developing color photography, Henri Bergson giving pause to materialism with his new philosophy of creative evolution, Breal expounding the science of Semantics, of Herrman Cohen and his neo-Kantism, and one wonders what the tale would be both for yesterday and today if every Jew wore a yellow badge and every crypto-Jew came out into the open, and every half Jew were as discoverable as Montaigne or the composer of "The Mikado." The church could not even write its own history; that was left for the Jew Neander.

To the Gentile the true Jewish problem should rather be how to keep the Jew in his midst, this rare 1 per cent of mankind. The elimination of all this genius and geniality would surely not enhance the gaiety of nations. Without Disraeli would not England lose her only saint's day?

SATURDAY NIGHT TALK

The Habit of Picking Up Horseshoes

Everyone knows that the horseshoe is an emblem of good fortune. Most of us will stop on the road to rescue one from the dust. We have a hazy notion that somehow this discarded equine footwear will bring us luck. We nail it up on the shed door and wait for the fairies to begin delivering their gifts. If it is left lying in the road there is no telling how soon we shall lose money or break a limb or meet some other calamity.

The old superstition comes out of a remote past. It is part of an early belief that the horseshoe was a protection against witches. It is said that for this reason a horseshoe was at one time nailed over nearly every door in London.

What value now really inheres in Dobbin's old shoe that you so carefully carry home? The value of the old iron that you have saved; the amount that the junk man will give you for your treasure—no less and no more. As a guarantee of fortune you may as well have nailed up an oil can or a scrubbing brush or a pine shingle.

We are led, as you see, gentle reader, into a discussion of the whole subject of luck, a subject on which not all of us doubtless will agree. We make bold to ask whether there really is any such thing. May we rightly speak of chance in this universe? Does anything ever merely happen? Is the world run by caprice and are we the creatures of conditions that are without rhyme or reason?

Of course the whole spirit of present-day thinking answers, no. If there is one thing of which modern science is convinced it is that the universe is one of law. Every effect is preceded by a cause. Nothing, absolutely nothing comes to pass without adequate ground deep down in the texture of the universe. As regards every minutest operation of nature science upholds the proposition of those enterprising people who tell us why we should use a certain popular cereal, namely, "There's a reason."

And if all this is true of nature it is true also of human nature. Chance is ruled out of the moral world no less than out of the physical. Of course we must notice that some meet constant success in this world while others meet equally constant failure. Some find life a long, hard way while for others it is rose-strewn. There is a great inequality in human lots.

All we mean to claim is that if we could see deeply enough into any condition occupied by man we should see that there is a reason for the condition. No man is the victim of chance or its victim either because, in the last analysis of the matter, there is no such thing as chance. Everything that occurs is in accord with law and order.

It is bad theory and bad practice both to sit around waiting for "luck" to bring us our desires. Success comes to those who fulfill right conditions. We gain the prizes of life for which we are willing to pay in terms of labor, self-denial and persistence. In the old story Aladdin had but to rub his magical lamp to summon obliging genii who satisfied his every whim. But that sort of talisman exists only in fiction. The real genii who brings gifts to men are named effort, foresight and endurance.

Where is there a stronger statement of the general truth than in those New Testament words, "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." It is simply an assertion of the presence of law in the lives of men. It leaves no room for chance. It bars out the horseshoe conception of things completely. It asserts that we ourselves are the fashioners of our own careers.

It is easy to blame our "luck" for the failures that we encounter. We are tempted to assume that men are like leaves to be blown hither and yon by the chance winds of destiny. But all that is wrong reasoning. Each human being may say with the poet Henley, "I am the master of my fate." That puts the ultimate responsibility where it belongs.

Pick up horseshoes if you will, but don't expect that they will bring you anything more than the market price for old iron.

He found in a little closet an old man named Andrew Spangberg, lying upon a bed of boards, practically naked and covered with filth. He was taken out on a stretcher and removed to St. Mary's hospital. Spangberg, who is about 68 years of age, came here in the late 60's, and several Scandinavian pioneers who knew him well supposed he was dead. It is believed that he has been incarcerated for nearly three years by Lindberg, who is his son-in-law. Spangberg is a man of means and is drawing a pension from the Swedish government for service in its department of forestry. It is believed that a week's nursing will put him in shape to tell the whole story of his ill-treatment.

A NEW EVANGEL

By SAVOYARD.

One of the most remarkable speeches that has been delivered in either house of the American congress in a double decade was that of William C. Redfield, a Democratic member of the Sixty-second congress from Brooklyn, N. Y. Mr. Redfield is a manufacturer and pays the highest wages in the world for what proves to be the cheapest labor in the world. He makes engines and sells them abroad, even in far-off Asia, in successful competition with England, Germany, France, and the other great manufacturing countries of Europe. It is his theory and his argument that with absolute free trade with all the world, our country would do most of the manufacturing that is done in the world.

In 1890, Roger Q. Mills stumped New England preaching the same evangel, asserting that with free raw materials our manufacturers would dominate the world in hundreds of lines. That year, for the first time since our party was labeled "Democrat," we got a majority of the New England delegation in congress, and the majority of the Massachusetts delegation was made up of Democrats, a thing unheard of theretofore.

• • •

I make no apology for quoting liberally from Mr. Redfield's remarkable speech. Here is something that ought to appeal to every citizen, however dense his ignorance or venomous his prejudice touching the tariff:

"How does it happen, Mr. Chairman, that in a quotation recently made for machinery to a mine in Japan the American price was $215 less than the English price? How does it happen that those American locomotives are running upon those Japanese railways, upon those of Formosa, upon those of Manchuria? How does it happen that American englnes are sold in Hong-Kong? How does it happen that I sent one day before yesterday to Rangoon? These are sold in competition with makers in Great Britain. I happen to know what those locomotives cost, relative to those made by German and English manufacturers, and I happen also to know this, which is one of several stories which will illustrate the particular contention, namely, that last January I was in the city of Toklo, and a friend who was with me took a large contract, by the way, from the Japanese Imperial State railways, in open competition with Germany and England, for several million dollars' worth of locomotives. That gentleman went to the locomotive shops of the Imperial railways, and the Japanese master mechanic said to him: 'We can make locomotives much cheaper than you can in America.' 'Can you?' inquired my friend. 'If so, let us get at the facts. If you will tell me from your cost sheets precisely what your locomotives cost, I will tell you what ours cost.' And, by the way, he said: 'What makes you think your locomotives cost less than ours?' 'Why,' he said, 'because we only pay one-fifth the wages to our men that you pay to yours.'

"So they got the cost books, and found the fact was that the labor cost for locomotives on the same specifications was three and one-half times greater in the Japanese shop than in the American shops. And that is a perfectly normal fact and not an abnormal one."

• • •

Then Mr. Redfield told how his agent showed him American shoes that he bought 'n Calcutta for $3.80 that were the identical shoes sold in New York for $5. He bought American lead pencils in Java and American shaving soap in Hongkong. Mr. Redfield stated that the city of Liege has the lowest priced industrial labor in Europe; but that he offered to sell his goods to a merchant there cheaper than the Liege price; but the man would not take the order because it was against his principle to buy anything produced in a country that put up a high tariff wall against his country. That is the shackle the tariff robbers have put on industrial America. He said that on the main street of the city of Batavia, is a very fine office building, one of the finest in Java, and over the door is this legend: "United States Steel Products Co."

He is one manufacturer—and soon their name will be legion—who regards the tariff as a fetter to enslave him and not a shield to protect him. In less than twenty years an immense majority of American manufacturers will embrace the tariff idea of Mr. Redfield, which is the tariff idea of Carlisle and Mills, Cleveland and Bryan, Robert J. Walker, Albert Gallatin and James Guthrie. Then the citadel of that screaming fraud, protection, will be in Louisiana and other Southern states.

• • •

Mr. Redfield brought down the house with this narrative:

"When a tariff bill was pending, Mr. Chairman, some years ago, a representative of a crucible-steel works in Pittsburg came into my office and said, 'I have a petition I would like to have you sign.' I said, 'What is it?' He replied, 'It is a petition to have the duty on our product advanced.' I asked him why. I ought, perhaps, to explain, Mr. Chairman, that manufacturers have talked very freely with me for many years, assuming, as a matter of course, that I agreed with them in their particular views, and this man went on to say in answer to my question as to why they wanted this additional duty: 'We have got to keep the standard of American living; we have got to hold up the American rate of wages and see that our American working people live on a basis far better than the pauper labor of Europe.' I said, 'That is very interesting. How much of the proposed increase do you propose to add to your pay roll?' He said they had not yet given that serious consideration. (Laughter.) I asked him if he would add any portion of this increased duty to the pay roll, and he replied that they had not got to that yet. I said to him, 'I have already signed a petition to have our duty reduced, but if you will enter into a contract with me here and now that within a year after the duty is increased you will add any percentage to your pay roll, then I will recall my petition and sign yours and publish the facts.' He said, 'You could not expect me to do that.' (Laughter.) I said to him, 'Now, Mr. So-and-so'—I knew him very well—I said, 'Now, Mr. So-and-so, you are paying ten per cent, are you not?' He said he was. I then asked him if his desire was not simply to pay a little better than ten per cent. He said, 'Well, Mr. Redfield, you know how these things go.'" (Laughter.)

• • •

American labor is the most efficient in the world, and that is the sole and only reason that it is the highest priced labor in the world. Is it not the shrewdest economy to pay a hand who will "cut and split" 300 rails a day $2, rather than hire another at $1 a day who can "cut and split" only 100 rails a day? That dollar-a-day man will never run that two-dollars-a-day man out of a job. On the contrary, the two-dollars-a-day man will run the dollar-a-day man out of his job.

With our superior machinery our high-priced labor turns out thirty-six pairs of shoes while the low-priced labor of Germany will turn out but sixteen pairs. Then which is the cheaper labor? Ours, and give our manufacturers the advantages that England gives hers and we will flood even England with cheap American goods.

It is for the South to say whether the manufacturing of the country shall be done in that section mainly. The first step is free raw materials, the next is tariff for revenue only on the finished products that compete with ours, and on non-competitive products, like tea and coffee.

• • •

Mr. Redfield ridiculed Taft's tariff board that is engaged in the impossible task of ascertaining cost of production at home and abroad. He is a business man and his speech had a telling effect. I understand one million copies have been printed. Write to Hon. William C. Redfield, M. C., Washington, D. C., for a copy. It is a gem, and twenty years hence nine of every ten American manufacturers will be in accord with him. Then we will smash protection, and make an honest, a Democratic and a constitutional tariff.

MAY RENEW CONTRACTS

Refusal of Federation to Change Contract Clause Pleases Butte.

Davis-Daly Company Resumes Shipping From Its Colorado Mine.

Butte, Mont., Aug. 19.—The contract between the Anaconda Copper Mining company and the Miners' union expires next April in regard to a scale of wages and it was therefore with a good deal of interest the mining people watched the proceedings of the Western Federation of Miners at their annual convention when the question came up to strike out the clause in the constitution proldibiting time contracts with companies. The Anaconda company now has a contract covering its properties in this city, Anaconda ano Great Falls, as to wages and some of the more radical members of the organization desired to prevent any attempt at renewal. That they failed is a source of congratulation to all concerned for there is no company operating in the country today, as was shown by the legislative investigating committee appointed at the last session of the state legislature, where the miners are treated as fairly and considerately as by the Anaconda company. Every year improvements are being made looking to the health, comfort, and safety of the men and practically every mine is provided with dine, steamheated quarters where, after coming up from the depths, they can go in, take a bath, change their clothing and walk downtown clothed in their best suit if they so desire. Then the ventilation is being improved by the installation of large electric fans and new ventilating shafts. The refusal of the convention to repeal the contract system clause will make it easy for the Butte Miners' union next spring to renew the contract now existing if the company so desires.

Another matter which received attention was the recommendation of President Moyer of the Western Federation of Miners to the effect that it might prove advantageous for miners and smelter men to secure stock in mines and smelters in which they worked. This was voted down as deemed impracticable.

It was decided to take up the cause of the miners in the Black Hills by levying an assessment of $1 a month on every member of the Western Federation, and further, the members of the executive committee were directed to visit the district and investigate conditions existing.

There was a proposition before the convention to call a general strike on the day the McNamara brothers go on trial, but the conservative element again won out, after the Canadian delegates had called attention to the fact that under the laws of that country no union could strike in a body without the members becoming liable to arrest. However, the convention decided to assess every member 25 cents each for the defense of the alleged dynamiters.

After being out of the shipping class for a long period of time, the Davis-Daly company is once more to resume shipping ore from its Colorado mine. Orders were issued by Manager Bacon after his return from the East and it is expected that inside of a week the Colorado will be hoisting ore. More than a year ago the company received permission from the city council to construct a line of railway through certain streets from the mine to the railway tracks, for the purpose of getting clear of the heavy expense of hauling ore by team to a point for shipment. While the track was all laid no connection was ever made with the railway and this is being done now and ore bins are being installed for the dumping of the ore and transferring it to the railway cars. During the time the mine has been closed down as far as shipping ore is concerned, a small force of men carried on development work, with the result that a large quantity of ore has been blocked out and some new ore bodies opened up. As to the grade of the ore little is known, and nothing will be given out officially, but it is taken for granted that rumors of some valuable ore being uncovered on the 1,700-foot level west are considered quite true, especially in view of the recent order to start shipping. The shipments will be 100 tons a day for the present, it is not yet finally decided as to whether the ore will go to the Washoe smelter or the East Butte, this depending on the rates secured.

The Diamond mine will be started up in the course of a week under the compressed air system for hoisting ore and just as soon as everything is working satisfactorily the Rarus ore will be closed down to have the engine fitted with the new cylinders.

The Tuolumne company is increasing its output this month and the production is expected to be somewhere in the vicinity of 750,000 pounds as compared with 500,000 pounds during the past month. This output will be maintained for the next three months, after which the new surface plant is expected to be in operation and then the output, if conditions at all warrant it, will be increased to about 1,000,000 pounds a month. The Butte, Anaconda and Pacific railway spur from the Tuolumne to the connection with the main ore line running to the Washoe smelter has been completed and the ore is now going direct to Anaconda from the mine. This means considerable of a saving for the Tuolumne company as it was paying 60 cents a ton for haulage by team from the mine to the railway track. All the parts of the new hoist and gallows frame have arrived from the Nordberg works of Milwaukee and workmen are now engaged in preparing to set the new machinery up.

Heinze's Stewart mine is said to be earning net $25,000 a month from its ore shipments, which consist of 500 tons a day to the concentrator at Wallace, Idaho, and 2,000 tons a month of crude and concentrates to the East Helena smelter. A large amount of development work is being carried on and new ore bodies are being opened up.

A dozen men have come forward with a claim that they own a one-tenth interest in the Wild Bill claim, the property of the Anaconda Copper Mining company. They have filed a suit in the district court asking for an accounting of the ore extracted and one-tenth of the proceeds. The value of the ore alleged to have been taken out is placed at $5,110,000 and it is set forth in the complaint that this ore was taken out since Aug. 1, 1899.

The Pilot Butte company which commenced sinking the shaft from the depth of 530 feet about two weeks ago is making so far about four feet a day and it is estimated that the upraising party coming from a depth of 1,300 feet after cutting through from the Black Rock mine of the Butte and Superior company will be met in about four months.

Some time ago it was stated in these columns that an important question as to making mining stock assessable after the stock had been issued and paid for was to come before the courts in the case of Edward Travathan and Joseph Plackett against the Butte-Bernice Mining company. The plaintiffs went into court and secured a temporary injunction forbidding the sale of stock, duly advertised for nonpayment of assessment on the ground that the company was organized as a non-assessable company and that the assessment had been made for the purpose of fraudulently depriving them of their holdings. In the application it was asked that the sale be enjoined and the assessment annulled. The temporary injunction was issued. A few days ago application was made to the court by the company to have the injunction dissolved on the ground that the sale had been made half an hour before the injunction notice was served and for the further reason that the plaintiffs were present at a meeting of stockholders at which it was decided to make the stock assessable. President McGowan of the company in an affidavit said that there was a chance to sell the entire holdings of the plaintiffs for $45,000 and if the injunction were allowed to remain it would work against the deal being completed. The judge, however, took a different view of the situation from the officers of the company and refused to dissolve the injunction, so that the case will now go to trial on its merits.

Nothing definite as to the time for commencing work on the proposed concentrator for the Butte and Superior company has yet been announced and there is a story to the effect that the work may not be started before next spring, owing to a delay in arranging details as to the plant to be installed.

The ore from the Gagnon mine is now being hoisted through the Original shaft, connections having recently been made. The new three compartment shaft of the Gagnon which is being sunk to the westward of the old shaft is down a little over 1,900, which leaves 400 feet more to go to bring it down to the depth of the mine. Connections will be made with the main workings of the Gagnon and the new shaft will be used for ventilating purposes and will also be in readiness in case it is required through an accident to the original.

WORK MINE ON TRIBUTE

Operations at Michigan Property Are on Individual Basis.

Hubbell, Mich., Aug. 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—Unable itself to produce copper at a profit with the red metal selling at 12½ cents a pound, the Michigan mine at Rockland, Ontonagon county, is furnishing remunerative employment to a dozen or fifteen men who are working the property on tribute. The men take out only mass copper. They pay the entire expense of mining and bringing the product to surface and give the company one-half of the revenue, yet since the company itself suspended operations a year and more ago the tributors each have netted from $5 to $10 a day.

Not until copper brings around 15 cents a pound is it likely that the company will resume work on its own account. The veins are so narrow and, the mass copper excepted, are so lean in mineral the rock yields less than 1 per cent to the top—that regular mining operations cannot be conducted profitably in the present depressed conditon of the market. The tributors themselves doubtless will be compelled to quit work a few months hence. This is because the mine is gradually filling with water. The water is rising only at the rate of one inch a day and is still at 1,000 feet below the surface, but it is in the vicinity of the present water level that the men are operating, and it will not be a lengthy interval before they either are forced to abandon their search for the red metal or else transfer it to the upper levels, which are largely worked out.

Included in the Michigan property is the old Minnesota mine, easily the most famous copper mine of Lake Superior in the early days. In point of profits its only rival was the Cliff, while in the monstrous size of its masses of virgin copper it had no equal. One mass that made the Minnesota famous was found in 1856. Its dimensions were 12½ by 18½ by 46 feet, and its weight was 527 tons. It required twenty men fifteen months, working with long-handled chisels, to cut this mass into pieces small enough for hoisting, and twenty-seven tons of copper chips were made in doing this work. Many smaller masses, some of which ranged up to several hundreds tons in weight, were taken from this mine, and there is no question that it deserves the title of the richest copper mine ever opened.

History of the Minnesota.

No other mine opened has ever yielded such enormous quantities of copper from such a small opening as were furnished by the best stopes of the Minnesota.

The Minnesota was discovered in 1847, through the finding of an Indian pit in which was a six-ton mass of native copper that had been broken from its matrix of rock and raised on skids. The skids had rotted centuries before, and on the soil that had covered the nugget grew a hemlock tree showing nearly 400 rings of annual growth. The mine was opened in 1848 and was closed by the company in 1870, after which several hundred tons of copper were secured by tributors working above the adit level. The mine returned dividends of $1,820,000, from 1854 until 1876, the last dividend being paid in liquidation.

There was evidently a screw loose in the management of the mine, for in 1870, after the company gave up work, tributors secured 270½ tons of ingot copper underground, working without many of the conveniences that the company enjoyed, this product selling for $93,336.48, and as late as 1880, ten years after regular mining work was suspended, twenty-five tons of mass and barrel copper were taken out of the levels above the water line. The present company was organized in 1899.

In the early days of the Michigan, and when mass copper principally was sought, much of the rock hoisted out of the mine was dumped as debris on surface. After the suspension in 1870 men made big money in picking over this rock and selling the copper it contained. There is still a great deal of the red metal in the old piles, but as these piles have been covered with rock mined in later years, when less extravagant practices prevailed, it hardly would pay tributors to attempt the recovery of the buried riches.

RICH STRIKE AT HOUGHTON

Copper Company Encounters Valuable Ore on the Baltic Lode.

North Lake Company Will Break Ground for Working Shaft.

Houghton, Mich., Aug. 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Houghton Copper company, operating next north of the Superior mine on the Baltic lode, has encountered exceedingly rich copper ground in the crosscut run out from the shaft and in the 460-foot level. The disclosure was made about sixty feet from the shaft, and in the same formation as that in which the Superior mine is opened. It is the first showing obtained here.

North Lake.

The North Lake Mining company expects soon to break ground for a working shaft to further explore the several amygdaloidal beds disclosed in the diamond drill exploratory campaign now drawing to a close. The shaft will be started immediately upon the completion of the drill hole now being put down. This hole will probably be the last of the series, and at last reports was down over 500 feet in the overburden with no indications of bed rock.

Calumet & Hecla.

The Calumet & Hecla Mining company has decided upon the erection of a second regrinding plant. The new plant will handle the mill tailings from the Calumet mill. A third regrinding plant is planned. The first plant has been in operation a little over two years resulting in the production of 2,000,000 to 3,000,000 pounds copper annually at a cost of not to exceed 6 cents per pound from material generally believed to be without value.

Indiana.

The Indiana Mining company is making excellent progress in shaft work over on the felsito bed. A depth of 175 feet has been attained. At about 200 feet or possibly a little greater depth a crosscut is planned to reach the rich deposit disclosed in the drill, borings previously made. The exploratory pit opened on the new drill borings previously made. The exploratory pit opened on the new lode to the westward has been equipped with necessary machinery and work there will be diminished despite the many reports that the mill recovery in more recent periods has shown a gradual decline. Mining operations are centered in this lode in the seventeenth, eighteenth and eighteenth levels. The property is fully equipped and for all time, a mine on the No. 3 lode and an exceptional prospect on the Quincy-Pewabic.

Ojibway.

The Ojibway Mining company has set no definite date for the proposed mill test, but at the mine is blocking out ground with commendable energy and will have no difficulty in keeping one modern stamp fully occupied once milling is begun. A start is promised before the end of the year, and very likely will be made in the old Phoenix stamp mill, now the property of the Keweenaw Copper company. Shaft work was ceased some months ago and all activity continues centered in the extension of lateral workings in No. 2 shaft from the 1,350-foot level to the 1,550-foot level. This shaft is slightly over 1,600 feet deep. The No. 2 shaft is down around 1,920 feet. No. 1 shaft is showing commercial copper ground in its new and newer openings. No. 2 shaft is idle and without any showing of importance in rather limited openings.

Soph Lake.

The South Lake Mining company is nearing the ledge in the shaft started with the object of developing the several copper deposits disclosed in the recent exploratory campaign and which in every instance yielded cores indicating commercial values. The contour of the ledge underlying the overburden and along the strike of the shaft has been determined by driving sand pipes, and at this way the dip or pitch of the shaft fixed at about 60 deg. with the assurance that the shaft will remain in solid rock. The collar of the shaft is 500 feet distant from the nearest lode in the site being selected to avoid the extremely heavy overburden directly overlying the apices of the South Lake lodes. The company is operating with commendable economy, has a force of about twenty men on the job, and during last month expended less than $1,500 in this work.

MONTANA GOLD OUTPUT FOR JULY

Nearly $200,000 Produced By Mines of State in One Month.

Helena, Mont., Aug. 19.—One of the most satisfactory monthly reports ever emanating from the government assay office in this city was made last week for the month of July showing a substantial increase in the output of gold, silver and other precious metals from each of the Montana counties, Fergus county excepted. Madison county, where several dredging processes have been in operation this summer, was the largest contributor, that county shipping during July $65,537.79, and of this amount it is said practically all came from the placer properties of that county. The contributions from the other counties follow: Beaverhead, $10.65; Broadwater, $1,324.90; Chouteau, $57,955.76; Fergus, $28,184.17; Deer Lodge, $98.04; Granite, $336.64; Jefferson, $779.75; Lewis and Clark, $13,310.19; Madison, $65,537.79; Missoula, $3,668.17; Park, $118.57; Powell, $5,876.28; Silver Bow, $832.70. Total, $177,943.01.

The fact that nearly $200,000 in gold, silver and other metals was mined from the mines of Montana in one month, in addition to the much greater amounts taken from the mines of Butte and elsewhere and not marketed at the Helena assay office, is conslusive proof that the mining industry in this state is still an important factor. This summer the industry has been on a firmer footing than for some years past. A number of new properties or old abandoned properties have been opened up and deeper mining has resulted in bigger profits in a number of cases. Especially is this true in the Radersburg district. The Butte and Lake Superior companies have representatives in this district; numerous Helena mining men are interested there, and the district has also attracted the attention of some Easterners. The greatest depth attained so far in any of the mines is about 700 feet, which depth is had in both the Keating and Black Friday mine shafts. The ores lie in well defined chutes of many hundred feet in length and show the greatest values in the lowest workings. Many carload shipments are running close to $100 a ton in gold. The permanency of the mines now shipping is assured for many years to come, and there is every reason to believe that many other mines will be developed in the district tributary. The formation of Radersburg, in which the mines now developed to paying propositions are found, is diorite, an eruptive rock. It is a close grained gray colored rock, and shows at Radersburg in a restricted area, which, roughly estimated, is about three and one-half miles in width and is intruded into the sedimentary formations. The vein system has a series of veins running about north and south, and in these veins rich ores or iron sulphides, carrying values principally in gold, are found. The ore is almost free from silica, and on this account a low smelting rate is obtained.

Another district which is giving renewed promise is the Marysville district. The 40-stamp mill of the St. Louis Mining company is running on gold ore from the Nine Hour workings, which is about the same grade of ore as that which enabled the old Montana Mining company to pay dividends of several million dollars. The properties of the Montana company are now owned by the St. Louis company.

British Columbia Copper Property Is Proving a Big Winner.

E. G. Wallinder, a well known Duluth manufacturer and mining man, is about to leave for the Kamloops Copper company's mines, of which he is president. When asked regarding the present outlook, Mr. Wallinder produced a check for $1,415.59, which he just received from the Tyee smelter at Vancourver, and remarked that there were more on the way.

A number of Duluth, Superior and range people, prominent in business and professional walks of life, are interested in the Kamloops mines, and many of these have at various times visited the properties in person. Some twenty-one of the stockholders have been in Kamloops, and all of them are pleased with their investment in the company. The Iron Mask mine, which is but one of the properties of the Kamloops company, is 600 feet deep, and more than 8,000 feet of underground work has been done. Large quantities of ore have been exposed in the several properties of the company, and for some time now the company has been mining and milling sulphide ores and shipping the product to the Tyee smelter at Vancouver.

More than a year ago Engineer Charles J. Stone of Butte recommended numerous alterations, additions and improvements to the equipment at the mines. The matter has been thoroughly investigated, plans and specifications made and prices obtained, and now the company has decided to go ahead with the work. Late in June a party of stockholders visited the mines and becoming convinced of the advisability of carrying through the recommendations urged upon the company the importance of finishing the work at the earliest possible date. The result was a large portion of the money needed was subscribed at once.

Dr. J. J. Eklund, banker and capitalist, is chairman of the Kamloops finance committee, and he personally visited the mines some time ago. At a recent meeting of the stockholders Dr. Eklund stated that he was satisfied that the ore was in the company's property in such quantities that it would require generations to mine it out, and Carl E. Nystrom, one of Duluth's foremost architects, visited the mines in June of this year and took many samples that assayed from 20 to 40 per cent in copper. Mr. Nystrom is positive in his declarations that Kamloops will be one of the greatest paying mines of the continent.

Among the other prominent stockholders who have visited the mines and have shown their faith in their investment by buying additional stock are such men as Attorney John Jenswold, Jr., Reiner Hoch, president of the Duluth Brewing & Malting company, E. G. Wallinder, president of the Kamloops company; C. E. Evans of the Duluth Cut Stone company, Frank Nathan of the Columbia Clothing company of Superior, John A. Kennedy, superintendent of the Virginia Water & Light company, Axel Pakkala, treasurer of the Virginia Brewing company; M. A. Fedji, retired clothier of Duluth, and many others.

"It might be news to you," said Mr. Wallinder, "that ores from our mines at Kamloops have taken the first prize at three annual mining expositions held at Spokane. This silver cup is one of them," he continued, pointing to a handsome loving cup on his desk.

CORUNDUM IS RARE MINERAL

It is a fact not generally known that corundum is one of the rarest and most precious of minerals.

There are several varieties, those of the dull massive sort used for commercial purposes are known as corundum and emery. Besides these, however, there are the sapphire, ruby, emerald, topaz and nearly all the precious stones which are varieties of corundum. This mineral ranks next to the diamond in hardness and is even more valuable than the diamond. A corundum ruby or sapphire is worth three times as much as a diamond of the same size.

The beautiful metal aluminum is easily obtained from corundum by an electric process of heating. Corundum is composed of aluminum and oxygen. Iron ore is a compound of iron and oxygen, and in smelting iron ore, thirteen hundred degrees of heat are necessary, but it requires only seven hundred degrees to smelt aluminum ore. Aluminum can therefore be produced much more cheaply than iron. The price of a pound of pure aluminum is $1.30. The price of corundum, the ore from which it is obtained is all the way from $60.00 to $500.00 per ton. The cost of the production of one pound of aluminum is about one-half the cost of the production of one pound of iron.

Uses of Aluminum.

Aluminum alloyed with iron makes a composition metal much lighter than iron, which never rusts and can be used in place of iron in many ways. Made into sheet metal, it is used for interior finishing of dwelling houses and other buildings. It makes excellent siding and roofing for houses, and is very durable. Cooking utensils made of this alloy are light, durable and more healthful than those made of any other material. Milk cans, water pails, and all such vessels are now made of this alloy.

Another alloy of aluminum with copper, known as gold aluminum is used for the manufacture of many articles of jewelry and in dentist work. This composition so nearly resembles gold that it is difficult to distinguish it from the precious metal. Nearly all the so-called gold alloys are in reality alloys of aluminum with copper. It is worth $2.50 per ounce and outwears gold, does not tarnish, and is equally as serviceable as gold for many uses.

Powdered aluminum is used as a paint, and recently it has been discovered that an excellent cement can be made from corundum, the aluminum ore. This cement is used to stop leaks or mend any kind of household articles, enamel ware or any crockery, glassware, porcelain or earthenware. In fact, many such articles are now manufactured from corundum. But feldspar is used more commonly for the making of dishes, crockery, doorknobs and such like.

Feldspar.

Where deposits of corundum are found, feldspar is also found in greater or less quantities. Corundum, however, is easily distinguished from feldspar by any one who knows anything about minerals, on account of its exceeding hardness, corundum being nine in hardness, while feldspar is only six in hardness.

The output of corundum and of feldspar has very greatly increased within the last ten years. New fields have been opened up recently. One of these is on the north shore of Lake Superior, not far from Duluth, another extensive field is no woperated in Ontario, Can., north of the city of Kingston. Both feldspar and corundum are found there and both minerals are being mined. Companies are buying up large sections of land for the purpose of mining feldspar, but very little is said about the presence of corundum there, for then the property could not be bought for the prices now being paid for the land. The mines are called feldspar mines and feldspar is taken out in great quantities. Very few people know that feldspar is not the same thing as corundum. Feldspar is not nearly so valuable as corundum. It is corundum that produces the metal aluminum. There is no aluminum in feldspar and corundum is a rare mineral while feldspar is plentiful, being found in all parts of the world.

The production of aluminum does not depend entirely upon the amount obtained from corundum. It is also obtained from clay in considerable quantities, otherwise, the scarcity of the supply of corundum would make aluminum almost as expensive as gold or platinum.

OPERATIONS INCREASED

More Men Employed on Marquette Range Now Than a Year Ago.

The E. N. Breitung company, which this season has added 400 men to the crews at its mines at Negaunee, Marquette iron range, and which is still increasing working forces there, is preparing to operate the Baron property at Humboldt more vigorously. The Baron has been giving employment to 200 men. Fifty more men are now being taken on. The Breitung interests have made heavier sales of ore this year than during any previous season, and they are now employing 1,200 men at their various Marquette range producers. For some time past the miners at the Negaunee properties, particularly the Mary Charlotte, have been putting in as much overtime as they desire to work. The steam shovels are operating seven days a week, and so is a portion of the labor in other departments.

The Cleveland Cliffs Iron company, although not shipping the quantity of ore sent out a year ago, is employing normal forces at its mines at Ishpeming and Negaunee, as well as in the Swanzy field, and some additional men recently have been put on at the North Lake property. The crews at this new mine have been increased as the workings have been developed and it is expected that a year hence several hundred men will be on the payroll. The Steel corporation is still working its Lake Superior mines at Ishpeming four days a week. Its Negaunee and Swanzy properties are, however, on a six-day basis, with practically the same forces as employed last year.

More Men Working.

All things considered, there are a greater number of men working on the Marquette range than a year ago. The Cambria Steel company is now operating its Republic mine five days a week, instead of four, as recently, and it is expected the full six-day schedule will be resumed shortly. Due to an increase in the ore traffic, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway has reopened its train dispatchers' office at Channing, Mich. This office had been closed two months or more.

The Iron River Ore company, a newly organized home concern, formed to operate in the Iron River field of the Menominee range, has its first sand pipe down to the ledge and has started diamond drilling operations. The property to be tested is in section 22, 42-35, directly across the line from the Niagara Mining company's exploration, on which an important body of ore has been proved up. It appears to be on the same formation as the Bates, James, Kaseeo, Goodman and Donahue tracts, which are known to contain large deposits, the James now having been on the shipping list several years, with the Goodman to be added very soon. To the north, in section 15, the diamond drill has shown the Jones & Laughlin Steel company of Pittsburg to possess a valuable property. Iron River people are confident their own company will be successful in its search.

New Club House.

Pickands, Mather & Co. have awarded a contract for the erection of a clubhouse at the Caspian location, at Stambaugh, Menominee range. The institution will be for the use of the men at the Caspian and Fogarty mines. The building will be similar to the clubhouse at the company's Baltic property, in the same district, although larger. It will be provided with bowling alleys, billiard and pool tables, baths, library and other features customary in establishments of the kind.

Max Rudolph, chief engineer of the drafting department of Max Klar's company of Hanover, Germany, is in Marquette, Mich., to assist Herr Klar in making plans for remodeling the chemical plant of the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company's furnace at Gladstone, Mich. The Klar process of utilizing the by-products of the kilns is in successful operation at the Marquette plant of the company, and is now to be installed at Gladstone, also.

SUPERIOR TAKES FINAL GAME FROM THE PIRATES

Winona, Minn., Aug. 19.—Superior split even in the hottest contested series in the history of the Minny league by taking the last game of the series with Winona, 5 to 4. The game was a hard-fought one from first to last, and some of the best playing seen on the Winona grounds for years was the result.

In the first inning, with two men gone, Curtis tripled to deep center, sending Davey and Collins across the plate ahead of him. Through a walk, an out and a double the visitors added one in the second. A walk, an error and a single made Winona's total three in the second, and the home rooters saw early visions of victory.

Superior grabbed two in the third, tieing up the score, a pass, two singles, a sacrifice fly and a double giving the Red Legs two runs. In the fifth Superior went into the lead. Baillies relieved Wagner in the fifth and Dunbar came to the rescue of Dahlgren.

Winona scored its last run in the fifth, tying up the score. Davey doubled and a fielder's choice and a wild throw by Count Lippold did the work. The visitors came back in the ninth and scored the winning run, through a walk, a single, a bad throw by Uncle Joe Killian and Dolan's single.

COLONELS BLANKED IN EIGHT-INNING GAME.

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 19.—Toledo blanked Louisville yesterday in the last game of the series, through the clever pitching of Yingling. The locals could not bunch their hits while the visitors made the most of their count. Both teams played a fast fielding game. The game was called at the end of the eighth inning to allow Toledo to catch the train. Score:

TWO MEN INJURED IN GAME AT MILWAUKEE.

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 19.—In a wild game filled with wrangling, and marred by injuries, the leaders defeated Milwaukee, 6 to 2. Tom Jones, who returned to the game yesterday after an absence of a month, was hit in the right temple with a terrific shoot by Peters, and he will probably be out of the game again for a week or more. Had the ball hit an inch higher, the blow might have proved fatal. Ralston was hit over the kidneys by a pitched ball and knocked senseless while Barrett was forced to retire with an injured ankle. Cravath's triple with the bases filled in the second practically cinched the game. Score:

TWO TIGER PITCHERS EASY FOR BOSTON.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 19.—Willett and Works were both easy for Boston yesterday and this, coupled with poor fielding, gave Donovan's men the second victory of the series, 9 to 3. WHITE SOX BUNCH HITS AND ATHLETICS LOSE.

Chicago, Aug. 19.—A triple, a double and two singles by the locals broke up a tie game, which Chicago won, 7 to 5, from Philadelphia yesterday. Morgan's wildness, coupled with two hits and an error, gave the locals five runs in the opening inning. Timely hitting by the visitors in the second and fourth innings, coupled with bases on balls and two errors enabled them to tie the score. Payne was hit in the mouth by a ball thrown to him by the "ball boy." He was removing his mask and did not see the ball. Score:

ARMSTRONG AND BURTON DOWN JAYNE AND WHEELER

Finals in Doubles on Oatka Court Brings Out Good Tennis.

John Adams and Joe Armstrong Meet for Singles Title.

Armstrong and Burton won the finals of the doubles yesterday afternoon from Jayne and Wheeler, 6-4; 5-7; 6-0; 6-3.

As was the case the day previous, when the most brilliant tennis was reserved for the final game of the singles, that between Armstrong and Wheeler, yesterday the final in the doubles brought out the best playing of the doubles.

Starting yesterday morning on the final round, Armstrong and Burton won from the Shepard brothers of Winona, 6-4; 6-2; 6-1. Wheeler and Jayne met Fitzpatrick and Mowry on the other court, the result being a rather easy win for the veterans, 6-0; 6-1; 6-2.

The result of these games set the stage for the final of the afternoon, bringing together the four cracks of the tournament. Those who had rather anticipated the result of the play in the semi-finals and had predicted at the start of the weeks' play that Armstrong and Burton would meet Wheeler and Jayne, looked forward to some great tennis, and in this they were not the least disappointed.

Good Tennis Played.

Old followers of tennis say that in few, if any, games played in the Northwest has there been any prettier exhibition than that given yesterday by the winners. The strong net game of Wheeler was minimized by the ability of both Burton and Armstrong to lob balls to the back court, and only the excellent playing of the veteran Jayne in returning many of these lobs that were played beautifully to the very back line saved the veterans from a worse defeat. Several times Jayne took these lobs with his back to the net, making brilliant plays on them.

The playing of the two veterans compelled Armstrong and Burton to go at top speed to win, with the result that the gallery of spectators saw some of the best tennis ever played in the Northwest.

Neither Jayne nor Wheeler was as successful with lobs as Armstrong and Burton. Young Armstrong killed many lobs from both near the net and from the back court, and during the four sets many points went to the winners through this ability to make point on the lobs of their opponents.

Adams and Armstrong.

This afternoon comes the climax of the week's play. John Adams, the state champion, will meet Joe Armstrong for the championship, and the best tennis that has been seen here during the play this week, though some great games have been played on the Oatka courts, should result.

Adams and Armstrong are very evenly matched. Some of the experts say that Adams is the more finished player of the two. But in the past the two have been very evenly matched, and the outcome will very likely be in doubt until the last set has been completed.

In addition to the games in the semi-finals and the finals of the doubles, the following games were completed in yesterday's play:

Consolation Singles.

DOHERTY RATED AS BEST PLAYER

Englishman Said to Possess Best All-Round Stroke of Tennis Stars.

New York, Aug. 19.—There is a discussion now going on as to who was the best tennis player, and on it A. E. Crawley has the following to say:

"As for the relative merits of different methods of stroke, the test is their relation to the conditions of the game, including both variety and economy, that method is best which is least fatiguing, most efficient in pace and placing, most capable of variation, with the least expenditure of time, space and effort—a stroke which is always adapting itself to changing requirements, and yet is always the same in principle. It will, in fact, combine in itself the merits of all specialized strokes, and will be an epitome of the evolution of the art of striking the ball. With such a stroke a player can hit the ball clean, with over spin, under spin, or side spin, as he pleases, without preparation, and can use shoulder, arm, wrist and fingers either all together, or with a special call upon one or more. In other words the connection between body and racquet is organic. The principle, of course, applies to the four classes of stroke, service, volley, forehanded and back handed drive. In the volley, for instance, there is no change of mechanism, whether the stroke is low or high, hard or stopped, driven or cut.

"Now, in lawn tennis such a stroke or method of hitting has been evolved for the volley and the two drivers. The man who has this and also possesses strategic capacity and a winning temperament, together with a reasonable amount of the closest and most extended competition and a proportional list of the highest results, is the best player. I have been lengthy on the subject of the stroke because it is the best test of the development of the game.

Basis for Opinion.

"On that test and on the other requirements combined I base my opinion that the best lawn tennis player yet seen is H. L. Doherty. His stroke came nearer to the ideal combination I have roughly sketched than that of any player I have seen or heard of. A good judge once said that he did not believe there was anything that H. L. could not do with the ball, and he was nearly right.

"I saw him play and played against him and with him, both when he was a boy and when he was at his best. Only four men can claim to be considered his possible rivals for the honor of being the world's best player—W. Renshaw, Pim, R. F. Doherty and Larned. H. L.'s volley was better than that of any; Pim's came very close to it. Overhead H. L. was far the best, and has never been approached in this department. In the forehand and backhand drive he was slightly the superior of Pim, his method being more organic and more certain. The same applies to its slight superiority to R. F.'s method.

"It would take too long to give an analysis of the living mechanism of H. L. Doherty's drive and volley. It is of very great interest in connection with the evolution of strokes and is as yet hardly appreciated. In technique and finish, I conclude, H. L. Doherty was the greatest artist the game has seen; on this qualification, combined with the other qualifications of generalship and character, competition and achievement, he was its greatest player."

WHITE SOX BEGIN LAST STAND OF THE SEASON.

At Athletic park this afternoon the Sox will line up against Rochester for the first game of a three-game series. Rochester at the present time is playing good baseball. The Medics have the best pitching staff in the league, and the record of four straight games from Eau Claire will show that Ted Corbett has his men going a fast pace.

With McGraw in right field the Sox have been strengthened by the acquisition of McGraw and with a rally on the home grounds should make a fine finish to the seasen.

FRANK GOTCH ABOUT READY

Big Iowa Grappler Starts on Last Lap of Training Siege.

World's Champion Is Said to Be in Best Condition of Career.

Humboldt, Iowa, Aug. 19.—Real work in the Gotch camp was resumed Wednesday after Tuesday's half holiday. Fresh as a daisy, as a result of his outing at the Catholic festival at Dumcomb, twenty miles west of here, the pride of Humboldt announced to his staff of faithful trainers that there will be a busy siege ahead during the rest of the time before the match with Hackenschmidt on Labor day afternoon in Chicago. All the members of the Gotch training staff made the trip with the Gotch Humboldt Stars to Dumcomb, with the exception of burley Joe Rogers.

The American Apollo was all tired out after a hard two weeks' siege of mat work with the champion, and took the occasion to get a rest while the Gotch ball team and Asbell and Westergaard were the feature attractions at the Dumcomb fair. Rogers was peacefully resting in his room at the Russell house, although reading the works of Guy De Maupasant. Joe is a bear cat for perusing the works of this celebrated author, and when he is not busily engaged in helping train the Hope of Iowa, or backing the bill of fare off the boards, he is spending his time over a thick volume of De Maupasant.

Rogers Is Star Boarder.

Rogers is the star boarder at the Russell house, where the entire Gotch staff is quartered. This big fellow, who says he is trying to reduce his weight from the 300-pound notch, is batting 1,000 in the Kitchen league. It is no uncommon sight to see Big Joe get away with a dozen eggs, double-sized porterhouse steaks, vegetables and whatever else is on the bill of fare. To make his meal complete Rogers drinks at least a quart of iced tea. Joe says he is doing all this with a purpose. He says that the rough usage that Gotch is giving him makes him keep building up his frame to withstand the vigorous work.

"Take it from me," says Joe, "Gotch is about the roughest thing I have ever seen on the mat when once he gets going. I have wrestled Hack and Gotch before, and I am in a pretty good position to know whereof I speak. Of course, it is quite natural for a man to like the man's chances he is training. The way I dope it all out is, that unless Hack can show something inside of twenty minutes on Labor day, he is a beaten man. I figure that Gotch has the leverage to stand the lion off for this length of time at least, and then he will be in a position to get back of his man. When Gotch once gets back of Hack, look out. Frank's knowledge of the catch-as-catch-can style is so thorough that I can't see how Hack can beat him.

"Not only is Gotch a good man in working above the shoulders, but his work in crotch holds and on the legs and toes is so fast that Hack will have to watch him all the while."

Gotch in Great Shape.

Jim Asbell, a middleweight wrestler, who has been here with Gotch since June 28, has been closer to the champion than any of the other members of his camp. He was with Gotch when the Iowan toured the country with Jeffries before the Johnson fight. Asbell says: "Gotch is a better man today than he ever has been. On their last meeting Gotch was very nervous. He had heard so much of this foreigner's mangling feats that it was quite natural for him to be anxious. Now he has the confidence of a man who has once beaten his opponent. From my personal observation and knowledge, I know Gotch is the most finished wrestler in the world today. At the catch-as-catch-can style there isn't a trick of the game which he doesn't know, and he is always springing the unexpected.

"Gotch himself has very little to say as to the outcome of the match. This big tiller of the soil never discusses his chances one way or the other, contenting himself with the statement that he hopes to win. 'All I can say,' says Gotch, 'is that I am in excellent shape and I hope to win.' Gotch would much rather talk about a ball game, a billiard match or his farm."

TIED FOR RECORD.

Paddy McDonnell and Tim McDonald Put Shot to Same Mark.

The Irish and the Scotch branches of the McDonald family still hold honors even in athletic contests as a result of the shot-putting contest at the Clan Stewart picnic this week. Paddy McDonnell and Jim McDonald both succeeded in putting the 16-pound shot to the same mark again this year, after being tied up for the record a year ago at the same affair. Both men dropped the weight at exactly 41 feet 6 inches from the edge of the putting ring.

"Paddy" claims he has been so busy being investigated of late that he did not have time to get into training for the big event properly or otherwise the Erin branch of the family would have carried off the honors. The two men have agreed to decide the championship at the picnic next year.

LEGG IN THE FINALS AT OMAHA TOURNEY.

Omaha, Neb., Aug. 19.—Championship possibilities in the Trans-Mississippi golf tournament hung in the balance yesterday and when the thirty-six holes were completed the number of the contestants was reduced to representatives of the Minneapolis Minikahda club and the Des Moines Country club—Harry Legg and Ralph Rider. These two men won out in the semi-final matches and will contest for the championship.

The Legg-Magee match started when a rain storm was at its height. The strong drives and accurate putts of the youngster from the Minikahda club were as disconcerting to the Omaha boy as they had been during the morning round. Magee made a desperate effort to make a hole in two on which he should have taken three. The result was five and it went to Legg, giving the latter an advantage. From that time on the Minikahda man was never in trouble.

GREAT DAY FOR MURPHY

Southern Trainer Makes Clean Sweep of Columbus Race Program.

Purse for Stock Farm Futurity Missing and Race Is Postponed.

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 19.—Four races were on the card for the third day of the International Breeders' race meeting here yesterday, but one of them, the Kentucky stock farm futurity for 3-year-old trotters failed to materialize.

Twenty-eight horses had entered for the event, and five of them, including the record-breaking Miss Stokes, were on the track ready to start, when it was announced from the stand that no representative of the Kentucky stock farm having appeared with the money, $4,500, the race had been indefinitely postponed, as the owners refused to start their horses.

It was a great day for Tommy Murphy, the Southern trainer, who was up behind the winner in nine out of the ten hottest heats, and placed three more $1,200 races to his credit in addition to the 2:05 trot and the $5,000 Hotel Hartman stake Wednesday and the $10,000 Hoster-Columbus Thursday.

During the afternoon word was received at the track from the secretary of the American Trotting association to the effect that Charles Valentine, the Columbus driver, sat down at Kalamazoo for the remainder of the season for what was claimed as a bad drive behind Peter the Second, had been temporarily re-instated. He drove Maxine Audubon in the second heat of the 2:18 pace.

It was a question this morning whether the Stock Farm futurity for 3-year-old pacers would be staged as the purse for the event was not yet on hand.

Even with this eliminated there will be four races. The program calls for the champion trotting sweepstakes, the 2:13 trot and the 2:16 trot. The fourth event will be an added race for pacers which have not won this week for a purse of $500.

In the trotting sweepstakes there are several fast horses entered, among them Brace Girdle, Hallworthy, Joan, Dudie Archdale and Startler.

CY YOUNG GOES BACK TO BOSTON

Boston, Mass., Aug. 19—"Cy" Young, the veteran pitcher who was unconditionally released by the Cleveland Americans several days ago, will report to the Boston Nationals next Sunday. It is believed he will pitch Monday's game against Cincinnati.

Pitchers Tyler and Pfeiffer have been released to New Orleans under an optional agreement to facilitate an early delivery of Pitcher Otto Hess, formerly of Cleveland, who has been purchased by Boston.

William Purtell, the third baseman secured by the Boston Americans from Chicago last season, has been sold to the Toronto team of the Eastern league. Hap M. Myers, formerly of the Pacific Coast league recently tried out by St. Louis and Boston Americans, goes to Jersey City of the Eastern league, and Jack Thoney will be sold to one of three Eastern league clubs, it was announced today.

GOTCH TRAINS HARD.

Big Iowan Working Like Trojan for Battle With Hack.

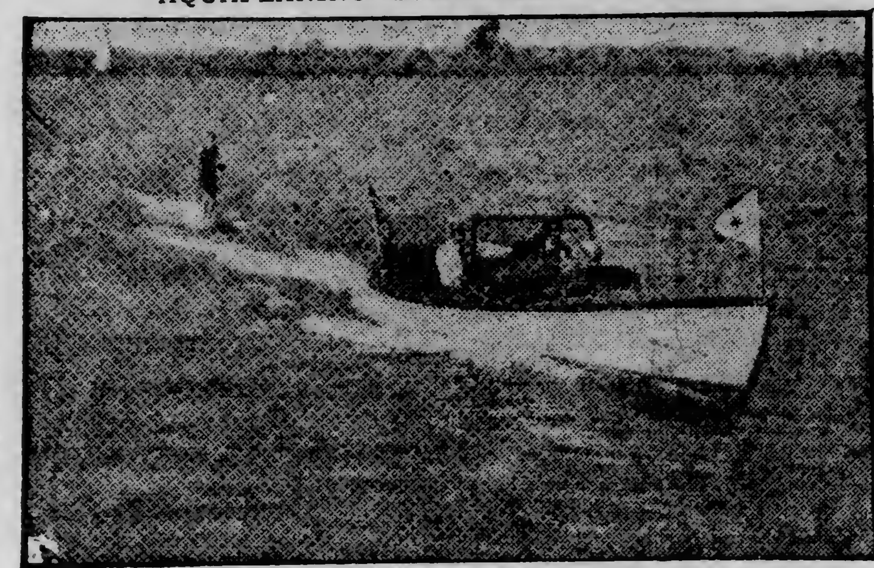
Humboldt, Iowa, Aug. 19.—Joe Rogers of New York, the 290-pound toy whom Frank Gotch imported to help condition him for his coming bout with Hackenschmidt in Chicago on Labor day, has been giving the champion the hardest kind of workouts during the last week. Rogers is not a novice at the wrestling game, and while he is not speedy, he is fairly clever and heavy enough to give Gotch the kind of workouts he needs to fathom the weight and strength of the Russian when they meet.

During the last week the training camp has been a busy one for all. Gotch is a hard worker and demands that his companions in the camp also work hard. The bouts with Rogers draw the most attention of the champion and the many spectators who are always around. Considerable of the work of Gotch is done in private, the champion fearing that some of Hackenschmidt's friends may be watching him. He is in splendid condition now and promises to be in the best shape of his career when the day of the big bout comes.

Gotch has decided to do all his work at Humboldt, going to Chicago but a few days before the bout. It was expected he would finish his work near Chicago, or maybe in the city, but the champion decided yesterday that he did not wish to change quarters until he would be forced to, and he would remain at Humboldt. Chicago fans will be disappointed in the decision reached by Gotch, for they were preparing to see him work out before his match.

NEW SPORT OF AQUAPLANING BECOMING POPULAR IN EAST

AQUAPLANING—SOMETIMES YOU FALL.



RIDING AN AQUAPLANE IN TRIUMPH.

Aquaplaning is a new sport that is having its fling at the present time in the East. The equaplane is something like a toboggan, only constructed in two sections, one above the other and about ten feet in length. The game is to tie this to a fast motor boat and some person get on the aquaplane. As the speed of the boat increases the aquaplane rises out of the water and resembles an aeroplane flying along the surface of the water.

Learning to ride the aquaplane is great sport. The rider stands on the aquaplane as the motor boat gradually increases its speed, the sensation being like that of riding through the air.

In so much as the sport of aquaplaning it so popular in the East, it is suggested that it be tried out here.

SCOTTY INGERTON HAS MADE GOOD IN MAJORS

While William J. (Scotty) Ingerton, third baseman and outfielder of the Boston Nationals, was sitting in the outer offices of the Cub suite in the Corn Exchange building one day last spring waiting to report to the head of the club, President Murphy in his private office was completing the deal whereby Ingerton was traded to Boston for Davy Shean. So Ingerton's greeting from the Cub president practically was, "Hello, good-by."

On the same day "Scotty"—who isn't Scotch at all—departed for the East and made the spring training trip with the Beanies. Ingerton takes it all philosophically, saying: "I've been a regular with Boston while I might still be decorating a bench with the Cubs. And you can't tell me you don't learn more baseball playing than watching it played."

This young Buckeye, born in Peninsula, Ohio, of English-Irish parentage, derived his nickname which has deceived many as to his nationality through a boyhoodfondness for butterscotch candy. He was called "Butterscotch" by his playmates, then "Scotch," and, finally, "Scotty," and that name has fastened to him in baseball, where the player without a nickname is rare.

Ingerton received a high school education in his home town, playing on the school nine and, after graduating, on the home team. He attended business college after his graduation from high school, but baseball appealed to him more than clerical work. So, in 1904, he signed with an independent team in Akron as right fielder, but was "canned," as he says, near the end of the season.

In 1905 Ingerton played shortstop for an independent club at Ashtabula, Ohio, and was signed from there by Cleveland. The following spring, without trial with the Naps, he was sent to Zanesville, then in the Ohio and Pennsylvania league, where he played shortstop, hitting about .275.

Cleveland recalled the youngster in 1907 and sent him to Albany, where he played third base, title resting in the Cleveland club, which the following year traded him to the Marion, Ohio, club for Jake Dupont, now with Brooklyn. "Scotty" refused to report to Marion and was sold by that club to Albany. There he played first base part of the season of 1908. The following year he was shifted to third base for Albany and also played the third sack for Altoona during the season of 1910. From Altoona Ingerton was bought by the Cubs.

Ingerton's home, Peninsula, is near Akron, and he came to Chicago with Artie Hofman for spring training only to find he was confined to the home of ex-Cubs, Boston, where he has made good as a regular.

When Manager Fred Tenney made the historic deal wtih Manager Frank Chance which resulted in the shifting of uniforms for eight players after they arrived at the Cub ball park, Chicago, Manager Fred found he was short of outfielders, and in the outer garden many critics think Ingerton is more valuable than at third. But Steinfeldt's sickness again moved him back to third base.

Unlike most players, "Scotty" would prefer an infield berth, but he is a good soldier and says it is up to the manager. Ingerton, however, in support of his desire to play third base advances a reason which is at variance with orthodox theories of the game. Most arguments are that outfielders should hit better because they have less nervous strain. Ingerton thinks he can bat better when playing the infield, because he says he is keyed up all the time, as compared with only occasional activity in the outfield.

When the baseball season ends, Ingerton, who is unmarried, fishes or hunts until it is time to don the spangles again. His only objection to a career as a professional baseball player is that it takes him away from the only surviving members of his family—a mother and younger sister, who live in Ohio. When his baseball days are over he plans to own an orchard in the Oregon apple country, an ambition which seems to have become epidemic with major league players.

BIG CHANGES IN NEW CARS

Knight Silent Motor Most Important of the 1912 Innovations.

General Adoption of the Long Stroke Motor Is Predicted.

Not all the American manufacturers, by any means, have their announcements of 1912 models, but sufficient have appeared to show the general tendencies, and to demonstrate that the coming season is to be more prolific in the introduction of new ideas than has been the case for a number of years back. For the last three or four seasons the manufacturers of motor cars have been content to build along lines that were generally accepted as standards, making improvements and refinements from time to time as they have proved desirable. No radical change in mechanical construction has taken place since the general adoption of the vertical four-cylinder motor for all types of cars in place of the horizontal two-cylinder motor, the wide acceptance of shaft instead of chain drive and the introduction of the six-cylinder power plant for large cars. Indeed for the past few years the manufacturers have made changes in the appearance, rather than in the mechanical construction of their product, the torpedo and the fore-door cars being the features of two seasons.

The coming season, however, is to witness some important mechanical changes, which if they are successful will be almost in the nature of a revolution in constructural methods. The most striking change is, of course, the introduction in this country of the Knight type of motor. Invented some years ago by Charles Y. Knight of Chicago, the Knight sliding sleeve motor met with no recognition in this country. It remained for Mr. Knight to take his invention abroad before its merits were appreciated. In England the Knight motor was taken up by one of the largest British manufacturers, and subsequently it was adopted by some of the principal manufacturers of the countries on the continent. Two years or more of its use having proved the value of the sliding sleeve motor, it is being produced for 1912 in the United States by at least three manufacturers.

The Knight motor differs from the standard motor as heretofore generally used in this country in that it has no poppet valves, of the lift type, operated by cam shaft or shafts. The admission of fresh gas and the exhaust are governed by sleeves that slide up and down inside the cylinders and are controlled from an eccentric off the main shaft. Various advantages are claimed for the sliding sleeve motor, among them being silent operation, increase of power, economy and a cleaner appearing power plant. The three companies that have announced Knight model motors for 1912 are the Columbia, Stearns and Stoddard-Dayton.

Another Change.

Another mechanical change, which it is claimed is in the nature of an improvement, and that has been forecasted the past season, is the more common use of the long stroke motor. Among the new models that have been announced so far this summer, not a few of them are featuring motors, the strokes of which are considerably longer than the bores. The square or approximately square motor has given so much satisfaction in the United States that it is difficult for the manufacturers to bring themselves to the point of abandoning it, but the success of those makers who were the pioneers with the long stroke type has resulted in emulation, and everything points toward 1912 as a long stroke motor year. Very few manufacturers, however, have followed the example of the extremists abroad in building motors with strokes two inches or more longer than the bores.

A change that is not an innovation, and for which the women are in large part responsible is the attachment to many of the new cars of self-starting apparatus. One or two cars have used self-starters for several years, the Winton being prominent in this way, but it was not until the women began to take up in earnest the driving of gas cars, that the self-starter really gained recognition. Devices to do away with the cranking of the motor will be a part of the regular equipment the coming season, not only of several large cars, but of some of the medium sized makes. The self-starter is a boon that emancipates the woman driver from the electric carriage, and that is not by any means unappreciated by the men.

Number of Cylinders.

The controversy between the six and the four cylinder advocates that waxed warm not so very long ago has subsided with the acceptance of the fact that both types have their value. The season of 1912 will see an increase in the number of six-cylinder cars and with the announcement of a six-cylinder model by the Packard company, about the last of the four-cylinder supporters, has recognized the six. The feature of the year in this direction will be not so much the addition of six cylinder cars to lines of the higher-makes, as the introduction more generally of the six into the medium-priced class of machines. Some announcements have been made and others are known to be coming, of six cylinder cars to sell at prices lower than it was believed could be put upon this type of power plant a year or two ago. There will be several sizes on the market this year for around $2,000.

Among the higher priced cars nearly every make in 1912 will have a six-cylinder model. Some of the manufacturers have followed the lead of the Winton and Pierce and abandoned fours altogether, while others will continue to put out fours and sixes. Early reports from factories, whose announcements have been before the public for several weeks, indicate that the demand for sixes among big cars is to be heavier than ever before. Several notable new sizes are to be put out a little later by prominent makers.

It has seemed to some who have read the advertisements of the manufacturers that have put their 1912 models on the market, that there is an upward tendency in prices, or at least a firmness in the old prices. Quite the contrary, if anything, is true. Some manufacturers are advertising their cars at higher figures than was the case last year, but a careful reading of their announcements will show that the price includes improvements and complete equipment, so that the figure is no higher and in many cases lower than that which was paid last season for a fully equipped car. The manufacturers of the higher priced cars have held their prices about where they were last year, but in almost every instance they are giving the purchasers greater value, in that besides the structural improvements, they have added equipment and accessories that formerly cost several hundred dollars.

Among the medium priced cars the manufacturers have not felt able in all cases to put on the full equipment at the old price without equipment, but they are offering their cars completely equipped as low or lower than they did for the car and the equipment usually added last season. And complete equipment this season means not only the things that are absolutely necessary, such as lamps and tools, but top, glass front, speedometer, magneto, and in some cases electric lighting outfit, demountable rims and tire pumping device. The completely equipped car of 1912, bought at the advertised price, will be ready for the road, as soon as the registration plates are attached.

After Low Priced Trade.

More manufacturers are going after the low-priced tarde than ever before. It has been recognized for a long time that there was good business in selling low-priced cars, providing the factory was properly equipped for large production, and the car was built right so that there would be no come-back. But hitherto only a few manufacturers have been in a position to go after the low-priced business in the right way. This year a number of the prominent manufacturers have announced cars to sell at less than $1,000, and there are others to come. Thes cars are built along well established lines, are simple and sturdy and will be the means of introducing tens of thousands of people to motoring, who only a few years ago never aspired to own a car.

The selling season of 1912 cars in Duluth has begun and from reports gathered from the dealers all through the automobile district it is apparent that they are looking forward to a good season with vigorous competition. Cars are not sold over the counter now-a-days, and motor car salesmanship has become a well recognized accomplishment. There are plenty of people in the market for cars of all grades and prices, but they are not exactly rushing to the salesrooms for machines. There is, however, every indication of a 1912 season that will be better than the decidedly satisfactory 1911 season that has just closed.

EXPORTS SHOW BIG INCREASE

American Makers Shipping Many Cars to Canada and Europe.

Exports of American motor cars and parts during the fiscal year ending June 30 amounted in value to $15,500,229, breaking all previous records. The total exceeded that of the previous year by $4,319,000 and that of the year 1908-09 by $9,517,029, a gain of nearly 100 per cent in two years, which is the period in which American manufacturers have been most active in the foreign markets. In the fiscal year ending June 30, 1911, there were exported 11,803 cars, against 6,926 the previous year.

In the list Canada leads by a wide margin with $6,774,769, with Great Britain in second place with $2,595,679, and British Oceania third with $1,352,532. The showing of the latter, in particular, is noteworthy, as it jumped from seventh place in last year's list to third place, passing France, other Europe, Mexico, and West Indies. Gains and losses are fairly well divided among the twelve divisions, seven of them registering increases, while five show losses.

During the month of June, 1911, 1,554 cars, valued at $1,702,872, were exported, exceeding last year's totals by 570 cars, and $64,550 in value. Parts to the extent of $324,886 worth were sent out of this country, as against $256,484 worth in June, 1910.

Exports of automobile tires for the month of June, 1911, reached $246,625, while other tires exported were valued at $54,063. During the year ending June 30, 1911, $2,085,107 worth of automobile tires and $592,470 worth of other tires were shipped out of the country. No comparative figures for the corresponding period of 1910 are available, as the government did not list tires separately previous to July 1, 1910.

Imports of automobiles during the fiscal year ending June 30 showed a loss of $953,603 and a dropping off of 605 cars compared with the previous year. The imports from France, Germany and Italy all fell off. The imports for the year were 888 cars valued at $1,898,843. The preceding year there were imported 1,473 cars valued at $2,851,446.

GLIDDEN TOUR TO SOUTHLAND

The announcement made last week that the Glidden tour for 1911 would be a fall tour to the "Land of Dixie" and one that would be organized and conducted along the lines originally conceived by the donor of the trophy has met with enthusiastic and universal approval from all sections of the country, but especially from the Southern states through which the tour will pass.

That the good roads movement, already most active in the South, will receive a great stimulus as a result of the tour is a certainty, and the many inquiries already received for full information as to details and conditions indicate a large and representative entry list of individual owners. So great is the interest that has been aroused in the South by the anticipated coming of the tour that a score of Southern cities are now vieing with each other in presenting their claims for the best roads and best routes, and while the tour cannot be run so as to satisfy them all, a great object lesson is afforded of the necessity for travelable highways and much road improvement is sure to follow.

The national tours in the past have extended as far North as Maine; Quebec, Can., and Minneapolis, Minn.; west to Denver, and southwest to Dallas, Tex., and it is now fitting that the national tour should be run over the national highway to the south, connecting the great city of New York with the live Southern metropolis of Atlanta and with Jacksonville, the gateway of Florida's famous winter resorts, which are the Mecca of so many Northern tourists who seek the land where it is always summer.

The route of the national highway embraces ten states—New York, New Jersey, Pensnylvania, Maryland, West Virginia, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida, and presents as varied conditions of scenery as any that can be chosen. In addition, it affords a veritable lesson in early American history. It passes the battlefields of Gettysburg and Antietam and also the Revolutionary battlefield of Guilford court house, and follows the Shenandoah valley, which is replete with historic wartime sites and monuments. Emerging from this beautiful valley the route passes directly across the famous Natural Bridge of Virginia and south of Roanoke there is mountain scenery a plenty, while here one gets in intimate touch with the hardy Virginia mountaineer. The famous tobacco region of northern North Carolina is traversed and fine macadam roads lead through this section south through the cornfields of South Carolina and into the cotton fields of Southern South Carolina. Cotton mills are to be found in most of the towns along the line and a prosperity undreamed of a few years ago is everywhere evident.

Award the Glidden Trophy.

While prizes of cash or plate will be awarded to the individual winners of the various price divisions of touring cars and runabouts, the Glidden trophy will, this year, be a team competition. Each team shall consist of three cars, either of touring cars or of runabouts, or of a combination of both, to be designated by the name of the city or town from the contestants enter, and the Glidden trophy will be awarded to the team which has the least number of points penalty to its debit at the finish of the tour. This team feature will furnish interesting competition throughout the running of the tour. If more than one team is entered from the same city or town, the first team entering shall be known as "Team No. 1." An entrant has the option of electing the team on which his car shall compete except that a resident of one state cannot be included in a team from another state.

In case any two teams have exactly the same number of points to their debit at the end of the tour, the c[illegible] of each team shall be examined by the technical committee as to the general condition of steering gear, brakes, running gear and front and rear axles, and penalties applied for defective condition thereof in accordance with a fixed penalty schedule.

The tour will start from New York on Saturday, Oct. 14, and end in Jacksonville, Oct. 25, consuming ten running days, and covering approximately 1,369 miles, Saturday and Sunday being spent in Atlanta.

Entry blanks and rules have already been issued.

BROOKLYN BUYS SIX MINOR LEAGUE PLAYERS.

New York, Aug. 19.—The Brooklyn baseball club announces the purchase of six minor league players for fall delivery. The most prominent is Barney Reilly of the St. Joseph team of the Western league. Reilly is an infielder and was captain of the freshman team at Yale before he went into professional baseball.

Other players bought are Mayer, a pitcher from Albany, Ga.; Sitton, a pitcher from Columbia, S. C., who has been in the big leagues before; Sykes, the Atlanta first baseman, and Outfielders Murphy and Bitroff from Great Falls, Mont.

Brown Shades Lewis.

New York, Aug. 19.—George (Knockout) Brown of Chicago defeated Willie Lewis, the local middleweight in a ten-round bout at the Twentieth Century A. C., here last night. Lewis was clearly outpointed and outgeneraled.

Another Way.

HE was a man with a badge of mourning on his arm, and as he came up the street, looking over his shoulder at intervals, he bumped into a pedestrian and bumped off again to say:

"I beg your pardon, but do you speak German?"

"I don't," was the reply.

"Sorry for that, but perhaps I can find someone."

"Is it that you wish to converse with a German?"

"It is. He is in a saloon down here, and I wish to call him a liar."

"But can't you make yourself understood?"

"Yes; but you see I'm in mourning for my wife. I must consider things, you know."

"That is true; but I'll hold your insignia of grief while you go down and try to make yourself understood. I believe the word is pronounced in German almost the same as in English."

"Say, that's great of you, old man," exclaimed the widower, as he handed out the crape; and in 10 minutes he was back with a bleeding nose to say:

"A thousand thanks. You see I made him understand." JOE KERR.

IT'S NO USE.

SPEAKING about fishing," said the grocer as he talked with a friend at the door of his store—"speaking about fishing—"

"It's no use," interrupted the other.

"Not a bit. I was out to Gem Lake the other day."

"There are fish in Gem Lake."

"There are, sir, and monstrous big ones, too. More than forty men laughed at me for going and said I wouldn't even get a nibble."

"But you did?"

"Why, sir, I had hardly thrown in my hook when it was seized by a twenty-pound pickerel."

"You don't say!"

"I expect he weighed five pounds more, but I made a conservative estimate. I played him for half an hour and then telegraphed the crowd to come out and see him taken from the water. I told them to come by special train and I would pay all the expense. I wanted no lying about that fish."

"That's right—that's right. And they came, did they?"

"Yes, but the engine broke down and they were four hours late. The fish waited for three hours and then swallowed hook, line and pole and went off about his business."

"And of course they said he was only a minnow and—!"

"Yes, yes; that's what they all said, and they sneered and jibed and called me a liar, and—and— Well, it's no use. I do no more fishing, and the crowd can go to grass!" JOE KERR.

HE was a tall, lank man, and the hot May day seemed to have taken hold of him and given him another squeeze. He was mopping his face as he entered a drug store and said to the man behind the soda fountain:

"Please give me something that won't hurt me."

He was handed out a sarsaparilla soda and drank it with great gusto, and after a thoughtful half moment he said:

"Please give me something more that won't hurt me."

He was given lemon and vanilla this time and his eyes shone with great satisfaction as he put it away. He was looking 50 per cent. better when he said:

"If you think it won't hurt me I'll take another."

When a third glass had been drawn and disposed of he was asked to settle and he blandly replied:

"If you have anything else that won't hurt me I'll take it along."

He was led to the door, posed in proper position and then given the boot. It jarred him almost to the curbstone, but there was almost a happy smile on his face as he returned to say:

"Old man, you're right. There is nothing in this drug store to hurt an infant, and I shall take great pleasure in recommending you to the public."

And said he lived but to forget her.

He gave her back each scented note,
From every pledge made haste to free her,
Then went away to scenes remote,
And vowed he nevermore would see her.

But when she wrote in sore distress,
"Please, Jack, return, my heart's dear master."
He went home by the fast express,
And swore because it wasn't faster.

SIZING THEM UP.

Mr. Twindad, the father—I want you to see my new twins and tell me what you think of 'em.

Mr. Kennelyard, the dog fancier—That one seems to have the best points, but maybe you'd better raise both of 'em.

HIS FAVORITE PLAY.

Dorothy (who quotes Shakespeare)—What is your favorite play?
Charles—Well, I believe I like to see a man steal second as well as anything.

REAL CIRCUS.

Stationmaster (at Wayback)—Mister, did you ever see a circus train?

Salesman—I should say so. I came down here on a train with fourteen honeymoon couples. Talk about a circus train! Well, you should have seen those couples when we entered a tunnel.

Wayside Wisdom.

Any woman would swap wisdom for a dimple.

• • •

Some men are born great. Others advertise.

• • •

Graft is the cheap man's substitute for cleverness.

• • •

The only jewels that become a man are gems of thought.

• • •

Nearly every unsuccessful wife knows how to play bridge.

• • •

The fever of hope is one of the first symptoms of the chill of despair.

• • •

Time is the artist who takes the homely face of a good woman and makes it beautiful.

• • •

The pleasant part of getting angry with yourself is you know you are going to make it up pretty soon.

• • •

The difference between the moon and the honeymoon is that the latter is fullest only when it is new.

• • •

The trouble is that when a man sets out to burn his money he wants the conflagration to spread to everybody else's.

THE NEW SPECIES.

"Does he read summer resort leaflets and remain home?"
"No; he reads auto catalogues and walks."

THINGS ARE BETTER.

THE one was a reporter who had been sent out by his chief to ascertain if graft was on the increase or decline, and the other was a contractor. It was the reporter who asked:

"Can I ask you for some information, Mr. Mulvaney?"

"Carlonds of it, my boy."

"You know how much has been said about graft within the last few years?"

"I've read and heard of nothing else."

"Things have been in an awful condition."

"They certainly have."

"They have reached a point where honesty is no longer looked for."

"That's what's the matter."

"But I want to ask you, Mr. Mulvaney, whether you think this state of affairs is to continue, or whether there will be a change for the better?"

"There will be a change, my son. It has already set in."

"You don't tell me. What signs have you seen?"

"Well, there's to be a $200,000 sewer built in the Fourth ward and Alderman Jones is the man to decide who is to get the contract. Yesterday I went to him and gave him the wink and laid a $5 bill on his desk."

"And—and——?"

"He lighted his cigar with it and threw me out doors. You can say in your papers that the tide has finally turned and there is to be no more graft."

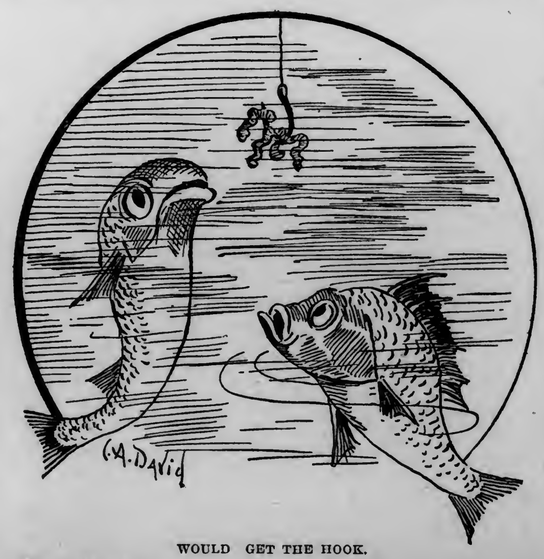
JOE KERR.

NONCOMMITTAL.

"How's your garden progressing?"
"Ah, such radishes, such onions, such lettuce!"

NOTHING TO DODGE.

Oh, I want to be an angel,
For then I will have wings,
And never have to fret myself
O'er trolley cars and things.



WOULD GET THE HOOK.

"That looks nice!"
"Yes, but like most nice things, it's got a string to it."

NOTHING SAID.

HE had been to Europe and returned, and he was telling a friend on the car what he had seen, when a man with red eyebrows leaned across the rail and said:

"I beg your pardon, sir, but I should like to butt in. You have been to Europe?"

"Yes, sir."

"They knew you were an American?"

"They did."

"You talked with many men?"

"A great many."

"Did any of them refer to the political corruption in this country?"

"No."

"Nor to the cold-storage sharks?"

"No."

"The Beef Trust?"

"No."

"The coal robbers?"

"No."

"The extortion in express rates?"

"No."

"To the trusts in everything, even in coffins?"

"No."

"To the buying and selling of senators?"

"No."

"Then, my dear man, will you be kind enough to tell me in which direction Europe lies and how long it will take me to get there? I want to go there instead of to heaven!" JOE KERR.

IMPOSSIBLE.

"The Missus sez that in Rome, the whole police foorce is Dagoes!"
"Sure, I don't believe it!"

A DIFFERENCE.

The Congressman—Do you believe in protection?
The Senator—No; self-preservation is my motto.

HELD UP BY MASKED MEN

Conductor Is Robbed at End of the Woodland Car Line.

Says His Assailants Made Their Escape in an Automobile.

Two masked men held up Conductor O. G. Pearling at the end of the Woodland street car line about 1 o'clock this morning, relieving him of the change which he had in his pockets.

Thrusting revolvers into his face they commanded him to hold up his hands, while they searched him. As soon as they had taken the cash they jumped from the car and disappeared. The conductor thinks they escaped in an automobile. So quickly was the job done that Motorman William Shepard didn't know of it until afterwards.

The crew of the car, which was about to leave the end of the line for the city, immediately notified police headquarters of the affair. Lieut. Fritz with a detail from headquarters, started at once for the scene of the hold up in an unsuccessful attempt to capture the highwaymen or gain a clue to their identity.

The conductor thought they were inexperienced in the robbery line, as both trembled noticeably as they went through his pockets. He said one was about six feet tall and the other about five inches shorter. He believed four men to be implicated, as two suspicious looking men rode to the end of the car line with him, and were followed at a short distance by the auto.

and brought his machine wobbling to the ground.

Landed in Water.

Ovington, with his engine stopped and unable to reach shore, found a landing place in five feet of water, from which he escaped with no other injury than a duckling.

The altitude events, though unscheduled, proved the most important of the day. A wind that blew twenty miles 100 feet above the earth, was missing higher up, and Brindley, Beachey and Gill started at once for altitude. Beachey was the first to descend, driven down by the cold. He came down shivering, hardly able to move his hands from the steering wheel. His barograph showed 8,500 feet.

"The air was fine for flying and I could have stayed up longer and probably gone higher," said Brindley, "but I wore only the lightest summer clothing. When the thermometer got down near freezing and I was rushing through the air, my hands got so cold I couldn't handle the machine safely."

Benefit on Monday.

Because of the death of St. Croix Johnstone on Tuesday, there will be an exhibition on Monday for the benefit of his widow. All the aviators have volunteered to appear, and the grounds and the services of employes were donated for the extra event by the officials of the International Aviation Meet association.

and through the good offices of James Ramsay MacDonald, M. P., chairman of the labor party, succeeded in inducing the officials of the Irish and Scottish as well as the English unions to meet him at noon today. He was assisted by John Burns, president of the local government board, and as both MacDonald and Burns are known as sympathizers with the unions and have the confidence of the railway managers, the prospects for an early settlement seemed brighter today. Some of the most ardent supporters of the men expressed the opinion that the strike would not last more than a few days.

Some Spasmodic Riots.

Spasmodic riots on a small scale continued at scattered points through the country, but London remained calm. The railway centers were closely picketed by representatives of the unions, but these were prevented by the soldiers and police from having any intercourse with the men at work.

Railroads running north are unable to accept goods. This has compelled a cessation of fishing operations, and the fishing fleets in the Firth of Forth and on the east coast are tied up. These features of the strike, affecting working classes, help to make the strike unpopular with those not directly concerned. The workers are suffering much more than others, as all the roads have been compelled to discontinue the usual cheap fares to working men, and the inability of the latter to get to their work has created in some instances a hostile feeling towards the union. This resulted in open warfare at Stratford Junction, on the Great Central railway. A number of pickets who were attempting to induce the trackmen to quit were attacked by workers and driven from the place.

Worst Outside London.

The strikers are meeting with more success outside London. At Birmingham freight was moved today only with the assistance of strong forces of police, and it was feared that disorders would occur.

The strike is general in Dublin, where the unions claim that 80 per cent of the employes are out. The expresses from Dublin to Cork and Dublin to Rosslare Harbor have been discontinued and the trains operated today were in the hands of inexperienced men.

In West Wales there was an almost complete stoppage, while in Edinburgh and at other Scottish points the companies experienced the greatest difficulty in keeping their trains moving

HOME FAT REDUCER

Works Rapidly and Safely—Requires No Exercising and Allows You to Eat What You Like Even on the Hottest Days—Cut This Out.

For the benefit of those who wish to reduce their flesh quickly and safely, continue the process during the hot days of summer, we will give the recipe and directions in full for a simple household remedy that can be obtained at trifling cost from any good drug store: ½ ounce Marmola, ½ ounce Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic and 3½ ounces Peppermint Water. All three are cheap and wholesome, but you should take care to get an unbroken package so that you get Marmola and not a substitute. When you get home mix the three together by shaking them together in a large bottle and take one teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime.

Follow these directions and you will have the best fat reducer that money can buy. It will take off the flesh at the rate of at least two pounds a week without disarranging the stomach or causing wrinkles, while, best of all, no exercising or dieting is required to help it out. You can get results and at the same time take things easy, loll in the shade, eat what you like—as much as you like—and whenever you like.

Three trains for London were cancelled because the men refused to mount the locomotives.

Factories Lack Fuel.

At many places in manufacturing districts the factories have been compelled to close because of a lack of fuel and other supplies.

The final settlement of the London dock strike further eased the situation, as it insured a continuance of the food supply of the metropolis.

In London and throughout the country thousands of men responded to the call to enroll themselves as special constables. A long line stood outside Guild hall today, waiting in turn to be sworn in and to receive a baton and badge.

The troops made themselves comfortable in the parks and at the railway stations, and apparently they were preparing to stay any length of time. During the forenoon long processions of army ambulances passed through the streets, conveying supplies to the various camps.

to return the note with the compliments of the Typographical union.

A proposal by Delegate L. R. Maxwell of Topeka, Kan., to take $100,000 from the old age pension fund, which is now $400,000, and use it for the erection of a permanent administration building at Indianapolis, was referred to the national executive council to be voted at the next general election.

Want Temperature Laws.

A resolution was passed urging legislation requiring the maintenance of an average temperature of 70 degrees fahrenheit in all composing rooms. A telegram from Providence, R. I., asking for the 1914 convention, was read. The convention sustained by unanimous vote the action of its executive council in declaring illegal the strike of its members called in February against the Chicago American and the Chicago Examiner. The action followed three hours of tempestuous debating.

A resolution requesting the executive council of the union to co-operate with the president of the Chicago local in an attempt to unionise so-called "unfair" Chicago job offices, was adopted.

By another resolution the council was instructed to assume full charge of the controversy with the Curtis Publishing company.

Acting on a resolution offered by Samuel Gompers in a letter to the executive council of the union, the council voted an assessment of 25 cents for each member for the defense of the McNamara brothers at Los Angeles. A proposal by Delegate Coop of Chicago to vote $10,000 from the union's treasury, was defeated. The report of the committee on the McNamara case, was read and approved.

On McNamara Case.

"We have nothing to do with the criminal end of the case," the report said, "and the law must be allowed to take its course. For the kidnaping of the McNamaras we express the utmost indignation and horror. Every right of a citizen was outraged. We unreservedly condemn the action of the Indianapolis police department, the representatives of the Los Angeles police department, the representatives of the Los Angeles district attorney's office and the private detective agency concerned in the McNamara outrage."

Hay Fever, Asthma and Summer Colds Must be relieved quickly and Foley's Honey and Tar Compound will do it. E. M. Stewart, 1934 Wolfram St., Chicago, writes: "I have been greatly troubled during the hot summer months with Hay Fever and find that by using Foley's Honey and Tar Compound I get great relief." Many others who suffer similarly will be glad to benefit by Mr. Stewart's experience. For sale by all druggists

SAYS CHRIST IS COMING IN 1912

Disciple of Dowie Files Official Statement to That Effect.

Chicago, Aug. 19.—The reuniting of the lost tribes of Israel and the second advent of Christ will occur some time in November of 1912, according to a declaration filed in the office of the county recorder yesterday.

This remarkable document, which fixes the month of the second coming of the Savoir, was drawn up and filed by Harry L. Burnett and John Taylor, disciples of the Late John Alexander Dowie, and asks that all the followers of Zion rally to the support of the "King" when he shall come.

"Before the year of 1912 shall close, Jesus, the Christ, the Son of God, will come forth from the eternal throne once again to teach and preach the gospel of salvation and to heal the sick," reads the document.

"The Christ will be revealed in Zion City, built by God's Elijah as a preparation of the way, unto all who wait his coming."

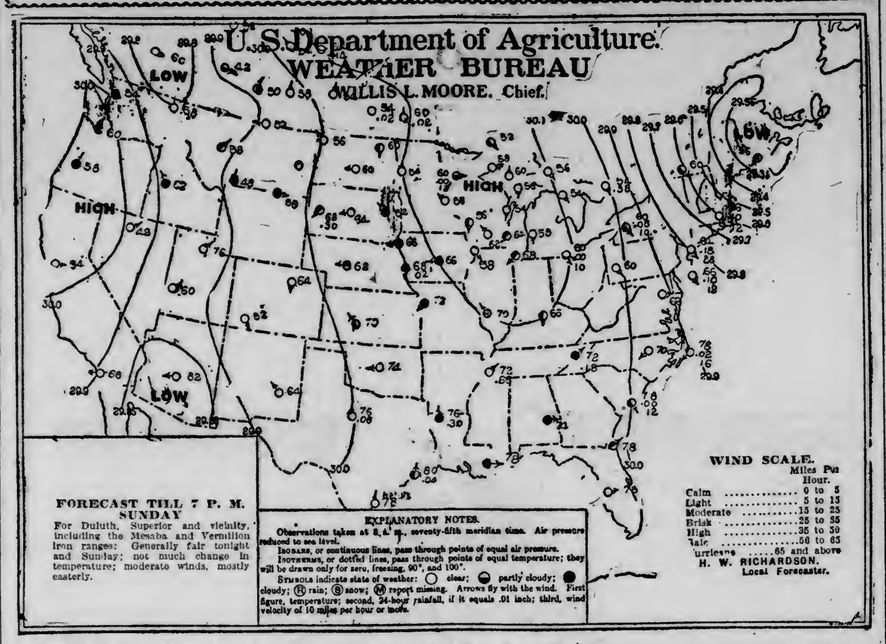
According to Mr. Bunett, who is the author of the prophecy, the Christ will remain on earth 434 years. This time will be consumed in reuniting the tribes of Israel and in building cities throughout the earth after the model of Dowie's Zion City. The rebuilding of Jerusalem will be the last work of the Christ upon earth.

CONVICTS BREAK OUT OF QUARRY

Man Hunt Is in Progress on Washington Penal Island.

Bellingham, Wash., Aug. 19.—Overpowering guards and seizing their rifles, three convicts broke away from the state rock quarry at Deception Pass yesterday and are hidden somewhere in the tangled brush of the island. Every avenue of escape is guarded and launches are patrolling the shores to prevent possible friends of the fugitives from taking them off by boat. Four posses have been organized in Anacortes and a fight is expected.

OFFICIAL MAP OF THE WEATHER



FAIR

There was a pronounced chill in the air last evening, but it was a great night for sleeping. The man who complains of this weather must be a creature without soul and without an appreciation of the beauties of nature—when nature is behaving. The weather man smiles some more today and cheerfully promises a fair Sunday. 'Ere's 'opin' 'e makes good.

The sun rose this morning at 5:10 and it will set at 7:13 this evening, giving furteen hours and three minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"During the last twenty-four hours the depression extending from Alberta southward to Arizona and the one centered off the Maine coast caused showers over Atlantic States, the Mississippi valley, Eastern Texas, Nebraska, Iowa, Western South Dakota and Manitoba. High temperatures continued over Virginia, North Carolina, Florida, Kentucky, Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, Colorado, Utah, Nevada and Idaho. Ahead of the Lakes somewhat unsettled but generally fair weather may be expected during the ensuing thirty-six hours."

General Forecasts.

Chicago, Aug. 19.—Forecasts for twenty-four hours ending at 7 p. m Sunday:

Upper Michigan — Fair tonight and Sunday; slightly warmer Sunday.

Wisconsin — Fair tonight with slightly warmer in north and west portions, probably becoming unsettled Sunday.

Minnesota — Unsettled, but generally fair weather tonight and Sunday; warmer in south and west portions tonight.

North and South Dakota, and Montana—Generally fair tonight and Sunday; not much change in temperature

Iowa—Unsettled weather with probably showers tonight or Sunday; warmer in northeast portion tonight.

Upper lakes — Light to moderate variable winds; fair tonight and Sunday.

GOVERNMENT WARD IS MURDERED IN THE WOODS

Nett Lake Indian's Body Is Found By Reservation Searching Party.

United States Mail Carrier Is Wanted By the Authorities.

The body of William Brown, quarter-breed Indian, horribly mutilated with a knife and with a great hole in the back of the head, probably the result of a blow with a gun barrel, was discovered yesterday afternoon as the result of a search instituted by Albert B. Reagan, Nett Lake Indian agent, assisted by all the Indians under his charge. The body was found in the woods on the Nett Lake side of Pelican lake. The murder had evidently been a most brutal one, as the body had been hacked and cut terribly after the blow on the back of the head was delivered, and this itself must have caused instant death.

Deputies King, Mollan and O'Dea were sent immediately to the scene upon news being received by Chief Deputy Sheriff Merrill at Virginia, and Chief of Police Ellis Walsh of Virginia is also in the party. They are armed with warrants for the arrest of Thomas Fisher, a United States mail carrier, who is suspected of the murder, and is still at large.

On Tuesday, a week ago, William Brown, who is a nephew of William and Stephen Gheen, went from the Nett Lake agency, where he was employed as a forester, to Farmer John's Landing, where he helped to unload a scow load of government timber. The unloading was finished about noon on Tuesday, and Charles Geshick, who helped him to unload the timber, returned to the agency, but without Brown. Brown told Geshick that he was waiting for some whisky, which he had sent for by Tom Fisher, the mail carrier now sought by the authorities, who had gone to Orr on his regular round.

Fisher got back to Farmer John's Landing at about 4:30 Tuesday afternoon. After this time Fisher and Brown were seen together at the landing by seven Austrians, who are being held as witnesses. This was the last seen of him until his mutilated and decayed body was found by the searching Indians yesterday afternoon.

Carrier Was Late.

Fisher reached the Nett Lake reservation at 1:30 Wednesday morning instead of 6:30 p. m. Tuesday, when he was due. He told, when he delivered the mail, that his boat was out of order and that that was the reason for his tardiness. Later he admitted seeing Brown at the landing at 4:30 o'clock and stated that the reason that he was late was that he was looking for his horses.

Indian Agent Reagan started a search for the missing man the next day, but he was laughed at on all sides because Brown was a known drinker and it was thought that he was on one of his periodical sprees. His relatives were unanimous in the opinion that this was the cause of his absence and that he would turn up later. Reagan kept up the search, however, and inspected all the camps on the Duluth, Rainy Lake & Winnipeg road and every station between Cook and Canada, but his inquiries brought nothing to light.

Feeling sure that his ward was dead, Reagan then started a searching party through the woods, recruiting all the Indians on the reservation. This resulted in the discovery of the body late yesterday afternoon. At the latest report received from the district, Fisher had disappeared and no success had been reached in the efforts to locate him.

IS SIZING UP MINNESOTA

W. B. Brewster Is Scouting for Taft for Next Campaign.

Says La Follette Has No Chance in the Gopher State.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—The National Republican League wants to know where President Taft "stands" in Minnesota. It wants to know what the state's attitude toward the chief executive is, and whether he will be able to get the delegation to the National Republican convention next year. William Bailey Brewster, once a Minnesotan, now a New York attorney, is endeavoring to get a line on the situation for the league.

Politicians of St. Paul and Minneapolis, the governor, the chairman of the state central committee and political writers have been interviewed by Mr. Brewster, and his report to the league will be that, in his opinion, President Taft will get the indorsement of the Gopher state. That the passage of the Canadian treaty helped him in the cities, and that voters believe in his sincerity and look upon him as a constructive statesman, is the opinion of the league's "scout."

La Follette "Impossible."

"Frankly," Mr. Brewster said, "the situation looks a great deal more favorable than it did when I was 1,300 miles from here. The state, I believe, looks upon La Follette as impossible. It does not seriously view with approval the candidacy of any other so-called progressive, and it appears that Mr. Taft will have little trouble, if any at all, in obtaining Minnesota's indorsement at the convention."

Mr. Brewster said that John Hayes Hammond, president of the National Republican league, probably would come to Minnesota himself, about the first of the year, when the campaign for Taft will open. Mr. Brewster does not concede any Democrat a chance to defeat him. He believes that Governor Harmon of Ohio will be the nominee.

NEGROES KILLED IN GEORGIA RIOT

Avenging Mob Attack Follows Murder of Marshal.

Donalsonville, Ga., Aug. 19.—Rioting has ceased at Jakin, where an avenging mob is reported to have killed three negroes yesterday as a result of the killing of Marshal Newberry by a negro last Tuesday night. The marshal's slayer has not been captured.

No Action by Governor.

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 19.—Up to a late hour this morning Governor Smith had received no request for troops to put down the riots in Jakin, Ga., where several negroes have been killed and houses burned as a result of the murder of City Marshal Newberry Tuesday night. It was reported in dispatches from there last night that the militia might be called out.

CARES FOR EX-WIFE AND HER HUSBAND

Jeffersonville, Ind., Aug. 19.—John Powling of Johnstown, Wis., is here to make arrangements to take his former wife of twenty-five years ago and her invalid husband back to Wisconsin with him, and take care of them for the rest of their days.

In 1884 Powling and the now Mrs. William Porter were married, and separated three years later, he going to Wisconsin and marrying again and she to Jeffersonville, where she married William Porter.

Powling prospered; her husband did not. Hearing that she was in almost destitute circumstances, Powling came here to investigate. In the spring Porter and his wife will go to Wisconsin to live on one of Powling's farms. Powling is 72 years old.

BE TRUE TO YOUR CONVICTIONS!

No man is worthy the name who is not true to his convictions and no great thing was ever accomplished by men who fail to live up to the light they have.

OPPORTUNITIES ARE ONLY FOR MEN WHO DARE TO GRASP THEM.

When we say that KAMLOOPS is your opportunity we imply that you are true to your convictions and that you dare do that which your reason tells you is right. In other words, KAMLOOPS is your opportunity IF YOU HAVE BANISHED FEAR.

You see a man who has achieved fame and fortune and wonder how he did it. HE BANISHED FEAR. He became convinced that a certain course was right, a certain investment was good, a certain policy proper, and disregarding the fears of his friends and neighbors he took the course, made the investment and carried through the policy.

ADVICE IS THE CHEAPEST THING ON EARTH, and for the reason our friends are generally so ready to give advice they prove to be our handicaps in the race. Shakespeare said: "It is easier to tell ten men what to do than to do one man's bidding." THE MAN WHO SUCCEEDS DOES SO BY FOLLOWING HIS OWN CONVICTIONS.

You are convinced that the copper age of the world has just begun to dawn and you know, if you have given the matter any study at all, that the red metal enters into the manufacure of almost everything your hands touch or your eyes look upon from day to day. Your engagement ring, your bathroom fixtures, the bells which call you to church, the brass and nickle fixtures on your automobile and gasoline launch, your guns and the bronzes you treasure so highly, the utensils in your kitchen, the gold coins you jingle in your pocket—all contain copper. When you ride in a trolley car, or telephone your grocer, or cable your wife in London you do so through the agency of copper. THE ONLY HARNESS DEVISED FOR THE WORLD'S GREATEST FORCE, ELECTRICITY, IS MADE OF COPPER. THE CIVILIZATION OF TODAY WAS MADE POSSIBLE THROUGH THE PRODUCTION OF COPPER.

Already in 1911, twenty-three copper companies of this continent have paid $20,877,807.00 in dividends. During their history as corporations these companies have paid $384,288,307.00 in dividends, and their combined capital stock has a market value today of $259,839,761.00 ABOVE ITS PAR VALUE.

We insist that you know the facts about KAMLOOPS which promises to become one of the biggest copper mines of the country. Here are some of them:

LABOR MEN ARE PLEASED

Personnel of Committees on Compensation Act Satisfies Union Leaders.

W. E. McEwen Says Workers Are Confident Interests Are Well Guarded.

That the labor interests of the state are well satisfied with the senatorial and bar association committees appointed to draft a workingman's compensation act, is the belief of W. E. McEwen. The senate committee is headed by A. F. Rockne of Goodhue county and the bar association committee by H. V. Mercer, a prominent Minneapolis attorney. The two committees number ten members, all of whom are lawyers.

"I take it that it is pretty generally agreed that the practical side of the question of workingmen's compensation has been solved and that the legal questions only remain to be worked out. Hence the two committees consisting wholly of attorneys," said Mr. McEwen.

"I know most of the members of both committees and am confident that a fairly satisfactory bill will be presented to the legislature at its next session. Mr. Mercer, chairman of the bar association committee, is probably one of the best informed men in the country on the question of workingmen's compensation. More than this, he possesses a heart as well as brains, and so far as the workingmen are concerned, they need have no fears that their interests are not well guarded.

"The men appointed on the senate committee are also able men, and I know that most of them have the interest of labor and the public at heart. I believe that I am speaking for the general labor interests of the state when I say that we are very well pleased with the groups of men selected to work on the problems presented in drafting such a bill.

"Personally, I hope that the committee will give a lot of time and thought to industrial insurance, state owned and operated, in this connection, as I believe that this presents one of the most feasible solutions of the question, and it is already being tried with success in Ohio, Montana and Washington."

THE MODERN HEAD DRESS

Causes Baldness.--We Cannot Change the Head Dress, But We Can Prevent Baldness.

Up to the time we began to civilize him a bald headed Indian was a thing unknown. Wearing nothing on his head except the covering furnished by nature and being a stranger to the use of a hair brush, especially the public one, the scalp and hair had plenty of ventilation, much sunlight and, hence, a condition favorable to a luxuriant growth of hair existed at all times.

It is was the adoption of air and light excluding head gears and artificial head decorations generally, together with the occasional use of a community hair brush, which gave the dandruff germ its opportunity. Since this parasite has multiplied to an alarming degree until now there is hardly a person who is not troubled more or less with dandruff and falling hair.

Many, to be sure, have passed the worrying stage. Having become chronically bald they realize that nothing is capable of producing natural hair for them. Let these be a warning to all who are experiencing the significant annoyance of dandruff and falling hair.

Dandruff, which is due to a germ, and falling hair can both be overcome by the regular use of Newbro's Herpicide.

This wonderful scalp remedy kills the vicious germ which causes dandruff, cleanses the scalp and stops the hair from coming out. The destruction of the germ permits the hair to grow naturally and luxuriantly as nature intends.

Herpicide makes the hair bright, snappy, light and fluffy.

$2,000,000 FOR MRS. ASTOR-TO-BE

Colonel, Miss Force and Her Father Cruising on the Norma.

New York, Aug. 19.—Following sailing from New York last evening of Col. John Jacob Astor's yacht Norma, with the colonel, Miss Madeline Force, his fiancee, and her father aboard, rumors circulated freely that the marriage of Col. Astor and Miss Force will take place during the cruise of the pleasure craft.

The fact that the Norma had been hurriedly supplied during the day with coal and provisions sufficient for a voyage of considerable length, lent strength to the report, despite halfway denials from Col. Astor and Mr. Force that the marriage day was so close at hand.

Another rumor current before the party sailed on the Norma was that Col. Astor and his fiancee had signed an ante-nuptial agreement by which he settles $2,000,000 on her, but this report could not be verified.

Rescues Five Men.

New Haven, Conn., Aug. 19.—Col. John Jacob Astor's yacht, the Norma, rescued five men from the sinking yacht Zingara, in a squall off Horton's Point, early today. Col. Astor and his fiancee, Miss Force, watched the rescue from the deck of the Norma.

An order was issued, returnable Oct. 3, to show cause why an injunction in the action brought by Jackson should not be issued.

Officers and directors of the Ahmeek Mining company are enjoined from filing articles of association with the secretary of state, or taking any steps to aid in bringing about consolidation of the Ahmeek Mining company with the Calumet & Hecla, until further hearing.

WHAT THE RAPIDLY GROWING TOURIST TRAFFIC ON THE GREAT LAKES MEANS TO DULUTH

Zenith City Entertains Thousands of Summer Visitors Every Year.

"It's Cool in Duluth" Gospel Being Spread Throughout Country.

With their natty yachting caps, their nobby outing clothes, their binocular and camera cases slung over their shoulders, their "I'm-going-to-see-everything-if-I-die" air, tourists without number are "in our midst."

They are traveling around our boulevard in tally-hos and automobiles; they are riding across on our aerial bridge and wondering at the ingenuity of the contrivance; they are occupying our hotels and making the proprietors of those resting places for travelers smile in prosperity; they are raiding the novelty stores for postal cards and flooding the postoffices with their purchases. They are a merry, care-free, spending, sight-seeing crowd and Duluth welcomes them.

They come from the East, the West, the South, and even the North. Some speak with the broad accents of the agriculturally prosperous; some with the seemingly forced dragged words of the East; some with the pleasing drawl of the South. Some have the slicked up appearance of the "I've got enough to take a vacation, b'gosh" kind and some have the bored air of the much-traveled idle rich, to whom nothing under the sun can be very wonderful after one has seen so much y'know.

They come singly, in pairs, in flocks of four to forty. There are newly wedded couples enjoying the bliss of the first few weeks on a lake trip and looking at sights with unseeing eyes; there are mothers and fathers and the boys and girls; there are personally conducted excursion parties; there are school teachers taking sight-seeing as a stern reality, and determined, in memory of a winter's pinching and saving, to see everything that is to be seen at a minimum of cost; there are jaded business men getting away from their offices, and care-free college youths and maidens making the best of their vacations. The tourist crowd offers a study in human nature, for it is as mixed as any American crowd can be.

Some stay only between boats. Those are the people who pile off the boat, hurry uptown, raid a souvenir postal store and send 'steen reminders to the folks at home, take a conveyance for a hurried ride around the boulevard, rush down and glance at the aerial bridge, maybe look over a park or two and return to the boat and home, telling what a perfectly lovely time they had in Duluth.

Others Come to Stay.

There are others who come to visit Duluth friends or to remain for a week or two, taking their sight-seeing in homeopathic doses and resting between times. Still others pass through on their way to Isle Royale or one of the inland lakes, while others see no more of Duluth than can be seen from the depot or dock to the hotel—the hotel lobby, or some other department, being the limit of exploration.

One must not forget the Amalgamated Order of Sneezers when one is mentioning Duluth's summer visitors. The "ker-choo" squad began to arrive in July and members are still arriving. They do not come for a day, nor do they come for the sights, but they remain for weeks breathing the delightful air of Lake Superior and recovering from the malady that afflicts them in the warmer parts of the country. Duluth is the Mecca of the hay fever sufferers and, while they cannot be counted among the tourists, they are an important part of Duluth's summer colony.

More Than 60,000 Yearly.

It is almost impossible to make estimates of the number of people who visit Duluth in summer. The tourists' season runs about twelve weeks, from the first of June to the first of September. In that time probably 5,000 people weekly come to the city for a stay of from a few hours to a few weeks. Even the estimate of 60,000 people who visit Duluth in those three months is regarded as low in some quarters and it could be materially increased without courting dispute.

Leaving estimates aside, it is certain that Duluth is visited by thousands of people yearly. The "It's Cool in Duluth" slogan flashed on the wires through the country by the Commercial club this summer has materially increased the tourist business. "It's Cool in Duluth" looms enticingly before the eyes of people in sweltering communities and when they are thinking of their vacation, they turn naturally to the cool breezes of Lake Superior and to Duluth, where the breezes are coolest.

Officers of passenger boat lines say that the tourist travel to Duluth this summer has been greater than ever before. Although the North West was burned just before the opening of the season of navigation, and it was thought that fact would have some effect on the travel, the other boat lines have absorbed the business and more. Even with the great increase in business and the number of boats carrying passengers to and from Duluth, many people have been turned away for lack of accommodations. Unable to obtain passage when they had planned, they have gone elsewhere.

From Buffalo, Cleveland and Detroit, the Anchor line steamers, Juniata, Tionesta and Octorara, run. They are palatial steamers, with accommodations for 300 passengers each. Almost every trip made this summer the boats have been crowded to capacity.

From Port Huron, Sarnia and Port Arthur the Hamonic and Huronic of the Northern Navigation company bring about 600 people to Duluth weekly and take as many away again. They make connections at Sarnia with the Grand Trunk railroad to Eastern Canadian points and much travel is by that route. From Port Huron, also, the Lakeland, operated by the Port Huron & Duluth Transportation company, brings a small party each week. Its passenger accommodations are insufficient for the large number applying for passage.

A service that approaches anywhere near the adequate is being given between Duluth and Chicago for the first time this year. The new passenger steamer of the Chicago & Duluth Transportation company, the Minnesota, is making weekly trips, carrying capacity loads of passengers and leaving many behind. The fact that the company will soon let the contract for a $600,000 steamer to improve the service next year is an indication of what the officers think the Chicago-Duluth tourist business will become.

The Booth line steamers along the north shore and to Isle Royale handle big crowds, the Isle Royale service attracting many tourists to Duluth.

The lake lines do not handle all the tourists business by any means, although the lake trip is one of the principal attractions. Thousands of people en route to the Vermilion lake district or to one of the hundreds of other lakes in Northern Minnesota come to Duluth by train and look over the city before proceeding to their destination.

Can Be Developed.

Although the tourist business is of great importance to Duluth now, it can be developed to much greater proportions. Duluth has neglected its opportunities in that respect. It has been too modest. It has not tooted its own horn, but has been content to allow chance visitors to do the advertising. This year Duluth has awakened for the first time to its opportunities. It has advertised "It's Cool in Duluth" and has made a start toward bigger things in an advertising way. When Duluth is known and appreciated as it should be, as the coolest, most pleasant spot on the map in the hot summer season, Duluth will really come into its own as a summer resort.

The city not only offers the advantage of a climate that is a boon to people where 90 deg. temperatures are the rule, but it offers picturesque natural beauty, opportunities for boating and fishing and for other sports of the summer season. Duluth has everything to offer the weary searcher after summer recreation and Duluth has only begun to let the fact be known.

GOVERNMENT WILL STOP TRESPASSING

Cruisers Out Looking for People Who Invade Federal Domain.

Bemidji, Minn., Aug. 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—H. F. Case, chief of the appraisers of state lands in Itasca county, and J. J. Opsahl, one of the appraisers, went to Blackduck Monday evening and resumed their work in that vicinity, with Nels Ottorstad of Turtle River, in appraising some tracts that are contiguous to Blackduck.

The general land office has given instructions to its general agents throughout the West to exercise diligent care in preventing trespass on lands under the jurisdiction of the general land office, and Minnesota is one of the states where these instructions have been filed. As a result, government cruisers have taken to the woods to look after some alleged trespass cases.

Murdo Gibson of Duluth, a cruiser working under the direction of Sam Colter, chief special agent for Northern Wisconsin, Michigan and Minnesota, came to Bemidji Thursday from Duluth and will spend several days along the north line of the M. & I. railway looking up trespass complaints.

The fall fishing season is "on," and some fine catches of pike, pickerel and perch are being made by anglers who take the trouble to fish at this time.

Chris Burns of Cass Lake and H. H. Winslow of Northome, state fire rangers, working under the direction of Chief Fire Ranger Cox, met here this week with L. F. Johnson, local ranger for this territory.

Mayne Stanton, son of Judge C. W. Stanton of this city, who has been city editor of the Daily Pioneer for the past six months, has severed his connection with the paper and will enter the office of B. E. McDonald, a local attorney, where he will study law.

Thomas Fitzgerald of Pine City, chief of the corps of appraisers who are placing the values on and securing data concerning the state lands of Itasca county, will from now until the work of appraising is completed, work in Northwestern Itasca county, east of Blackduck.

CAT BITES PLUMBER.

Pussy Is Decapitated Before Jaws Will Open.

Chicago, Aug. 19.—One of the most peculiar cases in the history of the Pasteur institute was treated there yesterday. Clemens Schroeder, a Chicago plumber, was the patient. Schroeder was bitten by a pet cat. The cat imbedded its teeth deep into Schroeder's fore-arm and he found it impossible to loosen the animal's hold. It was necessary to cut the cat's head from its body to pry the jaws apart. The cat's head was taken to the city health department, where an examination will be made for rabies.

Guilty of Pandering.

Chicago, Aug. 19.—Samuel Davidson of Chicago has been found guilty, by Municipal Judge Uhuir, of pandering. He will be sentenced Aug. 25. Davidson was charged with bringing Elsie Linden, 17 years old, from her home in Milwaukee to Chicago and placing the girl in a resort. Miss Linden testified that she came to Chicago on Davidson's promise that he would secure her a good position.

MESSENGER SERVICE MAN IS BOUND OVER.

Grand Forks, N. D., Aug. 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—Steve Scherer, proprietor of a local messenger service, accused of maintaining a Sunday beer depot for the Grand Forks thirsty, was bound over to the district court for trial. His alleged partner, Earl Wickwire of East Grand Forks, was given his freedom, the prosecution failing to show that he had any interest in the business. Employes of young Scherer charged that on Saturdays he would put in a supply of beer, filling all orders Sunday from his own stock, which was kept in a trap affair under the floor.

UNABLE TO DEFY VETO

Democrats Have to Yield to President's Will on Tariff.

Six Minnesota Republicans Vote to Pass Bills Over Veto.

Washington, Aug. 19.—In a succession of dramatic events, the Democratic house of repreesntatives met defeat in its supreme effort to pass the wool and free list bills over the president's vetoes, and virtually fixed upon adjournment of congress early next week.

The house on Monday will agree to the cotton tariff revision bill as amended in the senate, but will not hold congress in session to await the certain veto of that measure. The senate cleared away all its business and adjournment is assurred, in the view of leaders of both parties in both houses, by next Wednesday at latest.

The Democratic house majority, with a great demonstration of enthusiasm, marshaled its forces late yesterday for the great battle to over-ride the president, but went down with flying colors, failing to muster adequate insurgent Republican support to pass the tariff legislation.

"Will Adjourn Wednesday."

"Congress will adjourn Wednesday at the latest," was the declaration of Majority Leader Underwood after the ways and means committee conference. "We have tried to put our tariff bills over the president's head and have failed twice. There is no use fighting it out any longer."

Failure of the attempt of the Democratic house to over-ride the vetoes came during a day filled with stirring incidents. The close of the debate on the motion of Mr. Underwood to pass the wool bill over the veto found Champ Clark, the speaker of the house and an aspirant for the presidency, pleading the cause of his fellow Democrats from the floor, surrounded by a throng of his colleagues, who cheered him vigorously. The speaker, as he concluded, was given a demonstration that for several minutes delayed the roll call.

On the motion to pass the measure over the wool veto there were 227 affirmative votes, including 22 insurgent Republicans and 1 independent Republican, while the negative votes were 129. The motion to over-ride the veto on the free list also failed of a two-thirds majority, the vote being 226 to 127.

Cabinet Members Present.

During the three hours of debate on the wool bill, the corridors of the capitol reverberated time and again with shouts of approval and derision from the floor. Spirited discussions between members were frequent. That the administration was keenly watching developments was evidenced by the presence on the floor of the house of Messrs. Wickersham, Hitchcock, Nagel and Stimson of the president's cabinet. All of whom kept a close tally on the roll call until it was apparent that the Democrats could not rally the necessary two-thirds majority.

The twenty-two insurgents who stood on their former record and voted to pass the wool bill over the president's head, were: Anderson, Davis, Lindbergh, Miller, Steenerson and Volstead of Minnesota; Hanna and Helgoson of North Dakota; Haugen, Hubbard and Woods of Iowa; Kent of California; Morris of Nebraska; Jackson, Madison, Murdock and Young of Kansas; Lafferty and Warburton of Washington; Lenroot, Morse and Nelson of Wisconsin. Akin of New York, independent Republican, also voted to pass the bill over the veto.

Deserted to Taft.

The eight insurgent Republicans who voted with their colleagues for the conference report last Monday, but who deserted them to support the veto of the president, were: Nye of Minnesota; Esch, Kopp and Davidson of Wisconsin; Reese of Kansas; Stephens of California; Sloan and Kinkaid of Nebraska.

No sooner had the result been announced than the assistant secretary from the White House arrived with the veto of the free list bill. After it had been read, Mr. Underwood moved that it be passed, nothwithstanding the veto, and following twenty minutes discussion, led by Mr. Payne and Mr. Underwood, the roll was called, the vote being 226 yeas to 127 nays.

MAY POSTPONE MANITOBA VOTE

Incident of Campaign Suggests Delay—Oliver Is Nominated.

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 19.—In consequence of the Liberals having been refused the Manitoba voters' lists although they have been printed by the Manitoba government for over three weeks and are in the hands of a large number of their own party supporters, it is probable that the Manitoba elections will be postponed and will not be held on Sept. 21.

Frank Oliver, minister of the interior and member of parliament for Edmonton, was renominated for that position yesterday by the Oliver division of the Edmonton Liberals, in opposition to Former Premier of Alberta Rutherford, who was recently nominated for Edmonton by the Liberals supporting him. Alex Haggard was renominated by the Conservatives for Winnipeg.

Written For The Herald By E. J. Edwards ("Holland.")

(Copyright, 1911, by E. J. Edwards.)

VERSATILITY is sometimes regarded as an attribute of doubtful advantage, and there have been men of ability who lamented that their talents and interests were not concentrated in one field instead of being spread over several. The idea that in order to succeed a man must stick to one thing is perhaps more prevalent today than ever before. The present age can show no man to be compared in versatility with Goethe, who won fame as a poet, a scientist and a statesman. Still, there are among the prominent men of the day several who have won fame in diverse fields, and who have added to their reputation by their simultaneous pursuit of divergent lines of activity.

It would not be necessary in citing examples to mention lawyers and clergymen who have succeeded in literature. They are pretty numerous. Physicians also take to authorship rather frequently and with success. But it is rarer to find men who have displayed executive and administrative talent of a high order in business and finance who have made independent reputations in science or artistic lines, or men of scientific professions who have won fame in the fine arts.

Railroad Financier and Biologist.

Fame in two widely diverse fields, railroad finance and the science of biology, has been won by Charles Finney Cox, treasurer of the New York Central lines west of Buffalo. Among railroad men the country over Mr. Cox is well known as a master of the financial side of the railroad business, among scientists, not only in this country, but in Europe as well, he has a reputation as a deep student of and an original thinker on problems related to evolution of animal and plant life. So distinct and unrelated are the two lines of achievement from which his double fame has come that in either field of his activity he is hardly thought of as the same man that has done things of note in the other. Railroad men would need to be reminded that he is a scientist, while scientists would be apt to take second thought to identify him as a distinguished railroad man.

Seeing Mr. Cox at work in his office in the Grand Central station in New York, one would be likely to think that he was all business. He works very quietly and easily, but nevertheless with great concentration and dispatch. One would be inclined to say that his talent was pre-eminently, if not exclusively, executive and administrative.

But if one should see him a few hours later, in the evening, perhaps, presiding over the deliberations of some scientific body, reading a paper on some problem of science or entering into a discussion with specialists in certain branches of knowledge, one would be inclined to say that there was revealed a mind specially fitted by reason of its powers of imagination, analysis and logical deduction to grapple with the most elusive questions of pure science.

Mr. Cox learned the practical side of banking and financial administration with the banking house of which the late Daniel Drew was a partner. He became associated with that house soon after his graduation, in 1869, from Oberlin college, of which his grandfather, Charles G. Finney, was president. In those days when he was mastering the practical details of his business, Mr. Cox renewed his friendship with a young man who had been one of his boyhood companions, and who was then learning some of his first practical lessons in finance. That young man was the late E. H. Harriman, who could hardly have foreseen then that the career of a stock broker on which he had embarked would make him in a little more than two decades one of the great powers in the railroad world. As boys, Mr. Cox and Mr. Harriman used to play baseball together on Staten Island, N. Y., where Mr. Cox was born and spent his early years.

Mr. Cox's scientific bent of mind is probably inherited from his father, Jacob Dolson Cox, an eminent engineer and architect. One of the father's achievements was the completion of the great cathedral of Notre Dame in Montreal. Work on the edifice had proceeded rather far when difficulties were encountered that made the authorities in charge of the building deem it expedient to get the assistance of an American engineer and architect. The choice fell on Mr. Cox's father and he spent several years in Montreal superintending the work, which he completed successfully.

Mr. Cox in his early manhood became greatly interested in the work of Charles Darwin and the theories pertaining to evolution with which Darwin's name is associated. For years he made studies of these and of other branches of biology as well, and on Darwin and his work he became a recognized authority. When the American Biological society was formed Mr. Cox became a member of it and was subsequently chosen president of it. He is the author of many scientific papers and of one scientific work of note, "Protoplasm and Life." He is a member of several scientific bodies, including the Council of the New York Academy of Sciences, one of the scientific directors of the New York Botanical garden, fellow of the American Society for the Advancement of Science, and president of the Scientific Alliance of New York.

The reputation that Mr. Cox has made for himself as a scientist among scientists is indicated by the fact that when scientific bodies in England were preparing for the celebration of the centenary of Darwin's birth, in 1909, and began to consider whom they should invite from America, they thought of Mr. Cox among the first. At the exercises at the University of Cambridge on that occasion Mr. Cox, as president of the New York Academy of Sciences, presented to the chancellor of the university an engrossed copy of the address prepared by a committee of the academy in commemoration of the great biologist.

International Banker and Scientist.

The name of Edward Dean Adams is one that stands today for great constructive and organizing work in finance and railroading, and is famous in those fields; yet to it is attached a quite separate fame in the realm of science. Mr. Adams' reputation as a scientist is somewhat overshadowed by his fame as a financier and banker, but it is brilliant enough independently to make him a man of note. Some of his scientific achievements are considered quite as remarkable in their way as are many of his accomplishments in the way of railroad organization and financiering. Yet many persons who know of Mr. Adams as the American representative of the Deutsche bank of Berlin, one of the great financial institutions of Europe, would probably be surprised to learn that he is a practical scientist.

As a young man Mr. Adams had some thought of devoting his career entirely to science, and he received a scientific education. Although he was born in Boston—he is a member of the Adams family that has given two presidents to the United States—he did not go to Harvard, but was graduated from Norwich university in Northfield, Vt., with the degree of bachelor of science. After two years spent in study and travel in Europe, he finally decided to become a banker, and settled down to business in Boston. A few years later he removed to New York, which has since been his headquarters.

Mr. Adams began to attract attention because of his ability as an organizer very soon after he settled in New York in 1878. One of his earliest achievements of note was the organization of the Northern Pacific Terminal company. He became its president, financed it and superintended the construction of its plant at Portland, Or., which was leased afterward to the Northern Pacific and other railroads. A bare list of all the reconstruction and reorganization enterprizes that Mr. Adams has planned and participated in during the past thirty years would occupy much space. One of the most notable of them was the reorganization of the West Shore railroad, which was carried out in 1886. Mr. Adams worked this out, and the plan which he submitted to Mr. Morgan and Mr. Vanderbilt was adopted with hardly a change. Other great enterprises that have been benefited by his services as an organizer and constructive financier are the Northern Pacific railroad which he reorganized in 1896, the Central Railroad of New Jersey, the Philadelphia & Reading railroad, and the American Cotton Oil company.

Mr. Adams organized and is president of the Cataract Construction company and its allied companies, which the former to build and operate the great works at Niagara Falls for the utilization of the water power developed there. The success of the attempt to harness the great cataract is due to Mr. Adams not merely as a banker and business man, but as a scientist as well. He devoted more time and study to the scientific problem involved in the enterprise, probably, than he did to the financial and organization problems. There were many difficulties of a mechanical and scientific nature that had to be overcome before the conversion of the water power of the falls into electrical energy could be made successful in a commercial way. Mr. Adams spent the better part of a year working on these problems. He went to Europe and investigated personally what had been done on similar lines there. He conducted personally in some of the great scientific laboratories there numerous experiments bearing on the subject. Persons familiar with all that Mr. Adams did in this connection maintain that what he accomplished on the scientific side of this enterprise was a greater achievement than his organization of it as a business.

Throughout his busy career as a financier, Mr. Adams has remained in close touch with the various branches of science, particularly with those pertaining to electricity. He is an active member of many scientific bodies. Mr. Adams also has made a profound study of coins, ancient and modern, and is recognized as a high authority on numismatics.

Famous as a Librarian and Surgeon.

Dr. John S. Billings is widely known as a librarian, as an authority on library methods and such subjects as indexing and cataloging, and personally to whom his name is familiar probably know of him only as such. During the past fifteen years he has been director of the New York public library, the largest municipal library in the world, which has been housed since last May in the magnificent $9,000,000 edifice built for it by the city of New York on Fifth avenue. Dr. Billings had achieved fame in the field of library work before he was called to take charge of the New York public library. The index catalogue of the library of the surgeon general's office at Washington—a monumental achievement filling sixteen volumes—is his work. To be a successful director of a great library implies an extensive knowledge, covering practically every field of thought and activity. Dr. Billings' possession of such knowledge has been recognized by many of the leading universities of the world, including Yale, Harvard, Budapest and Johns Hopkins, which have conferred on him the honorary degree of doctor of laws, and Oxford, from which he holds the degree of doctor of civil laws.

Dr. Billings is also famous as a medical man—as a surgeon and an authority on hygiene. He was graduated from the Medical College of Ohio, with the degree of M. D., in 1860, and served during the civil war as a surgeon, winning a brevet lieutenant-colonelcy for faithful and meritorious service. He was for some time medical inspector of the Army of the Potomac. Later he was placed in charge of the library of the office of surgeon general, and subsequently became curator of the medical museum and library at Washington.

For a number of years just prior to his taking charge of the New York public library system, Dr. Billings was professor and director of hygiene at the University of Pennsylvania. He is the author of many medical and scientific works, among them a medical dictionary, and has contributed many papers to scientific journals. His achievements in this direction have been recognized by the University of Munich, and the University of Dublin, which have conferred on him the degree of M. D. He is a fellow of the Royal Medical society of London, and of similiar organizations in Germany, France, Sweden and other European countries, besides many in this country.

Physician, Sculptor and Artist.

Dr. Robert Tait McKenzie, professor and director of the department of physical education in the University of Pennsylvania, is famous in this country and in Europe as a medical specialist and as an artist. He is a remarkable example among men who have won fame in diverse fields. He is one of the highest authorities in his special field in the science of medicine, and at the same time he is a sculptor whose works have been exhibited under the auspices of the Royal academy in England and the Salon in France, and have been purchased by the Metropolitan museum of art of New York City.

Dr. McKenzie is the son of a Scotch Presbyterian clergyman, who was pastor of a church in the province of Ontario, Canada. The death of his father, which occurred when he was a lad, left him the main support of his mother and several younger children of the family. He not only fulfilled his charge but also worked his way through McGill university, Montreal, from which he has the degrees of A. B. and M. D., the former in 1889, the latter three years later.

His early struggles impressed upon Dr. McKenzie the advantage of a good physique, and he became greatly interested in physical culture, and made a special study of it. He built up a good practice as a medical specialist, and soon after his graduation as a physician was appointed to several positions of importance, among them that of house physician to the governor general of Canada and lecturer on anatomy at McGill university. He became a frequent contributor to medical and other journals on the subject of physical training, and soon had the satisfaction of seeing many of the reforms he advocated pretty generally adopted by the educational institutions of Caanda.

He had always shown an artistic tendency and as a youth, although without artistic training, had done a good deal of work in water colors. His career as a sculptor had an extraordinary beginning. He conceived the idea of making a statue of a man that should be a mathematically exact copy of an ideal athlete, the ideal to be determined by taking the average proportions of a large number of living athletes of the first rank. What he proposed was something like making a composite photograph, only the final result was to be in bronze, and perfectly accurate, as no composite photograph can be. Accordingly, he had measurements taken of about 100 of the foremost American athletes, and set to work to make his clay model according to the figures so obtained.

Many of those who knew what he was doing were openly skeptical about the result. Indeed, it did not seem likely to be much of a success, for although Dr. McKenzie was very learned in anatomy he was entirely untrained in the technique of sculpture. But he kept at work, and in about a year finished the model of the statue, which is known as "The Sprinter." He showed it to members of the medical profession—and they pronounced it a success. They judged it from a scientific point of view. But that was not enough then for Dr. McKenzie.

"I should like to know what the verdict of artists would be," he said.

So he had the statue cast in bronze and sent it to the Society of American Artists. They accepted it for exhibition, and it was favorably criticized.

Then he sent it to the committee of the Royal Academy of England, with nothing to show who the sculptor was, so that the statue might be judged solely on its artistic merits. It was accepted and was given a prominent place at the academy's exhibition in Burlington house. He had similar success at the salon in Paris.

That was about ten years ago. Since then Dr. McKenzie has been pretty busy as a sculptor, although none the less so as a medical specialist, and has made a number of bronzes, besides portrait medallions and medals, which have been exhibited here and in Europe. During his summer vacations he has rented an atelier in Paris, and there has devoted himself to special studies in the technique of his art. Two of his bronzes, "The Competitor" and "The Supple Juggler" were purchased for the collection of modern sculpture of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York.

Mr. Morgan as an Art Expert.

Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan is famous on two continents not only as a great banker and business organizer, but as a great art collector and connoisseur. Many persons may suppose, perhaps, that only two things are necessary to make a great art collector—the inclination and extraordinary wealth, and such persons probably think that Mr. Morgan has made a great name as a collector of art objects because he has been willing and able to outbid others in the art markets of the world. Such an idea would be erroneous because it would be only half true. More than inclination and money are necessary for the making of a great art collector. It requires probably a special talent, and certainly a natural enthusiasm for the appreciation of art, and a real knowledge of art as well. Those who are familiar with what Mr. Morgan has accomplished as a collector acknowledge him to possess these qualifications in a marked degree.

Mr. Morgan's enthusiasm for art antedates his career as a banker and financier. While he was a student at the University of Goettingen in Germany it became a passion with him. It was there that he began the serious study of art in all its various phases which has made him a connoisseur and a successful collector.

Of course, Mr. Morgan employs many experts to assist him in gathering the works of art he brings together, but it is none the less true that he himself as an expert knows much about these things. He plans his collections with a definite artistic purpose, which he follows out consistently. His famous collections in his New York and London residences, in the South Kensington Museum, London, and in the Metropolitan Museum of Art and the Museum of National History in New York, may be truly called distinct creations, the realization of conceptions of his own.

Mr. Morgan as a connoisseur and art collector has been frequently compared, both in this country and in Europe, to the Medici, the most famous lovers and patrons of the fine arts of their day, who were also famous bankers.

Musician and Mining Engineer.

Among other men who may be mentioned as having won double fame in diverse fields is John Henry Gower, who is known in both this country and England as a musician. In England he has filled many high positions as an organist and has given many organ recitals in this country, especially in Denver, where his American home is. Mr. Gower is also a mining engineer of note.

Albert Ross Parsons is well known as a musician and is an authority on musical pedagogics and aesthetics as well as a composer. He has also made a reputation as an archeologist, and has written works on Egyptology that have attracted attention, his work, "New Light from the Great Pyramid" being highly praised by none other than Prof. George Ebers, the great Egyptologist.

Dr. Henry G. Hanchett of Washington is the author of several medical works that have been published in a good many editions, but he is better known as a concert pianist and voluminous writer on musical subjects than he is as a physician.

Joseph Spencer Kennard has attained prominence as a lawyer whose specialty in this country is railroad and corporation law and whose practice has been chiefly before the United States supreme court and the supreme courts of New York, Pennsylvania and Illinois. Abroad he is noted as an international lawyer. He is also an artist whose paintings have been frequently exhibited in Europe and in this country and have received honorable mention. He is, further, an authority on Italian art and literature and he frequently lectures on this subject in the principal American and European universities. He is a member of many art associations in Europe and America.

Machinist and Botanist.

Another versatile man is Raynal Dodge of Newburyport, Mass. He is a machinist and an authority on mechanical science, and a frequent contributor on this subject to journals devoted to it. He is also a botanist, and has made a special study of the ferns of New England, the results of which are contained in one of the volumes of his published works.

F. Hopkinson Smith has earned a triple fame. He is well known as a mechanical engineer and contractor who has built lighthouses and other government works; as an artist and illustrator who has won many medals for his work; and still more as an author who has written some of the most popular stories and sketches that have appeared in recent years.

The late Joseph Jefferson was distinguished as a landscape painter as well as famous as an actor. The late John Hay, secretary of state under McKinley and Roosevelt, was famous as a poet as well as great as a statesman and diplomatist. Famous in the newspaper world as a great editor and publisher, the late William M. Laffan of the New York Sun was known in the world of art as one of the great authorities on ceramics.

It is said of the late Dr. Leopold Damrosch, the father of Walter and Frank Damrosch, who probably accomplished more toward popularization of classical music in this country than any other single individual, that whenever the name of Carl Shurz was mentioned in his presence he invariably sighed long and wistfully and shook his head. "But for dose rascally politics," he bemoaned in his quaint idiom, "we might have had at least one good pianist in America. But think of what Schurz could be if he kept to his technique instead of dose bolitical speeches! Ach Gott! It is derrible!"

Now the same might be said truthfully enough of a man who has held three cabinet positions and is now the head of one of the most powerful industrial corporations in the country—George B. Cortelyou, president of the Consolidated Gas company of New York city. At the time when the struggle for existence compelled him to take up stenography as a makeshift, he was designated by a single ambition to become America's foremost pianist. Those who have enjoyed the rare privilege of judging of the quality of his performance as an amateur are not inclined to doubt that "it might have been."

A business institution has a two-fold duty to perform. First it must make money for itself in order to exist. Second it must serve the community in which it's located. By that we mean that both are essential to each other. A merchant cannot long exist who considers only the profit on his merchandise. He must consider as well the service, style, quality and workmanship of a garment. If he has all these things in mind in purchasing and selling of his wares, he is serving the community well.

This is the thought that dominates at this store.

COUNTY FAIR NEXT WEEK

Arrangements Are Nearly Completed for Biggest Show on Record.

Hibbing Expecting to Entertain Immense Crowd During Fair Time.

O. J. Tucker, advertising manager for the St. Louis County Fair association is in the city today on the business of the fair. Mr. Tucker has just returned from a trip around around the ranges by auto in the interests of the big exposition and he says that he was more than pleased with the lively interest shown by the people from one end of the county to the other. The fair will be held next week, Aug. 24-27.

Extensive improvements have been made on the grounds this year. A new auditorium has been erected and a new agricultural hall. The grandstand has been repainted and the track and the road to the fair grounds from Hibbing, have been oiled to lay the dust. A number of unsightly shacks owned by squatters which have disfigured the grounds in past years, have been removed, and in all about $5,000 has been spent by the association in improvements.

The horse races will be held Friday, Saturday and Sunday. On Friday there will be three events, the 2:15 pace or 2:10 trot; the 2:35 trot and a three-quarter mile running race best two heats out of three. On Saturday there will be a 2:25 pace or 2:20 trot; a 3-year-old pace, hobbles barred; a 3-year-old trot; and a three-quarter mile hurdle with three jumps.

Sunday's card includes a 2:30 pace or 2:25 trot; a free for all, pace or trot; a 2:19 pace or 2:14 trot; and a three-quarter mile hurdle. A handsome list of entries has been secured for all the events and the association has put up a list of purses worth trying for.

Bird-man McGoey has agreed to make four flights at the fair, a feature which alone is costing the association $1,000.

A band contest open to any musical organization in the county is to be a feature and the village of Hibbing has put up a $150 purse for this event.

Special efforts are being made by the committee in charge to have all exhibits on the grounds by Thursday morning so that the fair may be complete from start to finish. Arrangements are being made in Hibbing for the accomodation of a record-breaking crowd during the fair days.

WEST END NEWS

SALVATION ARMY TO HAVE HOME FOR THE UNEMPLOYED

NEW SALVATION ARMY BUILDING.

With a view to widening the scope of the social and industrial operations of the local Salvation Army of this city, negotiations have just been made for the lease of the two-story and basement brick structure owned by the Soo railroad at Twelfth avenue west and Michigan street. Capt. Fred Krause of the industrial department has made the final arrangements for the taking over of the old building.

The structure is a landmark. It was built in 1891 by Peterson & Jensen. The first story was devoted to a store and a saloon and in the rear there was a feed store. At one time there was a printing office in the basement. Upstairs at some time there was a dance hall and at that time the building was known as Central hall. Later the building was remodeled and the upper story was devoted to living rooms. It changed hands several times before it was acquired by the railroad people P. Deslauriers, a clothier, was the last tenant of the place.

The Salvation Army Relief store is now located at 1606 West Superior street and the Industrial home is in the rear at 1605 West Michigan street Under the present arrangements the quarters are cramped and much too small to carry out the work as it should be done. Capt. Krause says that the idea in acquiring the new quarters is to widen the scope of the work and to have a place where a man with most any kind of a trade, who through circumstances is forced out of a job may get temporary employment, with board lodging and a small remuneration to tide him over until he gets something better.

Industrial Home.

"The Industrial home that will be installed in the new quarters," said Capt. Krause, "will be a sort of a 'Jack-of-all-trades' shop. There we will have a place for the tailor, who is stranded, the furniture repairer, who is 'broke,' the cobbler, who is without funds, and in fact any tradesman who is in need of work."

In the present quarters, the only feature which has been carried out is the waste paper department, which gives work on the average to about ten men They collect waste paper from the various business houses and prepare it for shipping out of the city. Two or three men are also employed to collect and take care of the goods in the relief store. In the new quarters the first story will be given over to the relief store and work shops. The basement will probably be used for a waste paper warehouse and the second story converted into a working men's hotel.

Repairs Are Necessary.

It will be necessary to spend about $2,000 for repairs in order to fit the building up so as to be habitable. When it is ready for use, there will be ample room to give steady employment to about twenty-five men and to lodge about seventy-five men in the dormitories. It is planned to rush the work as fast as possible, but this will depend somewhat on the liberality of the donations received and the ability of those in charge in quickly raising a $2,000 fund for repairs However, it is expected that the place will be dedicated with solemn exercises on Oct. 24 and will be thrown open about Nov. 1

Several high officers of the Salvation Army were in the city yesterday and looked over the grounds with Capt. Krause. Among others in the party were Col. French of Chicago, secretary of the Western territory; Col. Addie of Chicago, territorial social secretary; Col. Marshall of Minneapolis, provincial officer of the northern province, and Maj. Cass, social sectional officer of the northern province with headquarters in Minneapolis.

The officers seemed impressed very favorably with the move and have promised their support in getting the new home established.

CONTRACT IS AWARDED

S. Johnson and Erick Nordquist & Co. Will Lay Water Main Extension.

Pipe Being Delivered and Work Will Begin in Few Days.

S. Johnson and Erick Nordquist & Co., who submitted a joint bid, were awarded the contract for the West end hillside extension by the board of water and light commissioners. Their bid was $15,283.20.

Other bids submitted were: Charles Eklund, $15,976.80; George R. King, $16,169; Pastoret Lawrence company, $16,775.60; E. Engle, $17,315.80; Fairbanks, Morse & Co., $18,781; C. S. Prosser & Co. $19,634.

Pipe is already being delivered on the ground and the work on the extension will begin as soon as the contractors can get into action. The work will be rushed to completion, and it cannot be rushed too much for the people to be benefited, as they have been waiting for years for water and gas service.

The extension will be made from the terminus of the main on Fifth street and Seventh avenue west, around Central park and down into the West end hillside district, extending as far west as the Ensign school.

The district to be served by the extension has been growing rapidly in recent years and many houses are now being erected there. The service has been a necessity as the water used in the Ensign school last year was found to be polluted and the well water all through the district is not considered entirely safe.

New Building Planned.

John Erickson is moving his blacksmith shop from No. 20 Twenty-first avenue west to a location on Twentieth avenue, next to the Home Laundry building. The lots occupied by the shop are owned by John Erickson, who will build a store structure costing $2,000 on them. The new building will be 50x40 and will be erected at once.

DOCK EXTENSION IS COMPLETED

Excursion Boats May Now Stop at the West End.

Work was completed this week on the extension of the Twenty-first avenue west city dock, the contract for which was let some time ago by the board of public works.

The extension has been badly needed. The addition is in the form of an L and gives excursion boats a chance to run in and take passengers on board without any trouble. The dock now extends seventy-five feet farther and provides sufficient depth for the larger excursion boats.

The extension will be greatly appreciated by the organizations which from time to time arrange for excursions from the West end. It is probable that the Clow & Nicholson company which runs boats up the river daily, will be induced to have its boats stop there regularly.

ON THE IRON RANGES

RIFLE BUTT HIS WEAPON

Albert Kennedy Kills James McDonald at Crooked Lake.

Beats Victim to Death With Rifle Before Two Witnesses.

Grand Rapids, Minn., Aug. 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—Sheriff T. T. Riley arrived here last night, having in custody Albert Kennedy, a well known logger, hunter and trapper living in the vicinity of Crooked lake, about eight miles from Nashwauk, who is alleged to have killed James McDonald, a farmer, by beating his brains out with a rifle at Crooked lake about midnight Thursday.

McDonald's body is at an undertaker's establishment at Nashwauk, where an inquest is being held today by Coroner J. L. Sullivan, the state being represented by County Attorney R. McOuat, who arrived at the scene of the tragedy yesterday with Sheriff Riley and the coroner. Kennedy made no resistance when arrested by the sheriff and deputies.

The murder of McDonald appears to have been the culmination of a drunken spree, as the victim and Kennedy are said to have been friends. When drinking, Kennedy is said to have been very troublesome and often sought to "pick a quarrel."

Drank Together in Nashwauk.

Kennedy was in Nashwauk Thursday with McDonald and they were more or less under the influence of liquor when they left for Kennedy's hunting camp at Crooked lake. At the lake they were joined by James Hayes and Pat McGuire of Nashwauk, business men who had taken up their abode at the camp to fish. There was more drinking and Kennedy lost his watch. He accused McDonald of stealing it. Words followed and during the heat of passion, Kennedy is said to have grabbed his rifle from the wall in his cabin and struck McDonald viciously over the head, knocking him down and beating him up. When McGuire and Hayes sought to interfere, Kennedy is said to have threatened to kill them with his rifle, saying he wanted to even an old score with McGuire anyway. Then he is said to have returned to beating the prostrate form of his dying victim, knocking the head into a pulp.

Terrorized, the witnesses of the tragedy could do nothing but wait till morning, when they were permitted to remove the body to a barn in the rear of the camp. Kennedy finally permitted them to go out on the lake in a boat and fish, threatening to shoot if they tried to escape. Returning they found Kennedy asleep and during the morning started for town, where they sent word to Sheriff Riley, who hastened there with the coroner and county attorney and going out to Crooked lake, made the arrest.

Principals Well Known.

Both of the principals in the murder are well known in Nashwauk. Kennedy is a middle-aged man of great physique, who, when under the influence of liquor, is a desperate character. He has figured in many saloon brawls and from all accounts was capable of doing most anything when angered.

McDonald was well and favorably known to most of the people in Itasca county, where he has resided for many years. He was of a quiet, easy-going disposition, fond of a good song or story and liked to participate in friendly wrestling matches with his intimates. He was never known to be a rowdy, always preferring to laugh and joke. In recent years he has followed the occupation of a farmer, at which, it is said, he was quite successful.

CREAMERY OPENED WITH BIG PICNIC

Celebration of Inauguration of New Industry at Grand Rapids.

Grand Rapids, Minn., Aug. 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—The creamery opening picnic which was held here Thursday, proved a a grand success in every particular. Between 500 and 1,000 people took their picnic dinners down to the creamery grounds and partook of a most enjoyable meal there. Coffee and cream and sugar were furnished by the Grand Rapids business men and the creamery association, and there was plenty brought by the others to feed all who were without their lunches.

The Grand Rapids band furnished music. A. J. McGuire opened the speechmaking by making a few preliminary remarks, stating that he was glad to note the large number of both business people and farmers present at the picnic, and that that fact spoke so well for the cooperation between the two that it is desired will continue in the future.

C. H. Dickinson Speaks.

Mr. McGuire then introduced C. H. Dickinson, who spoke briefly in behalf of the business people of Grand Rapids. C. J. Miles, secretary of the creamery association, and one of the hardest workers for the creamery building then spoke briefly on the construction of the creamery.

Alonzo Wardall of Seattle, Wash., who is visiting with his brother, H. A. Wardall and his sister, Mrs. O. J. Niles gave a good talk on cooperation in the West, citing what cooperation had done for the farmers and fruit growers of the West.

C. C. McCarthy gave one of his ever enjoyable talks which overflowed with wisdom and logic and wit. After this Mr. McGuire again urged the people of Grand Rapids to use the product of the creamery, and advised the farmers not to listen to the assurances of good prices from the cream trust representatives as those institutions were only offering such prices until such a time as the local cooperative creamery was starved out of business, after which the trust would have the farmer at its mercy.

The first pound of butter turned out at the creamery was then auctioned off and it brought the handsome sum of $5, the balance of the day's output was then sold out at 50 cents per pound. The first cream was brought in to the creamery yesterday by Amos Forsythe of Cohasset.

ITASCA COUNTY HAS MADE SETTLEMENT

Effects Deal With Surety Company of Ex-County Treasurer's Shortage.

Grand Rapids, Minn., Aug. 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Itasca county board this week effected a settlement with the National Surety company, which was on the bond of ex-County Treasurer Kremer. The settlement made gives the county $15,000 in cash and all of the securities v had at the time he was arrested, and which were being held in trust awaiting a settlement, were assigned to the county. In exchange for this the county gave the National Surety company a release of its liabilities, and assigned to that company the claims which the county had against the Metropolitan Surety company, which was for a part of the time, on the ex-treasurer's bond. The latter company is now defunct, and the National will attempt to get as great an indemnification from the receivers of the Metropolitan as possible for their share of the liability.

What County Gets.

The settlement gives the county something over $47,000, and the shortage as returned by the examiners was a trifle over $45,000, and considering that the matter was settled without litigation and the attendant expense, it is considered a very good settlement. The excess of the amount paid the county over the shortage will not pay for the expense of the examination of the books to find the amount of the shortage, but the amount which it is less is more than offset by the fact that there is no litigation expense connected with the matter.

Tax Levy Fixed.

The tax levy for the coming year was made as follows: General revenue fund, $100,000, divided as follows: salaries, $30,000; court expenses, $30,000; coroner's expenses, $2,300; board of prisoners, $3,800; wolf bounties, $2,000; books and stationery, $4,000; printing and publishing, $4,000; assessing, $2,000; water, light and fuel, $3,000; repairs, of court house and grounds, $14,000; miscellaneous, $5,000. The road and bridge fund levy was made at $50,000. This is probably three or four thousand dollars more than the valuation of the county will allow, but the board wished to take advantage of the raise which the state tax commission may make in the assessed valuation of the county, and thereby make the road and bridge levy as great as possible. Two mills is all that is allowed by law as a road and bridge levy. The levy for the poor fund was fixed at $20,000. This will include the care of the poor, and some general repairs on the poor farm. The bond fund levy was fixed at $15,000 and the interest fund levy at $10,000.

The mortgage loan made to Katherine Hoolihan was extended for two years. Numerous surveys of sections were taken up and disposed of. The board was appointed as a committee to look over the steel bridge built at the Wilman place by H. J. Cooper.

Chisholm, Minn., Aug. 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mike Bills was before Municipal Judge William Masters this week on a charge of theft of four dinner pails from the Shenango dry-house. In explanation he said he had just walked from Virginia, eighteen miles, and had become so hungry and faint from the long jolt, that he ate up the dinners belonging to the four miners who owned the pails. After some consideration, the judge fined him $30 and costs or to serve thirty days in the county jail. Not having funds, Mike took the thirty days in jail.

The various committees having the success of the fair in charge, are getting busy and no effort will be spared to make the fifth annual fair of the Lake County Agricultural association a hummer from start to finish.

Ely, Minn., Aug. 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—A number of people are enjoying the lakes around here. The business men have erected cottages on the various islands, where they and their families spend their evenings in boating and fishing. They also entertain guests there.

At the present time there are quite a number of outing parties there. These parties go usually from Winton, whence they either go to the border of the lakes there, or make the trip to Tower via the many rivers and lakes. There are also many parties at Lake Burntside, and the fact that the Burntside Outing company has completed most of the work on their summer hotel will bring quite a number of other men out to the beautiful lake. Yesterday the tents were put up, for the sleeping quarters, the building of the sleeping part of the hotel being so slow.

Andrew Hanson, Oscar Hanson and Hugo Wenstrom, just returned yesterday from a week's camping trip in the basswood region. They report an excellent time in fishing and camping. They were staying near the old Oliver logging camps.

CHISHOLM YOUTHS GET INTO TROUBLE

Alleged to Have Hired Livery Rig and Tried to Sell It.

Gilbert, Minn., Aug. 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—On Wednesday John Nowak, aged 12, and Charles Zionik, aged 13, went into a livery stable at their home in Chisholm, saying that they wanted a single rig. They drove around Buhl, then went to Virginia and spent the night there. Thursday they came to Gilbert and that night tried to sell the outfit to Mr. Lakso of the Broadway livery for $250. He offered them $200, but they said their father paid more than that for the horse alone. Their story was that they had only been over from the old country a year and were living in Buhl, where their father and uncle were recently killed in a mine. The father had paid a month's rent in advance, which was now up, so they were traveling and forced to sell the horse so as to get money to get back to friends in the old country.

Matt Avini, who used to live in Chisholm, recognized the boy and knew he was not an Austrian, as he claimed to be. They stuck to their story till they were landed in jail. Friday an officer came from Chisholm and took the boys back with him. They will have a hearing in Chisholm. One of the boys a couple of weeks ago took his father's bank book down to the bank and tried to raise $250 on that.

HIBBING IS SOAKED.

But Nearby Village of Alice Received Very Little Rain.

Hibbing, Minn., Aug. 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—Although Hibbing was visited by a terrific downpour of rain last evening about 6 o'clock, the rain falling in veritable torrents for about fifteen minutes and flooding the streets, the village of Alice, one mile and a half south, did not receive a drop of moisture, the roads being dry and dusty, while Hibbing was enveloped in "wetness."

But a few drops of rain fell at that place during the night and here several showers of more or less magnitude transpired during the late hours.

Which all goes to show that the range country has one of the oddest climates in the world.

GILBERT SEWER WORK IS MAKING PROGRESS.

Gilbert, Minn., Aug. 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—Crushed rock is being hauled to the site of Gilbert's sewage purification plant and it is expected work will begin shortly. The work of installing the sewage mains is progressing as rapidly as circumstances will permit. The contractors, the Pastoret & Lawrence Co., have been handicapped by a great deal of rain and also encountered a large quantity of quicksand.

Ed Brown, while cranking the Hogan automobile, received a blow on the arm which will lay him up for a week or so. The arm was not broken but it was a very narrow escape. The front end of an auto is quite as dangerous as the rear end of a mule.

Sixteen tables were in operation. The ladies' head prize was won by Miss Louise Taillon and the foot prize by Mrs. John Hassett. The gentlemen's head prize went to John Gettings and the foot prize to Bertram Willman.

Ice cream and cake were served after the card games.

HOUGHTON ATHLETE HAS FOOT MANGLED.

Houghton, Mich., Aug. 19.—Garvin Bauden, aged 19, son of F. J. Bauden, president of the city of Houghton, had his foot badly mangled Thursday when the member was caught in the engine of a gasoline boat. The accident ends Bauden's career as an athlete. He held the Michigan high school record for the 440-yard dash.

Death Comes During Journey.

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 19.—John Green, a Civil war veteran, aged 76, living at Grand Rapids, Mich., died while en route to Milwaukee yesterday on a boat. The old man was accompanied unknown to him by his son, Harvey, who feared his father might become ill on the trip.

As the boat steamed into the Milwaukee harbor, Harvey went to his father's stateroom. Listening, he heard moans and quick gasps for breath. Breaking down the door he entered and found his father writhing in pain upon his bunk, death soon resulting.

AT THE THEATRES

AT THE LYCEUM

Gus A. Forbes will appear at the Lyceum next week in the role of which Duluth most approves as the disguised aunt in that greatest of all farces, "Charley's Aunt," which was the most popular bill presented by Mr. Forbes last season. Since its first production this farce has laughed itself around the world and it is one of the few things in this world that seems to improve with age. Of some plays there is a difference of opinion, but about "Charley's Aunt" the verdict is always the same. The individual who can sit through the performance unmoved is yet to be found. It is the farce on which all ambitious young authors model their plays. If they can write a farce one-half as good they feel they have arrived.

Duluth has seen many presentations of this rollicking comedy and of them all Mr. Forbes' production given last summer was the best. During the entire week of the play Duluth giggled and ha-ha'd to its great satisfaction and enjoyment and it was in response to many requests that the bill was included this season.

The story is familiar to every theater-goer. Some Oxford college students are planning a party in their rooms at which the aunt of one of them is to be the chaperone. Just before the party, word comes that the aunt will be unable to come. It is too late to send word to the girls and to have them unchaperoned is out of the question. Just at this moment another of the students, who is to be in some amateur theatricals as a woman, comes in and before he can object he is made to put on the clothes and act as the chaperon. Anyone with the least bit of imagination can almost make a play of his own with these premises. The girls come and the unconventional chaperon does many things not usually done in the best society. Of course the real aunt turns up and more complications ensue.

Mr. Forbes will appear, of course, as the pseudo aunt and a most careful production is promised. The members of the company will appear in congenial roles and next week promises to be a very happy one at the stock company performances. "Charley's Aunt" will be given Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday afternoon and night and for two performances the following Sunday.

The concluding performances of "The City" will be given tonight and tomorrow afternoon and night at the Lyceum. This remarkable play, which was produced after the death of the author, has been much discussed during the week as the Forbes Stock company are giving a remarkable performance.

The bill for the week of Aug. 28 will be "The Count of Monto Christo."

"Bright Eyes," announced as a companion to "Three Twins," is the booking for the Lyceum theater three nights and Saturday matinee, commencing Thursday evening, Aug. 24. The new play is by the authors of the "Three Twins." Charles Dickson having written the book, Otto Hauerbach the lyrics and Karl Hoschna the music. The story is based on "Mistakes Will Happen," for several years a very popular farce. The story closely follows that of the farce, the principal changes being those made necessary by the introductions of the chorus and the various musical numbers.

The story is that of Tom Genowin, an actor, who has written a musical play, and of his efforts and those of his wife to have it produced. The first scene shows the stage of a theater with the play in rehearsal. But in the midst of the rehearsal the manager of the company discovers that Tom has been secretly married to Dorothy Mayland, a leading lady of the company. Married actors have long been the detestation of the manager and he not only refuses to go further with the play but he discharges Tom and Dorothy. The theater is owned by Mr. Hunter-Chase, who has just been elected president of a female seminary. In spite of the fact that he is a gay old dog, he believes that as president of a young ladies' school and at the same time owner of a theater, he may be misunderstood, and therefore makes the theater over to his wife, a young woman with ambitions to shine as an amateur actress. They come to the theater a few minutes after Tom and Dorothy have been discharged, the one to turn over the ownership of the theater, the other to assume it. Hunter-Chase becomes infatuated with Dorothy and she, believing that he will help Tom to produce the play, agrees to meet him in the carriage house of his country home and read the manuscript to him. Soon after Mrs. Hunter-Chase meets Tom and tells him of her histronic aspirations and the fact that she is soon to be seen in an amateur performance before a society audience. Tom suggests his play to her and on her agreeing to use it arranged to meet her to coach her in her part, the engagement being made for the carriage house on the same afternoon as the engagement of Dorothy and Mr. Hunter-Chase.

The second act takes place in the carriage house, the scene showing both the lower floor and the loft. Here the two couples meet and the ludicrous complications that ensue are heightened by the clandestine meeting in the same place of an English coachman and a German maid.

In the final act, which takes place on the lawn of the country house, all the complications are straightened out and Mrs. Hunter-Chase agrees to produce the play at her own theater with Tom and Dorothy in the leading parts with Tom as manager.

Much of the fun of the popular farce from which the story is taken has been retained in the musical play, but it has been brought up-to-date and much new fun introduced. The music is perhaps the most tuneful and catchy that Mr. Hoschna has ever written and most of it is of a whistleable quality. There are a number of ensemble numbers sung by an unusually large chorus, the girls of which have been specially engaged for their ability, as well as their good looks as well as many solos, duets and quartets. The company includes a number of well known and clever comedians headed by Cecil Lean and Florence Holbrook, well known fun makers. Others in the cast are; Jeannette Lawrence, Herbert Sallinger, Samuel Thompson, and Freddie Nice and Cecelia Renard, the well known dancers.

As is his habit Joseph M. Gaites, the producer of the play, who also gave to the stage "Three Twins," has furnished the play, with a very elaborate scenic equipment—an equipment that requires three baggage cars to transport—and has introduced a number of novel mechanical and electrical effects. He has also introduced a number of decided novelties in costuming, particularly in the chorus numbers "The Good Old Days of Yore," which changes in dress from the discovery of America until the present day, and in "I'll Be Your Chantecler," in which the members of the chorus are dressed to represent barnyard fowls.

* * *

Trixie Friganza, the most popular comedienne in America, heads the cast; Joe Howard, who composed "The Time, The Place and The Girl," wrote the music, and Addison Burkhardt, who contributed "The Runaways," wrote the book of "The Sweetest Girl in Paris," which ran 300 performances at the La Salle Opera house, Chicago last season, and which comes to the Lyceum on Sept. 4 and 5. This is Miss Friganza's first tour since her presentation of George Cohan's "The American Idea" throughout the country.

That old reliable drama "In Old Kentucky," as fresh, as bright and as new as on the day of its birth twenty years ago, is shortly to appear here. This delightful romance of the blue grass state, with its merry little darkeys, its exciting horse race, its capital comedy scenes and its wholesome portrayal of a phase of life in the Daniel Boone country, has never grown old with playgoers. It still holds its own with the best of latter-day plays. The crop of dramas that were popular when "In Old Kentucky" was an infant are for the most part dead and forgotten, but there is no immediate prospect of "In Old Kentucky's demise.

Chauncey Olcott's productions have always been noted for the artistic taste displayed in the scenic and other embellishments, as well as the clean, lofty tone of the plays themselves. In "Macushla" (Pulse of My Heart), which he will present at the Lyceum theater for one week commencing Monday evening, Sept. 11, with Wednesday and Saturday matinees, there is no exception to the rule laid down by Mr. Olcott at the beginning of his career. The splendid mis-en-scene, the dainty, tuneful songs and refined, wholesome story of the play, in which there is not a suggestive or vulgar line, make an entertainment that is thoroughly clean and delightful. With a dashing, romantic character such as he portrays in "Macushla," Mr. Olcott is at his best and it is said that he has never done better work than in his play, his latest creation. There is always a charm in his easy, graceful acting, and as for his singing, he has led the field in the musical play exponents for years, and up-to-date has no rival in his line.

Manager Daniel V. Arthur announces that this city will be one of the first visited by the select company that he has brought together to support Grace Van Studdiford the coming season. She is booked for an early appearance at the Lyceum. Miss Van Studdiford was last seen here in "The Golden Butterfly," when she strengthened the hold she had gained previously by her excellent singing in the ever popular "Red Feather."

Mort H. Singer, famous for his big musical comedy successes, will send the greatest of them all here soon, when Harry Bulger in "The Flirting Princess" will be the attraction, under his management. This musical farce is full of clear comedy, delightful music, catchy songs and pretty girls, and will no doubt be received by our theater-goers, as in every other city it has visited, with enthusiastic applause. It will afford the patrons of this house an opportunity of seeing for the first time the "Oogie" and "Gloomy Glooms" dances, also a glimpse of the Egyptian "Turkey Trot."

AT THE ORPHEUM

The Orpheum theater is celebrating an anniversary.

It is only the first anniversary, but the theater is planning a real celebration, not for one day, but for three weeks.

It happened in this way. Last month when Manager Pierong was in New York talking over the fall bookings he asked the booking manager to provide some special attractions for the first anniversary of the new theater. The Orpheum will be a year old on Aug. 22, and for that week Mr. Pierong asked that something a little out of the ordinary be booked.

The New York offices had received the returns from the first season in Duluth, and the request met with a most cordial reception. "We'll do better than that," said the booking manager. "We'll give you three weeks of it. We have a bunch of big acts on their way to the coast about that time and we'll book you three and four headline act shows for three weeks. How will that please your people up there in Duluth?"

Mr. Pierong reckoned it would do, and the first of the anniversary shows comes next week.

Headlining the show will be one of B. A. Rolfe's big musical acts. The act contains eleven people, and it is a musical comedy in an abbreviated form. The scene is laid in the Colonial period, which gives every opportunity for elaborate costumes and scenic effects. Mr. Rolfe is the producer of the biggest musical acts in vaudeville, having such attractions as "The Leading Lady," "Ye Colonial Septet" and "The Rolfonians." His "Courtiers" is his newest act and said to be his best. It is full of catchy musical numbers, and the chorus is said to make up in appearance what it lacks in numbers, when compared to a regular musical comedy.

Howard and North, who are second on the bill, have an act which they call "Those Were the Happy Days," which is said to be simply one long laugh. One man takes the part of the side show grafter, or "spieler," who tries to rope in a "rube," played by the other performer. The "rube" turns out to be an old schoolmate of the grafter. There is a little sentiment and pathos mixed in with the comedy, and the act has become somewhat of a classic in its line, so well known is it in vaudeville world. Howard and North have repeatedly tried to get away from the act and secure a new one, but invariably the managers have insisted that they present their old sketch. They now have two or three other sketches on their hands which they have tried to produce, only to be forced to go back to the old one. This will be the first time they have appeared in Duluth, however.

The scene is a Southern race track, and the story is that of a broken-down sport who risks his last $5 on a "long shot." The money he expects to get will be used by him in caring for "The Little Stranger," which is expected at his home. "The Little Stranger" is the name of the sketch, and it is produced by George Pierce, Percy Plunkett and Paul Dalzell. The horse on which he bets is also called "The Little Stranger," and he thinks he has a sure "hunch." The horse did not win, but the affluent "sport," who is also a character in the playlet, makes the other believe it does, and pays the bet. That in brief is the outline of the plot, which will furnish about the only serous feature on the bill.

"A tall, handsome girl comes on the apron of the stage in a simple little gown with no frills and furbelows—it is a good thing to see and good to hear." That is what Ashton Stevens, probably the best known critic in Chicago, said of Belle Adair. Belle is coming to the Orpheum with the same little gown, or one like it, and the same songs. She is an English girl who has come over to America and taken a running jump into vaudeville, landing up among the top-notchers. Orpheum audiences will have a chance to hear her sing "My Home Town" next week and see if they like her as well as did the Chicago critic.

The Four Floods don't scorn the slapstick and the toy balloon as aids to merriment. They have an acrobatic comedy act, calling themselves the "acrobatic merry makers." There are three men and a woman in the act, and they are said to have an act that keeps moving all the time, and that is the type that makes the gallery threaten to tear the roof off.

The Louise Stickney circus consists of a pony, a dog and a man about twelve feet tall—thanks to the addition of stilts—to say nothing of Miss Stickney. The dog and pony do some clever and original little stunts, and the man executes an eccentric dance on the stilts. The act carries special scenery, and is said to be a first-class comedy turn.

To describe the offering of Eddie Redway and Gertrude Lawrence, a new word has been coined. It is called a lovalogue. The title of the act is "Moonflowers," and it was written by Louis Weslyn. Both of the performers are well known in the musical comedy field. They last played in the West in "Babes in Toyland." Mr. Redway was Alen and Miss Lawrence, Jack. Mr. Redway was also the original "Gingerbread man" and also starred in Chicago in "A Knight for a Day." Miss Lawrence is considered one of the real beauties of the American stage. The act consists largely of songs and dances with enough dialogue to hold them together.

The kinodrome and the concert orchestra will complete the bill, which will open with the Sunday matinee and continue all week with a daily matinee.

* * *

For the week of Aug. 27 the second of the three anniversary bills will be offered. It will be featured by Odive, the famous Samoan swimmer, "A Night in a Turkish Bath" and Paul Hole, the English boy soprano.

AT THE EMPRESS

The Empress bill that will open with the Sunday matinee will offer as the feature attraction one of the greatest and most artistic numbers seen in vaudeville in years. It is entitled "The Aris Mysteria." This bewildering spectacle is distinctly different from anything ever presented in vaudeville and is declared as the enigma of twentieth century vaudeville. It is essentially a novel entertainment, presenting reproductions of the world's most famous masterpieces by models from the foremost art institutes and posed by celebrated artists in a marvelously spectacular manner. These wonderful replicas disappear as if into the air and appear again representing a far different picture in full view of the audience and all stage and theater lights in full glare. Vaudeville has been graced with several novelities which have created comment but few, if any, compare with this entertainment. From a scenic, refined or mystifying viewpoint, this is positively the most elaborately and costly equipped production in vaudeville, and the mystery of its presentation has never been approximated. Twenty people and a car load of scenery are carried for the production of this one act. Thousands of dollars have been invested in the spectacular and gorgeous costuming, stage settings and electrical effects. The act is booked exclusively to play the Sullivan & Considine circuit for a season of fifty weeks, after which the act returns to Europe for a two years' contract, playing the biggest places of amusement in the principal European cities. It is a vaudeville gem and if one desires to see an act beautiful they will do well to see "Aris Mysteria." Following is a recent press notice from the Minneapolis Journal: "'Aris Mysteria,' which is appearing at the Unique this week, is about the classiest and most artistic act that has ever been seen in the Twin Cities. The pictures portrayed are taken from celebrated paintings and are presented in a very artistic manner. More such acts in vaudeville would go far in upholding this popular amusement to a higher standard than it is."

Irene Hobson, the stunning Junoesque beauty, whose recent distinctive triumphs in "The Beauty Spot" as well as her success in vaudeville, have established her as one of America's leading players, will be at the Empress with her brilliant tabloid comedy, "A Business Proposal." Miss Hobson will be assisted by Charles Deland, who shared honors with Joe Howard in the production of "Love and Politics." "A Business Proposal" is said to be one of the brightest playlets in vaudeville. All of the fun in the piece grows out of the fact that a popular actress is looking for a leading man, and that a young man, must be married within two hours to secure a legacy of $1,000,000 left him by an eccentric uncle. The actress and the young man meet at a hotel. She believes him to be her new leading man, while he thinks her to be his bride to be, whom he has never seen, but with whom he has an appointment. The complications that arise are screamingly laughable and the entire playlet is a series of amusing incidents. The little comedy permits opportunities for both artists to display their extraordinary capabilities to their fullest extent. In portraying the role of a star actress, Miss Hobson is said to be realistic, she being so gifted that it is only necessary for her to be her natural self. Mr. Deland is a keen observer of human nature, and by reason of this trait is enabled to give the character he portrays. Miss Hobson is a niece of Richmond Pearson Hobson, the famous naval hero of the Spanish-American war, who achieved world-wide fame for his bravery in running the blockade off Moro castle. She is making her second tour in vaudeville, which was the result of much persuasion, for managers of the legitimate have been insistent in their efforts to obtain her services. Her natural ability, grace and beauty has won her an enviable position in the eyes of the theater-going public of America.

It is said that "A Fight For Fame" the unique musical comedy conception in which the Quinn brothers and Miss Rosner appear, is one of the genuine discoveries of the vaudeville season. It is their own original and novel idea and deals with the happenings in the career of a moving picture performer. The dialogue is rich in humor and all of the songs are of their own composition. A special scene is carried, depicting the exterior of a moving picture theater which lends to the offering a quaint realism. Miss Rosner is an exceedingly pretty girl and an unusually talented artist, as well as an accomplished pianist. The talking and chatter songs of the Quinn brothers delivered to their own accompaniments, are delightfully refreshing in newness and execution. Nothing quite like this offering has ever been seen, and all of these artists are classed among the prime favorites of vaudeville.

That music has struck a popular chord, in the human heart, and that everyone has proven susceptible to the charms of song, as rendered by "The Singing Girls," is proven by the tremendous receptions these charming artists have received in the East. The girls render songs of a popular and classic variety, and everything possible that might be attributed to the classiness of their performance has been provided. It is said that vaudeville presents no more finished entertainment than that of these dainty vocalists. It is of quiet tone, with a refining influence dominating both the songs, costuming, and deportment of the duo. In their simple childish frocks, the charming artists have a homey appearance, and in an informal way, and one most charming to see upon the stage, present their various specialties, giving a picture of allurment. The younger of the two is a splendid soprano, while the other has a rich contralto voice, and their repertoire is divided into solos and duets. They have several bright selections, which are delivered with an exquisitely artistic grace.

Cliff Bailey Trio are original acrobatic comedians who style their performance "A Knock-About Tornado." Their offering consists of marvelous gymnastic feats and barrel jumping intermingled with ludicrous comicalities. One of the team makes up as a grotesque clown, while the others are going through stunts that fairly makes one's hair stand on end. The comedian performs the most ludicrous and nonsensical frivolities. There is an utter absence of the hurly-burly and slapstick method, in their specialty, but it is nevertheless a knock-about turn, which is bound to entertain even those who insist upon the subtleties of refined comedy.

The moving pictures will be all new and the very latest subjects on the market, showing a very funny comedy film and one art picture. Matinee every day at 2:30. Performances every night at 8 and 9:30. Seats may be reserved by either phone.

AT THE AUDITORIUM

Following after the two special grand march programs of Sunday afternoon and evening will come the big skating tournament of the Auditorium rink. It will be the biggest skating competition ever staged in this city, and will be reminiscent of the old days when the city was literally crazy over the popular fad of roller skating.

The competition is for the most graceful skating couple. On Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings will be the four preliminary nights, when the best couples will be selected from the crowd. On Friday evening the winners of the four evenings will be brought together for the grand final competition for the first prize. The tournament has aroused considerable interest among the skaters in Duluth. There are any number of very good skaters among the many young men and women patronizing the big rink, and the test of their skating ability is sure to bring out a large number of their friends. The tournament will begin Monday evening.

JOSEPH M. GAITES' STUPENDOUS MUSICAL COMEDY AT THE LYCEUM NEXT THURSDAY, FRIDAY AND SATURDAY.

101 RANCH WILD WEST SHOW HAS NOVEL STREET PARADE

The street parade given by the 101 Ranch Real Wild West show, which will be here next Friday, Aug. 25, is well worth seeing and it is a refreshing departure from other parades given by tented amusements. It in no way partakes of the artificial and it is its homeliness that recommends it.

It could be truthfully alluded to as a typical western caravan and so pronounced is the Western atmosphere that surrounds it that one is carried back to the days when railroads and modern means of travel were wholly unknown in the West. It is one continuous kaleidiscopic-like review of the early days in the Western country. Not only is this parade wonderfully interesting and educational but it is as well a fitting prelude of the performances that has made the 101 Ranch show the most popular touring the country. Other wild west shows that claim to be in the same class with the 101 Ranch, and whose boast of magnitude and merit is proclaimed so loudly do not give the time honored street parade, selfishly admitting that they will not give anything for nothing. While this may be considered by them as a legitimate excuse for failure to parade the public cannot be made to see it in this light.

Of so great a magnitude is the parade given by the 101 Ranch show, it has been found necessary to divide it into two sections or divisions. These two sections made a pageant of over a mile in length and made up entirely of Western features. The Indians, cowboys, cow girls, Cossacks, scouts, cattlemen and Western people generally are in line with many bands of music, steam pianos, calliopes, handsome tableau wagons, historical floats, superb horses, allegorical wagons, ancient Western coaches and many meritorious features that will be entirely new to the people of this section. It matters not whether you attend one of the performances or not, the opportunity of seeing this stupendous street parade should not be lost. The parade which will leave the show grounds at Thirty-sixth avenue west and Third street promptly at 10 o'clock in the morning will pass through the principal streets and upon its return to the show grounds a free outside exhibition will be given.

THE COMING DRAMATIC SEASON

Some Further News and Gossip of the Plays, Managers and Actors.

At a recent meeting of kindred spirits it was discovered that a goodly number of the men who make for the betterment of the theatrical world has been omitted from the little article that was devoted to them on the dramatic page of The Herald of Aug. 12.

There was much discussion on behalf of the chaps who should have been mentioned. One of the party, who possesses a diplomatic skill worthy of Metternich or Machiavelli, said to the scribe of the meeting: "The best way out of this will be to have another article prepared that will include every one who has not been mentioned in the previous article." Wherefore ——:

According to the best information there is much to be said of the valor of Wallace Munro, who, though a brave soldier in the Soudan, has taken to making a livelihood facing dramatic editors. He it is who has been selected to polit Blanche Bates about the country during the coming season in "Nobody's Widow." With Miss Bates, Westropp Saunders occupies a very responsible post, as he is the stage manager of her company. Mr. Saunders has spent the summer in Duluth with the Forbes Stock company, playing a varied series of character roles. When Mr. Munro came to Duluth with Louis James in "Peer Gynt," he was intimately connected with Branch O'Brien in Mr. James' management. Mr. O'Brien was with Mr. James at the time of his death.

Now that "Bright Eyes" is to play here, one remembers "Three Twins" its companion play with which the directing spirit was Howard Gale. Now Mr. Gale is to have charge of the starring tour of Ralph Herz in "Dr. De Luxe," while a veteran of many years' standing, A. C. Abbott, is directing the advance work with "Bright Eyes." Every one who met Mr. Abbott when he was here was pleased to know the genial gentleman. With "In Old Kentucky" will come Norman Peel, whose name has become inseparably linked with that classic racing play. Will O. Wheeler has made many friends among the elite of the railroad world because of his ease in dealing with balky railroaders, who are not on the alert to please the troubled company manager. Mr. Wheeler was last here with Lustin Farnum.

Last spring brought to Duluth Mike Coyne and Lip Keene. Two more contrasted individuals can hardly be imagined. Both are of the old days and came here to change places with the Frederick Thompson companies. For further information regarding either Messrs. Keene or Coyne ask any traffic manager of a prosperous railroad. A younger man in years is Percy Heath, but as he was with Mrs. Fiske in the days when she did not play in syndicate theaters, he is chuck full of handy information on the highways and byways of the land. First-hand knowledge of that kind Frank Hopkins exudes. Mr. Hopkins determined the towns to be played by "Uncle Josh Spruceby" for many years, so now he is the general manager of the "Madame Sherry" tours. Eddie Corbett aided in making New York and the remainder of the country whistle "Every Little Movement." Gerald Fitzgerald handled various small companies of his own at different times. His most recent venture was "Honeymoon Trial," which he made with Perry Kelly, one of Minneapolis' contributions to the theatrical world.

Seclusion from the use of taxicabs and berths is Ed. Giroux's privilege today. He no longer cares to talk about sizes of printing. That is a matter of days gone by. When he had charge of Florence Roberts' troubles he made many wires sing, but now he dictates his missives to a stenographer in John Cort's New York office of which he is the directing head. Dick Lambert speaks to the same typist and uses the same office. His interests lie in a different direction. His field is the publicity work of the John Cort enterprises. "Buzz" Bainbridge has left the road. He was known here as the manager of the Willard Mack company. Now his time is entirely devoted to the Shubert and Lyric theaters in Minneapolis. Thanks to his efforts both theaters have been real winners. An intimate friend of Buzz's, Will Burlock, is now of the tented world. He has taken over the work "Buzz" used to do with the Miller 101 Ranch. Paul Benjamin had to write much regarding Maxine Elliott's beauty, but now he is the general publicity disseminator for the Russian dancing season in New York's winter garden. Charley Connolly has said good bye to advance men and is writing ad copy for the telephone companies of the Southwest with headquarters in Kansas City. At the head of the managerial department of a Shubert attraction you will greet Charley Salisbury this season. Mr. Salisbury gets the travelling fever frequently and nothing can keep him from going. A man of far different mould is James Jay Brady, now manager of the Colonial theater, Chicago. For several years he looked after the advance work for the Ringlings. But a desire to settle down prompted Mr. Brady to become manager of the Chicago playhouse. Two congenial visitors have always been Ralph Edmunds and Si Goodfriend. Mr. Edmunds introduced Olga Nethersole to local patrons of the Lyceum while Mr. Goodfriend has been in touch with "Seven Sisters," the Hungarian farce, which has caused so much laughter in Chicago. That brings to mind Gus Frohman, the prince of congenial spirits, who managed "The Hypocrites," for his brother, Charles, when that company played here. Every one who has met Mr. Frohman loves him, because of his charming personality. The story of Gus Frohman's life and career reads like a romance.

Herbert Duce has left the counting of statements for the more secure position of editor of the Billposter, the official organ of the National Association of Billposters. With "The Pit," Mr. Duce was a busy man. The Lyceum motion pictures are well taken care of by Charles Bosworth, while "Doc" Haynes directed the work done ahead for Viola Allen when she played "The White Sister." With Raymond Hitchcock came George Francis Beard, an energetic worker, as is Joe Drum, one of the Henry W. Savage agents, whose repute is national in scope. Two likeable chaps, Leon Victor and Walter Messinger have been here recently making friends for their attractions and insuring the employers with the best attention possible. Mrs. Fiske's guiding hand has been Larry Giffin, one of the quietest agents, but one whose Italian hand is ever effective. Bob Priest's strokes are broader but they produce results. Those who saw DeWolf Hopper are aware of that fact.

That, so far as is known, complete the list.

GOSSIP OF THE RIALTO

The various announcements of theaters opening makes one begin to feel that the summer season is at an end. True it is that but two weeks remain before Labor day, which is the acknowledged closing day, but it all remains with the weather as to which will prove the most desirable between now and then; the summer park or the early opening theater.

• • •

Beulah Poynter will begin her coming season at the Auditorium, South Bend, Ind., on Aug. 31. Her new starring vehicle is a dramatic comedy of her own making, entitled "Mother's Girl." It tells of a daughter's love for the mother, her self-sacrifice and the arrival of Prince Charming, a quaint little Southern story with a background of honeysuckles and love. Burt and Nicolai, under whose management Miss Poynter has been for the past five years, still direct her tours.

• • •

George M. Cohan has finished writing "The Little Millionaire," a musical comedy which will be produced on Sept. 25 at the George M Cohan theater. In the cast will be Mr. Cohan, his father, Jerry Cohan, and his mother, Helen F. Cohan. To make room for "The Little Millionaire," "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" will be moved to the Park theater, Boston, after its fifty-third consecutive week in New York.

• • •

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Hall (Margaret Anglin) returned on La Provence on Aug. 5. Miss Anglin will begin her seasn in her last season's comedy, "Green Stockings," and will then try Israel Zangwill's play, "The New Religion." George Tyler of the Liebler firm, under whose management Miss Anglin is to star, was also a passenger on the same liner.

• • •

The most important deal consummated by Mr. Shubert in Paris was for the American rights to "Aime des Femmes," an extremely laughable comedy in three acts by M. Maurice Hennequinn and M. Georges Mitchell, which has had a triumphant run at the Theater Palais Royal. Among the other works which he acquired while in the French capital are: "The Mystery of the Yellow Chamber," a new melodrama; "Balthazar," a new play by Pierre Berton, the author of "Zaza;" "The House of Dances," done in Paris by Prolaire, and "Sherlock Holmes and Arsene Lupin." The last named of these pieces has been the one sensation of the year at the Chatelet theater. It is an exeraordinary comedy, with sensational scenic effects and shows the efforts of the English detective character to outwit the ruses of the celebrated French thief character.

• • •

Shubert arranged for Martin Harvey to come to New York in Prof. Max Reinhardt's production of Sophoeles' "Oedipus Rex." Before coming to America Mr. Harvey will appear in the play in London at the Covent Garden opera house just as soon as the difficulties for presenting the elaborate stage effects are overcome. The New York presentation will take place at the Manhattan opera house. Six hundred "supers" will be employed.

• • •

Mabel Barrison, who has been ill for some time, is recovering her health again. Joseph Howard, her husband, has made a great success in the music halls in London, and says that he expects his wife will be seen on the stage again next season.

• • •

Arthur Bourchier has just bought the rights to "The Havoc" from Henry Miller. He will arrange for its presentation as soon as some slight changes are made to fit it for English understanding.

• • •

John Mason will reopen his engagegement in Augustus Thomas' latest play, "As a Man Thinks," at the Thirty-ninth Street theater. The cast will remain essentially the same as before the brief summer vacation, which the players were given at their own request in order that they might prepare for the long season ahead of them. John Mason in "As a Man Thinks" will remain at the Thirty-ninth Street theater for an indefinite run into the winter months.

• • •

William A. Brady on Tuesday last signed a three years' contract with Marguerite Clark, who has just returned from a summer starring engagement at St. Louis, where she appeared in "Peter Pan," "Merely Mary Ann," "Lord Fauntleroy" and "When All the World Was Young," by Owen Davis. Miss Clark is to continue in "Baby Mine" for the Boston, Philadelphia and San Francisco engagements of that play, after which Mr. Brady has agreed to put her at the head of her own company. "When All the World Was Young" has been selected as her first starring vehicle.

• • •

George Tyler has arranged to dramatize "The Fruitful Vine," a new novel by Robert Hichens, author of "The Garden of Allah." The book has not been published as yet.

• • •

For the role of Lake, the hero in "The Deep Purple," Liebler & Co. have engaged Sydney Booth, last season leading man with Gertrude Elliott.

• • •

The Duke of York's theater will be opened by Charles Frohman on Aug. 28 with "The Concert." Henry Ainlee will play the leading role of Gabor Anany, a musician. Irene Vanburgh will also be in the cast in the character of the wife.

• • •

From the hundreds of actresses who have been eager to succeed Helen Ware as Wanda in "The Woman," David Belasco has selected Mary Nash. Miss Nash's success was made in "The City." Previously she had been a member of Ethel Barrymore's company. When Mr. Belasco produced "The Woman" in Washington last April he borrowed Miss Ware's services for the preliminary tour. Now that Henry B. Harris has other work for her to do it was necessary for Mr. Belasco to find a new leading woman.

• • •

Both Sam and Ben Harris are elated to learn that the new Harris theater—formerly the Hackett—will be opened on Aug. 21. Henry B. Harris has spent nearly $50,000 in redecorating and renovating the theater. The appearance of the interior and the seating arrangements have been entirely changed, and audiences who visit the theater will find it among the cutest of all New York playhouses. Rose Stahl in "Maggie Pepper" is the opening attraction.

• • •

Gus Edwards has just put the finishing touches on another new act that he will add to his list in the next week or so. It is entitled "Kountry Kids." This will give Mr. Edwards four acts, and all of them actively at work. In addition to the "Kountry Kids" he is also appearing in his song review, and the others are his School Boys and Girls, appearing this week at Hammerstein's, and his High Flyers.

• • •

Bothwell Browne, the female impersonator, will have the assistance of Olive Ulrich, Suzanne Rocamora, Frank Bernard, Hazel Cox and Rose Beaudett when he begins his season in "Miss Jack." "Miss Jack" will not, as originally planned, enter New York during the engagement of Julian Eltinge in "The Fascinating Widow." Instead of being presented at the Herald Square theater this month the play will first be tested in Chicago some time in October.

• • •

Joseph O'Meara, the general dramatic director of the Suburban theater, St. Louis, appeared during the last week with Charlotte Walker in the leading role in the Buchanan comedy, "A Woman's Way."

The Post-Dispatch says: "The little love notes were sent tripping across the stage as though they were sent right home to the audience, while the more intense moments, of which the comedy has few, were well sustained, the scene in the second act between Miss Walker and Joseph O'Meara being the best and biggest moment of the play. This scene marks the turning point of the comedy and is nicely drawn out by the star and the stage director-actor, who last night seemed to put all their energy into their work. The result was one of the most pleasing of the season's events at the Suburban."

Mr. O'Meara's success as an actor in St. Louis this summer has been as pronounced as that of his stage directing.

• • •

When the curtain rises on "The Garden of Allah" at the Century theater, New York, it will represent the all of Liebler & Co., in the matter of stage production George C. Tyler, head of the firm; Hugh Ford, their general stage director; Edward Morange, their general scenic artist, and Robert Hichens, author of the book from which the play has been made, spent all summer in the Desert of Sahara, "getting the color right." Mr. Tyler says if it isn't what's wanted, he'll have no excuses to offer—it will be everything the firm knows how to do, and if it doesn't succeed, it will prove Liebler & Co.'s incompetency. He's not mincing words.

HAZEN'S BILL IS DISPUTED

Beltrami County Officer Is Alleged to Have Made Overcharges.

Refused Payment By Board, He Applies to Court for Relief.

Bemidji, Minn., Aug. 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—A. B. Hazen, sheriff of Beltrami county, charges against whom were made some weeks ago by Viggo Peterson, chairman of the board of county commissioners, which Attorney General Simpson refuses to act upon until after the Dr. Dumas trial, is again in the limelight.

On the ground that a bill amounting to $752.70 contained fraudulent and illegal items, Mr. Peterson and County Auditor George refused to approve the bill. Sheriff Hazen applied for a writ of mandamus to compel the county to pay him and arguments on this writ were heard Thursday afternoon. County Attorney Graham H. Torrance, appearing for Peterson and George, declared that in the Hazen bill for $752 more than $150 is fraudulent and illegal.

Mr. Torrance claimed the sheriff sought to collect $66 on the ground that he had brought persons into court despite the fact that he was paid a regular salary of $3 a day for this work. Judge Stanton, before whom the writ was returnable, informs the county attorney that no further argument on that point was necessary, that such fees clearly were illegal.

Excessive Mileage Charge.

It was also argued by the county attorney that the sheriff has charged the county up for fifty miles mileage for papers served on one day to persons living in the city of Bemidji and that he was not entitled to more than six miles mileage for this work. Other instances of this sort are cited and that double bills for serving papers in the northern part of the county are included in the bill, and that instead of the county owing the sheriff, the sheriff in fact owes the county.

Henry Funkley, who appeared for the sheriff, had no answer to make and requested that the matter go over to Aug. 28 to permit him to look up the law, and this request was granted.

MANY CONTESTS ARE RESULTING

Over Interpretation of Order About Opening Red Lake Lands.

Thief River Falls, Minn., Aug. 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—While so many people are seeking homesteads, a case occurring on the Red Lake reservation near this city is interesting. April 15 last was designated by the secretary of the interior as the only date on which lands on the Red Lake Indian reservation, which had not up to a year ago been entered, could be homesteaded.

Congress during last winter had passed a law stating that after Feb. 15, 1911, all the unentered land on this reservation was open to entry, but the secretary fixed April 15 as the only date for entering the lands.

Peter Olson of this city entered on a homestead prior to April 15 and on April 15 W. J. Lee, also of this city, entered on the same land as suggested by the secretary of the interior. The contest case was heard at the land office at Crookston this week and each party to the case had his witnesses to prove residence.

The case will hinge on the interpretation of the act of congress of last February. There are many similar cases on the reservation east of this city, and many valuable claims are subject to contest by one party or another under the failure of the parties entering the land to understand whether the act of congress or the ruling of the secretary of the interior on this act will determine the ownership of the lands. These lands are the balance of the Eleven Towns on the Red Lake Indian reservation which were opened to entry some six years ago.

MINING MEN TO MEET NEXT WEEK

Lake Superior Mining Institute to Gather on Menominee Iron Range.

Ishpeming, Mich., Aug. 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—The sixteenth annual meeting of the Lake Superior Mining Institute will be held on the Menominee iron range next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, and will be attended by scores of men prominently identified with the mining industry of both the iron and copper fields of the region.

The members of the institute will assemble at Crystal Falls on Tuesday. A business session, at which a number of papers will be read, will be followed by a visit to a number of the mines of the district. In the evening the members will be entertained at a banquet given by the Commercial club of the city. Wednesday the visitors will be the guests of the Iron County Automobile club in a trip across the country to Stambaugh, Iron River and Palatka, where various mines will be inspected, returning to Crystal Falls in the evening. That night another business session will take place.

Tour Eastern Range.

Thursday will be devoted to a tour of the eastern end of the range. The trip will be made by special train. Stops will be made at the Loretto mine, at the hydro-electric plant of the Penn Iron Mining company at Sturgeon Falls and at Vulcan, Norway and Iron Mountain.

The Lake Superior Mining Institute was organized at Iron Mountain in March, 1893, and this will be the fourth meeting held on the Menominee range. Dr. Nelson P. Hulst of Milwaukee, now retired, at the time general manager of the Pewabic Mining company, was the first president. The present president is William J. Richards, general manager of mines for Corrigan, McKinney & Co. of Cleveland. A. J. Yungbluth of the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company of Ishpeming is secretary, and Edward W. Hopkins, general superintendent of mines for Oglebay, Norton & Co. of Cleveland, with headquarters at Commonwealth, Wis., is treasurer.

International Falls, Minn., Aug. 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—Charles Ingrahm, the ex-jailer who stole a crazy man's money while searching the latter when he was received at the jail, was arraigned Wednesday afternoon before Judge Langland. He confessed his guilt and agreed to plead guilty before a judge of the district court in order that he might commence to serve his sentence at once.

Accordingly he was taken to Bemidji that night, accompanied by Deputy Sheriff Watt, County Attorney McPartlin and Clerk of the Court Drummond, where before Judge Stanton of the district court he entered a plea of guilty and was given a reformatory sentence.

Washburn Man Hurt.

INDIAN CLAIMED TO BE 113 YEARS OLD

JOHN SMITH.

Cass Lake, Minn., Aug. 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—The world's oldest Indian is the claim made for John Smith, a famous chief, who lives in this vicinity. His friends say he is 113, while some Indians claim he is even old r. Some say he is 120 but this is speculation.

The old chief is a familiar figure on the streets of Cass Lake and other towns. He walks slowly and his face, with its deep-set wrinkles indicates his great age. Old John is known as the "white man's friend," a title given him on account of his actions many years ago, when he quelled an Indian outbreak, when the railroads were first penetrating the country. Whenever John travels on a passenger train now he does not have to pay any fare.

The old Indian will be one of the main attractions at the state fair in September. He will be accompanied by one of his great grandsons, who understands the distinguished Indian's characteristics and will be able to give quite a history of him. The old Indian himself speaks English quite a little and is able to explain things that happened long before the Civil war.

TWO DIE SUDDENLY.

Third North Dakotan Victim of Runaway Accident.

Langdon, N. D., Aug. 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—Soon after telling his wife he was going out to do some work about the yard, John H. Oss, proprietor of the Nekoma hotel at Nekoma, was found dead. He was stricken suddenly and was dead when his brother-in-law, who had been dispatched into the yard to assist him, found his body lying on the ground. No inquest was deemed necessary.

Cooperstown, N. D., Aug. 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—William W. Arndt, aged 74, was found dead in bed at his home near this city. He had been in poor health for some time, but was not considered in dangerous condition, but he was stricken with an attack of heart failure that caused his demise.

Arndt was a pioneer president of Griggs county, having resided here since 1882.

Grand Forks, N. D., Aug. 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—Injuries which he received when he was knocked down by a runaway team of horses attached to a binder, and afterwards being run over by the machine, caused the death in this city yesterday of Cornelius Daniels of Brenna township, the first teacher of that district, and who has resided there thirty years, and who was 70 years old at the time of his death. The old man received very bad internal injuries and there was at no time any hope of recovery.

MARTIN OAKLEY DIES.

Cass Lake Character, Known as "Buckho," Is Called.

Cass Lake, Minn., Aug. 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—Martin Oakley, better known as "Buckho" who has been a character in Cass Lake for a number of years, died Friday in St. Vincent's hospital at Crookston. He was a veteran of the civil war and has for the last twenty years been considered a harmless insane man and has been a constant source of entertainment to those conversing with him. Some years ago he took up a valuable homestead near Wilkinson in Cass county and a short time ago proved up on it. It is not known whether or not the deceased had any relatives. His body will be interred in the cemetery at Crookston.

PLAN BETTER ROADS TO HEAD OF LAKES.

Cass Lake, Minn., Aug. 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—A party of automobilists arrived here yesterday from Bemidji and as soon as they had dinner started out in an endeavor to locate a road from here to Bena. In the last year a very good road has been established between Cass Lake and Bemidji and it is the endeavor of the automobilists to make it possible to drive their machine as far East as Duluth.

The trouble will be that there are very poor if any roads for the next sixty miles from here. The party was equipped with shovels, axes and other tools and when they return they will probably be able to give out the prospects of a trip further East. National Forest Supervisor Marshall joined the party here and took with him the plat of the National forest reserve. Mr. Marshall will pilot the party as far as possible through the country which he is familiar with.

SKYSCRAPER TO REPLACE THE OLD WINDSOR HOTEL

Plans Ordered for Five-Story Block, With Provisions for Addition.

Old Landmark Will Go—Several Big Building Permits Issued.

Kelly & Lignell, architects, have been instructed by Charles E. Henderson of Easton, Md., to prepare plans for a five-story building on the southwest corner of Fifth avenue west and Superior street, which for more than twenty years has been the site of the Windsor hotel. The proposed building will be of steel frame, with brick and stone walls, and in every detail absolutely fire-proof.

It will be so arranged that the foundation will hold a twelve-story building from Superior street, although the initial plan will call only for a five-story structure. No plans have been made by Mr. Henderson as to the use to which the new building will be put, and the interior plans will not be finished for several months. As the lessees of the present Windsor building have the rental of it until the first of next May, there will be no rushing on the plans, and the decision on the interior will not be made until shortly before the lease runs out.

This site is one of the best in the city, as it is just a block from the three stations of the city. On two corners are two of the leading hotels of Duluth, the Spalding and the Holland, while diagonally across from the proposed building is the Lyceum theater.

Mr. Henderson has been in the city for the past ten days and it was during his stay here that the arrangements were made. Stryker, Manley & Buck are his local agents, and they have taken care of the Windsor building for him for many years.

With the construction of this building a valuable addition will be made to the business center of Duluth. The cost of the construction of the five stories is estimated at about $160,000, while with a complete twelve-story structure the cost will run up to $200,000. It is to occupy seventy-five feet frontage on Superior street, and the same on Michigan street, with a complete frontage on Fifth avenue west.

* * *

That Duluth is not at a standstill in the line of building is evidenced by the permits issued during the last week. The building inspector issued twenty-four permits for a total estimated cost of $151,075, or almost three-fourths as much as for the entire month of July. This shows a big increase over any previous week this summer and gives a big impetus to the total expenditures in building for the month of August.

The largest permit issued was that taken out by the contractors, McLeod & Smith, for the St. Paul's Episcopal church, which is being erected on Seventeenth avenue east and Superior street. The permit calls for a cost of $72,000, but it is understood that when the church is completed, the expenditure will be close to $125,000.

The next largest permit is for the brick roundhouse, which is being built at Sixty-ninth avenue west, between Raleigh and Polk streets, for the Duluth, Winnipeg & Pacific road, the subsidiary of the Canadian Northern. This permit is for $20,000. A permit for $13,000 was also issued to the company for the construction of a brick machine shop at the same location, and a third for $7,000 for a storehouse at the same place.

George H. Lounsberry, contractor for the Duluth Marine Supply company, which is having a reinforced concrete building built at the foot of Fifth avenue west, took out a permit for $18,000. A permit for $7,000 was also issued for the construction of the new Bethesda Norwegian Lutheran church at Fifth avenue east, between Fifth and Sixth streets.

* * *

The greastest activity among contractors is in the construction of small residences, which are being erected in nearly every part of the city. The people are displaying a greater desire to own their own homes every day, and those who are unable to pay in full for the construction are borrowing money, or are taking advantage of the offers made by many of the bigger concerns to build for them on easy payment plans.

In the architectural line, the business is reported quiet although all the architects state that they are busy making sketches for prospective builders, most of which are expected to materialize this fall or winter. There are but few plans for large buildings under preparation at this time.

* * *

The bids on the Barnum school were opened yesterday at Barnum, Minn., by the board of education and the architects, Ellerbe-Round & Sullivan, but the contract will not be awarded until Monday or Tuesday.

These architects are now preparing plans for a two-story building, to be used as a store and rooming house for Frank Brchich, to be erected at the Norton Steel Plant addition. It will be of frame and cost about $3,000.

* * *

Duluth architecural designs are in great demand, it is apparent, for one firm as secured a contract for the preparation of plans for a girls' high school to be erected at Mardin, Turkey, Asia, to be built by a Boston missionary society. The architects are D. V. Case & Broomhall, who last year prepared plans for the same society for a hospital, built at the same place.

The high school is to be of solid stone, which can be secured there at a very small price. No wood is to be used, for it is said that timber is expensive there, and especially hardwood. Labor, however, is cheap in Turkey, and so with cheap labor and small price for stone, the building, which will be a two-story structure can be erected at a very nominal cost.

* * *

Bray & Nystrom are taking bids for the electrical wiring and fixtures for the Mountain Iron high school, which is now in the course of erection. The cost of the wiring and fixtures is estimated at $5,000.

* *

P. M. Olsen, architect, is preparing plans for a $2,500 bungalow for the Alliance Real Estate corporation, to be erected in the West end. This architect will also take the bids for the T. F. McCarthy stucco residence to be built at Twenty-seventh avenue east and Eighth street, costing about $8,000 on Wednesday, instead of today, as formerly announced.

* * *

The plans which are being prepared by J. J. Wangenstein for the two-story brick house for two families, at Sixteenth avenue east, between Superior and Jefferson streets, will be ready next week for bids.

* * *

Anthony Puck & Holstead, architects, let the contract during the week for the thirty-room brick hotel building to be put up by the A. Fitger Brewing company, at Warba, Minn., to A. Roberts & Co. The hotel will cost about $10,000.

This firm also awarded the contract for the painting and interior finishing of the Aurora high school to B. F. Harkins of Hibbing. The school will be finished about Sept. 15, and will have cost about $100,000.

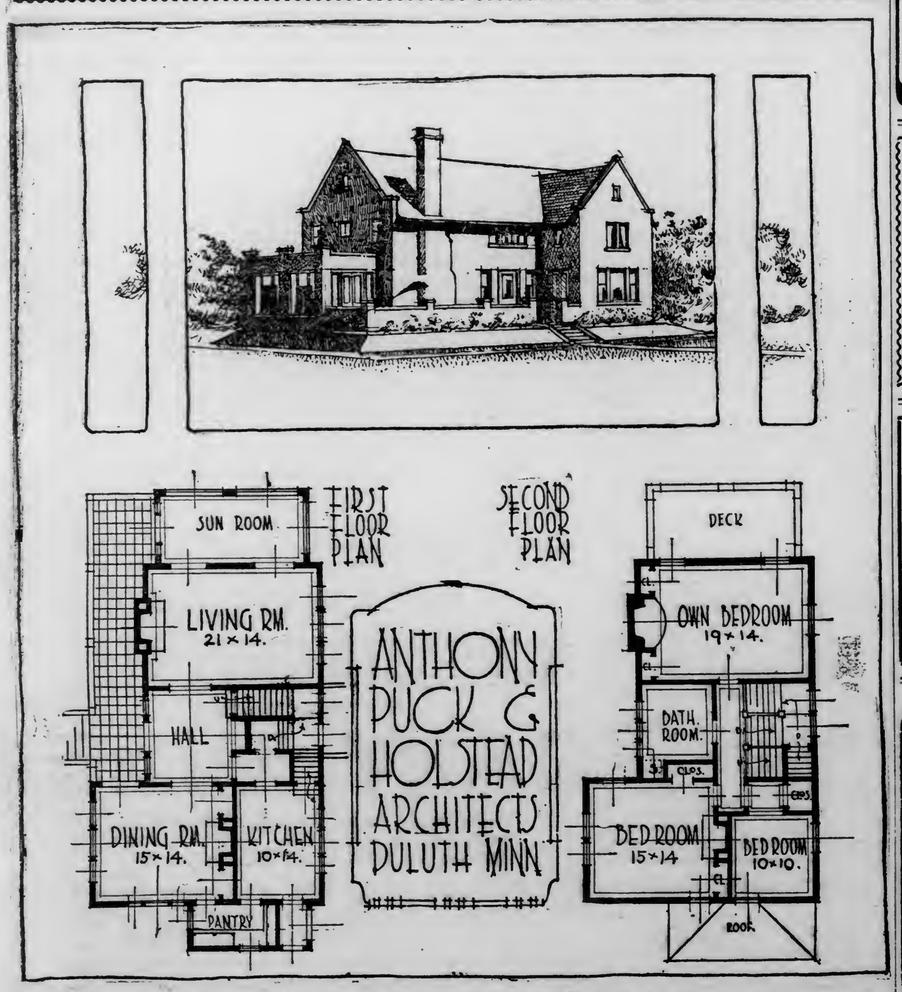
COMFORTABLE HOLLOW-TILE HOME THAT WOULD COST $7,500 TO BUILD IN DULUTH



Here is a charming and effective design for a hollow tile house, and is singularly suitable for erection in that material.

The first floor plan shows the entrance from the terrace into a nice square hall out of which the dining room and living room open axially.

The living room is a fine spacious room, and by French windows opens to the sunroom, which room is of considerable importance in a house of this size.

The dining room is a very pleasant room and admirably arranged to kitchen and pantry.

The kitchen is large and bright and has a back stair giving direct access to the second floor.

The second floor plan works out very nicely with three large bedrooms and a fine bathroom with recess for shower.

The living room, diningroom and hall to be finished in oak, the kitchen and pantry in birch and the bedrooms in white enamel. The living room and diningroom to have oak floors, and the remainder in maple throughout.

The cost including heating and plumbing would be in Duluth or vicinity, $7,500.00.

REAL ESTATE

PEOPLE HAVE MONEY AND ARE SEEKING BARGAINS

No Indication of Business Depression in Real Estate Market.

Few Deals Put Through But Good Many Are Pending.

Few deals were actually put through in the real estate market during the past week, although every dealer reports that there is a good volume of inquiry and the people seem to have the money. The fact that there is little being done in the market, and even in the general lines of business, has led many to believe that there is a mild touch of hard times, but men of the real estate market claim that such is not the case.

They gave as evidence of this fact that the people are paying up all that is due against their property, and that no notice is required to have these payments come in. Many of the mortgages are being paid up, some of which have not even fallen due, the mortgagor taking advantage of the "on or before" clause in the mortgage. This is a good evidence that there is no such thing as hard times, they say, for under conditions where money is scarce, the people are either losing their property or attempting to renew the mortgages.

Another evidence that there is much money on the market is that many loans are being made for the construction of buildings of various kinds, and some deals have gone through even upon unimproved property. One of the big firms is now carrying on a deal which will mean the filing of a mortgage for $80,000, probably the largest made this summer.

A third good proof that there is no scarcity of money is that many persons are looking for bargains. The intimation that has been gaining some ground that the people have little money and are anxious to get rid of their property in order to get money had led large numbers to believe that the real estate market must be loaded with "snaps." These bargain hunters are almost hounding the real estate men, for they have money that they want to turn into houses and lands, ready to pick up the first thing that looks like an easy deal.

This gives evidence to the stability of the market, for during all the so-called hard times the owners have held their property and are asking the same price, which is considered a reasonable value. With the continued growth of the city, they see no reason to sacrifice their holdings, and will wait until the buyers are willing to pay the market price.

* * *

Negotiations which are expected to be closed today will affect the ownership of one of the dockage properties in West Duluth. A man is expected up this morning from Ashland to hold a conference with a Duluth real estate man, at which the deal will be gone over very carefully, and the Wisconsin man will give the final answer.

A representative of a New York firm yesterday secured an extension of ten days to the option of another tract of water frontage in West Duluth, and left in the evening for New York, where he will go over the situation with the firm. Within two weeks the deal will either be closed or rejected.

Interest in home property continues to grow, and dealers in sections on the outskirts of the city report business is booming. Whitney Wall & Co. report that the past week, and in fact, the entire month has been the best they have experienced, and that they look forward to its continuance, for the people seem more anxious than ever to secure homes. Four of the large lots in the Wall & Linderberg division, north of the Woodland car line, were sold during the week, while many deals were closed for lots in the Homewood addition, near the Boulevard and Tenth avenue east, the section which recently has been greatly improved with the cutting of streets and grading, and where many scores of houses have been built.

* * *

W. M. Prindle & Co. have been doing a big business in Crosley park, in the Lakeside section of the city, and their new plan is meeting with remarkable success. Last Sunday they put their new plan into action, whereby they sell a lot upon which they will build a home, costing from $900 to $1,100, sold upon the easy payment system without interest. The first day brought in many contracts, and all week scores of prospective home owners have signed contracts, while scores of others are contemplating taking up the offer.

* * *

This firm also sold forty acres of land in the northwest quarter of section 3, 51-14, at an average of about $20 per acre. While this land is located about three and a half miles east of the Woodland car line, it is considered excellent for agricultural purposes. It is covered with timber of all kinds, but it is said that it is not difficult to clear, and when once cleared makes fine farm lands. Many farmers have located in the section.

* * *

N. J. Upham & Co. report a good business for the week, especially in the sale of the Home Acres on Duluth Heights. The company recently put these acre tracts on the market and has had good success in securing buyers. The tracts are near the car line and are very convenient for men who work in the city proper.

* * *

The Highland company, which has opened a large tract on Duluth Heights, is meeting with success, and is closing many deals on the easy payment system. This company will clear 175 lots adjoining its Highland division, where many lots have been disposed of, the work to be started this week. It will extend Highland avenue from the point where the city will stop the improvements which are to be begun by the contractor this week, for a distance of half a mile, and then swing the road around the Pike lake road. All will be well graded and made into an excellent thoroughfare.

* * *

L. A. Larsen & Co. state that a large sale has been made during the week in the Motor Line division, near Woodland, and also in the Oneota and Hazelwood Park districts.

* * *

To Roy Catherall, a lot on the east side of Fifty-fifth avenue east between London road and Superior street, for $500, upon which he intends to build a residence next spring.

To G. S. Storms, a lot on the lower side of London road, near Fiftieth avenue east for $3,000.

To J. Edward McDonald, a fifty-foot lot on the upper side of Colorado street, near Fifty-first avenue east, for $375, upon which he will build a small house.

To Frederick Hart, a fifty-foot lot adjoining the lot sold to Mr. McDonald, for $375, upon which he will build.

* * *

Interest in the Gary First division is still growing and A. C. Volk & Co., the owners, are making many deals every day. They report that many of those who have purchased are planning to build, and operations are now on in the construction of a number of buildings.

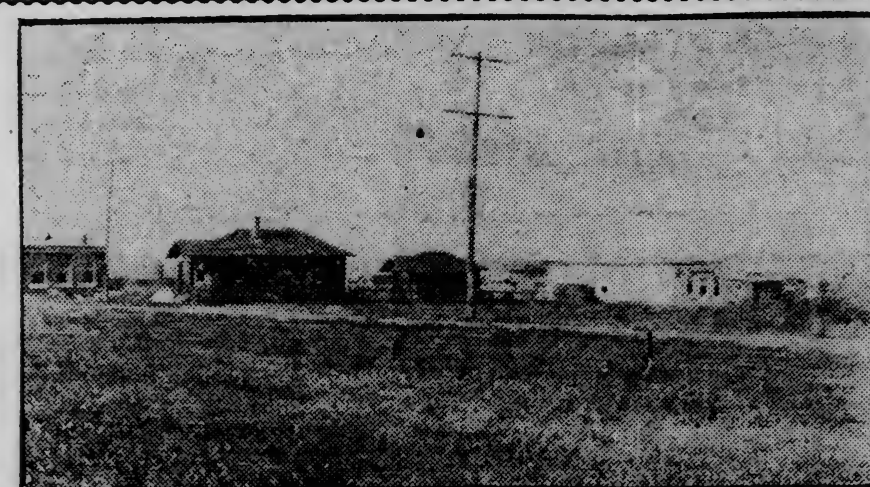
GARY RAPIDLY TAKING FORM; NEW CITY AT STEEL PLANT



THE BEGINNING OF A CITY.

THE GARY BANK.

A GARY BOARDING HOUSE.

Gary is rapidly taking form as a small city.

Gary is the new suburb in the western part of the city, which almost completely surrounds the site of the $25,000,000 steel plant now under construction by the United States Steel corporation. With the exception of a small section on the west where the Norton Steel Plant addition adjoins it, and on the north, where the Spirit lake bounds it, the steel plant site, which covers nearly 2,000 acres, is surrounded by the townsite of Gary, and so, properly speaking, the steel plant may be said to be located at Gary.

This suburb is named in honor of Judge Gary of the United States Steel corporation, and his name is used by his permission after he had carefully investigated the division, A. C. Volk & Co., put on sale. Nearly all of the land upon which one of the world's largest steel plants is situated, was purchased from this company.

Just a little over a year ago this site was practically a bleak wilderness, covered with brush and burnt-over trees, presenting a most desolate appearance. Today hundreds of acres are clear, with finely graded thoroughfares running through it, the streets named after prominent men connected with the Steel corporation, such as Judge Gary, W. A. McGonagle, F. E. House, G. L. Reis, vice president of the Minnesota Steel company, and Mr. Dickson, vice president of the United States Steel corporation. The avenues, with the exception of Commonwealth avenue are numbered, Commonwealth being really 100th avenue west.

Gary is almost level, there being but a slight incline from the foot of the bluffs to the water front, a distance of almost two miles. At the foot of the hills, the land is about eighty-five feet above the lake, while near the steel plant the land shows a drop of only twenty-six feet.

Gary was platted in May, 1910, but not a lot was sold until June this year. Since then many lots have been disposed of, but the company has made the provision in the contracts that the purchasers shall improve the property with dwellings or stores. Since then many houses have been erected, and a large number of stores put up, while one bank, the Central State bank, a substantial little brick building, has been constructed, and business started there during the past week.

The first building to be erected at Gary was the office building on Commonwealth and Gary by the owners, A. C. Volk & Co. Immediately following this was a boarding house on Gary near Ninety-seventh avenue, which now shelters over sixty working men employed about the plant.

Two large lumbering concerns have started business in Gary, and the agents of the land have constructed a rilroad spur from the main line of the steel plant's track, a distance of seven-eighths of a mile. This road is bounded on both sides by land owned by the company, which is held for wholesale sites.

Immediately to the south of the steel plant site the company has reserved a large water frontage where factories will probably be located in the near future, while ample space is afforded for dockage. Through this a branch of the Northern Pacific railroad, on its way to New Duluth and Fond du Lac, now passes.

For further factory sites and water frontage this company has a large piece of land west of New Duluth, but a short distance from the steel plant, and this is available when the sites near the plant have been taken up.

In fact, the company has looked forward far into the future, and reviewing the experiences of other cities which have not succeeded although they had the opportunity simply because of lack of foresight, it has made provisions for almost any business venture that might come up.

The business section with its hotels and boarding houses is located on the east of Commonwealth avenue, and the company is reserving the section west of this main street for a residence division. The lots here have not been put on sale yet, but probably will be after the business section has been well taken up.

In Gary many opportunities are offered for people who seek business ventures, for it is a suburb that is bound to grow. The steel plant, which is now but in its initial stage, will develop into one larger and of far greater importance than the one at Gary, Ind., according to officials of the Steel corporation, and this will mean that before many years have passed a population close to 100,000 will live at Gary.

STREET CAR SERVICE ASSURED FOR HOMEWOOD ADDITION

The Engineering Department and Board of Public Works are at work arranging for the grading of Sixth avenue east, from Fourth street up.

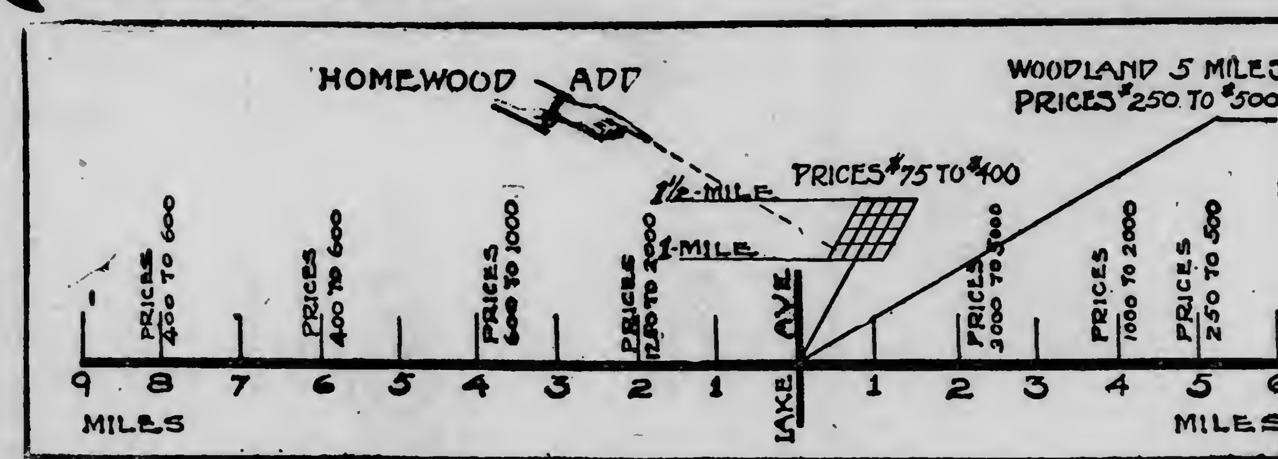
The Contractors are now at work grading East Thirteenth street from Sixth avenue east to Tenth avenue east.

The Street Railway Company have notified the Council that they have the rails ready to lay as soon as the streets are graded.

All this means that Duluth's most central residence district will soon have Street Car service.

Now is the time to buy lots in HOMEWOOD Addition, the Addition with scenery, soil and trees.

Examine the diagram below; notice the location of HOMEWOOD Addition, only one mile from the Center of the Retail District. Compare prices with other property four to six miles farther out.



Study this question and you will find that the grade from the city proper leading directly up to and through Homewood is less than in any other part of the city, and it is the only route that can be used safely and economically by a surface railroad and all roads leading into the country, north, east or west either pass right through HOMEWOOD Addition or branch off at this point.

The new Suburban Railway that has just been granted a franchise, show their right-of-way through the southwest corner of HOMEWOOD.

Highways make traffic, and traffic in time brings people, business, and a large and rapid increase in values.

We are enthusiastic about this HOMEWOOD proposition, and you would be if you studied the situation as we have.

We do not want you to buy a single lot until you have examined the property, walked over it, and satisfied yourself relative to its future.

Prices $75 to $400 Per Lot

BUILDING FOR JULY

Forty-Two Cities Out of Seventy-Four Show Increases.

Duluth Showed Small Decrease From July of Last Year.

While Duluth showed a loss of 20 per cent in building activity for the month of July as compared with the corresponding month in 1910, it was not the only city to show a decrease. According to the statistics compiled by the Construction News, of the seventy-four largest cities of the United States, forty-two showed gains, while thirty-two had decreases.

It is a notable fact that the decreases were mostly in the Western cities, of which only one shows a smaller decrease, this being San Francisco, which had a loss of 9 per cent. Six Western cities gained, among them being Minneapolis, Portland, Los Angeles, Omaha, Berkeley and Tacoma.

The Western cities which showed big losses were: Kansas City, Seattle, Denver, St. Louis, Spokane, Des Moines, Sacramento, Lincoln and Tacoma. Other American cities which report heavy decreases are: Memphis, Dallas, Baltimore, St. Joseph, Wilmington and Oklahoma City.

In Duluth last month there were 136 permits issued for $208,985, as against 134 permits for $265,955 in 1910.

Official reports from seventy-four cities to Construction News show that permits were taken out in July for the construction of 18,905 buildings involving a total estimated cost of $70,549,201 against 17,757 buildings aggregating in cost $58,894,961 for the corresponding month a year ago, an increase of 1,148 buildings and $11,654,240, or 20 per cent. If You Want to Buy Your Home With Your Rent Money and Want the Best Possible Location For It

Come out to Crosley Park on Sunday and make your selection. Remember the best and most desirable locations will go first

Buy Your Home With Your Rent-Money!

By taking immediate advantage of our plan of home-building for the renters of Duluth, you can positively buy your own home for little or no more than you now throw away in rent each month!

We will build a fine little cottage for you, on a fifty foot lot for $50 down, $25 in 30 days, $25 in 60 days and the balance at the rate of $18 a month until a total of only from $975 to $1225 has been paid, without the addition of one cent of interest. Larger houses for slightly increased payments.

You are not restricted to a fifty-foot lot, either; for an additional Two Dollars a month we will build on a seventy-five foot lot for you; for an addition of $4 a month we will build on a hundred foot lot; in fact, you can have as large a lot as you wish, by paying $2 a month additional for each additional twenty-five feet after the first fifty.

We have made arrangements to build these houses ourselves—cutting out all contractors' profits—at a much lower price than YOU could possibly get them built, and we are selling them to you without interest at the flat cost to us:—were you to build one of these cottages for yourself and pay all cash for it, you could not get it as cheaply as we offer it to you under this rent-payment plan of ours.

Our object in doing this, is to settle up Crosley Park as rapidly as possible; we have over two hundred residents therein NOW, and we want to add as many as possible during the next few months.

Crosley Park is without question the best possible residence suburb for the man of moderate means; located within twenty minutes' ride of the center of the city it is yet sufficiently far from the dust and noise of the center to enable the tired worker to relax entirely when he gets home after the day's work.

Adjoining the finest natural park in the Northwest—Lester Park; it is an ideal place for the man of family who desires that his children shall have ample opportunity for healthful play amid surroundings of ideal beauty.

Sloping gently to the south, the park not only has absolutely perfect drainage, but has also a magnificent view of perhaps the most impressive panorama to be found anywhere in this scenic region!

To the east the long lake stretches out to the distant horizon; in the extreme south, the purple shore line of Wisconsin demarking it from the sky; to the west lies the city, the harbor, the Point, and a thousand and one points of interest.

And it is in this most beautiful of residence districts that YOU now have the opportunity to acquire a home on payments no greater than are now required of you for the rent of someone else's home!

Buy All the Duluth Realty You Can Now!

That's a little "word to the wise" that scarcely needs any explanation!

Never since the founding of the city has there been greater cause for confidence in the ultimate future of Duluth!

With Reciprocity almost an established fact, with the great Steel Mills actually being built as fast as the hands of man can build them, with the opening up of the long-unused agricultural country surrounding the city, and the rapid expansion of her transportation facilities, Duluth has commenced upon a period of rapid, yet cautious, growth that cannot fail to leave her among the very greatest and most important cities on the continent!

Reciprocity alone, when the magnificent possibilities of Duluth's unequalled harbor together with her land transportation facilities are considered, will do much towards making the city perhaps the most important shipping center on this continent.

And think what this will mean to Duluth realty!—the peculiar formation of the city makes it quite certain that she must grow east and west, since the high bluffs at the north prohibit growth along that direction.

Knowing as we do with absolute certainty just how and where Duluth's growth will occur; it is a very safe prophesy to say that property in Crosley Park—directly in the line of the city's present best development, will increase in value as enormously as any of the countless other similar records of development, the country over, that might be quoted interminably.

So our plan not alone enables you to stop paying out rent to no purpose save to enrich your landlord; but enables you to put that same money you are now wasting, into the safest, most promising investment that could possibly be found for it. This is why we urge you to take advantage of our extremely reasonable offer to enable you to obtain MORE than one fifty-foot lot on this easy plan.

By saving only an additional $2 a month for each additional 25 feet, you add immensely to the certain fortune that awaits in the future all who buy Duluth realty judiciously NOW! Don't permit yourself to postpone this opportunity—a postponed opportunity is most often a lost opportunity!

Come out on Sunday any time throughout the day—take the Lakeside car to Fifty-fourth avenue east, and walk four blocks north. Remember, the best locations for homes will be taken first; and those who contract with us first will be the first to move into their new homes and start paying their rent money to themselves!

WHAT WE DO

We build you a fine little cottage on a fifty-foot lot, on a street upon which both gas and water are assured for this fall.
We sell it to you for your rent money, without interest, without mortgage, charging you no profit on the house.
We give you the option of acquiring more property adjoining your home at the rate of only $2 a month additional for each additional twenty-five feet. The cash payment remains the same in all cases.

WHAT YOU DO AND WHAT IT MEANS TO YOU!

You pay $50 down.
You pay $25 in thirty days and $25 in sixty days.
You pay $18 a month thereafter until the balance of from $975 to $1,100, without interest, has been paid.
If you wish a seventy-five-foot lot, you pay us exactly the same first three payments, but thereafter you pay $20 a month instead of $18.

If you wish a hundred foot lot, you pay the same first three payments, and $22 a month thereafter.

Whatever size lot you take, YOU PAY NO INTEREST.

This plan of ours actually means that you start paying your rent to yourself right away, since every dollar you pay goes into the home, and the home is YOURS.

WEEKLY SURVEY OF REAL ESTATE DEVELOPMENTS

Importance of Steel Plant to Duluth--Need of Improvement of Streets Between City and West Duluth Apparent — Business is Improving.

AS TIME goes on and operations progress it becomes evident that too much stress cannot be laid upon the importance of the steel plant now being built. Operations that are now under way can give one a fairly good idea of the enormous undertaking which is to add thousands of people to the western part of the city and the great development of Duluth as an industrial and manufacturing community.

What is the most surprising thing is the absolute ignorance of the majority of the Duluthians as to the actual doings at the steel plant. It is said by employes of the company, who have charge of the work, that the site has been visited by only a small percentage of the people of the city.

Business men, especially, should be interested in the coming of the steel plant, for with it will come the numerous subsidiary industries. If business men were to take off a few hours to look over the plant and note the progress that is being made there, they would be better prepared to give information to the thousands of tourists who visit Duluth, and give them a better conception of the greatness of Duluth and the remarkable future promised for the city.

When Duluth business men realize the importance of the steel plant to the city and to their own business, they will soon have a movement on to secure better transportation between the plant site and the business center, which will mean the spending of thousands of dollars every week in Duluth. At the present time there are over 700 men employed there, but this is but a small portion of the large number that are to be brought later on. Foundations for eleven buildings are now in the process of construction, and the steel frame for them will be up before the first of the year. And while they are in progress of construction, others will be added.

It is a good policy for Duluthians to take an afternoon off once in a while and see what is going on about them, and when they have learned they will be more active in the procession that is rapidly making Duluth a Greater Duluth.

* * *

THE paving investigation is waking the people up more than ever to the much needed improvements to streets, especially in the West end and West Duluth. The need is apparent to everybody and there is speculation as to when they are to be made. Between the city proper and West Duluth hardly a street is in a passable condition. It has been suggested often that the property owners should do something to have the streets improved, but this is hardly considered fair, it is claimed, as the big firms of the city are the greatest users of the streets. The plan adopted some time ago for the improvement of Garfield avenue has been deemed but a fair plan for the improvement of either Superior street or Third street, and thus one thoroughfare at least could be put into a condition for travel.

* * *

BUSINESS in the realty market has much improved during the past week, most of the dealers reporting that business was in a good condition and that from now a greater improvement is expected. Many small deals were closed during the week, while negotiations for others are on the way. The loan business also has been picking up greatly, indicating that much building is planned.

No sales of any great size are reported and but few deals are said to be under consideration. Deals of good size, however, are generally not made public until every detail has been closed up.

Some inquiry is reported for Superior street property, but it is doubtful whether any can be secured. It is said that those who own frontage of centrally located property are not anxious to dispose of their holdings.

DON'T FORGET—YOURSELF!

If you are working for others, don't forget to do something for yourself. This means that you must make yourself save something for yourself and in a few years you will have others working for you.

The surest way to gain this future independence is to look to the land for it; land is the source of most, if not all, wealth. Get one, two or three acres of land near the city and pay for it by saving a trifle of your earnings. You can do it.

The man of small or moderate income can save only a small amount each month and this is all that is necessary to get two or three acres in Colman's Acre Tracts. My terms of $5 down and $5 per month, no interest, with prices $135 to $175 per acre, puts my tracts within the reach of everybody.

The land on these acres is a sandy clay loam, well drained, sloping south and cleared or easily cleared. The location of the land, being only 30 to 35 minutes' walk from the street car line, 3 blocks from the Solvely Boulevard, just outside the city limits and overlooking the lake, makes it an ideal place for truck or poultry farming and also for a summer home or outing place.

THE HERALD IS DULUTH'S GREAT WANT AD MEDIUM

HAVING ONE OF HIS OWN

Mayor Cullum Investigating Method of Letting Contracts Himself.

Writes Letter to All Local Contractors Asking for Suggestions.

Mayor Cullum is continuing the investigation of the council committee, which adjourned yesterday to prepare its findings, with a little investigation of his own.

He has written letters to all the contractors of the city asking for suggestions relative to the conduct of the business of the office of the board of public works and the engineering department. He takes the position that the contractors are familiar with this end of the work and believes that some ideas will be received which will be of great value.

"I do not know what facts the present investigation will develop," says the letter,' but if there are any weak places which can be remedied in the interest of good government, we are anxious to get the opinions of those in a position to know just what remedies can be proposed."

An official at the city hall stated this morning that some idea of the local inspection system may be gained from the fact that although there are approximately forty different jobs under way, there are but eight inspectors to check them up, including the chief inspector. He said that with so much work to look after, much of it important, it is an exceedingly difficult matter to see that the specifications are accurately followed in every case. On the larger jobs it is necessary for one or two men to be on the street all day long, and as a result the other inspectors have a correspondingly greater amount of territory to cover.

One of the letters sent out by the mayor to the contractors was turned over to The Herald. It is as follows:

"Dear Sir: As a contractor doing business with the city, you are familiar with the methods pursued by the board of public works and the engineering department, and I should like to have your personal opinion as to those methods.

'As a contractor, do you think the method of awarding the contracts is a fair one? If not, what change would you sugest? Do you believe that any improvement could be made in the manner of conducting the engineer's department in the matter of making estimates and the supervision of the work by the engineers and inspectors under them? I should like to have your opinion not only as a contractor but as a taxpayer and citizen.

"I do not know what facts the present investigation will develop, but if there are any weak places that can be remedied in the interest of good government we are anxious to get the opinions of those in position to know as to just what remedies can be proposed. You may either call on me personally or submit your views in writing. We are anxious to do the fair thing and the business-like thing in dealing with the public, and perhaps your advice would be of some assitance. Have you any knowledge of any unfair methods pursued by any department in these matters? Any information along these lines will be regarded as confidential if so requested."

TO HUNT RELICS AT JERUSALEM

Anglo-American Syndicate Has Contract With the Turks.

Jerusalem, Aug. 19.—Word is received here that Capt. Montague Parker expects soon to resume the work of excavating for sacred relics in the Valley of Siloam. Meantime a decision as to whether the captain's contract with the Turkish government can be technically construed to justify his operations at the Mosque of Omar is awaited with interest.

After much excavating had been done and some relics, it is claimed, recovered, the work was interrupted by charges that the explorers had violated the holy Mosque of Omar, obtaining access to it for the purposes of excavating by bribing its guardians. Popular feeling was so intense against the foreigners that after they had withdrawn, the government ordered the arrest of the guardians of the mosque and pursued an investigation into the circumstances of its alleged desecration.

Now the contract between Parker, representing an Anglo-American syndicate, and the Turkish government has come to light. Its perusal leaves one in doubt as to whether the explorers can be shown to have exceeded their rights, but, on the other hand, it furnishes unmistakable evidence that the captain was sanguine of discovering rare treasures and that he financed the affair liberally. It also develops that the Turkish government was a partner to the transaction and was to share in the spoils.

DOUBLE WEDDING OF MOTHER AND CHILD.

Anderson, Ind., Aug. 19.—Charles A. Grubbs, a farmer, aged 46, of Harrison, Ohio, and Mrs. Sarah Stan, aged 52, of Elwood; also James A. Legg, aged 24, of Franklin, and Miss Mary Stan, aged 23, of Elwood, were married in the Madison county clerk's office.

The brides are mother and daughter. Mrs. Stan lost one husband by death and one by divorce, this being her third venture in the matrimonial field.

The two brides, mother and daughter, were similarly gowned at the double wedding, which is the first of its kind to ever take place here.

THE NORTHWESTERN HOTEL MEN WILL SEEK LEGISLATION

HOTEL MEN AND LADIES AT GRAND FORKS CONVENTION.

Grand Forks, N. D., Aug. 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—The legislatures of Minnesota, Iowa, North and South Dakota will feel the effect of the work that has been accomplished by the Northwestern Hotel Men's association during its convention just held here. This effect will be seen in the presentation of bills that will be drawn largely after the plan of the Nebraska state laws, and if the idea as proposed materializes, those bills will go to the legislative assemblies with the joint recommendation of the traveling salesmen and the hotel owners.

Cordiality between the two classes, which, admittedly, was one time lacking, has been evidenced to a marked degree in at least two of the four states into which the uniform legislation campaign is to be promulgated. The Minnesota and North Dakota jurisdiction of the United Commercial Travelers, in a letter that was read to the hotel men, extended an invitation to the Northwestern Hotel Men's association to send a delegate to the next annual jurisdiction council meeting in Red Wing, Minn., next June, and the invitation was accepted by the hotel association.

Uniformity, it is pointed out, will not be of benefit to the hotel owners alone, but to the traveling public in general.

DULUTH HAS ONLY WOMAN WIRELESS OPERATOR EMPLOYED ON GREAT LAKES

Mrs. O. R. Redfern Takes Her Turn Receiving and Sending Messages.

Report That It Is Beauty Destroyer Fails to Alarm Her.

Statistics show that women have invaded every field of human endeavor, not even excepting aviation or wireless telegraphy. In the wireless business there are but few women, for the profession is yet in its infancy, and also because many women wrongly believe that the work is a destroyer of beauty.

Duluth can boast of having the only woman wireless operator on the Great Lakes, and at the present time one of the only two engaged in the work. She is Mrs. O. R. (Mae) Redfern, 26 years old, wife of the manager of the local station of the United Wireless company, which has stations all over the Great Lakes, as well as upon the sea coasts.

Some time ago there were six women engaged in the business, one on the Lower lakes and the others on the Atlantic coast, but since then four have dropped the work for various reasons. Mrs. Redfern claims she enjoys the new vocation and believes that it is a healthful job.

Mrs. Redfern was taught the code and the system by her husband during their courtship days, and after they were married she took a deeper interest in the work and has become as able an operator as her husband.

Mr. Redfern began the study of wireless operating at the age of 22 years, when, in 1907, he was in the United States navy, station at Mare Island, Cal. Later he was placed upon the U. S. S. West Virginia as wireless operator and served there until his discharge from the navy about two years ago.

Shortly afterwards he was married, and then took up a position with the United Wireless company, first stationed at Grand Marais, Minn., where he and his wife lived until last September, when they took charge of the Duluth office.

The work at the Duluth office is composed entirely of receiving messages from the vessels sailing on Lake Superior. This station takes all kinds of messages, including commercial dispatches and those of distress from vessels which have met with some mishap or are endangered by storm or fire.

Three Shifts.

The service at this station is divided into three sections, the night work being done by B. Dearing, the morning by Mr. Redfern and the afternoon by Mrs. Redfern. Although the time is quite evenly divided the amount of work done is not, for most of it is done in the afternoon, and much is transacted in the morning, for during these hours the offices and the boats are almost constantly in communication.

MRS. REDFERN ON DUTY.

O. R. REDFERN AT HIS DESK.

Mrs. Redfern, however, enjoys the work very much and maintains that she is much healthier now than she was before she took up the work. The report that it causes the operators to lose their teeth and the hair to fall out and the wrinkles to appear on the face does not bother her much, and, in fact, she laughs at it.

"Why," she said, "it's the most healthful work there is. I have felt much better since I took up this work, and I'm not losing my teeth, and you can see my hair is not dropping out. The only time I lose any hair is when I am trying to pull out the tangles.

"Electricity is life, you know. It is given as a treatment for almost every ill, and when a person has that passing through the body nearly all the time, it stands to reason that it will keep one well instead of making one sick.

"Many people visit us at the station and they wonder as they see me at the machine taking the messages. They think it is queer that a woman should be taking the dispatches, which come with such a roar and the current of which is so strong that it makes the tall tower shake. But it is all like play to me and I thoroughly enjoy it. There is no work that I would like as much, and I think I shall always stay by it."

The local station was erected here three years ago and has been in operation all the time. It is located at Thirteenth street and Lake avenue, and the tower stands about 150 feet in the air.

G. A. R. LEADERS AT ROCHESTER

Hot Contest Over Next Commander-in-Chief Is Ahead.

Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 19.—Commander-in-chief John E. Gilman and staff of Boston arrived here today for the forty-sixth annual encampment, Grand Army of the Republic, which opens here Monday, and established headquarters.

The contest for next commander-in-chief will be heated. Col. John McElroy, editor of the National Tribune of Washington, and Judge Harvey M. Trible of Bloomington, Ill., are candidates.

THE GRIZZLY MOVES ON.

Washington Herald: "While it isn't likely that the grizzly bear will ever become extinct," said Capt. Jerry Kreiter, an old time plainsman and Rocky mountain prospector, "he has, all the same, come to be something of a rarity in many of his original haunts, and the hunter seeking sport with him now must journey into the fastnesses of the far Sierras and Coast Range mountains or into the wilderness of the British provinces in the Northwest.

"In former days, when the hunter and the ranchman had only their double barrelled guns, the grizzly had little fear of them. But when the repeating guns and the rest of the destroyers began to confront him he gradually but reluctantly fell away from the pleasant borderland and sought safety in the deepest isolation.

"When there were buffaloes on the plains the grizzly bears were keen and persistent hunters of them. A herd of buffaloes on its journey seldom escaped attack from grizzlies all along the line. When a grizzly and a buffalo came to battle there was sure to be a savage contest, although it never lasted long, the buffalo usually being the vanquished.

"Confronted by a bear a buffalo bull would invariably charge furiously upon its big and ugly foe. This was as the bear expected. He waited, erect on his haunches, the onset of the buffalo. As the latter rushed forward with lowered head and was almost upon the bear the bear would throw himself to one side with astonishing quickness and at the same time deliver a blow with one of his powerful paws that seldom failed to break his antagonist's neck. It sometimes happened, though, that a bull was young and agile enough to await this blow long enough to give in turn a deadly thrust of his horn into the bear's side, making the combat a mutual slaughter."

BIBLE FOR CHINESE EMPEROR.

London Globe: The Chinese Christians about a dozen years ago presented the dowager empress with a magnificent copy of the Scriptures translated into Chinese. It was a fine example of modern penmanship, the writing being on silk and the covers of the Bible being of silver. The gift was graciously received and her majesty read the book. This excited the emperor's curiosity and he ordered one of the eunuchs to obtain for him a copy of the New Testament.

The books formed part of the loot of the Forbidden City in 1900. The emperor was a close student of the Testament which was freely annotated by him. The Bible was found in the empress's chamber and the Testament in the emperor's study. The future ruler has been presented with another and less pretentious copy, but this has cost £800. The regent in accepting the gift at the hands of the American minister promised his excellency that as soon as the emperor has mastered his rudiments he shall study the sacred writings.

WHEN AN INDIAN PRINCESS TRAVELS.

London Chronicle: Mystery and secrecy surrounded the landing at Dover on Saturday from the French mail packet of her royal highness the begum of Chopal.

The party altogether numbered about twenty persons, including her highness' physician, astrologer, cooks and other officials connected with her court. Her personal suite numbered three ladies.

They were picturesquely dressed in different colors. The princess was clothed entirely in white silk. Another lady's dress was all green, and all wore headdresses with long veils, which enveloped nearly the whole of the body, a kind of peephole being left for the eyes.

Her highness was practically smuggled ashore. The special train was brought up to the ship, so that the door of the saloon exactly faced the gangway. The utmost care was taken by the courier conducting the party to prevent the ladies being closely observed by men, who were kept at a distance; not even the captain or any officer of the ship being allowed near the gangway.

FUTURE KING MIDSHIPMAN

Prince of Wales Now Belongs to the Royal Navy.

Has No Commission and Not Even Honored With Flag.

London, Aug. 19.—"Come aboard to join, sir!"

With these words the prince of Wales, heir to the throne, made his formal entry into his majesty's navy on the first day of the present month, in this respect, as in every other, carrying out the forms and regulations prescribed for midshipment joining their ship for the first time.

The prince, while he will have to perform the same duties as other midshipmen, and will have additional work to do, his tutor being aboard to coach and instruct him in all manner of subjects, is not likely to have the same rough work that fell to his father when he was in the navy. The present king first went to sea on an auxiliary cruiser, on which sails were used far more often than steam, and on which there was lots of work to be done aloft.

The prince obtains his first experience afloat aboard the Hindustan, not one of the newest, but still a modern battleship. The king's regulations provide that "When the prince of Wales is embarked in any ship or vessel, his standard shall be hoisted at the main, and shall be saluted in the same manner as the flags denoting the presence of the sovereign." This does not apply in the present case.

The prince will be treated as any other midshipman. He is not a commissioned officer, but subordinate to warrant officers (gunners, boatswains, carpenters and artificer engineers), and with them the future sovereign will live and move in the gun-room of his ship. He will be assigned to a watch and will be alloted a subdivision of seamen, for whose behavior, smartness and work he will be held responsible by the lieutenant in control of the subdivision. However, his most important work is the acquiring of nautical knowledge to which the greater part of his time must be given.

Game Too Well Preserved.

Complaints are coming to the government from some of the South African protectorates that the policy of protecting and preserving wild animals is being overdone. For some years the government authorities, fearing the extermination of those animals which have any commercial value, have limited the number which individuals may shoot and guarded against reckless slaughter by a system of licensing the hunters. Shooting in the protectorates appears to be on the decline from the reports received by the colonial office.

Elephants were the most valuable game on account of their ivory, but under the licensing system it has hardly been worth while from a business standpoint for a man to go to the expense of killing the small number permitted. The governor of Uganda makes serious complaint of the elephant pest.

"Owing to the rapidly decreasing number of licenses which are being taken out, and the consequent immunity of the elephants from attack," he writes, "these animals, which have always been a source of danger to the inhabitants and of damage to crops, have become still more dangerous and destructive, and they are becoming bolder in approaching inhabited areas. Reports are constantly coming in from administrative officers, telegraph officers and others of the destruction caused by their devastating habits. It is possible that sooner later elephants will have to be shot out, save in such portions of this protectorate as may be expressly set apart as reserves for them. At present there is no doubt that much hardship is inflicted on the natives; but the position will become more acute."

The British Yellow Peril.

Forty-five thousand Chinese and Lascar sailors are employed on British ships. During the past two years 10,000 Chinese sailors have been brought into this country and the number increases every year. These are the figures published by the Seamans' union. Havelock Wilson, the head of the union, declares that British sailors must fight this Oriental competition. He does not believe in an appeal to parliament, for many of the Chinese, and practically all of the Lascars, are British subjects, a fact which makes legislation against them impossible. His plan is to have the labor unions combine to prevent any ship employing Oriental hands from being loaded or discharged in the ports of the United Kingdom.

On the part of the ship owners the arguments are urged that Chinese sailors are more faithful, more amenable to discipline and—a point which the English sailormen resent bitterly—are more efficient. That they will work for lower wages, and that their cost for food and other necessaries is below that of white sailors is unquestionable, but those are points upon which the owners, from motives of policy, put as little stress as possible.

FIELD NEWS IS BULLISH

Reports of Yields From Northwest Indicate Meagre Returns.

Canadian Messages Favorable—Cash Demand Slow; Linseed Up.

Duluth Board of Trade, Aug. 19.—Wheat worked upward today. The market was influenced by reports of poor thrashing yields from North Dakota, which indicated reduced yields. The quality of new wheat received here is extremely poor. While the cash demand for wheat was slow on account of a slump in the flour demand millers were eager for new wheat and paid from 2c to 3c over the September delivery for choice stuff. Only 1c over the near option was paid for new No. 1 northern wheat.

September gained ¼c. December advanced ⅜c. Cash wheat was quoted at 1c over September. Oats advanced ⅜c, rye lost 1c, durum gained ¾c and corn declined ⅜c.

Linseed was strong. The buying was confined to the near delivery. September gained 4c, October gained 3c and November 2c. Cash was held firm at $2.40, 21c over the September delivery. Foreign markets were mixed. Antwerp August - September Plata seed was quoted at $2.17⅛, unchanged. Buenos Ayres September closed at $2.05⅝, ⅞c up. London August - September Calcutta was weaker, declining ⅞c to $2.37⅝.

Wheat opened strong and went forward on account of short covering. Shorts were frightened by reports of poor yields from North Dakota. Thrashing reports from various localities indicated that the yields of wheat in territory affected by the black rust are extremely low. The quality of the wheat is poor which is inducing a strong cash demand for choice wheat from the last crop.

Canadian yields, according to present prospects, will be large. The reports from the wheat fields of Saskatchewan are favorable and harvesting in the southern part of the province is in full swing under favorable conditions. The weather map showed slight precipitation in Manitoba and some moisture in Saskatchewan, but not enough rain fall to interfere with harvesting.

Chicago reported large sales of winter wheat, No. 2 red, to go to Buffalo. No export business was reported in winter wheat. There was a little business transacted, however, but it was of small volume. The labor troubles in the United Kingdom are making buyers cautious. They are "up in the air" and are not disposed to contract for foreign wheat so long as there is liable to be any difficulty about handling it at the receiving ports.

Reports from Manitoba told of some damage to the wheat from black rust, but the acreage in Manitoba is comparatively small, when the Canadian total is considered. Most of the wheat in that province is beyond danger from rust infection. A majority of the Manitoba acreage has been cut.

A French house was reported to be a buyer of durum wheat in this market.

Toward the close values eased off on profit-taking by scalpers who got in the market at the opening or who were buyers yesterday.

MARKET GOSSIP

O. K. Lyle wired from Moose Jaw, Sask.—"Another hot and fine day. Crop progressing favorably. Additional observation confirm probably large production and average of over 20 bu in Saskatchewan. Province has 5,600,000 acres. General feeling is, will escape frost."

St. Paul wired: Mr. Moe of Rutland, N. D., farming 400 acres, thrashed forty acres of wheat and got only 39 bu out of the whole forty acres.

Le Count wired from Minto, Manitoba: "Crop is good from Winnipeg to Pilot Mound. West from Pilot Mound crop is below average and has been greatly destroyed by black rust, and early lack of rain, and crop expected to be short. Drove from Boissevan and crop condition improving north. Think worst districts seen today will average 10 bu in general, Canadian crop expected to be of better quality than last year and crop above average. Weather hot, clear and favorable and ripening crop rapidly. Harvest general here."

Broomhall cabled from Liverpool: The firmness in America was offset here by the larger American shipments this week as indicated by Bradstreet's and values were ⅛d lower. Following the opening further easiness developed and values lost an additional ⅜d. Pressure was the result of the quiet demand for both cargo and parcels and a cable from our agent which reports good rains in India, in the United Provinces. The weakness in continental markets and more favorable reports from Canada and rains in Argentina. At the close the market was easy and ⅜d to ½d lower than yesterday.

Corn opened unchanged and later declined ⅛d in sympathy with wheat. The market was extremely dull. The weather in Great Britain is fine for the movement and new wheat is moving freely. Our agent cables that the weakness in Buenos Ayres at the close was due to general light rains which will further benefit the growing crop.

CHICAGO MARKET.

Shorts Start Buying and Force Wheat Prices Up.

Chicago, Aug. 19.—Shorts were inclined to even up over Sunday at the opening today, and initial prices were higher despite word from Canada that hot weather is forcing the crop to maturity, which lends color to bumper crop prognostications. September opened ⅛c to ¼c up at 90c to 90⅛c, and sold to 90⅝c.

The close was firm with September ⅝c up at 90½c. Shorts scrambled to cover on buying of December by a leading elevator interest.

Business in corn was very light, but prices early were steady at last night's level. September opened unchanged at 65c, while December and May were within a shade of the previous close.

Oats were stagnant and prices a shade under yesterday. September opened ⅛c lower at 41¾c and December a shade lower to a shade higher at 44¼c to 44⅜c.

The close was easy. September ¼@⅜c lower at 64⅝@54¾c.

Provisions were strong with commission houses buying. There was no evidence of packers being in the market. January pork opened 5c up at $16.50; September lard 2½c higher at $9.10, and September ribs a shade advanced at $9.12½.

TRADE FALLS OF AT CLOSE

Stock Prices Show Irregularity With Some Pressure.

Less Active Group Makes the Best Exhibit of Strength.

New York, Aug. 19.—Firmness was shown at the opening on a moderate volume of business. Union Pacific and most of the active issues made fractional gains while in the more abscure stocks advances were more pronounced. Minneapolis & St. Louis preferred was up 3½ and the common 1½, with a 1-point gain for Texas company.

The market became more active soon after the opening under the lead of its speculative favorites, Union Pacific and Reading making further advances, extending to 2 points in the former. Other stocks, Atchison excepted, were up a point or over. The rise was opposed at odd times, with some impression on prices, especially in Union Pacific, which fell a point.

The market closed irregular. Trading in the final hour dwindled and was notable only for strength in the less active group. Louisville & Nashville, Atlantic Coast Line, Wisconsin Central, St. Louis & San Francisco second preferred, American Can preferred, American Cotton Oil, Westinghouse Electric, International Pump and Western Union were up a point or more. Leading stocks reflected a degree of pressure.

Repairs Wheel.

W. E. Hoy, diver for the Union Towing & Wrecking company, today put on a bucket to the wheel of the steamer Black Rock, to replace the one broken off while the vessel was making her trip up the river to Two Harbors. The boat came from Two Harbors light for the repairs, and departed this afternoon for that port.

Launch Owners Fined.

Two fines of $100 each were imposed yesterday afternoon upon launch owners of Two Harbors, by Port Collector L. M. Willcutts, for the violation of the motor boat laws of June 9, 1910. The launches are owned by Martin Olson and J. A. Bostrom. Bostrom's boat is known as the Anna B, but Olson's has no name. The violations consist of running without lights or proper equipment on July 11.

HECTOR MORRISON WAS WELL KNOWN

Scottish Residents of Duluth Will Miss Friend Who Has Passed Away.

The Scottish residents of Duluth and especially the natives of the island of Lewis will greatly miss the late Hector Morrison, who died yesterday morning at 318 Fourth avenue west.

Mr. Morrison was born in Stornoway, 63 years ago, and was a resident of Duluth for twenty-three years. He was a ship carpenter by trade and his occupation took him to all quarters of the globe. His fund of stories of adventure and sights seen all over the world were a source of delight to his many friends and especially the children, who were his particular favorites.

He was not married. He leaves a brother, A. M. Morrison of Hunter's Park. The funeral was at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

START FOR ROCHESTER.

Twin City Veterans Ready to Go to Encampment.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 19.—(Special to The Herald.)—Carying about 100 delegates to the national encampment at Rochester, N. Y., a special train will leave Minneapolis at 9:30 o'clock tonight and St. Paul at 10 with members of the G. A. R. Reports which have reached J. A. Everett of Fairmount, commander of the Department of Minnesota, indicate that only a small delegation will leave the capital city.

At the state capitol this morning Commander Everett said he expected the Sulloway bill, recently defeated in congress, a bill which provides for a general increase in pensions to members of the G. A. R., would be up for a hotel debate at Rochester.

"The Minnesota delegation undoubtedly will favor the measure if it is again brought up at our convention," Commander Everett said. "We believe in getting all we can."

ATTENDED NATIONAL MEETING OF CREDIT MEN.

George Fairley of the Duluth Jobbers' Credit association has returned from Minneapolis, where he attended the annual meeting of the National Association of Mercantile Agencies. Mr. Fairley was elected a member of the executive board of the association.

The convention was in session for three days this week. They system of rating and credit accounts throughout the country was discussed and other matters of interest to the delegates touched upon in the addresses.

THE CONDUCTOR'S LAST REFUGE.

Technical World: Heretofore the wisdom of Solomon was required of all street car conductors many times a day when the question of a child's age arose. This delicate problem has just been solved by the Cincinnati Car company in a manner that would make the author of the Book of Proverbs look to his laurels as a shrewd judge.

By careful computation it was ascertained that the average height of 5-year-olds is 41 inches, and accordingly a mark was painted at that height from the floor in the cars. Hereafter there can be no insinuations regarding the veracity of parents who desire to save that nickel. If dispute arises, the youngster is marched up to the fare-height mark and the answer is obvious.

Ask yourself this question: "Can I afford NOT to advertise?"

SUPERIOR

SUICIDE IN GRAVEYARD

Body of Superior Man Found Stretched Across Mound.

Told His Landlady He Was Going to Kill Himself.

Bert Johnson, sexton at Calvary cemetery, Superior, yesterday afternoon discovered the lifeless form of a man stretched across a mound and lying face downward on a grave. A revolver was found near the body. Through his right temple there was a bullet hole. It is believed that the man took his own life.

The body was identified as that of Maxwell Joseph Conert, aged 26, who, after declaring that he would end his life, had disappeared Thursday evening from his boarding house at South Superior. Before leaving his boardhouse, he paid Mrs. Newman, the proprietress, $85, which he owed her and said to her "Goodbye, you will never see me again, I'm going to kill myself."

Conert had been employed as a blacksmith at the Webster Manufacturing company for the past two and a half years. He quit Wednesday afternoon. He was a single man and is survived by his father, John Conert of Buffalo, N. Y., and a brother, Ray of El Paso, Tex. Although he was well liked by his fellow workers, it is claimed that his actions during the past few months point to the theory that he was mentally unbalanced.

After his disappearance, Thursday evening, his landlady notified the police and a searching party was organized and made a thorough search for him, but they did not succeed in locating him. Sexton Johnson ran across the body while attending to his duties in the cemetery yesterday afternoon about 4 o'clock.

Coroner Geisen was called and decided that no inquest was necessary as death was plainly suicidal. The body was removed to the Le Sage undertaking rooms, where it awaits funeral arrangements.

ALLEGED WHITE SLAVER HELD TO HIGHER COURT.

William Tracey of Hurley, Wis., arraigned before Judge Parker of municipal court on a white slavery charge, pleaded not guilty and was bound over to the present term of the superior court. Tracey, it is alleged, put his wife in a house in the red light district about a year ago. It is claimed that the prosecution has evidence to show that he received from her on the average of $2.50 a day. If found guilty, Tracey might be sent up for twenty years.

FORMER SUPERINTENDENT GETS MINNEAPOLIS JOB.

B. B. Jackson, former superintendent of schools in Superior, has been elected assistant superintendent of schools at Minneapolis, according to word which has been received by his Superior friends. Mr. Jackson was superintendent in Superior for six years and is now in charge of the educational system at Cleveland, Ohio. Mr. Jackson resigned from his work in Superior during the famous students' strike, when he sided with the strikers and against the school board.

Complying With Law.

Local express companies are complying with the newly enacted legislation which requires express companies to deliver packages free of charge to all places reached by mail routes in the city, although the law does not go into effect until Sept. 1. The law provides that only parcels coming from points out of the state be delivered, but the local companies are delivering all packages, whethrr intrastate or not.

Railroaders' Picnic.

The employes of the Great Northern offices in Superior are today holding their annual picnic at Billings park. A number of interesting events are included on the program, such as singing contests, a speech on equal suffrage by William H. Mooney and a number of fake boxing contests.

COPPERS HIGHER; UNDERTONE FIRM

Values Advance When Political Complications Are Straightened Out.

The copper market advanced today in sympathy with the industrials and rails which went higher because of the veto by President Taft of the woolen bill and the farmers' so-called free list bill.

On the other hand, there was very little support from banking interests. The buying came chiefly from shorts who were driven to cover on the upturn. In the short session the volume of trading in the East was heavy, but in this market the situation remained dull and unchanged. Trading was lifeless and no interest was manifested in the market.

The strike situation in the United Kingdom is more serious, but the effect on the market was lost, as the professional element took cognizance of the clearer political situation in the United States, and they observed with satisfaction the probable adjournment of congress within the next few days. The veto by the president of the woolen tariff revision means that the market will not be menaced for some time by proposed tariff revisions.

There was some foreign liquidation at the opening on account of the demoralized condition of business in the United Kingdom due to the strike situation, which is more serious than at any time since the railroad employes were called out. The American market absorbed these offerings without a shock, and when shorts began to cover the market forged steadily upward. The belief that the English government will take strong measures to settle the strike contributed to the favorable undertone of the market.

The money market is easier, and the cheaper rates are expected by the bulls to give an impetus to speculation.

The steel business was reported to be in a healthier condition. The Republic Steel & Iron company is operating at 90 per cent of capacity, and the United States Steel corporation is said to be receiving orders more freely than at any time within several months.

The copper metal situation seems to show slight improvement as regards stocks, which, however, continue to be burdensome. The metal price does not display any inclination to advance, and the leading producers are still curtailing production.

In the local market Combination Keating sold at 35c and 36c.

In the East Amalgamated sold at $62, $62.12½, $62, $62.25 and $62.12½; Superior & Pittsburg at $15, Butte Coalition at $16, $16.50 and $16.25, Giroux at $5.06¼ to $5, Greene at $6.62½ to $6.75, North Butte sold within the range of $25.75, $25.50, $25.75, $25.50 and $25.75.

Thompson, Towle & Co. say: "Apparently the Amalgamated plans to set a good example for the electrification of steam roads and the increasing use of electricity in mining operations. Our Butte correspondent reports:

"That the consumption of copper is going to be largely increased in the near future in consequence of the many contemplated uses for electricity there is no doubt. In this city and state alone electricity is being rapidly introduced as a substitute for power furnished by steam and other means. In the High Ore mine, which drains all the principal mines of the Anaconda company, powerful electrical pumps are now in operation and steam pumps have been discarded. In the mines electricians are at work stringing wires for the purpose of running ore cars which are now being hauled by horses and mules, while from two of the big properties of the Anaconda company the ore is brought to the surface by electric power, which operates the new compressed air plant, and in the course of another four weeks, a third mine will be workin~ under the same system. Then there is the Butte, Anaconda and Pacific railway.

"In a short time work will be commenced electrifying the road, which means a total mileage of some eighty miles, including spurs and yard tracks, while the Milwaukee is figuring on making its proposed branch line from Lombard to Great Falls an electric road. In addition to all this, there are several mines in Radersburg and Corbin districts getting estimates on the cost of installing electric equipment. All this new electric work is going to mean that a large amount of copper is going to be required."

Butte, Mont., Aug. 19.—Affidavits of P. H. Nelson, general manager of the Butte Ballaklava Mining company, James A. Murray, William Harwirt, Charles Furlong, C. W. Newton, Peter Deegan, John Tippett, Sidney Lafontise, W. R. Hanswirth and Frank Grimes have been filed in behalf of defendants motion for a change of venue from Silver Bow and Deer Lodge counties in the action brought by the Anaconda Copper Mining company against the Butte Ballakalava company. It is alleged the Anaconda company has a large political, financial, industrial and social power in the counties mentioned and for that reason a fair trial in either county would be impossible.

The Anaconda company lays claim to the vein embracing one of the principal ore bodies of the Butte Ballakalava and asks for damages for the alleged illegal extraction on ore to the extent of nearly $1,000,000.

RABBI JACOBS TO SPEAK HERE

Chicago Preacher and Editor Visits Jewish People of Duluth.

Rev. Dr. L. Jacobs, rabbi of the congregation of Bnay Joseph of Chicago, will speak to Hebrews at the Head of the Lakes today and tomorrow. At 4 o'clock this afternoon he will speak to the congregation of Adash Israel temple on "The Duty of the Hebrew," and at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon on "The Past and the Present." At 7 p. m. tomorrow he will speak before the Agudas Achin congregation at Hammond avenue and Sixth street, Superior, on "Admiral Togo and the Jews."

The visitor is a member of the staff of the Jewish Standard of Chicago and city editor of the Jewish Record of that city. He attained the degree of doctor of philosophy at Vienna and studied theology in many foreign countries He is well versed in European and Oriental languages. He is now lecturing in the Northwest and he recently organized a congregation at Fond du Lac, Wis.

MOULTON ARRAIGNED AND HELD TO GRAND JURY.

Frank A. Moulton, arrested several days ago at Beloit, Wis., for the Duluth authorities on a charge of forgery, was arraigned in police court this morning. He waived examination and was bound over to the grand jury. He is accused of having passed a worthless check for $100 on Fred Engelking of this city.

It appears that Moulton left his wife in Minneapolis and ran away with an 18-year-old girl, who introduced him to her friends and relatives as her husband. In this manner, it is claimed by the police, that he gained the acquaintance of many persons in different towns whom he induced to cash checks for him for large amounts. He is said to be wanted in several Canadian towns.

TOOK AX AND SAW WHEN REFUSED SOUP.

Iver Ruiski believes that a man should keep his promise and that if he doesn't he is entitled to some kind of satisfaction. Yesterday John Maki, who has a restaurant on St. Croix avenue, told him that if he would saw some wood he would repay him with a bowl of soup. But when Iver came to get his soup he claims that it wasn't forthcoming, although he had a tremendous appetite for it. So he says that he thought he had a right to Maki's saw and ax, which he carried away with him. Maki didn't think the same way and caused Iver's arrest.

Iver pleaded guilty to petit larceny in police court yesterday afternoon, and despite his arguments he got $50 and costs or thirty days in the county jail. He went over the hill from lack of the wherewithal to make a choice.

VIVIENNE LANG WEDS TEETOTALER

Partner in Liquor Business Wooed and Won in Three Weeks.

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 19.—Miss Vivienne Lang, whose statement before the National Wholesale Liquor Dealers' association in Chicago several months ago that it was highly proper for a young girl to take a highball in public if she willed, has married a "teetotaler." He is Harry B. Seligstein, secretary of the Rosenthal Paper company, and he wooed and won her in three weeks.

Miss Lang is a brunette of striking beauty. She is the "son" in the firm of S. J. Lang & Son, wholesale liquor dealers. She drew down an avalanche of criticism from the Chicago W. C. T. U. for her opinion, but when she returned to St. Louis she gave the newspapers an interview reaffirming the sentiment. She can't see any harm in a woman's sipping a highball in a cafe — but, in winerooms, no, no, never.

She lays her matrimonial impulse on Harry. His argument for an early ceremony is all to blame. They were married by Rabbi Moritz Spitz, and the Lang family have welcomed Seligstein without reserve.

NAMING THE GERRYMANDER.

Independent: The gerrymander was christened in 1813, although it must have been in operation long before that. A stanch old Federalist, Governor Eldridge Gerry, controlled through his legislature the redistricting of Massachusetts under the census of 1810.

In the office of Benjamin Russell, an ardent Republican editor, hung a map of the state as newly subdivided by Gerry and his men. Gilbert Stuart's ready pencil whimsically added to the outlines of a grotesque district the wings and tail of a dragon.

"Ha! he said when he had finished. "How's that for a salamander?"

The Republican Russell growled: "Better call it a Gerrymander." And American politicians have taken his advice.

WOULD END THE KAISER'S NAVY.

Pall Mall Gazette: There is a good sporting story told in Germany of the kaiser's love of a practical joke, and it relates to a boar hunt given to a number of guests. Tramping through a wood they met a keeper. "My good fellow," said the emperor, "you seem very suspicious. Perhaps you think I haven't a license."

Thereupon out came a printed document for the man's inspection, duly stamped and signed. "Well," came the next question, "I hope you're satisfied?" The man nodded and then made a gesture toward the rest of the party. "Oh, yes," exclaimed the silently mirthful potentate, "I've no doubt the other gentlemen will readily follow suit and show you theirs." Of course not one had a license, and all had to pay fines before a magistrate the next day.

But he has not always had it his own way. One night he was sitting out a dance with a young lady at a court ball. "What would you say," he asked, "if I were to forbid naval officers to marry?" "Your majesty," came the quick reply, "that would be impossible. Your navy would cease to exist."

NOT THE REAL THING.

Los Angeles Times: Lyman P. Sterns, the new manager of the Senate restaurant, said the other day, in response to a complaint on his cranberry sauce: "My cranberry sauce is made from a New England recipe. Hence it is the real thing. Beside New England cranberry sauce, any other kind seems unreal—as unreal as Sothern's pistol shot.

"Once, in the third-act climax of a play, the elder Sothern's pistol missed fire in his hand. At that critical moment, however, the great actor's presence of mind did not desert him.

"'Bang!' he shouted, at the top of his lungs.

"And the villain immediately fell dead."

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

HARMONY OF PURE FOOD WORKERS' CONVENTION MAY BE MARRED BY WILEY AND REORGANIZATION

Motion to Bar All Discussion of Wiley Case Referred to Committee.

Reorganization of Association Also Likely to Bring Lively Discussion.

Governor Eberhart and Mayor Welcome Delegates to State and City.

Only until the speeches of welcome and acknowledgement were completed did peace pervade the meeting of the Association of State and National Food and Dairy Departments, which commenced this morning at the Commercial club.

Then the fur began to fly. The Wiley-Wilson controversy is likely to be one of the principal stumbling blocks to a peaceful and harmonious meeting, and another cause of dissension is the reorganization of the association to permit of greater specialization in the subjects of discussion.

At this morning's session Governor Eberhart welcomed the delegates to the "Bread and Butter state" warmly and commended their work and influence. He said that the state had many cities which could entertain well, but that Duluth was the peer of entertainers. He said that it was destined to be a second Pittsburg and that even now one could plant a tack in the soil and raise a bushel of crowbars in a week. He commended the Minnesota dairy and food department for more efficient work and pointed out that goods sent out from Minnesota, with the name of the state upon them were branded for their purity and quality.

The greatest need along the lines of pure food legislation according to the governor was legislation, and he point-

ATWOOD PLANS TO START LATE

Has Flown as Far as Lyons, N. Y., on His Long Trip.

Auburn, N. Y., Aug. 21.—Speaking to an Auburn newspaper man by telephone, Atwood said this morning that he would be unable to leave Lyons this morning, but will leave about 4 o'clock this afternoon.

May Stop at Syracuse.

Lyons, N. Y., Aug. 21.—Well on his way into New York state on his flight from St. Louis to New York, Harry N Atwood today prepared to fly ninety-eight miles from here to Utica. He said he probably would stop at Syracuse and might detour over Auburn.

If he reaches Syracuse tonight he will have flown 1,026 miles since he left St. Louis a week ago today, and he will have 239 miles still to fly before finishing in New York city. He has been in the air every day since he started, and has never been compelled to land because of any emergency more serious than the using up of his gasoline.

His Daily Record.

His daily record, not including today's plans, together with the number of stops between the daily start and finish, is:

St. Louis to Chicago, two stops, 286 miles, 5 hours and 43 minutes.

Chicago to Elkhart, Ind., no stop, 101 miles, 2 hours and 16 minutes.

Elkhart, Ind., to Toledo, Ohio, one stop, 133 miles, 2 hours and 56 minutes.

Toledo to Cleveland, two stops, 123 miles, 2 hours and 20 minutes.

Cleveland to Swanville, Pa., no stop, 84 miles, 2 hours and 7 minutes.

Swanville to Buffalo, one stop, 99 miles, 2 hours, 25 minutes.

Buffalo to Lyons, N. Y., no stop, 104 miles, 2 hours and 11 minutes.

Atwood says aviation meets, as they are managed now, will soon be a thing of the past. He added:

"It is more credit to civilization that a man can fly across the continent than that he can turn a flipflop in the air."

SPECIAL PANEL TO TRY BELLBOY

Paul Geidel's Lawyer Says He Has Good Defense.

New York, Aug. 21.—A special panel of 150 talesmen appeared in the court of general sessions today to furnish a jury for the trial of Paul Geidel, the bellboy charged with the murder of William Henry Jackson, the aged broker. Although at the time of the murder in the Hotel Iroquois the police said they had Geidel's full confession, his attorney declared that he has prepared an adequate defense.

RETIRED BANKER IS KILLED BY STREET CAR.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 21.—Gamaliel Bradford, a retired banker, well known throughout the country for his writings and lectures on governmental topics, and of the eighth generation in descent from Governor Bradford of the Plymouth colony, was struck by a trolley car shortly after midnight last night, dying of a fractured skull this morning at his son's home in Wellsley Hills.

DULUTH WILL HAVE POSTAL BANK OPENED ON SEPT. 15

Order Is Issued By the Department at Washington.

Fargo Also in List of Offices Authorized for Such Service.

Washington, Aug. 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—Postmaster A. P. Cook at Duluth today was authorized to open a postal savings bank Sept. 15. That Duluth is thus early designated a postal savings bank is due largely to the persistence of Representative Miller. During the last few weeks he has been almost daily calling upon the departments, his aim being to see the order issued before the close of this session.

Besides Duluth, Nineteen other first-class postoffices were designated today by Postmaster General Hitchcock as postal savings banks. They are: Pine Bluff, Ark.; Los Angeles, Cal.; Stamford, Conn.; Pensacola, Fla.; Macon, Ga.; Joliet, Ill.; Des Moines, Iowa; Kansas City, Kan.; Newport, Ky.; Lynn, Mass.; Hattiesburg, Miss.; Concord, N. H.; Newark, N. J.; Wilmington, N. C.; Fargo, N. D.; Enid, Okla.; Providence, R. I.; Chattanooga and Knoxville, Tenn.

At the close of business August 18, the treasurer of the United States had accepted from depositary banks as security for postal savings deposits, bonds aggregating $9,103,288. The treasurer had on hand bonds aggregating $2,770,000 which were being investigated.

New York city, $53,029; Chicago, $108,316; Boston, $26,722, and St. Louis, $19,981.

STATE PAYS FOR SQUIRREL PELTS

Wisconsin Officials Accept $100,000 Worth as Wolf Scalps.

Madison, Wis., Aug. 21.—By sending the scalps to Washington, the secretary of state of Wisconsin has discovered that ten so-called wolves were mere squirrels. Secretary Frear was able last week to save the state $102 on a consignment of thirteen scalps and to nullify a false claim for bounty which, it is alleged, is one of a long succession of "fakes" with which the state and counties have been afflicted for many years. It is said that $100,000 has been paid out in bounties through false claims in years past.

BIG BARBECUE FOR BOOKER WASHINGTON.

Forest City, Ark., Aug. 21.—Negroes of this vicinity gave Booker T. Washington an ovation yesterday when he stopped here en route to his home in Tuskegee, Ala., from the convention of the National Negro Business Men's league just closed in Little Rock. Scott Bond, a wealthy negro who owns large tracts of land in this vicinity, gave a big barbecue at Crowley's ridge, seven miles from here, in honor of the negro leader. One hundred cows, sheep and pigs had been roasted for the event. A crowd estimated at 10,000, including many white people, listened to Washington's address.

NOTES AND FILMS IN DELTA RIVER

Government Scientists Have Mishap on Alaskan Trip.

Cordova, Alaska, Aug. 21.—All field notes and the cameras and exposed films of the Smithsonian Institution expedition are somewhere on the bottom of the Big Delta river, according to advices received here today.

The current of the river tipped up a wagon in which Professors R. F. Starr and Lawrence Madden were crossing the stream on their way to Fairbanks, and spilled out the men and the photographic outfit in the Delta. The men got ashore.

Three Children Drown.

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 21.—Three children of James Staples were drowned in a pond on their father's farm, twelve miles north of Moosejaw Sunday.

WILL COST $869,450 TO RUN CITY

City Comptroller's Estimate Allows for Reduction in Tax Rate.

Estimates of Department Heads Calls for Budget of Over $1,000,000.

Greatest Proportionate Raise Is Asked for By Park Board.

City Competroller William S. McCormick estimates that it will cost $869,450 to run the city of Duluth in 1912.

Of this amount he figures that $704,450 would be raised by general taxation, which, on a basis of valuation of $43,500,000, would make the city tax rate 16.19 mills. The balance, $165,000, would be raised from miscellaneous sources constituting the general fund, which consists of money received from licenses, the mortgage tax, etc. The city rate for 1911 was 17.6 mills.

The comptroller in his estimate cuts those of the departments considerably. In preparing their own estimates for 1912 they asked for a total of $1,041,056.85, or $171,606 86 more than the comtroller thinks they should be allowed.

Several of the departments asked for much larger sums than they were allowed in last year's budget. The fire department estimated its expenses for 1912 at $147,555. Last year the department's allowance was $143,000, while the comptroller's estimate for 1912 is $144,000. Last year $17,000 of the fund was transferred from the general fund, but this year the comptroller states that the entire amount will have to be raised by taxation, as the condition of the general fund is such as not to allow of that transfer.

The police department was allowed

William Kirby, seriously.
Patrick Connor, seriously.

Bond entered the restaurant flourishing a revolver. When the three patrolmen rushed into the place Bond began shooting. A fourth policeman finally subdued Bond.

Virginian Faces Trial on Charge of Murdering Wife.

Enters Court Smiling and Chewing Gum---Girl May Testify.

Chesterfield, Va., Aug. 21.—Standing calmly by the side of his father, Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., of Richmond, entered a plea of not guilty here today when arraigned in the circuit court on an indictment charging him with the murder of his young wife. He did not flinch as the clerk read the indictment, but stood with eyes lowered. The father sat with bowed head.

Counsel for the defense argued to have the arraignment postponed until Monday next, but the court denied the motion, together with a perfunctory motion to quash the indictment.

Filling Jury Box Rapidly.

Shortly after 11 o'clock a venire of talesmen was impanelled and the task of selecting a jury was begun.

Four of the first five men questioned were selected as jurymen.

Bareheaded, chewing gum and smiling, Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., swept up to the Chesterfield county courthouse in an automobile at 10 o'clock this morning to answer the charge that he killed his wife in a motor car on a turnpike near Richmond a month ago. Judge Walter A. Watson arrived shortly before the prisoner, to convene court.

Beattie's aged father had reached Chesterfield half an hour earlier. In court father and son sat side by side and exchanged whispers. Beattie also talked with his lawyers. The father

The Lloyd Brazileiro owns some fifty vessels and operates lines between New York and Brazilian ports. The New York agent of the company is A. R. Graca.

SECRETARY WILSON BLAMES DR. WILEY IN HIS TESTIMONY

APPARENTLY UNMOVED BY MURDER CHARGE

H. C. BEATTIE, JR.

Says He Proposes to "Have a Little Chat" With Doctor.

Denies Knowledge of the Hiring of Expert Rusby.

Admits Being Blamed, But Says Christ Was Criticized, Too.

Washington, Aug. 21.—Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, testifying today before the house investigating committee, severely criticized Dr. H. W. Wiley of the bureau of chemistry for his course in regard to pure food and drug work, and told in a more or less general way of the "family troubles" which led to the recommendations for Dr. Wiley's dismissal.

Secretary Wilson declared that Dr. Wiley, in his testimony before the committee, had withheld material matters in regard to the controversy over sulphur dioxide in fruit. He complained that Dr. Wiley did not come to him to discuss subjects about which he had talked freely to the investigating committee, and promised to have a little chat with the chief of the bureau of chemistry when he returned from a week's vacation.

No Insult to Chemist.

In appointing the pure food and drug inspection board and in the creation of the referee board, Secretary Wilson said he considered Dr. Wiley had been done a kindness rather than insulted as a chemist.

Secretary Wilson shifted all responsibility for the employment of Dr. H. H. Rusby to Dr. Wiley. He said that Dr. Wiley was without question the head of the bureau.

Asked about his object in creating a pure food and drug inspection board, the secretary said that he felt more power attached to a board decision than to a one-man decision.

Criticized Even Christ.

"There are people who criticize me," said the secretary. "Even the president of the United States is sometimes criticized, and if I remember correctly, there were those who shouted as the Savior passed by, 'Crucify him! Crucify him!' so I wanted a board."

The witness was asked why he appointed a "mixed board," consisting of two chemists, Dr. Wiley and Dr. Dunlap, and a lawyer, Solicitor McCabe.

"It may be that it was not necessary to have a lawyer on the board because of the prosecutions which must be passed upon by the board," said the secretary. "It may be that a farmer like me or you, Mr. Chairman, could take a case into court, but I don't believe we would do very well with it."

"Has it worked out very well?"

"I think you gentlemen have gone far into it enough to ascertain that the family has not been as happy as it might have been."

About "Our People."

The secretary was asked about his phrase in a letter touching the Indiana litigation over benzoate of soda, in which he referred to Solicitor McCabe and Dr. Dunlap as "our people on the board."

"You are pretty well aware that there was friction on the board," replied the secretary. "It would have been an insult to Dr. Wiley to consult him in regard to benzoate of soda."

"Why?" asked Representative Floyd of Arkansas.

"Because he despised it and everything in regard to it. He felt that his work was reflected on when we appointed the referee board to reconsider the benzoate of soda question, but it was not."

Secretary Wilson said he consulted freely with Dr. Wiley regarding appropriations for the bureau of chemistry, but in years like this he was likely to say to all bureaus: 'Now go a little slow with your estimates; this is a Democratic house.'"

McCabe Not to Blame.

He declared that he himself and not Solicitor McCabe was responsible for increasing the powers of the solicitor. He denied that in so doing he was getting back to the objectionable one-man power.

Dr. Wiley had testified that Secretary Wilson at first approved a salary of $2,000 for Dr. Rusby instead of $1,600.

"I don't remember anything about a $2,000 contract," said Secretary Wilson. "I don't say he didn't bring such a contract to me, for we are busy from morning to night."

He added that all he remembered about employing Dr. Rusby was that Wiley came to him with a statement that he had an arrangements to employ Rusby.

"I didn't know the details," said Secretary Wilson. "I had to depend upon my subordinates for that."

MICHIGAN OFFICIALS ARE STARTLED BY MINE REPORT

Engineer Finlay Says Only Nine Companies Are Paying.

Declares Future of Copper Workings Has Been Over-Estimated.

Lansing, Mich., Aug. 21.—In a report issued today, Prof. J. R Finlay, a New York engineer who has recently completed an appraisal of the valuation of Michigan mines for the state tax commission, presented figures relative to the great copper mining district that have caused consternation in official circles. Discussing the copper situation, Mr. Finlay stated:

"Only nine copper companies in Michigan made money during the last five years. If we could assume that these mines would last forever, the investor would probably be satisfied with 5 per cent income and he would probably capitalize their average earnings of $8,240,000 into a present value for the group of $164,800,000. The fact is that these mines are not worth even half of this amount, because their future life is not by any means perpetual.

"On the contrary, their future is much less promising than it is popularly supposed to be. These mines have shown unusual persistence in depth, but the limit in profitable working is now in most cases in plain sight. It must not be forgotten that the tonnage maintained now is three times as great as the mines have averaged in their fifty years of life."

Gives Mine Values.

The copper mines were valued by Mr. Finlay by counties, as follows:

Keweenaw, $16,700,000; Houghton, $58,815,000; Ontonagon, $200,000.

The iron counties: Gogebic, $41,560,000; Iron, $23,339,000; Dickinson, $11,508,000; Baraga, $335,000; Marquette, $42,743,000.

For the coal mines, the following valuation is fixed: Bay, $484,709; Saginaw, $350,924; Midland, $12,862; Tuscola, $3,500; Shiwassee, $9,750.

"These valuations are based substantially on past and present earnings," says Mr. Finlay in his report.

"During the last five years, profitable copper mines earned $50,937,960.27 over expenditures but I consider these earnings abnormal, being mainly due to the great boom of 1906 and 1907. The iron mines earned in five years $57,551,202 without the benefit of any abnormal prices."

The engineer estimates that the Marquette, Menominee and Gogebic iron ranges will produce 260,000,000 tons more of ore.

MORE CHARGES MADE BY FARR

Conspiracy to Defraud Lac du Flambeau Indians Alleged.

Washington, Aug. 21.—Joseph R. Farr, former general superintendent of logging in the Indian service in Minnesota, who recently sued Commissioner of Indian Affairs Robert G. Valentine for slander and libel, has filed with the senate and house committee on Indian affairs charges of misconduct in office against Valentine and C. F. Farr alleges that Valentine and Hauke have conspired with each other and with other persons for the perpetration of a fraud upon certain Indian allottees of the Lac du Flambeau reservation in Wisconsin.

REFUSED TO SEE DOCTOR

Bride of Two Weeks Contracts Diphtheria in Duluth and Dies.

Returned to Mother's Home When Landlady Insisted on Diagnosis.

While in Duluth on her wedding trip last week, Mrs. Stanley Harrison, a 19-year-old bride of less than two weeks, refused to call in a physician when taken sick in a Second street boarding house.

Informed that she could not remain in the house unless she had medical attention, she returned to the home of her mother in Aitkin, accompanied by her husband. Saturday she died, a doctor having been called in but a few hours before, according to a letter received today by Dr. L. J. Murphy of the health department from the Aitkin physician.

At the boarding house she complained of a sore throat. Fearing that she might have diphtheria, which the Aitkin physician said caused her death, the landlady told her that she would have to have a diagnosis. She said that the other boarders in the house had to be protected, and that if she did not do so she could not remain.

The health department official visited the boarding house this morning and were told that Mrs. Harrison had gone the same day, Wednesday. She apparently went straight to the home of her mother, who, the Aitkin letter says, lives there. She evidently remained firm in her refusal to have medical attention, and death followed. The inspector who went to the boarding house this morning said that the couple had purchased a ticket to Port Arthur, and had intended to continue their trip down Lake Superior. Further than that the local officials learned nothing of them, except that they had been married about a week and a half when they left here. The room which they occupied was fumigated to prevent the spread of the disease should any germs remain.

Centuries ago the hen learned the value of advertising, and she has cackled ever since.

SEVENTY-ONE ARE NOW IN LINE BEFORE LAND OFFICE

Not Enough Claims to Satisfy All in Indian Lands.

First Woman in Line a Widow, Who Will Turn Farmer.

At 9 o'clock tomorrow morning the opening of the Fond du Lac Indian reservation takes place at the local land office in the Federal building. The land line which has been waiting in front of the office since June 19 has been increased, until this noon there were seventy-one who want homesteads.

For eight weeks there were fifty-seven people in the line, but beginning Saturday evening a rush started, and fourteen have been added since that time. Most of those who waited in the line have camped on the tile corridors of the Federal building, and are well worn out from their long wait, and are breathing easier with the prospects of getting out tomorrow. The many employes in the building are also pleased that the time for filing has finally arrived, for while they have not been disturbed by the line, yet they have feared that with so many people living all the time in the building some disease might break out.

The amount of land to be thrown open for filing and settlement is 8,884.-39 acres, and is about enough for fifty filings. With over seventy prospective filers, some one is going to be without land, unless most of those applying are satisfied with taking less than the amount allowed under the homestead laws.

Many men came to the building this morning with the view of entering the land, but when they observed the number already ahead of them and the little land thrown open, they were discouraged, while some of them left for Cass Lake, where 82,220.08 acres are to be opened, and where the line is said to be very large.

First Man in Line.

Peter Marshall, a night watchman and engineer for the Duluth Tar company, residing at 832 South Seventy-second avenue west, is the first man in line, and at 9 o'clock sharp he will enter the office and make his filing. Mr. Marshall arrived at the Federal building at midnight on June 19, and has held the chair ever since. He has been relieved by his wife, who has spent much time there.

Mr. Marshall says he is going to make a fine farm out of the land which he has selected, and that he knows enough about farming to make a success of it. "I have never run a farm," he said, "but for the last seven years I have been studying farming, having subscribed for about ten magazines. I have read them thoroughly and know much about it. Moreover, I am a Scotchman, and, you know, Scotchmen make the best farmers in the world. Statistics show that. And then, my wife is quite a farmer. She comes from Sweden, where her parents have a big farm, on which she was raised. So whatever I don't know about farming my wife does."

William Johnson, who holds down the fourth seat has selected a quarter section, which he says is well timbered. He claims to know something about farming, but he will not do all the work himself. He is going to send for his parents, who live in Sweden, and the whole family will start in the agricultural business.

First Woman.

The first woman in the line is Mrs. Edith Woods, a widow, who lives in Brookston. She wants the land for herself, and will farm it, she says. According to her story she knows much about agricultural work.

"I am going to farm the land myself,' she stated this morning. 'I have been all over the land up there and have several selections already if the first choice is taken. I am number 23 in line and everybody is joking about my chances of getting any good land, but I think there will be lots of good land left when I get there. The fact that I have an old time hoodoo number is not going to affect my chances any."

Y. W. Rock, of Poupore, is holding number 29 down, and he claims to have some good lands in view. He was one of those who formed the first line which was broken up following a report from Washington that the land opening would not take place for several months.

Mr. Rock is farming now, having ten acres at Poupore, upon which he says he has had big crops this year. "Next summer I will have over twenty acres under cultivation,' he said this morning. "Just as soon as I get through filing I am going out on my land and start work on it and I am going to clear up twenty acres or more so that I can plant there next year. I am going to make Duluth my market place, too, and you will see me here with lots of green stuff then. This country is fine for agricultural purposes and I have proved that to my own satisfaction on the land where I am now living."

Fred Steffens who is numbered thirty-one in the line, has been away a good deal of the time, leaving his wife to care for the place. He is living on a farm near Brookston, where he has eighty acres under cultivation. Mrs. Steffens claims they are good farmers, and that with the addition of 160 acres which they are going to file on, they will be in a position to help flood the Duluth market next year.

Could Not Sell Seat.

Steffens had his seat on sale for a while about three weeks ago, but as no one cared to purchase it, he held on to it and has declared his intention of getting some fine land. While in the line, he attracted considerable attention to himself by his ability to do needle work, and the women in the line say that he is as skillful at the work as any woman could be. He would crochet and embroider, and sew fancy pieces with the dexterity and cleverness of an old woman who had done it all her life,, and turn out excellent work.

The question of filing has been bothering many who intend to take up land. The first man in will be credited with having filed at 9 o'clock, and he will be through with his filing within one minute. It is expected by the officials that it will not require more than one minute per applicant, or at the most, the work will be through within two and one-half hours.

Besides filing, the land is open for settlement, and it is said that about fifty men are already on the ground ready to step upon the land which is to be opened. When they have settled, they will come to the local office to contest the claims of the filers.

WEATHER—Generally fair tonight and Tuesday; cooler tonight; moderate to brisk westerly winds.

ST. LOUIS RIVER STILL A FAVORITE WITH FISHERMEN

A STRING OF BEAUTIES IN AN AFTERNOON'S CATCH.

This is a picture of a party of West Duluthians on their return from a day's fishing trip up the St. Louis river a few days ago.

Never before has there been any better fishing up the river than there has been this season. Last year, fishing was poor and the followers of Ike Walton predicted that the river had outlived its usefulness as a fishing stream.

"They are still pulling nice ones out of the old fishing holes along the river," said a West Duluth angler yesterday, "and the season seems to run longer this year than ever before. Usually about this of the year, the fish refuse to bite and ordinarily the season is over long before this."

LEFT HORSE AND TOOK STREET CAR

Family Bound for Thomson Deserted Rig When Storm Threatened.

If the police were able to locate the man who hired a horse and rig from a local livery, drove part way to Thomson, turned back because of a threatening thunderstorm and finally deserted the horse and rig, taking a streetcar uptown, an example would be made of him.

"It is nothing short of horse stealing," said a West Duluth police officer this morning, "and if we knew who the man was he probably would not get off very easy."

A man and his wife and three children applied to a West Duluth livery concern yesterday for a horse and rig to take him to Thomson, where his family expected to camp for a few days. He said that he expected to bring the rig back that evening.

The horse and rig was found tied up near the Northern Pacific tracks. The police were notified and turned the outfit over to the livery people. It is said that people answering to the description of the family that hired the rig were seen to take a Grand avenue streetcar bound for uptown late yesterday afternoon.

HANNOT DENIES GUILT.

Former Patrolman and Ex-Saloon-Keeper Plead Not Guilty to Assault.

Hannot is a former member of the West Duluth police force. He resigned as patrolman to engage in the saloon business but recently he sold out his interest. About two weeks ago, he is alleged to have struck English. The latter had a warrant sworn out, but the police were unable to find Hannot until Saturday.

The funeral will take place Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Swedish Finnish Baptist church, Fifty-third avenue west and Wadena street, with burial in Oneota cemetery.

REPORT OF BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS

Fund for Year's Work on Streets Is Running Low.

The report of the board of public works for —uly shows it was an unusually heavy month, $14,192.95 having been expended. The largest single expense was for repairing streets, which cost $6,146.93. The cleaning expense was $2,051.25 and the miscellaneous expense totaled $2,483.49.

Thus far this year the board has spent $66,876,86, while the total amount available for the year is $93,132.74. This leaves a balance of $26,255.88, or not much more than $5,000 per month for the remaining five months.

Up to Aug. 1, the amount charged against the permanent improvement revolving fund which had not been paid was $96,622.94, while $29,992.07 is charged against the street intersection and storm sewer fund.

TREES OF AGATE AND TOPAZ.

The petrified trees in Arizona that are of red moss agate and amethyst and smoky topaz and agate are nearly or entirely transparent and so beautifully preserved that all the veins and even the bark can be plainly seen. The hardened dewdrops of this enchanted wood, says the Raja Yoga Messenger, are purple and amethyst and topaz crystals, such as one traveler found in the heart of an ancient king of the forest.

In an outlying part of the forest are different logs. They are perfectly opaque and tinted in soft browns and grays. They are partly covered by a great deposit of limestone and strange bluish clay, whose depth shows how many millions of years they have been there.

The most striking part of the forest is called Chalcedony park. Here is the greatest number of petrified trees found in any one place in the world. One of them has fallen across a deep canon fifty feet wide, thus forming the only bridge of solid agate in existence.

The wood of these trees makes beautiful ornaments when polished, but it is so hard to cut that even modern methods find it extremely difficult to saw through it.

DIVORCED.

Los Angeles Times: J. Pierpont Morgan, at one of the dinners marking the recent session of the Church Congress in Cincinnati, deplored the too common separation of religion and business.

"Too many employers," Mr. Morgan said, "are like John Nicholson. Nicholson advertised for a porter and one of the applicants said to him:

"'I think I'd suit, sir. I have a recommendation here from my clergyman that——'

"'That recommendation,' John Nicholson interrupted, 'is all very good as far as it goes. As I shan't need you on Sundays, however, I'd prefer a reference from somebody who can vouch for you during the week.'"

WOMAN'S REALM.

As interesting as any of the other races held this year at the Duluth Boat club were the ladies' sailing races held there Saturday afternoon. Each sail boat entered in the race had a "skipperess" and the boats were watched with interest in their progress about the course.

Miss Alice Moran sailing the Frolic of the 18-foot class won first place and Mrs. Wagner in the Edola was second.

In the 22-foot club boat race Miss Nora Harrison sailing the Sylph came in first.

Mrs. James Gardner in charge of The Feather won the 28-foot class race with the Scud coming in second.

In division "B" the Merry Widow with Miss Ruth Carr at the helm was first and Miss Marguerite MacGregor in the Zephyr took second. The others in this race finished as follows: Voyaguer, Miss Doris Hare, third; Viking, Miss Ethelwynn Phillips, fourth; North Wind, Miss Wilhelmina Fitger, fifth; Aguindie, Mrs Le Strange, sixth.

After the ladies' races a deciding race was sailed between the Merry Widow and the Zephyr, these two boats having been tied in the first series of races this season. The Zephyr sailed by Phil Holgate, won by 30 seconds over the Merry Widow with Harris Trux as skipper. It was a most exciting race as the two boats changed the lead several times and were nearly even all of the way.

THE EVENING STORY

THE WOOING OF WIDOW MUNSON

By Malcolm Murray.

Rudolph Munson, who, according to his mother, Widow Munson, was the finest lad in that part of the country, but who had given a different impression on his virtues to some others living near them, was pleading hard with Farmer Hempton—pleading, withal, for the hand of the farmer's pretty daughter, Marguerite. And knowing that the heart was already his, Rudolph made exceeding bold.

"I'm not so poor, not so unseemly in my looks, farmer," he said. "I've a farm as big as yours, and the finest mother in the country. What more could a father want for his daughter?"

Farmer Hempton, who stood in his shirt sleeves at his kitchen door, did not allow this young scapegoat of a lad to enter his house.

"If you were big enough," he announced, looking the unembarrassed lover up and down, "I'd give you a mighty good licking! You ought not even to know my Marguerite!"

"But I do!"

"Ay, that's so, and she'll be sorry of it."

"You'll never blame her?"

"Won't I just! And for your farm, young man, it's the most barren—"

"You're not rich enough or handsome enough," exclaimed Hempton, "and mark my words now, you're not good enough for my Marguerite."

"My mother says I am," put in young Rudolph. Hempton looked up in a flash.

"Oh, the Widow Munson!" he said, an infinite scorn in his tone.

"Well," cried Rudolph, "and what's the matter with the Widow Munson? I'd be beholden to you, Mister Hempton, for the information." he farmer spread out his large hands expressively.

"She's the fussiest, busiest, most deceitful old body in the country!"

Rudolph snickered. "She's the bonniest, prettiest mother a lad ever had to kiss him goodnight!"

"Pretty!" gasped the farmer. "She's fifty—"

"Forty!" replied the youth. "Now come, Mister Hempton, you know she's the only body in these parts who has ever got the better of you. She runs the farm better than yours, she could get more milk out of a motor car than you could out of all your cows, and she fairly beat you over that field of Donald's."

"You young scamp! You young—" But his wrath got the better of him. It was well known that the Widow Munson had long shown Hempton how a prosperous farm ought to be run. When he spoke again it as in burst of dismissal. "Bet you off, my lad," he cried, "before I kick you home to that fine mother of yours! And, if I find you hanging round Marguerite, I'll murder the very shadow of you!"

So it was that Master Rudolph, fairly bursting with his story, took himself and his troubles back to his mother. As ever she received him with sympathy.

"You want to marry Marguerite, Rudolph?" she said.

"Yes, and the old man would not hear of it. He's heard wicked, untrue tales of your poor boy, mother." The widow raised her eyebrows shrewdly.

"If he's only heard true ones it's quite enough," she said. "But, I do not like the man refusing a Munson for his daughter."

"It's certainly inconsiderate of you, mother, Rudolph murmured. The widow rose and went to the door where her coat hung.

"What are you going to do?"

"I'm going to see Hempton," the widow announced, taking a hat from a cupboard. "I'm a woman of action, sonny. I wish you were, but you're not." The widow's eyes sparkled, which, by the way, became her mightily. "Yes," she said, opening the door, "Mister Hempton'll be very sorry that he refused Widow Munson's son!"

The farmer himself received the widow, or perhaps, as is more exact, he opened the door; and Mrs. Munson entered. The man stood back abashed as she sat herself calmly in his favorite chair. He knew to what and to whom he owed this visit, but the widow was mightily attractive as she sat there, watching him with amused, twinkling eyes.

"Ugh! You cruel, heartless monster, Mister Hempton!" she exclaimed. "You thought nothing of sending my poor boy to a suicide's grave. So you turned up your fine nose at Rudolph Munson?" she continued.

"Did you think I'd have a wicked, evil looking young—young rascal for my daughter?"

"He's a good enough boy," the widow returned. "I remember you as a young man, Mister Hempton. I remember the night at Farmer Harris' party when the lamps went out, and some one kissed some one else so loud, and, if you wish my mind of it, so clumsily, that even—"

"Heavens, woman, tell me what you've come for?" gasped the farmer. "I've come to arrange for my lad to marry your daughter."

"He won't."

"Oh, yes, he will!"

"I tell you he won't!" Widow Munson held up her hands in mock surprise.

"And you a man who was married for ten years, farmer, and you don't know that when a woman says a thing it will happen—well, it does happen."

The farmer held open the door. "I wish you'd go."

"You don't like me?" she laughed. The laugh brought the pink to her cheeks, and the farmer caught his breath. Women, especially widows, he reflected, were very dangerous creatures

"You're doing no good," Mrs. Munson," he said. The widow rose with a sigh. "And Rudolph's not such a poor match, I'm thinking," she said gently, as though to herself.

"Eh?" put in Hempton quickly. This was talking; this was more to the point. The widow was quite unconcerned.

"Well, he's got the farm and a good mother," she hesitated; and then: "And, of course, there was his uncle, Ken, who died in Africa."

"His uncle?" asked Hempton quickly.

"Yes; you see, Rudolph and I have kept it quiet. The lad did not wish to get a girl who cared more for his money than himself." The farmer shut the door.

"His money?" he inquired.

"Yes; just a couple of thousand." It was the widow's turn to open the door, and on the threshold she turned. "I'm sorry you cannot agree to the children making a match of it." But good night, Mister Hempton." The man smiled rather sheepishly.

"Good night, Widow Munson," she said.

From that day Mr. Hempton obviously softened towards the reprobate Rudolph; but he was too proud to have him in his house, or give consent.

The widow came to see him five or six times, and it was hard to refuse her. But he could not bring himself to give in to a woman.

Matters were brought to a head by his daughter's weeping announcement that Widow Munson had forbidden her son to continue the engagement any longer. It seemed that she had grown tired, and that meant an end of it.

"She's never said that?" asked Hempton.

"Yes, and now there's no one to help us!" cried Marguerite. "You're a pair of cruel old wretches!" The farmer was worried, not so much at the thought of his daughter's bleeding heart as Rudolph's thousands. He took his daughter's hand, and patted it gently.

"Never you mind, girlie," she said, "you shall be married despite the old woman." The girl cried aloud in her surprise. So Farmer Hempton sent for Rudolph to consult within.

"I'm doing it just to spite the widow, mind ye," said the farmer when the astonished Rudolph had arrived. "But you two children must get married!"

"We've your permission?" gasped the prospective bridegroom.

"On one condition."

"What?"

"It's to be a secret wedding now," he replied. "If you keep it secret from the widow. I'll help you and see no harm comes to you. Ah, that woman will be just mad!"

Rudolph evidently shared his opinion with the farmer, and hesitated in his reply. But he remembered his mother's advice about getting married first, and then worrying. He held out his hand to the farmer.

"It's a bargain!" he said, and that day week Farmer Hempton was a father-in-law.

Rudolph was sent home to inform the widow of the news, while the farmer awaited in anticipation of her glorious wrath. She was rather more startled than otherwise, and went straight to see Hempton. He met her alone in the kitchen. Very pale, and, for her, wondrously nervous, she made her confession.

"Mister Hempton," she said, "I have ben a very wicked woman."

"Wicked?" asked the farmer, puzzled.

"Yes. I have deceived you most wickedly," she said, coming out with her confession in a rush. "I told you that Rudolph had been left a heap of money. It was not true."

"Not true!"

"No," she rushed on. "I did it to make you agree. I thought that you would do it for the money."

The farmer colored deeply, and for a moment there was an awkward silence. Then in a low voice, he said:

"And I did so, you think?"

"No, no!" she exclaimed. "I have been a very wicked woman. Alan stepped up to her.

"Do you know why I did it?" he asked, almost roughly.

"No." Her eyes were frightened, but bright.

"So that I could be related to you."

"To me! But I don't understand."

"Don't you!" he cried, and took her in his arms. And then a little later, the Widow Munson said, looking up into his eyes:

"I think I understand now, dear."

"You ought to," he laughed. "My word, but a widow's a very dangerous thing, I'm thinking!"

"Here's Bunker Hill where British bluff
Once met a Yankee 'call',
Give me enough
Of this fine stuff,
And I can lick them all."

Long Engagements

By FRANCES WILEY.

These are most certainly, if possible, to be avoided, especially if the young people live in the same place. Indeed, it is well to consider it a rule that no man should propose to a girl unless he has a definite prospect of offering her a home in about a year. Long, aimless, indefinite engagements generally end in one or both thinking they have made a mistake, dragging on from an idea of honor, and marrying when they do with no capital of love with which to pay the claims of married life. If not this, there is a broken engagement, the best years of a girl's life wasted, or a man embittered against all women. So, with rare exceptions, though there may be an understanding, there should not be a binding engagement entered into without a reasonable early prospect of marriage.

• • •

The girl who cannot make up her mind is a trouble to herself, a terror to her parents, and fearful trial to her lover!

She blows hotter and colder than any spring day. One moment she almost loves—the next she is supremely indifferent.

The girl who doesn't know her own mind needs driving with a firm hand on the reins. Once give way to her whims, and she will be more at sea than ever. She must be taught that "yes" means "yes," and "no," means "no," and that both carry inevitable consequences for joy or ill.

No half measures will do with the wavering damsel—she must be mastered, since she cannot master herself.

Can Double Chins Be Cured?

By CONSTANCE CARRUTHERS.

In answer to the above question, I would say "Yes." It is possible that a double chin will never regain its normal size, but with careful and regular attention, you will begin to see a slight improvement in possibly as soon as a week.

It will be a month or two, however, before you can expect to find marked signs of the disappearance of the superfluous flesh.

In the first place, a person with a double chin should never wear high collars. They are not only bad for promoting this unsightly affliction, but they are ruinous to the texture of the skin, and often result in making two nasty dark rings around the neck which are almost impossible to remove.

Secondly, never sleep on a high pillow. To do so strains the muscles of the neck, and is often the primary cause of double chins. Learn gradually to do without a pillow at all. First use a lower one than you are accustomed to at present, and then a lower one still, till by and by you will never feel comfortable unless you are without one altogether.

In the next place you will have to regulate your diet, and practically avoid all articles of food that contain a great quantity of starch and sugar.

Perhaps the most important cure of all is massage, and this should be done regularly at least once every day. For the purpose, first of all bathe your neck and chin in hot water, then follow the hot with a cold douche. Use a spray if you have one. Next, dry the skin thoroughly and then go and busy yourself with something, or take up your novel for, say, a quarter of an hour.

Then massage with some good cold cream. Doing this every day will prove very beneficial.

How and When to Propose

By VIRGINIA HARLAN.

Men, as a sex, are lamentably lacking in a sense of the dramatic. It is for this reason that they so often propose in preposterous situations, and at the most unpropitious moments, and get refused right off the reel sometimes, when, had they but exercised a little tact and discretion, the fair one would have gladly listened to their suit.

A girl wants the stage to be set in seemly fashion for the most thrilling moment of her life, and she herself fittingly costumed for the part of the beauteous heroine.

It isn't fair—or wise—to disappoint her, and the foolish gallant who does so deserves "No" for his pains.

Imagine the utter folly of expecting a favorable reply to a proposal made through the window of a railway carriage, with an endless stream of travelers up and down the corridor! Or "Yes" to be murmured to a plea made in an open teashop! Yet both these places have been selected by swains of whom all one can say is that their ardor outweighed any sense of the fitness of things that they might possess.

Some wise person once remarked that the right place to propose in was a place where one could kiss the lady as she said "Yes," and kiss her into saying it if at first she said "No." Suggestion is one of absolute good sense.

Don't select a cozy corner off a ballroom, for all that this is so popular a scene with novelists. Cozy corners are too much sought after, and an interruption at the crucial moment is fatal.

A woodland walk is much better, or, if she has no inconvenient small brothers, her own fireside is not to be despised. And don't take the adored one by surprise. Let her have a very shrewd idea what question you are about to ask beforehand. It's the unprepared girl who sometimes says "No."

Mankind's Pet Belief

By MARGARET WATTS DE PEYSTER.

Men have a positively touching belief in the lasting qualities of a woman's love! At least, it would be touching if it did not cause them sometimes to trade upon it to a lamentable extent, and thereby inflict unhappiness on the heart they fatuously imagine to be still adoring them.

Every lover knows that he must exert every effort, and by every means in his power glorify himself in the eyes of the beloved, if the selfsame beauteous orbs are to smile upon him. Once she has capitulated, however, Milord—of course, only in some instances!—is prone to rest very much on his laurels, and, indeed, to assume much the attitude of one who graciously permits himself to be worshiped.

Now, a woman's love, quite as much as man's, needs to be worked for if it is to be retained. True, she is more constant by nature, more patient, and infinitely more given to covering the clay feet of her idol with rose leaves when she discovers they are clay, than is man. Nevertheless, in time her love will perish on a starvation diet, even as his. Therefore, let every man look to it that he does not lose the treasure he has secured.

There is an ancient story to this effect. A wife complained to her husband that he no longer paid her the attentions that had sweetened their engagement, whereat, with a cheerful grin, the wretch responded: "My dear, we do not keep on running once we have caught the train!"

A man like that positively deserves to lose a woman's love.

No sensible girl expects her lover or husband to be continually making passionate love to her, but she can, and ever will, demand that he does a certain amount of "running," even after she has conferred the priceless treasure of herself upon him.

Management of the Hands

By MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

The management of the hands in company seems to embarrass young people greatly. This comes from the false modesty, or mauvaise honte, which induces them to suppose that they are observed of all observers. Let them think only of themselves in due proportion of estimate with the vast multitude of mankind and frequent habitually the company of the refined, and they will probably overcome much of their awkwardness, if they do not acquire a large degree of grace.

We should be particular to avoid the habit of fumbling with anything. There are people who must always have something to hold.

I have known very distinguished men who seemed nervous unless they could have a book or a pencil or a piece of paper to hold them conversing.

One very prominent man, widely known and much respected, can never sit still. In church he is a study in perpetual motion; beginning by sitting up straight in the pew, he ends by sinking into a heap before the sermon is over, and in a lady's drawing room he fidgets and fusses and moves about that he not only disturbs his hostess, but often breaks a fragile chair.

"Do for pity's sake manage to give Dr. ——— a substantial chair when ever he calls here!"

THE HOUSEHOLD

To hang a picture at just the right height is generally a difficult matter unless one has patience. Now an easy way to do it is to take a long wire, make one end into a loop and place it on the hook on the moulding, then pass the wire down the wall through one screw eye in the picture, along the back of the picture frame, through the other screw eye and then up to a second hook on the moulding, where a loop similar to the first should be made in the wire. After making the second loop, but before cutting the wire, it is easy to adjust the picture evenly and at the desired height.

Kerosene or coal oil is a valuable aid in cleaning house if used with discretion. A little oil put in a pail of water when cleaning windows or paint will not only remove the dirt easily, but will also leave the glass or wood shining. In the cleaning of an enameled bath tub a little coal oil will give a satisfactory result without the exertion of hard rubbing. Many stains will yield to coal oil, such as rust or fresh paint. A little oil in starch will keep it from sticking.

Put a window shade in front of your pantry shelves if they are unprotected by doors. It will keep out the dust much better than a curtain on a rod. The shade should have a spring roller and be hung just as it would be at a window.

One way to clean rugs in the spring is to hang them on the clothes line and wash them thoroughly with the garden hose. They should be dried flat on the grass, as they will pull out of shape if left on the line. If you object to washing them, try brushing them with a whisk broom dipped in gasoline, after they have been beaten. Be sure to do this outdoors.

The Boudoir

To Whiten Face and Hands.

The following is a receipt for cucumber cream, one of the best creams known for whitening the hands and face:

Wash and cut up a cucumber and put with it a teaspoonful of water. Heat this slowly, and bring to boiling point, simmering till the mass is pulpy. Put half an ounce each of spermaceti and white wax into a stone jar, and set it in a pan of hot water, and as they melt gradually add two ounces of almond oil.

Then remove the jar from the pan and gradually add an ounce of the cucumber juice, beating it slowly. Very good cucumber cream can be obtained from any druggist if you do not want the trouble of making your own.

Apply a little of the cream to your face and hands after washing them in warm water and after letting it remain on for ten minutes, wipe off, and rinse your face in cold water.

Weak Ankles.

A person who suffers from weak ankles should have shoes made specially for them, so that they will support the ankles properly. Try to strengthen the joints by simple exercises, such as standing on the balls of the feet and swaying backwards and forwards, without bending the body, but keeping perfectly stiff and letting the ankles act as a pivot. The ankle should be constantly bathed in cold water to which some salt has been added, as this is very strengthening.

FRENCH IS ENTHUSIAST

Former Minnesota Commissioner Brought Big Convention to Duluth.

Out of Office, But Has Not Lost Interest in Pure Food Work.

Andrew French, former state dairy and food commissioner, is one of the interested attendants at the pure food convention. He is here not strictly in the sense of one of the active workers, but from a deep and vital interest in the work of food progression. He is also here because he is one of the men who worked hard to bring the present convention to Duluth.

At New Orleans last November Mr. French spoke warmly in favor of having the next convention held in Duluth. His efforts in behalf of this city were so successful that the convention was secured. It is natural that Mr. French should be very much interested in the convention that he helped to secure.

"Conventions in the interest of pure food do a lot of good," said Mr. French today. "They do a great deal of good to the delegates, for they are the means of exchanging ideas along the latest line of scientific investigation. They also do great good in interesting the public, and it is the interest of the public that counts in most questions.

"There has been progression both

ANDREW FRENCH,
Former Dairy and Food Commissioner of Minnesota, Who Was Largely Responsible for Bringing the Convention to Duluth.

upon the part of the men in the national government pure food work and the men in the various state departments. The public has been informed correctly and scientifically in the matter of the best kind of foods and the pure and impure foods. The work of the men in the national and state departments has resulted in letting the general public know what kind of food it is buying. The public generally can now trust to the labels, for the activity of the department officials has resulted in the correct labels being used.

"I believe that the people buying foods, which means the public, the housewife and the man at the head of his home, have become aroused to greater discrimination, and are investigating the class of goods they purchase. This is the right method, for once the public demands that the food it eats be pure, and backs up this insistence with intelligent discrimination, the public will get what it demands.

"Good work is being done in the different state departments. A convention brings the heads of the different state departments together, and an interchange of ideas that is going to help the national movement along is the result. Progress is being made and will continue to be made. Better and purer food will be the result."

UNDESIRABLES GET STIFF FINES

Two men whom the police suspected of living from the earnings of prostitutes were arrested early yesterday morning on a charge of visiting a house of ill fame. They gave their names as George Smith and George Duby. The former gave his occupation as a bartender and the latter as an entertainer. Smith forfeited $100 bail when his name was called in police court today and Duby paid a fine of $100. The police state that such men will not be tolerated about any of the resorts. If sufficient evidence can be secured they will be prosecuted under the white slave statute, conviction under which means a term in the penitentiary. Otherwise they will be arrested under the ordinance for visiting the places. It is said that they are liable to be given straight jail sentences if any more are convicted under the ordinance.

TREMENDOUS PRESSURE ON PURE FOOD WORKERS

"Interests" Constantly at Work, Says J. Q. Emery of Wisconsin.

Says Dr. Wiley Is Already Vindicated in Eyes of the Public.

"A tremendous pressure is being brought to bear on the pure food men in the public employ by the special interests. I am told that before this convention assembled men were sent about the country interviewing the leading pure food men in the public employ. Who is paying for this?"—J. Q. Emery, dairy and food commissioner for Wisconsin.

C. F. McKINLEY,
Attorney for Illinois Commission.

J. Q. Emery, dairy and food commissioner of Wisconsin, is an ardent Wiley advocate. Furthermore, he wants to see the present session of the national pure food association go on record emphatically in support of the doctor. Mr. Emery indicated the stand he would take on the subject of the Wiley controversy this morning, and he is very emphatic in his conversation on the subject.

"There is no doubt in my mind but that Dr. Wiley is already vindicated, and correctly so, in the minds of the American people," said Mr. Emery. "If I am not a poor judge of public opinion, those who have opposed Dr. Wiley are now held up to scorn by almost the entire public, and Wiley is regarded as one of the ablest and squarest food men in the country. The subject of the recent investigation, a mere administrative detail, has been gone into thoroughly and Dr. Wiley has thoroughly justified himself by showing that his act was necessary and justified by precedent in the department.

"The pressure which is being brought to bear throughout the country on the pure food men in the public service, is the cause of all this commotion. It is continuous, and it is in some places having its effect. I am told that before this convention assembled, men were sent about the country interviewing the leading pure food men in the public employ. I have seen letters sent to them. Who is paying for this? That is the question.

"If you will keep your eyes open you will see the effect of this tremendous pressure being brought to bear on this very convention. You will see its effects everywhere."

"Do you think the Wiley resolution tabling discussion on the subject was a result of this pressure?" Mr. Emery was asked.

"Oh, that's a matter of opinion. For myself, I haven't much doubt about it" replied Mr. Emery, "it is the big factor in pure food work today. It is the cause of the dissension which has marked the work of the association at every meeting for the past three sessions. The special interests have had their wires working and working well at every session."

COMBINE WORK OF DEPARTMENTS

State Labor Commissioner Wants to Work With Food Men.

With the view of co-operation with the state food and dairy commission, William F. Houck, state commissioner of labor, and John P. Gardiner, are in the city attending the national convention of food and dairy executives.

Mr. Houck believes that the food and dairy commission could carry out the part of the work required by his department at the time the dairy commissioners are doing their work, and so save the state much expense. The food and dairy commission is expected to inspect the various creameries of the state in regard to sanitation, and the commissioner of labor is expected to inspect the creameries in regard to the safety of the machinery.

By co-operation between the two departments, Mr. Houck contends, the food and dairy commission could inspect the machinery at the same time that it attends to its regular work, and so a big item could be saved, for it requires much money to make the trips through the country.

MONEY COMMISSION TO DISSOLVE MARCH 31.

Washington, Aug. 21.—The national monetary commission will close its work March 31. The senate today accepted the house amendments to the senate measure and the bill was then ready for the president's signature.

Before entering upon preparation of its final report the commission will give financial and business interests an opportunity to be further heard. The hearing will begin in October and probably will be held in various cities.

TWO MINORITY REPORTS ON ARBITRATION PACTS.

Washington, Aug. 21.—Two minority reports on the arbitration treaties with Great Britain and France were presented at today's executive session of the senate. One by Senators Cullom and Root, defended the treaties against the contention that they deprive the senate of any of its rights, but recommended a declaration saving the Monroe doctrine and other purely national questions from the operation of the treaty.

Senator Burton presented a report urging ratification of the treaties unamended.

First Fair to Be Held This Year—Todd County to Exhibit.

Staples, Minn., Aug. 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—The first annual county fair of Morrison county will be held at Motley Sept. 14, 15 and 16. All counties which border on Morrison county may exhibit at the county fair. Premiums will be offered for the best horses, cattle, sheep, poultry, field crops, horticulture, vegetables, cooking, needlework, drawing, painting, pyrography, brass work, china painting, etc. Full information for entering exhibits can be secured from E. F. Jacobs of Motley.

Officers of the association are: M. M. Merrill, president; V. Lockwood, vice president; E. G. Haymaker, treasurer; E. F. Jacobs, secretary; directors, W. N. Morey, C. A. Montgomery, S. W. Jacobs of Motley, I. W. Bouck, F. B. Logan of Royalton, R. Bergstrom of Lincoln, H. Nelson of Pillager.

A 10-acre tract of natural timber has been secured by the association for the fair grounds. This tract will not be cleared in time for this year's fair, but when completed will give one of the finest exhibit grounds in this section of the state. The baseball park is being prepared this year for the occupancy of the tents for exhibits. The Hennepin Lumber company is donating the lumber for inclosing the grounds. All the business men of the town have donated all the way from $25 to $75 towards financing the enterprise and also expect to have private booths at the fair, where they will have private exhibits of their own products and products of the firms they represent.

Todd county will probably have a large and fine exhibit at the fair.

DULUTH MAN A WITNESS

Will Testify at the Trial of the McNamara Brothers.

Recognized John McGraw in Duluth on July 30, 1910.

A Duluth witness may play an important part in one of the greatest criminal trials that has ever been held in this country.

The Duluth man in question has received notice that he will be called as a witness in the case of the people against the McNamaras and McManigal. He is going to be called because he recognized John McGraw, one of the members of the alleged gang of dynamiters, whose sensational arrest at Indianapolis and trip across the country to California, has been one of the biggest events in latter day criminal history.

McGraw came to this city July 30, 1910, according to the letter written to the Duluth man by the California legal department authorities. He registered at one of the Duluth hotels. The man who will likely be called as one of the witnesses in the prosecution of the members of the gang, happened to see McGraw. When shown one of the pictures of the man implicated in the operations of the gang, he identified it as the man he had seen in Duluth.

McGraw was here for several days. By the detectives of the Burns' agency and also by the authorities of the state of California, it is believed that some of the work of dynamiting, some of the outrages that have been charged against the members of the gang in other parts of the country, were to have been perpetrated here.

Detectives have been in Duluth investigating just what McGraw and what any members of the gang who may have accompanied here, did in Duluth, or intended to do. It may be that the authorities have something against McGraw, in connection with his visit here, and want the testimony of the Duluth man to prove that McGraw was in Duluth.

In the August number of a current magazine there is a story dealing with some dynamiting at Superior. It is believed, or charged, that the McNamara gang was connected with this. It is very likely that McGraw was here on the mission spoken of in the magazine article, and it is also quite likely that the testimony of the Duluth man is wanted to prove further the chain of evidence that the authorities may have woven in connection with the operation of the famous gang at the Head of the Lakes.

The Duluth man was loath to have his name published as he said he feared annoyance at the hands of friends of the accused.

OBITUARY

SUPERIOR

BATHER STRICKEN WITH HEAT; DIES

South Range Boy Drops Dead While Wading in Lyman Lake Sunday.

Wesley Jones, 18-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Jones of South Range, dropped dead of heart failure yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock while in bathing with a crowd of young people at Lyman lake. He was wading in the water and attempted to push a boat away from the bank when he fell, face down in the water.

He was soon picked up, but was dead. It was first thought that he was drowned, but he had not been in the water long enough. The most probable theory of his death is that he died of heart trouble, superinduced by the heat. The body was taken to the Le Sage undertaking rooms.

The boy's father was at Hibbing, Minn., but was notified and will come to Superior today to make the arrangements for the funeral.

OUTLINE NEW COURSE.

Normal School Regents Provide Substitute for University.

The board of normal school regents of Wisconsin have outlined a new college course which will be introduced at the Superior normal school this fall. The advantages of the normal school college course over the university are that the college is brought nearer to the people and that the cost is considerably less. It also means a personal acquaintance and personal assistance with the teachers, which can only be obtained in a small school. The entrance requirements are the same as at the state university.

The course for the first two years has been outlined as follows:

Freshman Year.

The work of the freshman year consists of thirty unit hours, which means three recitations a day, each to consist of fifty minutes of work. Ten hours of English and ten hours of foreign language will be required. The remaining ten hours will be selected from the following groups:

Mathematics—Algebra, five hours; trigonometry, three hours; analytical geometry, two hours.

Science—Biology, five or ten hours; chemistry, ten hours; geology, five hours; physics, ten hours.

History—Ancient history, five hours; medieval history, five hours; English history, five hours.

Sophomore Year.

During the second year ten hours of the foreign languages will be required, and the electives will be selected from the following:

English, science, mathematics, history, economics and political science.

PAVING MUST BE RIGHT OR OWNERS WILL NOT PAY.

Unless the city of Superior sees to it that the specifications of the Belknap street paving job are lived up to the propery owners will refuse to pay the assessments.

Notice to this effect was today sent to the city engineer. He will probably refer it to the council at its meeting tomorrow evening.

Saturday the property owners sent a communication to the city engineer stating that the specifications of the Belknap street job were not being lived up to.

WORK PROGRESSES ON NEW SANITARIUM.

Excavation work for the Douglas county tubercular sanitarium has been finished and within a few days, the framework will be in full swing. Schachte & Hoffman are the supervising contractors, while Stack Bros. have charge of the installation of the plumbing. The new sanitarium is being erected near the county asylum at Parkland.

Dies in Oklahoma.

Word has been received in Superior of the death of Mrs. William Gage, a former resident, at her home in Harris, Okla. Mrs. Gage lived in Superior for a number of years, her husband being connected with the woolen mills here in the early days. Burial was made at her home in Ohio.

Hurt in Runaway.

In a runaway accident Saturday afternoon, Mrs. A. Johnson was thrown out of a farm wagon and onto the pavement on Tower avenue between Broadway and Eleventh streets. She was picked up and taken to a nearby drug store, where medical aid was administered. While painful, her injuries are not of a serious nature.

Old Resident Dies.

Mrs. Emma DeLong, 75 years old, and a resident of Superior for the past twenty-one years, died yesterday afternoon at the family residence, 1420 John avenue, following a long illness. She was the widow of the Late W. C. DeLong, who formerly conducted a hardware business on Tower avenue. She is survived by four children, Charles DeLong of Minneapolis, Edward DeLong of Minneapolis, Mrs. J. W. Osborne of Ely, Minn., and Mrs. G. W. Milligan of Superior. The body will be taken to Warren, Ill., tomorrow for interment.

Be sure you get the genuine—there's only one Daven-o on the market, and that is sold at The Bayha Store exclusively.

RAILROADS ARE ANXIOUS FOR RAILROAD

People Along Mandan-Stanton Line Waive to Protest on Service.

Stanton, N. D., Aug. 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—Urgent desire of the people in the towns along the proposed Mandan to Stanton railroad, the grade for which has already been constructed, is found in the fact that petitions are being circulated throughout the district in which the people waive the right of protest relative to service during the first year that the line is in operation. This is to overcome the objection that has been raised by the railroads that it cannot operate the branch line at a profit under the service that would be required if the strict letter of the law was followed.

There is a large amount of grain through the district that is being tapped, and one of the particularly luring advantages that is set forth by the parties interested is the fact that considerable grain that is now hauled over the Soo road will go to the Northern Pacific.

The railroad committee of the Mandan Commercial club and the Commercial club of this city are working together on the proposition and are hopeful of success.

LOW RATES TO THE STATE FAIR.

Rates to the state fair from Duluth have been announced not only by the Northern Pacific, but also by the Great Northern and the Omaha. The people of this city and vicinity have been offered round trip tickets to the Twin Cities for the state fair, which will be held the week commencing Labor day, for $4.50 or 1½ cents per mile. This is better than at the time of the 2-cent fares for no rates were then given.

The Great Northern also announces that on and after September 14, party rates for one way will be put into force between Duluth and the Twin Cities and Duluth and Stillwater. To the Twin Cities a rate for a party of ten to sixteen is $3.75 and twenty or more at $3, while to Stillwater it is $3.10 for twenty or more.

Laying Great Northern Steel.

Powers Lake, N. D., Aug. 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—This week will see the steel-laying crews of the Great Northern working on the Stanley to Wild Rose line each this city. They have already reached the east end of Powers lake and are progressing rapidly.

Conclusion of the construction work to Lund Valley, the first town east of this place, was the occasion for a big celebration there. The celebration was in charge of the business men in the small town and they made right merry and showing their enthusiasm at the prospects for early railroad service.

AMONG RAILROAD MEN

H. T. Hazen, chief engineer of the Duluth, Winnipeg & Pacific, returned this afternoon from a two days' inspection of the road to Virginia. He reports that the work is progressing nicely, and that the roadbed will be in excellent shape for the first train, which is expected to run over it on Nov. 1 from Winnipeg through to Duluth.

Ed C. Simmons, chief clerk of the freight department of the Omaha, returned this morning from a visit to Austin, Minn. He reports that the condition of crops in the southern part of the state is excellent, and that the farmers are expecting a bigger yield this year than last.

SHEA HEARING ON.

W. O. Pealer, referee in bankruptcy, is holding a hearing in the matter of the bankruptcy of Andrew James Shea, who filed an application about two weeks ago. Mr. Shea stated in the petition that his assets are about $300, while his liabilities are over $20,000. most of which he owes to J. L. Washburn and C. S. Wilson. It is claimed by some of the creditors that Shea has money which he is withholding, and it is with the view of making him turn this over to their credit that the hearing is held.

OWEN ASKS PROBE OF PANIC OF 1907

Washington, Aug. 21.—An investigation into causes leading to the panic of 1907 and the benefits secured from it by any persons or corporations is asked in a senate resolution offered today by Senator Owen of Oklahoma. Immediate consideration was not asked. The resolution named as an investigation committee Senators Kern of Indiana, Works, California; Reed, Missouri; Page, Vermont, and Clark, Wyoming.

FROM SHEEP TO WHEAT

Montana Changing From Grazing to Great Agricultural State.

Wealthy Kalispel Lumberman, Former Messenger Boy, Visits Duluth.

"Montana is rapidly coming to the fore as a wheat growing state," declared B. J. Boorman of Kalispel, Mont., at the Spalding Sunday evening prior to leaving on the Tionesta with Mrs. Boorman for Buffalo, Montreal, New York and other Eastern points on business and pleasure.

Mr. Boorman is engaged in the lumber business in Kalispell, Great Falls and several other Montana points and is in touch with farming interests in that state.

"The days of the big sheep and cattle outfits are passing swiftly," continued Mr. Boorman, "and those industries are giving away to actual farmers who are rapidly settling up the country and proving the richness of the soil. It is a mistake to think that irrigation is necessary to insure Montana crops. In the vicinity of Great Falls and all through the Juditch basin vast areas are covered with grain this year raised without irrigation. There will be much grain shipped from Great Falls this year in addition to the large amount taken by the Royal Milling company of that state, a subsidiary of the Washburn-Crosby company of Minneapolis, which is at present turning out about 900 barrels of flour daily—not a bad record for a new wheat growing community—as about all the wheat grown is in the vicinity of Great Falls. More virgin land than ever was plowed in Montana this year and there has been a large influx of settlers. Many big traction engines, the kind used in North Dakota, are being used to break the soil with gang plows, and the small farmers are crowding the big cattle and sheep outfits further back every year. I have heard it predicted that in a few years Montana will be producing as much as 150,000,000 bushels of wheat annually and will have to be reckoned with in the world's production of that cereal. Those people who think that mining, cattle and sheep raising are the state's chief industries will have to change their opinions."

Mr. Boorman expressed himself as favorably impressed with Duluth as a commercial center and said Duluth-made goods were growing in favor in Montana. About a score of years ago Mr. Boorman was a telegraph messenger boy in Great Falls, while today he is one of the leading lumbermen of the state.

ANTI-NOISE CAMPAIGN

Automobiles Must Not Run With Mufflers Cut Out.

One Chauffeur Arrested and Fined for Violating This Rule.

Automobile drivers who wish to put themselves in the spotlight for pedestrians who happen to be in the immediate vicinity by roaring up the hills and down the streets with their mufflers wide open are doing so at the risk of being arrested.

Chief Troyer has issued strict instructions to that effect to all the members of the police force. He declares that there is no necessity for it, except possibly to gratify the whim of the chauffeur who desires to attract attention or to annoy the public.

"Some persons seem unable to start their machines without having the muffler open," he said today. "The racket is deafening and is a decided nuisance. I have heard it said by some that the reason they open their mufflers is that they are able to get more power out of their machines. Many practical men differ with them. But be that as it may, they can operate their cars without an accompaniment like that of a rapid fire Gatling gun whether going up hill or not. If they persist, there is but one way to stop them, and that is to arrest them, which will be done."

Many complaints have reached the police relative to this matter. The residents state that it is especially annoying at night, after the average person has retired, to be awakened by some person who is out with an automobile. Frequently, it is claimed, whole neighborhods have been aroused by cars running with their mufflers open.

The automobiles will not only be required to run as silently as possible but to conform strictly to the traffic ordinance. Some have been getting careless recently, both as to driving on the right side and in conformance wtih the speed regulations.

Two chauffeurs were arrested this morning. Edward L. Wood was charged with running his machine with the muffler open. He pleaded guilty in police court and paid a fine of $7. Herbert R. Helmer was arrested on a charge of violating the traffic ordinance, it being alleged that he did not follow the regulations in turning down Third avenue west from First street. He was not arraigned in court this morning.

SANCTION OF HIGHWAY COMMISSION TO BE ASKED

C. M. King to Submit Plans for Duluth to St. Vincent Road.

Enthusiasm in Northern Minnesota for Comprehensive System of Highways.

The Duluth to St. Vincent road, one of the trunk highways tentatively laid out by the good roads committee of the Northern Minnesota Development association, will be taken up with the state highway commission for the sanction of that body, at its meeting at St. Paul tomorrow. The other trunk highways proposed by the good roads committee will also be informally discussed by the members of the highway commission acquainted with the plans for a system of highways in Northern Minnesota.

C. M. King of Deer River, chairman of the good roads committee, is in Duluth today conferring with John Stone Pardee, secretary of the commission. Mr. King will go to St. Paul tonight and will attend tomorrow's meeting of the highway commission with a petition for the sanctioning of the Duluth and St. Vincent road and with data on the other highway plans.

Under the Elwell act, which became a law at the last session of the legislature, it is necessary that the sanction of the state highway commission be obtained before a county, or counties co-operating, may build roads and take advantage of the provisions of the act for state aid. After that sanction is obtained, the course to be followed is the same as in the case of all other roads, petition to the county commissioners if the road lies altogether within one county, or petition to the district court if more than one county is traversed.

Mr. King said today that the notice of the meeting of the highway commission was so short that the good roads committee was able to prepare the necessary petition only for the Duluth and St. Vincent road, but that the committee will be acquainted with other plans and the course will be cleared for further action when the committee has prepared the petitions.

Four Roads Planned.

Four roads are planned, following the action of the conference held at Bemidji last month. The Duluth to St. Vincent road will run from Duluth through to St. Vincent on the Canadian border, the plan being that the Manitoba authorities will continue it to Winnipeg. Provision s also made for a branch from Erskine to East Grand Forks, giving a road across the state, as well as to the border.

Other roads planned are from Moorhead to Duluth, from International Falls to the Twin Cities via Duluth and from International Falls to the Twin Cities via Bemidji and through the Itasca State park.

A conference, similar to that which was held at Bemidji last month, will be held at Brainerd next Thursday, the road from Moorhead to Duluth to be the subject of discussion. It is expected that representatives from thirty-five or thirty-seven counties of Northern Minnesota will be present, as well as the members of the good roads committee, Senator Elwell and representatives of the state highway commission and other state departments interested in road work. At that time, the route for the road will be laid out and preparations made for initiating the necessary preliminaries.

"I find that every county and every good roads advocate in Northern Minnesota is enthusiastically in favor of the good roads plan as laid out at the Bemidji conference," said Mr. King today. "The haphazard building of roads by counties and townships working independent of each other can never accomplish the desired result. Everybody realizes that we must have a coherent system of roads. Until the trunk lines are built as the basis of that system, road work will always lag. The disposition of the counties to fall into line and work with each other in the building of trunk lines is an indication that results are in sight and that the proposed trunk lines will be built.

"Uniform road plans are contemplated, with a 20-foot roadway with a 16-foot gravel top. If the plans go through the roads will be built under contract in the best possible manner and will be so substantial that the maintenance charges will not overwhelm the counties as has been the case in much road building in Northern Minnesota.

"Thousands of dollars have been wasted in building roads that start nowhere and lead to nowhere. Roads have been built and have been allowed to grow up with vegetation again because they could not be used to travel to any particular place. If all that money can be directed into the working out of a road plan that contemplates the covering of Northern Minnesota with a network of highways, the aid to development will be beyond any estimates that could now be made.

"When a person says that the roads will be good enough for automobiles, some people are inclined to shy. The farmer, who cannot afford an automobile, is inclined to be antagonized by the apparent implication that the roads will be built for the benefit of automobiles. The best way to dispose of that antagonism is to point out the fact that any road that is good enough for automobiles is good enough for a farm wagon or any other kind of traffic. The farmer who wants good roads for himself will enthusiastically support any plan for the building of automobile roads through a farming country."

Cost Will Not Be Burden.

According to Mr. King, there is no doubt but that the counties will easily be able to bear the expense of road building under the plans of the Elwell act. He points out that if a mile of road costs $1,000, the state will be called upon to pay half of the cost, in ten annual installments of $50 each. The county will pay one-fourth of the cost, or $250 in ten annual payments of $25 each. The remainder of the cost will be assessed on the land benefited, which would bring 3,840 acres in to pay $250 in ten years, or $25 a year. The portion of the cost that may be assessed on the property benefited may also be paid by the county, by a township, by a municipality or by subscription. In addition, the Elwell act also takes in the provisions of the state drainage act, which provides for the assessment of the state lands for improvements, so that a road running through state lands would also require the payment by the state of its proportion of the quarter of the cost assessed on the land.

The exact route of the proposed trunk lines has not been laid out, but the different counties are working together and definite plans will be made as soon as possible. The road from International Falls to the Twin Cities via Duluth will run from International Falls through either Virginia or Hibbing and will follow the usual automobile roads from Duluth to the Twin Cities. The portion of the route from Duluth south is now in good condition requiring only some grading to be put in excellent shape. The route of the road from International Falls to Duluth has not been decided upon, but undoubtedly some roads can be joined so that the actual amount of road-building required will be small. In fact that is the condition all through the territory to be covered by the proposed trunk lines. Existing roads are in good condition for a large part of the way on each proposed route, but there has been no system, roads have not been joined and it will be necessary to build a short stretch at different points to connect existing roads, and also to grade the existing roads to meet the requirements of the committee's uniform road plan.

HORSE RESENTED CRUEL USAGE

Animal Runs Away and Four Drivers Are Arrested.

Alfred Anderson, Hjalmar Johnson, Fred Pearson and Victor Johnson were arrested yesterday afternoon on charges of being drunk and this morning charges of cruelty to an animal were preferred against them in additon to the drunk charge. It is claimed that the four were crowded into a single buggy and abused the horse shamefully. It seems that the horse finally took matters into his own charge, throwing them out of the buggy. Two or them appeared this morning with badly bruised and scratched faces as a result of their contact with the pavement at Fifteenth avenue east and London road. Their cases will be heard tomorrow afternoon.

FEW COMPLY WITH LAW

But Forty-Two Local Firms Have Filed Information as to Business.

Ninety Days Are Up and Many Are Guilty of a Misdemeanor.

Those who are engaged in business under a partnership and who have not already filed with the clerk of the district court a statement of the character of their business, the location, and the names of those interested in the company, had better do so at once for even now, under the law passed at the last legislature, they are guilty of a misdemeanor.

Up to date but forty-two firms in the city of Duluth have filed the required information with the clerk of court. The law does not apply to corporations. Ninety days from the passage of the act were given in which to file the information. The act was approved April 19, 1911. Not only is the firm guilty of a misdemeanor but the fact that they have not complied with the law in carrying on their business may be used against them in court. The standing in court, in other words, is impaired through failure to comply with the law.

A fee of 25 cents is collected by the clerk for the filing of the information. The act was passed especially for the merchants and business men of the home town, it is understood. It is a certain means of protection for home business people against transients who come for but a few days, advertise under a high sounding name, and whose business methods are some times said to be shady.

SCRAMBLE IN A CLOAKROOM.

London Express: At the end of the racing at Ascot yesterday it seems that the cloakroom arrangements miscarried, and when the women went to get their wraps they were not ready to hand. A wild report circulated that the thief who stole the gold cup four years ago had been busy in the cloakroom and all the women rushed to find for themselves if the dreadful thing were true.

There has not been such an outburst of feminine excitement since the last suffragist raid on the house of commons, and the attendants grew so alarmed and were so afraid of the cloak room being stormed by the angry owners of the precious wraps that they sent for the police. When the constables came several ladies fled ignominously without their things. The police ultimately straightened out the tangle and the honor of Ascot was saved. The cause of the commotion is said to have been the action of some women who left early and put everything in confusion in the search for their cloaks.

WHERE ASPARAGUS GROWS WILD.

Westminster Gazette: Asparagus was not introduced into Britain by the Romans, who applied the term asparagus to tender shoots which, according to Juvenal, grew on mountains (Montani asparagi). The plant is certainly native with us and occurs sparsely on the eastern and southern coasts of England at Anglesey and Pembroke in Wales and around Wexford and Waterford in Ireland. It is no longer found on Asparagus Island, near the Lizard, as all text books of English botany assert, but still grows profusely on some neighboring cliffs of Kynance Cove.

Not to advertise is to move the hands of the clock of business back one hundred years to the time when there were few or no means of securing wide publicity.

ANDERSON IS TURNED DOWN

Minnesotan Tries to Delay Adjournment of the House.

Congress May Now End Special Session in Short Order.

Washington, Aug. 21.—Speaker Clark of the house at noon today expressed the belief that congress would adjourn tonight. Whether this prediction will come true depends upon the speed with which the cotton bill is passed today and the president's veto message is sent in. The indications are that congress will wait to receive the message, and that if it is not available tonight, it will be ready by noon tomorrow.

To effect adjournment tonight, Democratic Leader Underwood asked unanimous consent for immediate consideration of the cotton bill, with debate limited to four hours.

Anderson Turned Down.

Representative Anderson of Minnesta, Republican, objected because it did not provide a separate vote for each senate amendment. Immediately the rules committee met and brought in a rule to carry out Mr. Underwood's plan, to which Republican Leader Mann had agreed.

When the house convened there was almost a unanimous expression of desire of members for adjournment tonight if possible. Democratic and Republican leaders were equally anxious, but it was problematical whether the cotton bill, with its senate amendments, could be disposed of and printed in time to adjourn before tomorrow.

SAY MURDERER OF BOY KILLED SELF.

Brainerd, Minn., Aug. 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—It is rumored here that Erick Makl, the slayer of little Earl Reilly, who was sentenced to life at hard labor, had committed suicide at Stillwater. It is said he refused to work and was set at pumping water and when the opportunity presented itself he leaped into the tank and drowned himself. The rumor cannot be verified at Brainerd.

WINKJER FOR MUZZLE RULE

Minnesota Man Against Discussion of Wiley-Wilson Controversy.

Says Administrative Matters Should Not Be Discussed Here.

Joel G. Winkjer, Minnesota's dairy and food commissioner, and his department are opposed to any discussion of the Wiley matter at the present convention of pure food men.

"The Wiley matter really dates back a long, long time," said Mr. Winkjer this afternoon. "It started in the celebrated benzoate of soda controversy between Wiley and Wilson.

"The manufacturers wanted to use benzoate as a preservative. They could, by this means, take green vegetables and color them and by the use of the preservative market their products. In some cases this was not harmful, but it opened the way to the marketing and sale of a long line of harmful fruits, preserved in this manner, and no one could tell where the evil might lead to.

"Wiley, as everyone knows, was opposed to this sort of thing. Wilson thought the benzoate was all right. I don't want to go into a discussion of that side of the question now, and as things have developed, the present attacks on Wiley are far removed from that source.

"They are now after him for an act which is admittedly purely administrative. It has nothing to do with food problems as such and is simply a matter of departmental policy.

"It seems to me that any action taken by this association on the matter in its present status would be in very poor taste to say the least, and Minnesota's vote will be in favor of Mr. Foust's resolution, which bars discussion of the matter."

Brainerd Loses and Wins.

Brainerd, Minn., Aug. 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—Brainerd lost its first game with Little Falls at Little Falls Sunday afternoon by the score of 10 to 1. In the second game Brainerd won, 3 to 1.

PASTORS ARE ARRIVING

Delegates to Convention of Norwegian Synod Association Reach City.

Program Includes Sacred Concert and Boat Ride on Harbor.

Delegates are arriving in the West end for the annual meeting of the Twin City Pastoral association of the Norwegian synod, which will be held Aug. 22 to 24 at St. Paul's Lutheran chruch, Twentieth avenue west and Third street.

There are about thirty members in the conference who will attend. Several other visitors are also expected. A good program has been arranged for the sessions, and a number of interesting papers will be contributed and discussed by various pastors.

Among the prominent churchmen who are expected to take part are: Rt. Rev. H. G. Stubb, D. D., president of the synod last year; Rt. Rev. K. Bjorge, president of the Minnesota district and Professors J. Vivisoper, E. Hove and O. E. Brandt of the Luther seminary of St. Paul.

The session of most interest will be held Wednesday evening, when a sacred concert will be given in which several of the visiting pastors will take part. Of special interest is the appearance of the pastors' chorus of about eighteen voices. The tenor section is said to be excellent in the chorus and the singing is said to be well balanced. The following soloists will appear: Rev. C. Anderson, tenor, Rev. T. A. Johnson, tenor; Rev. O. G. Juul, bass; Miss Helga Larson of St. Paul, pianist, and Rev. Walter Sievers of West Duluth, violinist.

Rev. E. Wulfsberg, the pastor of the local church is in charge of the arrangements. Among the entertainment features which have been provided is an excursion around the harbor for the delegates.

WOODMEN WILL TALK OVER BUILDING PLANS.

At a meeting of the building committee of Duluth camp, No. 2341 Modern Woodmen of America, at the office of George M. Jensen, tomorrow evening, further plans for the new Modern Woodmen building, which will be erected at Twenty-first avenue west and First street, will be decided upon.

The question of whether a stock company should be formed among the members or whether the order itself should finance the deal, will probably be discussed. It is planned to get the work under way as soon as possible so as to have the building completed this fall. It will probably be a two or three-story structure, built on modern lines.

RECIPROCITY AND TAFT ARE SCORED

Anti-Taft Progressive Republicans of Pennington County Heard From.

Thief River Falls, Minn., Aug. 21. (Special to The Herald.)—The Anti-Taft Progressive Republicans of Pennington county recently organized here by electing the following officers: President, Andrew Trovton; secretary, E. L. Quist; members of the executive committee, First district, W. G. Hunt; Second district, Harry E. Ives; Third district, Emil Ness; Fourth district, D. Patterson.

Resolutions were adopted scoring reciprocity, upholding protection and lauding Senators Nelson and Clapp and Representative Steenerson for fighting against Canadian reciprocity.

The progressive ideas of Roosevelt and La Follette are upheld and continuing declare:

"For over forty years the farmers of the Northwest and of Minnesota, in particular, have consistently been in favor of the principles of a protective tariff. They accepted as a fact that protection would build up a home market for the products of the farm, and that ultimately the farmer would come to his just reward.

"Such a condition is about to be realized and we condemn as unjust and unreasonable and a direct violation of faith the Canadian reciprocity pact which the present administration has just forced by the use of patronage, the aid of Democrats and other unjust and unlawful means, through our congress.

"We are fully of the opinion that if protection is good for the Eastern manufacturer it is equally as good for the Western farmer, and we again reassert that the Canadian reciprocity pact is an unfair and unjust discrimination against the American farmer and in favor of the trust-protected manufacturer.

"The firm stand taken by our United States Senators Hon. Knute Nelson and Hon. Moses E. Clapp and by our representative in congress, Hon. Halvor Steenerson in their fight made against the Canadian reciprocity pact meets with our heartiest commendation, and we respectfully ask them to continue the fight that in the end the trust-protected manufacturer receive no more protection than does the American farmer."

Roads leading to Canada have been covered almost constantly since a few hours after the men made their escape, and it is believed the jail breakers are hiding in the Turtle mountains.

TWELVE ARE CAUGHT IN BLIND-PIG RAID.

Belfield, N. BAD STORM HITS DULUTH

A Drenching Rainfall and Brilliant Electrical Display During Night.

Clear the Atmosphere After a Depressingly Hot Day.

One of the most severe electrical storms Duluth has had this summer began between 2 and 3 o'clock this morning. The storm was ushered in with a flash of lightning and crack of thunder that awakened most people from peaceful sleep. For an hour, lightning, thunder and rain held the stage and the timid were frightened at the display of the fury of the elements.

Up to 7 o'clock this morning .68 inch of rain fell, most of it falling between 4 and 5 o'clock. After 5 o'clock, there were light showers from time to time, and Forecaster Richardson says they will continue through the day, with fair weather tonight and tomorrow.

Yesterday was one of the most oppressive days Duluth has had this year. The official thermometer on the hill registered 84 deg., with about 90 deg. prevailing in the downtown district shortly after noon. The heat was intensified by an excess of moisture in the air, the heat being of the sticky variety little experienced in Duluth.

INDORSES SAVING PLAN

Bishop McGolrick Says Money Spent at Cheap Theaters Is Waste.

Encourages Development of Saving Habit Early in Children.

In the course of a sermon on "Waste" at the children's mass at Sacred Heart Cathedral yesterday morning, Bishop McGolrick decried the fact that Duluth has too many cheap theaters and that money which should go for necessities is going into the box offices of the moving picture houses.

"The cheap theater evil has enmeshed not only the children, but their parents as well," said the bishop. "Their cheapness attracts, and people who can ill afford to waste the small amount they pay, go and take their children, paying out a large aggregate sum yearly for cheap amusement."

The bishop told of the school savings plan adopted in Minneapolis. He outlined the plan whereby each child joining the plan has a book in which he pastes stamps furnished him for each deposit, be it a cent or a dollar. He pointed out that last year, the school children of Minneapolis saved $140,000 in small deposits, and he enthusiastically indorsed a plan by which pennies can be saved from waste.

The bishop said that the child who learns habits of saving early will carry thrift with him into his after life and will not be a hanger on nor an object of charity.

At the latter place the brick chimney was rent into pieces, bricks being scattered in every direction with some of them being found over fifty feet away, while every window in the place was also broken.

Northwood, N. D., Aug. 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—Burglars made a successful raid on the Farmers' Mercantile company store in Northwood, carried off the cash register and a goodly quantity of clothing, the former being broken up and the latter afterwards being recovered in a hiding place in a haystack near here.

Pig Causes Runaway.

HAS SCHEME FOR ALASKA

La Follette Wants Government to Own All Railroads There.

Plan for Development Outlined in Speech in the Senate.

Washington, Aug. 21.—Senator Robert M. La Follette, in a speech today, came out openly in favor of government ownership of the railroads of Alaska and the governmental control of the natural resources of that rich territory.

In the course of his remarks he referred to a bill which he introduced four years ago, providing for the leasing of all mineral rights in the United States, although the measure was intended to be applicable more especially to Alaska.

"The sensible and practical thing to do," he said, "is to create a board of public works for Alaska, to be appointed by the president and confirmed by the senate, similar to the isthmian canal commission. This board of public works should then undertake, not merely to build a railroad from Controller bay to the coal fields, but also to acquire all of the railroads in Alaska and settle at once the policy of governmental ownership. It should similarly provide for the department other public utilities, such as telegraph and telephone. It should operate and develop the wharves and docks, and steamship lines if necessary, to deliver the products of Alaska to the coast.

Difference in Charges.

"The Morgan-Guggenheims, accustomed to the highest profits on their investments and demanding to a great extent immediate returns, must make exorbitant and oppressive charges. The people of the United States do not demand an immediate return. They can themselves supply all necessary money at an interest charge of less than 3 per cent. Rates for transportation and for other public utilities may properly be low, with the capital cost as small as the investment would be to the people.

"Most important of all is control of the transportation facilities by the government. It would forever remove the irresistible temptation of discrimination, rebates and corruption which have characterized the worst period of our railroad operation."

"People Are Losing."

Mr. La Follette declared that the people were waging a losing fight against the corporations in Alaska. Between the great storehouses of natural resources and those who are trying to develop it, he said, was to be found "the enormous power of the greatest concentration of capital that the world has ever known."

"When we have before us the history of the Pennsylvania anthracite struggle," he demanded, "now consummated in the complete control of J. Pierpont Morgan against the whole American people, can we expect any different result if we permit the Morgan-Guggenheims to get control of Alaska? This power will lie in their control of the docks, wharves, mountain passes and the limited outlet to the markets."

Justifying his contention that the government should engage in transportation in Alaska and the conservation of its resources, Mr. La Follette pointed to the work now being done on the Panama canal. He said that the solution of the transportation there, the elimination of insanitary conditions and the betterment of the inhabitants, showed what the American people could do "when called upon to meet a great emergency requiring direct governmental control in the public interest."

Lesson in Panama.

"We are required to decide which of these two methods the American people shall adopt in Alaska," he continued. Up to the present we have been going blindly along the road of the anthracite coal combination, but it is possible for us to accomplish permanently in Alaska all that is being accomplished temporarily in Panama.

"There is, however, one great difference. The people of Alaska must be permitted to develop in the highest degree their own social and political conditions, and individual enterprises. But the American people are the owners of the resources of Alaska. These having been preserved up to the present time by withdrawing them from occupation and use, the people now clamor for their use and for the transportation which is essential for their use. It is entitled to get the benefit of reduction in cost of living which will come from a utilization of Alaskan 'treasures.'

Everybody Would Benefit.

"The Pacific coast demands access to the enormous coal deposits. The people east of the Rocky mountains will gain by their development. Even the navy department of the federal government is compelled to pay $9 to $12 for coal on the Pacific coast, which costs $2 to $4 on the Atlantic coast. The tests which have been made show that samples of coal from veins as thick as thirty-three feet in the Controller bay region have a higher heating value than coal secured from the Eastern tidewater."

Mr. La Follette insisted that congress, in its relation to the people, occupied the same position as did the board of directors to the stockholders of a corporation.

CRAZY MAN CAPTURED AFTER FIGHT WITH GUNS.

New Brunswick, N. J., Aug. 21.—After wounding one member of the party which had besieged his home all night, George Smith, a former inmate of an insane asylum, who had armed himself and defied a big posse of deputy sheriffs, was captured Sunday.

A double-barreled shotgun, two revolvers and a satchel full of dynamite were the weapons with which Smith terrorized the neighborhood. He made no attempt to put the dynamite to use.

When the posse made its rush, he fired as rapidly as he could but hit only one man. He was taken to Trenton and lodged in the asylum there.

PARACHUTE FAILS; MAN IS DASHED TO DEATH.

Marion, Ind., Aug. 21.—Frank D. Crawford of Anderson, Ind., met his death here Sunday afternoon in attempting a double parachute leap. While 800 feet above the earth, he cut loose from the first parachute, but the second refused to open until he had fallen several hundred feet. The sudden opening caused the aeronaut to lose his grip and he was dashed to the earth almost at the feet of his wife. Nearly every bone in his body was broken.

In addition to the three big prizes, four gardens were marked "excellent," seventeen were designated "good" and fourteen individual prizes were given.

$92,662 last year. For 1912 the department asked $102,995 and the somptroller's estimate is $93,500. Part of the increase is due to the fact that all the employes of the department were allowed a raise of $5 a month beginning July 1, last. More patrolmen are also desired in all parts of the city.

Park Fund.

The greatest proportionate raise is asked by the park board. Last fall that fund was put in the budget for $16,000. For 1912 the commissioners ask $65,890. The comptroller's estimate is $22,500.

For the street intersection and storm sewer fund the comptroller allows a levy of 1 mill, or $43,500, and for the street maintenance and repair fund, .57 mills, or $25,000. The limit for the former is 2 mills and the latter, 1 mill.

The figures of the comptroller are not final. They will be sent to the city council this evening for consideration and to the conference committee Tuesday. The conference committee will adjourn until next month, when it will hold a series of meetings to determine upon the final estimates of the various departments for 1912. The comptroller is required by the provisions of the charter to get out the estimate for the purpose of assisting the conference committee in making up the budget. No limit is fixed upon the amount which may be raised for the first three funds, the sinking, interest and fire department funds. But for the funds numbered 4 to 16, the maximum amount which may be levied is $420,000. This does not include the street intersection or storm sewer fund or the street maintenance and repair fund, which were authorized by special amendments to the charter.

The estimate prepared by the comptroller, put out in pamphlet form are most complete. The following tables, which will be of general interest, were taken from it:

CONVENTION NEXT MONTH

Minnesota National Guard Association to Meet in Duluth.

Officers of Brigade Will Hold Sessions Sept. 25 and 26.

The Minnesota National Guard association, which consists of the commissioned officers of the entire brigade, will hold its annual meeting in Duluth Monday and Tuesday, Sept. 25 and 26.

Maj. H. V. Eva was notified today that the executive committee of the association at a meeting held last week accepted the invitation extended by Maj. Eva at the last convention to hold the meeting in Duluth this year.

Up to about four years ago the association held its annual meetings for twenty years in St. Paul. Four years ago, on Maj. Eva's initiative, a resolution was adopted providing that every other year the convention would be held in one of the Twin Cities, the alternate meetings being held at some other point in the state. The following year the convention was held in Duluth and the officers were so well pleased with the treatment accorded them that the invitation to meet here again was accepted over invitations from other cities.

The meeting of the association will bring to Duluth between 150 and 200 National Guard officers. The program will consist of papers and discussions on matters of interest to the officers. The meeting of the association is held each year after the annual encampment of the three regiments have ended. Matters often come up at the annual encampment that call for discussions and an exchange of ideas among all the officers of the National Guard, and the annual meetings of the association bring out plans and ideas that are put into effect to the benefit of the National Guard of the state.

No arrangements have yet been made for the handling of the convention here. In his capacity as secretary of the Commercial club, as well as a major in the National Guard, Maj. Eva will make the arrangements for the business meetings and the entertainment features.

When the convention was last held in Duluth, the sessions were held on the U. S. S. Gopher, the training ship of the Minnesota naval militia, which combined entertainment in cruising around the lake with the business sessions.

BEGIN PICKING BEATTIE JURY

of the prisoner, accompanied by his other son, Douglas, had arrived at the courthouse in an automobile shortly before time for court to convene.

Only Two Women There.

The tiny room was jammed as the proceedings began, and to discourage the curious and idle the court ordered that all disinterested spectators stand up and remain standing. Two women newspaper writers were the only white representatives of the feminine sex in the yard or court building.

Beattie did not seem to realize when the reading of the indictment had been concluded. It was necessary for his lawyer to prompt him. Then in a clear voice he said:

"Not guilty."

More than sixty witnesses have been subpoenaed by the commonwealth and a venire of thirty-two talesmen was drawn.

W. T. Tinsley, the aged father-in-law of Judge Walter Watson of the Chesterfield circuit court, whose grave illness gave rise to reports of possible delay in the case spent a comparatively good night and the judge was on hand to convene court.

Girl May Testify.

Beulah Binford, the pretty 17-year-old "woman in the case," made no preparations to leave the jail in Richmond, where she has been held as a material witness. Paul Beattie, the prisoner's cousin, who has sworn that he purchased the gun with which Louise Wellford Owen Beattie was shot, was instructed late last night that he would be taken to Chesterfield. The star witness for the prosecution, Paul, has said little since his incarceration, but on his testimony the commonwealth hopes to send his 26-year-old cousin to the electric chair. The Binford girl may be called as a witness as the trial progresses.

Few members of the Owen family are expected to attend the trial. Thomas Owen, an uncle, will be a witness, but the father and mother of the murdered girl, Mr. and Mrs. R. V. Owen, are in Dover, Del., and will not attend the proceedings unless their testimony is considered absolutely necessary by the commonwealth.

Beattie is 26 years old; his murdered wife was 23. She left behind her a 5-week-old baby.

WAUPUN CONVICTS WERE ALL READY FOR JAIL-BREAK.

Waupun, Wis., Aug. 21.—A raid was made yesterday on the cells of all the prisoners in the state penitentiary, after the authorities had received a hint of a coming wholesale rising of the prisoners to free everyone in the prison.

The raid disclosed about 250 weapons of various descriptions, there being about 150 knives alone. The prisoners were held in the chapel while the search was made.

A negro murderer had eight saws in his cell, fashioned into broad bladed knives.

MINNEAPOLIS RABBI IS ASSAULTED BY UNKNOWN.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 21.—Rabbi M. Abrahamson early Sunday was assaulted and beaten by an unknown assailant. The attack occurred near the Rabbi's home, the culprit springing from a bunch of weeds that hid him from view until the very instant of striking. The stranger struck the Rabbi in the head with a brick, following up with a rain of blows in the face with his fist. When the minister sought to defend himself, the assailant took to his heels, crying, "I'll kill you yet."

Rabbi Abrahamson staggered home where he fell unconscious. Restored to consciousness, he reported the attack to the police, giving a description of the man who beat him. While his injuries are painful, they are not serious. The Rabbi said he could give no reason for the assault, unless it be that he had been active in an effort to procure the establishment of a Jewish co-operative market in his neighborhood.

CLOQUET MAN HURT, IS TAKEN TO DULUTH.

Cloquet, Minn., Aug. 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—Joe Gustafson was run over by a dump cart loaded with wet mill wood Saturday afternoon and seriously injured. He was taken to St. Luke's hospital in Duluth. Mr. Gustafson was driving the team and the tongue of the wagon slipped out of the neck yoke and frightened the horses. They ran away and Gustafson was thrown out and the wagon passed over his body. He is a widower with a large family of children.

Resigns Forestry Job.

Cloquet, Minn., Aug. 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—S. B. Detwiler has resigned his position as forester at the state experimental forestry station and has accepted a similar position in Pennsylvania. State Forester Cox and his assistant, Dillon P. Tierney, both of St. Paul, have been in the city several days in the interests of the work here, and Walter McDonald of Cloquet has been appointed to take charge of the forestry station here.

TWO WHITE MEN SHOT; RACE TROUBLE FEARED.

Cairo, Ill., Aug. 21.—Robert Chasteen, city marshal of Ullin, Ill., was shot and instantly killed and William Farrell of Cobden, Ill., was fatally wounded while they were standing at a bar in a saloon. Two shots were fired through a front window.

Shortly after the shooting four negroes, who are believed to have some knowledge of the crime, were arrested and placed in jail at Mound City, a short distance from Ullin. Owing to ill feeling that has existed between the whites and blacks in this section of Illinois, trouble is feared by the authorities.

CLOQUET SAWYER DIES.

Cloquet, Minn., Aug. 21.—(Special to The Herald.—George Markle died Sunday at the Cloquet hospital of heart failure. Mr. Markle had been ailing for some time and was taken to the hospital several days ago. He and his wife had just finished packing their household goods preparatory to moving to Minneapolis. Mr. Markle was 53 years old and had been a resident of Cloquet nine years, during which time he was head sawyer for the Northern Lumber company at their upper mill. He has a sister, a Mrs. Case, residing in Superior. The remains were taken to Minneapolis later for interment.

Last 1911 Log Drive.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 21.—The last complete log drive of the season, now within a few miles of St. Cloud, will reach Minneapolis early in September. The 55,000,000 feet of logs being driven down the Mississippi river will furnish the Minneapolis mills with the material needed for this season's work. Driving is difficult owing to the low stage of the river.

Asks $50,000 for Husband.

Dickinson, N. D., Aug. 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—Fifty thousand dollars damages are asked by the widow of Maurice Quinn, killed in this city two years ago when a Northern Pacific train ran Quinn down while he was crossing the railroad track in an automobile.

Drowned in Medicine Lake.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 21.—Gust Christiansen, 24 years old, was drowned Saturday at Medicine lake, where he fell from a boat while fishing with Andrew Edstrom and Alvin Anderson, who came near losing their lives. Edstrom and Anderson were rescued by Charles Felter, who went to them in a boat and after much difficulty took them to the shore.

Fatal Minneapolis Collision.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 21.—Mrs. C. B. Garrett was probably fatally injured and her sister, Miss Ella M. Shupe was seriously hurt late Sunday when a Lake Minnetonka passenger train on the Great Northern railroad collided with an automobile in which they were riding. Both live in Minneapolis.

Train Hits Buggy.

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 21.—Mrs. Brent Hayes was killed and her husband, who remained conscious only long enough to give his name and ask about his wife, was fatally hurt Sunday afternoon when an east bound Illinois Central passenger train struck their buggy at Bernheim crossing.

Leg Found on Track.

La Porte, Ind., Aug. 21.—Coroner Osborne of this city is in possession of a leg for which he cannot find the owner. The leg was found in a pool of blood on the railroad tracks, but every effort to find the owner has been unavailing.

There is something more than coincidence back of the fact that it is the advertised businesses that succeed, and the unadvertised businesses that fail.

GUARDIANS OF THE PEOPLE'S FOOD.

Duluth never had a more important convention than that of the association of state and national food and dairy departments, which began here today.

And no association that holds conventions is engaged in a more praiseworthy and more vital work than this one.

The men gathered here today stand between the unsuspecting people—that is, they were unsuspecting until Dr. Wiley and some of the other more prominent ones began to throw light into dark places—and the dishonest manufacturer of food and drink who has no pride in his product and is bent only on getting the utmost possible profit at whatever cost of treachery to his patrons.

Were it not for the pure food laws and the men who execute them, this country would be deluged, as it was before the governments of state and nation took up this most important work, with dishonest food products. There is a plenty of them yet, but these men are hot upon the trail of those who deal in them, and the day of the crooked food dealer is about over.

Few people realize, probably, just how much unspeakable horror and deadly peril the men charged with executing the pure food laws are protecting them from. There are food manufacturers who do not scruple to adulterate their goods, to label inferior commodities as first class products, to substitute wherever substitution is safe. Until the pure food laws came in, nothing but the risk of making their goods unsalable restrained them. Worse still, they did not hesitate to load their products with poisons to conceal their inferiority, so that the people were eating deadly things with their daily food.

A great change has come in the past few years. Practically every state now has a more or less effective pure food law, and the federal government has one also. Few or none are quite what they ought to be yet, but improvement, not only in the character of the laws but in the character of their enforcement, is noticeable on every hand.

Duluth is glad to entertain this enormously important association, and it hopes that its session here will be pleasant and profitable, so much so that the association will come again and often.

TAFT AND THE TARIFF.

If President Taft ever sits up some evening to think over his public acts with reference to the tariff, he is likely to get at least one poor night's sleep.

In the beginning, he ran for president in a year when the tariff was the leading if not the sole issue. The people, groaning under a grievous burden of high prices, demanded relief from the tariff taxes that were making those prices higher every year. The president's party responded with a tariff plank in its platform which promised tariff revision, but in such equivocal language that Republican leaders were able to say after election—they dared not say it before election — that the party hadn't promised revision downward, but merely revision.

But Judge Taft, then a candidate for president, took pains in the campaign to make it clear that when the platform said revision it meant revision downward, and that no other construction would be tolerated. This sounded well, and it had much to do with his election.

Promptly following his inauguration, President Taft, as a first step toward tariff revision downward, brought about the re-election of Cannon as speaker and the organization of the house on standpat lines, thus crushing absolutely all hope of the framing and passage of an honest tariff revision bill.

When the Democrats and insurgents were fighting in the senate for real tariff revision, the president gave them neither aid nor comfort. He took the position that the president ought not to interfere in the proceedings of congress; yet he had interfered to bring about the election of Cannon as speaker, he did interfere to substitute the corporation tax for the income tax, and he has not hesitated to interfere in the proceedings of congress whenever it has suited his purpose to do so.

The result was the Payne-Aldrich bill, a monstrous and hypocritical conspiracy to increase the burden of taxation of the many for the fat profit of the few. This bill the president signed, and later declared to be "the best tariff bill ever enacted by a Republican congress."

Nevertheless, in the same statement he denounced the wool schedule, with its average of 90 per cent duties and its infamy of high duties on the clothing of the poor and lower duties on the fine clothing of the rich, as "indefensible."

Then, when congress passed a bill reducing the wool duties, he vetoed it on the flimsy pretext that the policy of his party was to base tariff duties on the difference in cost of production at home and abroad, and that this difference could not be ascertained until the tariff board reported. This in spite of the fact that the present duties on woolen manufactures are from three to eight times as great as the total of labor's share of the value of these goods.

Denouncing as "unscientific" a bill which moderated the enormities of this "indefensible" schedule, the president condemned the American people to labor awhile longer under the heavy burden of a measure still more "unscientific," a measure which imposes duties dictated absolutely by the selfish greed of those who depend for their unfair profits upon the special privileges given them by this wretched law.

A sorry return, this record, for the trust put in President Taft by the American people when they elected him because of his fair promises of tariff revision downward. His term more than half spent, the tariff is higher than it was when he came into office; and that shameful fact is due to his refusal to take a stand when a firm stand was needed, and to the pitiably mistaken stand he has taken now when he is offered the chance to strike a blow in behalf of the tax-burdened people.

THE ST. LOUIS COUNTY FAIR.

The St. Louis county fair will be held at Hibbing the latter half of this week, beginning Thursday and closing Sunday.

The people of Hibbing, helped more than usual this year by the people of the rest of the county, have spared neither pains nor expense to make this year's fair the best ever held. With a foundation of agricultural and dairy products gathered from all parts of the county, the fair association has built up an exhibit that is well worth going to see, and everybody who can do so should arrange to see it.

Last year, though the beginning was made only a few days before its opening, Hibbing had a mighty interesting fair. The mistake of lack of preparation has not been repeated this year. On the other hand, the fair association has made large improvements in the fair grounds, and it has been unremitting in its efforts to make the exhibit comprehensive and representative of St. Louis county's wealth and possibilities.

Friday, Saturday and Sunday there will be attractive programs of horse racing, with a list of prizes that guarantees a large and fast field of entries. Also, there are other excellent attractions, including a daily flight by a real aviator.

Hibbing is making preparations to entertain a record-breaking crowd, and it ought to have it. Duluth people should do their part in making the fair a success by attending it in large numbers.

DEADLY "SQUIRREL" WHISKY.

Last week a particularly brutal murder was done on the range. Two men, fast friends, had drunk deeply of bad whisky. A friendly wrestling match broke into a fight, and one of the men struck his friend down with a rifle and then kicked him to death.

Those are the bald facts as the news stories related them. The details are too horrible for repetition here.

Whisky made deadly enemies of two friends in a short time, turned one of them into a brutal murderer, and turned the other from a living, breathing, human being into a bloody and battered corpse.

And yet, if the bottle were at hand with any of its contents available, it is ten to one that it would be found to be not whisky at all, President Taft's ruling on the question "What is whisky?" to the contrary notwithstanding, but some of the vile and infamous stuff that masquerades under the name in this and other sections.

Men get drunk and brutal on real whisky, no doubt, when they can get it.

But in a vast majority of cases when these crimes of violence are traced to their source, it will be found that the men concerned in them have been drinking some of the evil compounds that by some inscrutable oversight of the law or the executors of the law are permitted to be made and sold as whisky, though they come out of celllars and not out of stills, and have no more relation with whisky than any other compound of drugs and cheap alcohol that has the capacity to make men drunken and brutal.

So long as the government, national or state, licenses and authorizes the sale of intoxicating liquors, it ought to take steps to compel dealers to sell nothing but goods of reasonable purity, and to prohibit under heavy penalties the sale of imitations which are so deadly in their effects that for a trifling sum men may drink themselves into the mood of devils.

Both the nation and the state are at fault in this respect. Both have pure food laws that include some regulations about whisky, but neither has regulations that are at all efficient in safeguarding the quality of the liquors dispensed to the drinking public.

The result is that liquor is sold that turns decent men into brutes and men of bad temper into fiends. The Nashwauk case is but one of many. The cheap liquors that are made and sold in this section incite to violence and foster lawlessness, and the state, if the government does not act, should enact laws that will drive this sort of liquid deviltry out of business.

These liquors foster illegal drinking places, because they are so cheap that there is no great hazard in investing in a stock of them. The average blind-pig sells no honest liquors, because they are too expensive to warrant the risk of investing money in them.

A few years ago a manufacturer of this type of "whisky," talking with a local member of the legislature, asked what temperance legislation was pending in the legislature. He was told that there was a county option bill pending, and the manufacturer frankly said that he favored it, because it facilitated the sale of his goods for the reason above stated. What he was concerned in was legislation regulating the quality of liquor, and he was much relieved to find that no such measures were pending.

That was several sessions ago, and no adequate law regulating the quality of liquors sold in this state has yet been passed. Such terrible examples as the Nashwauk case show that one is sadly needed.

ANNEXATION AND WAR.

There is certain to be a good deal of arrant nonsense associated with a political campaign anywhere, and the Canadian reciprocity campaign is not an exception. Also, the Conservatives thus far seem to have a monopoly of the nonsense-making.

Speaking at Winnipeg the other evening Attorney General Campbell of Manitoba, Conservative, scouted the claim that if reciprocity doesn't turn out as expected it can be repealed at any time. That claim, made in this country also, is true; but Conservative Campbell sought to make a point about it by saying that if Canada repealed reciprocity it would constitute an affront to the United States, which would pick a quarrel and force war.

Considerable latitude is allowed in the heat of debate, but Mr. Campbell has exceeded the most lavish allowance imaginable. His statement is absurd. There is about as much chance of war between Canada and the United States as there is of war between Pennsylvania and North Dakota.

THE OPEN COURT

(Readers of The Herald are invited to make free use of this column to express their ideas about the topics of general interest, but discussions of sectarian religious differences are barred. Letters should not exceed 300 words—the shorter the better. They must be written on one side of the paper only, and they must be accompanied in every case by the name and address of the writer, though these need not be published. A signed letter is always more effective, however.)

THIS CHICKEN IS A FREAK INDEED.

To the Editor of The Herald:

Here is a freak chicken sure enough, it not only has four legs but two stomachs also. Who ever heard of a chicken with even one stomach? I have been engaged in the poultry business for a number of years and have my first chicken to see with a stomach.

ANXIOUS INQUIRER.

"FREAK CHICKEN WELL SUPPLIED WITH LEGS.
"(News Tribune Special.)

"Ironwood, Mich., Aug. 18.—T. I. Engman, a poultryman at Munising, has a freak bird in the form of a four-legged chicken. The fowl was hatched July 4 and is healthy and strong. It has two legs in the regular position and two more well developed legs at the posterior end of the body. The chicken has two stomachs and two abdomens."

THAT MIDWAY MAIL SERVICE.

To the Editor of The Herald:

In the Open Court column of your valuable paper for Aug. 17 some one from this place offers us the rather startling information that "nine-tenths of the people are well satisfied with the mail service now given us." I beg to differ with the writer. If any one will take the trouble to investigate it will be found that the big majority of the people are dissatisfied with the service since the route was extended to Bay View Heights. We do not complain of the discontinuation of the postoffice and the establishment of rural free delivery instead. That was a step in the right direction and no one, to my knowledge, has ever lifted a finger against it. Neither have we any complaint to make of the carrier. What we do object to is the schedule, since the change was made on Aug. 1, as all outgoing mail is delayed one day. Apparently it is poor policy to give the big majority poor service just to accommodate a few. If the schedule was changed so that the trip to Bay View Heights was made in the afternoon instead of in the morning it would give more satisfaction to everybody in Midway, as our letters could then be despatched on the 3 o'clock train from Proctor. We know that our letters "will not suffer" by laying over in Proctor, but what we want is to have them despatched promptly.

HENRY NORMAN.

Midway, Minn., Aug. 19.

At Liberty—The Sweetest Man.

Indianapolis News: Women are hard to please. Mrs. Wentworth Carter, who lives at Kansas City, has just discarded "the sweetest man." Ah, what a dream it must be to have a husband such as Mrs. Carter has cast aside! "He has a library of poems and can entertain sweetly, and he is just full of many bright smiles, many kisses and many hugs"—so Mrs. Carter told the court. And what a gallant is Carter, whose very soul is filled with the divine melody of song! "I once asked if there had ever been another girl in his life," said Mrs. Carter. "He put his arms around me, judge, and looking appealingly into my eyes, he breathed:

"'You were the first; you taught my heart the song
Of olden wonder, and my pulse the long,
Sweet thrill of rapture; showed me paths of dream,
And laid across life's dark a silver gleam—
You were the first.'"

And then, shaking her head with the deep emotion of the charm still on her, she sighed, "That man was irresistible, judge!" What would not a true woman give for a soul like this one, fervent with love and expressive in meter?

But alas, Mrs. Carter is a woman! The "irresistible, sweetest man" was a "dear," but "he wouldn't work." There, indeed, was the fly in the love ointment. It is indeed a sordid world in which we live, when those who can tell the rose how beautiful it is must needs think of such a vulgar thing as work! Woman has changed since the days when she was fabled to live on "honey and kisses," and Love dreamed of a little cot and a lean larder. It is the penalty for living in these piping days of peace when beefsteak costs real money and potatoes are almost as valuable as gold or coal. Our heart goes out to Carter. He comes with the language of the gods between his teeth, but he comes too late or too soon, for it is money and the sweat whereof 'tis made that women demand now. He had money once on a time, and true embodiment of the spirit of loveliness that he is, "he spent his wakeful hours in reading poetry and sipping wine." And now he loses her, who was the first! Surely he is well rid of such a sordid helpmate. And surely too, "the sweetest man" will not be "at liberty" long.

I Promise You.

I promise you that some day you and I
Will have to cut out all rasp-berry pie
Unless the trust comes down a peg or so,
Or I can find a patch where berries grow.

I promise you another thing, my dear:
We'll have a garden of our own next year,
And grow potatoes, onions, peas and beans,
Tomatoes, carrots, radishes and greens;
And if there's anything I haven't mentioned here,
We'll have that, too, Maria, never fear.
Then let them boost their prices to the sky;
The trust can "go to thunder," what care I?

A Cheerful Conversation.

Congressional Record: Bristow asked Heyburn point blank why Lorimer himself was not summoned. Said the hair-splitter:

"Mr. Lorimer was in attendance. He could not be compelled to testify. He was given an opportunity to testify."

Said Mr. Bristow: "Did he decline to testify."

Said Heyburn: "He did not testify."

"Was he invited to testify?"

"He was given an opportunity to testify."

"Was he asked?"

"He was asked."

"Did he refuse?"

"He did not testify."

"Why did he not testify?"

"The senator supposed I might happen to have personal knowledge of the fact that he was asked."

Then Mr. La Follette butted in: "Quote the record."

Mr. Heyburn: "No."

Mr. La Follette: "No, you cannot, that is all there is about that."

Mr. Heyburn: "I want to do away with some of these bombastic fallacies that have been brought into this case."

Mr. La Follette: "Then I submit that the senator will do away with himself."

Whereupon the cheerful conversation concluded itself."

Langley's "Failure."

New York Sun: "Looking over back files of The Sun we stumble on an account, dated Aug. 8, 1903, eight years ago, of the collapse of Prof. Langley's 'aerodrome.' After a very short flight through the air it took a plunge into the Potomac, and the newspapers philosophized on the folly of heavier than air machines.

"Yesterday young Atwood, after travelling from St. Louis to Chicago in a day on such a machine, was advancing toward Cleveland on his way to New York. The contraptions have sailed from Paris to Madrid and to Rome, and twenty aviators have crossed the British Channel on them, while Langley takes his place with Fulton and Stevenson among the great inventors of locomotion."

THE DEMAND FOR AN EXTRA SESSION.

Don't Be Too Sure.

Cambridge North Star: The North Star is in favor of a special session of the legislature, because not only would the railroads be brought to time, but without question there would be an investigation of the university. This would alone be worth the price of the session. But there won't be any special session.

Hears the Wrong Crowd.

Heron Lake News: It is reported that Governor Eberhart has said that he hears no urgent demand for an extra session of the legislature. It is possible the governor has heard no such demand. If he has not it is because he has been listening to the wrong crowd, listening to men who have made it a life business to give the least possible service for the most money. * * * The need of Minnesota at the present time is not fewer and poorer railroads, but an honest legislature and a governor with some semblance of a backbone and an honest desire to give the people a square deal.

We Have Hopes Yet.

Sauk Center Herald: The governor of Minnesota is quoted as saying that he will not call an extra session of the legislature to fix the gross earnings business. Did anyone for a moment suppose he'd lift his finger to do a thing that would be liable to hurt his masters?

Not Surprised.

Cass Lake Times: The newspapers of the state are just beginning to see the unfairness of the new railway fares and freight rates and almost to a man the editors blame the governor for inaction. This is not fair; the governor is doing what he was expected to do by the railways when elected; the people and the editors have no reason to howl, he has not the capacity nor the will to do otherwise.

And a Strong One.

Warroad Plaindealer: There appears to be a demand for the calling of a special session of the legislature, next winter to pass some railroad legislation and to re-apportion the state.

The Governor's Chance.

Chaska Herald: If Governor A. O. Eberhart wants to make himself solid with the people and insure his renomination and election all that he has to do is call an extra session of the legislature. A 5 per cent gross earnings tax bill can be passed within a twenty day session; nothing else need be considered. Will he have the backbone?

He Can Buy Mileage.

Thief River Falls Times: Governor Eberhart's arguments against calling a special legislative session for railroad legislation, suggests that maybe Adolph O. is traveling on a pass.

More Dangerous Not To.

Brainerd Dispatch: The extra session talk will not down, even Speaker Dunn of the last house agitating the move. Some of the politicians in the limelight seem to be afraid of the results if the movement gains enough velocity to justify the call.

The Mixup in Congress.

Johnstown, Pa., Daily Democrat: Some of the antics which have marked the situation in congress and in the country of late in regard to the tarift and other issues recall a reversible platform which was constructed more than fifty years ago by the Pontiac, Mich., Jacksonian to meet a somewhat similar condition. At that time the nation was on the eve of a great political campaign involving the most momentous consequences. After several mental struggles on the part of the editor, the Jacksonian gave birth to a platform which it was hoped would suit all concerned. It was a flexible platform. If one believed in the abolition of slavery, here were his principles. If he insisted on slavery and secession from the Union, he need to seek no further for an expression of his faith. And if he supported the Union, the Constitution and all the rest, he could wrap the drapery of his couch about him and lie down to pleasant dreams with this remarkable platform for a pillow. In reading the Michigan man's unique production it should be observed that the first column is to meet the requirements of the secessionist party; the second those of the abolitionists and the whole together those of the Democrats. The platform follows:

Hurrah for	The old Union
Secession	Is a Curse
We fought for	The Constitution
The Confederacy	Is a league with hell
We love	Free Speech
The Rebellion	Is treason
We glory in	A free press
Separation	Will not be tolerated
We must Succeed	At every hazard
We fight not for	The negro's freedom
Reconstruction	Must be obtained
The Union	We love
We love not	The negro
We never said	Let the Union slide
We want	The Union as it was
Foreign intervention	Is played out
We cherish	The old flag
The stars and bars	"Is a flaunting lie"
We venerate	The habeas corpus
Southern chivalry	Is hateful
Death to	Jeff Davis
Abe Lincoln	Isn't the Government
Down with	Mob law
Law and order	Shall triumph.

Begging the Price.

Boston Traveler: The man whose doctor had advised him to walk downtown in the morning looked scornfully at the panhandler who had held him up.

"You say you want money for your starving wife and children," he repeated; "well, I don't believe you have any."

"Well, wot of it?" asked the beggar, brazenly. "Wot if I am lyin'?"

The pedestrian gasped, but held on to his purse.

"I think you want this money only to buy liquor," he said.

"Wot if I do?"

"In that case you show yourself to be a liar, a vagabond and a drunkard—a man who is scarcely worth saving. But listen—do you know that the liquor evil is, to a certain extent, its own corrective?"

"Wotcha drivin' at?"

"Just this. Scientists tell us that liquor is killing off the weak and inferior class. In that way you may be said to be doing some good. Do you—"

The beggar held out his hand.

"Stop right dere, mister," he said, "and help de good work along before you t'ink o' somethin' else."

Too Much for Billy.

Lippincott's: Billy was a quaint old darkey who had come to the city for the first time. One day his employer sent him with a note to a man whose office was on an upper floor of a skyscraper, where every floor of the building was arranged and finished like the first one. Billy, was directed by the elevator boy to enter the "lift," and he would then show him to the office he wanted. It was Billy's first experience in an elevator, and he did not rightly understand the nature or purpose of it. On his return he described some of his experience to his employer.

"When I got ter de buildin' I axes er yaller boy whut wuz er standin' in de inside ob de front doah whar Mr. Brown's office wuz. an' he tol' me ter come wid him, an' he would show me. He tuk me inter er big cage an' shet de doah, an' den we begun ter move. An', Marse John, I'se tellin' you de gospel trufe, we got off right whar we started an' God knows we riz."

Women Teachers in the South.

Christian Science Monitor: The extent to which the woman public school teacher in the South holds in her hands the future prosperity and happiness of her section is probably not fully appreciated yet by her or by others. Not education merely, but the right kind of education, will solve, if pursued patiently and steadfastly, some of the South's most perplexing problems of today. This solution will come all the more quickly if Southern women shall take up the training of the youth of the South. The success of the Atlanta normal school and of similar Southern institutions for the training of teachers gives assurance that Southern women are mindful of their responsibility as well as their opportunity.

Muldoon.

There was an athlete named Muldoon,
Came all the way from Saskatoon.
He was a wrestler of repute.
His prowess none dared to dispute.
By him a challenge wide was hurled
To all the wrestlers of the world,
To meet him on the padded mat,
But there was none who dared combat.
Alas! how fate belittles man,
And brings to naught his fondest plan.

This man Muldoon from Saskatoon,
Was bested in a drink saloon.
With youth and hope and strength and wealth,
With smiling face and glow of health,
He stepped up to the bar within
And ordered whisky, wine and gin.
For beer and brandy too, he called;
He drank his fill and then he stalled.

They laid him gently on the floor,
Where he had never been before.
They took his money from his vest,
The dope he guzzled took the rest.
And now Muldoon from Saskatoon,
Is treated as a mere buffoon.
And saddest thing of all, alack!
He bluffs in vain. "He can't come back."

John Sharp Eloquent.

Mark Sullivan in Collier's Weekly: John Sharp Williams of Mississippi is a Democrat who does not have a panic when some Republican hurls the epithet "free trader" at him. Senator Williams had a long running debate recently with Senator Bailey of Texas, who is a protection Democrat, but doesn't like to admit it. Senator Williams closed the debate with a combination of thought and feeling, such as constitutes the best of modern eloquence:

"Why, my friends, men in religion, men in trades, men in politics have been afraid of freedom ever since the world began. God Almighty seems to the only being anywhere who is not afraid of freedom and not afraid to give it to his creatures. He gives it to such an extent that he lets us go wrong if we will—even to that extent. From the beginning religious bigots have been afraid of it, political bigots have been afraid of it and industrial bigots have been afraid of it. And yet, whenever it comes, we find it stimulates human enterprise, human intelligence, human ambition and human industry to such an extent that it more than compensates for what seems to be the plain and palpable and obvious immediate losses by it."

Ladies, Much in Little Here!

Theatrical World: "Nothing concerning the profession seems more puzzling to the dear old public than the perpetual youth of our feminine members. "How strange women generally have not learned the secret of keeping the face young! How simple a matter to get an ounce of mercolized wax at the drug store, apply it like cold cream, and in the morning wash it off. We know how this gradually, imperceptibly absorbs old cuticle, keeping the complexion new and fresh, free from fine lines, sallowness or overredness. We know, too, that this mercolized wax is the reason actresses don't wear moth patches, liver spots, pimples and the like. Why don't our sisters on the other side of the footlights learn the reason, and profit by it?"

DRAWING AND ENFORCING THE PURE FOOD LAWS

President George L. Flanders Discusses Important Problems at Opening Session.

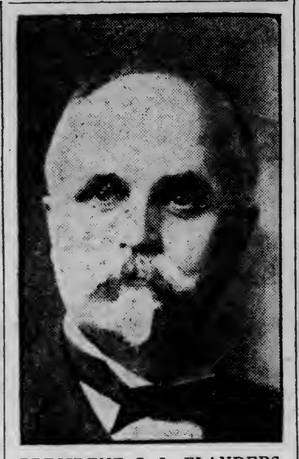
Some Difficulties That Must Be Met and Overcome By Inspectors.

President George L. Flanders delivered his annual address this morning. He spoke as follows:

"In my closing remarks to this body at New Orleans last year I stated: Justice and equity should be the mark to be aimed at but the rule or standard for that justice or equity must be the mission or commission given by the duly constituted authority. With that view of the case we shall continue to be as we ought to be, a government by law rather than a government by men.

"Such a condition would be in harmony with all the fundamental ideas entertained by the fathers in establishing this government and would make sure to the sensitive business public a proper freedom from individual fiat which, if allowed to exist, is liable to be mercurial in its tendencies depending, of course, largely upon the personnel of its source or origin. Such a condition of source of authority would be hazardous and as disturbing to the business world as internal terrestrial disturbances are to the physical world, their action not being known or anticipated until the event.

"Taking this as a correct fundamental proposition, it makes the law under which we work the sole charter of our powers, duties and obligations, eliminating personal notions of what the law ought to be or of the executive's right to pass upon the wisdom of the law. The courts have said over and over again that it is not within the province of the court to pass upon the wisdom of the law, but it is rather within the province of the court, first, to inquire what is the law and, second, to ascertain whether it contravenes constitutional provisions. I am of the opinion that this very ably defines the attitude in which each executive who is charged with enforcement of the statute must find himself, to-wit: what is the law? Having determined this question he, unlike the courts, must assume that the law is constitutional, presumptively, leaving the question of whether it does or does not contravene the constitution to be raised by those who are opposing its enforcement, in whole or in part, who will find means and ways to present that question to the court for its interpretation. As to whether the law is wise or unwise, whether its policies are correct or incorrect, is not the responsibility of the executive, and for that reason he should offer no apologies for its existence. It is presumably a deliberate action on the part of the legislative body as a representative of a sovereign people and is presumptively a crystallization of the will of that people.



PRESIDENT G. L. FLANDERS.

Duty of Executive.

"The enforcement of the statute as it stands, in good faith and without modification, is the duty of the executive, but in doing this he should remember that the law-abiding citizen who is struggling in a competitive world has probably also examined the statute with care to determine his rights, obligations and duties. It is his chart also. At this point there is chance for a difference of judgment or opinion as to the meaning of the law, and the danger therein is that he who seeks to do something will so construe the statute as to weaken its restrictions in his favor or to unduly strengthen or enlarge them to curtail the movements of a competitor. If the commissioner does not agree with the his construction, then criticism follows, which is anything but exhilarating to official comfort.

"On the other hand, zealous executives who are working earnestly for what to them seems to be not only good but proper results, should be careful not to so confound their ideas of what the law ought to be with the law itself as not to be able to distinguish clearly the line of demarcation, for such a blurred state of mind will inevitably produce litigation that may be an unwarranted hardship upon the trade, which by its reaction may ultimately be a final financial burden upon the consumer, because the courts will invariably determine equitably the meaning of the statute, at least I so believe.

"In view of this statement I will call attention to the attitude that executives as well as attorneys should, in my judgment, hold to the courts, by telling you a story of an attorney who said to the court: 'Your honor, the rule of law in such a case as this is so and so,' to which the court replied, 'That is not the rule of law,' whereupon the attorney quickly, tactfully and respectfully responded, 'Your honor, that was the rule of law until this last decision of yours.' The decision having once been made, it is an additional source of knowledge or information for the would-be law-abiding citizen, and helps to determine the rights, duties and obligations of all concerned.

Interpreting the Law.

"Thus far the part played by the executive, that is, the work of the dairy and food commissioner, is purely executory or ministerial in character, providing that he has not enlarged the scope of it by the injection of personal notions or views. If he has, to just that extent, the work becomes personal so far as he is concerned and may become persecution and may be restrictive of personal and public rights. To illustrate, in one of the states of the Union there is a statute providing that condensed milk shall be manufactured only from pure, clean, healthful, fresh, unadulterated and wholesome milk from which the cream has not been removed either wholly or in part, and in which the proportion of milk solids shall be in quantity the equivalent of 12 per cent of milk solids in crude milk and of which solids 25 per cent shall be fats. This statute, of course, applies to a commodity which is manufactured and sold as and for condensed milk. It does not restrict or regulate the manufacture of condensed skimmed milk nor any other condensed commodity, yet certain business interests have attempted to convince the executive officer in that state that such a statute must be construed as absolutely prohibiting the manufacture of condensed skimmed milk, and to that extent have had their attorneys prepare a brief to be presented which on the face of it would seem to leave the impression that the executive had a right under the statute to reach forth a restraining hand and stop the manufacture of condensed skimmed milk notwithstanding the fact that an appellate court in the same state has held that the law is not so restrictive and does not so apply.

Paternalism.

"Laws of this character are supposed to be enacted under the police power of the state; a power not possessed by the national government, but which is inherent within the state for the purpose of protecting the lives, health and morals of the people. The exercise of this power is not intended to reach the extreme of paternalism, but the laws passed under it are for the purpose of protecting the public, that is, for the public weal. The fact that the line of demarcation between the police power and the ordinary law powers is not distinct, renders it important that persons seeking to procure the enactment of statutes professedly under that power should have sufficient knowledge and be sufficiently conservative so as not to transcend the power to the extent of producing a reaction. He should bear in mind the old maxim that he who comes into court asking equity must come with clean hands, and the other, 'He that hath his cause just is thrice armed.'

"The laws that have been enacted in the different states and in the nation have been so enacted at the instance of public sentiment and demand. That demand was superinduced by the knowledge of the existence of fraud—the result of predatory commercialism—such commercialism predicating its assumed rights upon the assumption that its action was the result of competition rendered necessary by the public demand for cheap food products, all of which was based upon a false premise in so far as it is presented or defended in that light. The underlying fundamental principle that has promoted such frauds in the past has been commercial greed. Such action has produced resentment and reaction that has resulted in the statutes now upon the books of the several states and of the nation against commercial free-booting. Such statutes have met with the approval of the best manufacturers and producers and they stand today among their warmest sponsors and supporters anxious with us that these laws, in so far as they are equitable and just, shall stand, and in so far as they are not, that they shall be so amended as to properly fall within that category. When we contemplate that these enactments were necessary and were the result of a reaction of sentiment which demanded that restriction should be put upon the right of the freedom of contract—a right that is sacredly fundamental in our institutions and which should never be allowed to be contravened except when necessary for the protection of the rights of the people as a whole—then we have a glaring example of the results that are produced by not adhering to, or properly observing equitable rules in contract.

Danger of Reaction.

"It is the opinion of the writer that this example should stand as a warning against undue enthusiasm in enacting laws under the police power. In other words, he who seeks to remedy an evil, claiming to do so in the interest of the people, should be careful that he does not produce enactments that will overstep the bounds of equity and justice and in the interest of one portion of the people, rob another portion of its rights; because if he does, we may expect, in the light of the reactions referred to in this paper, that a reaction in the opposite direction will set in in the minds of the people, or a portion of them, and become sufficiently strong ultimately to nullify some of the good results produced which should not be lost.

"It is within the writer's knowledge that in the state of New York, in an attempt to preclude from food products harmful preservatives, that a bill was drafted and enacted by the legislature into a law which provided as follows:

"'No person shall sell, offer or expose for sale, any butter or other dairy products containing a preservative, but this shall not be construed to prohibit the use of salt in butter or cheese, or spirituous liquors in club or other fancy cheese or sugar in condensed milk. No person, firm, association or corporation shall induce or attempt to induce any person to violate any of the provisions of this chapter. Any person, firm, association or corporation selling, offering or advertising for sale any substance, preparation or matter for use in violation of the provisions of this chapter shall be guilty of a violation of this section.'

"When this bill became a law it was believed that the use of preservatives in the state of New York, other than those excepted, were doomed and that the puzzling problem confronting the people of the state was solved. Immediately after its passage the department charged with its enforcement commenced active operations against violators. Among other violators was a man named Biesecker. The specific allegation made against him in the complaint was that he on June 27, 1900, at his store, No. 59 Murray street, borough of Manhattan, city of New York, did sell a substance, preparation or matter called preservaline, which was declared by him to be a preservative of butter or other dairy products; that said substance, preparation or matter called preservaline is a preservative and is not sale to be put into butter or cheese, and is not spirituous liquors to be put into club or other fancy cheese, and is not sugar to be put into condensed milk; that the defendant did sell the said substance, preparation or matter with the intent and recommendation that the purchaser should manufacture it, mix or compound it with, or add to it natural milk or cream and other dairy products and then sell the said dairy products containing the said preservative.

"The action was brought on for trial on Dec. 11, 1900. The defendant demurred to the plaintiff's complaint, that is, in other words, admitted all that the defendant alleged, denying nothing, and leaving it to the court whether such action constituted a violation and, if so, whether the law was constitutional or not. The court found for the defendant, holding that such a law was unconstitutional. An appeal was taken to the appellate division of the supreme court, which court after due hearing affirmed the decision of the lower court, holding the law to be unconstitutional.

The State's Powers.

"From this decision the people appealed to the court of last resort of that state (the court of appeals) and that court in considering this case held the following doctrine to wit:

"'While the police power of the legislature has its limitations, each of which cannot be accurately stated, except as required by the particular case under review, generally speaking, the following propositions as to legislation relating to articles of food may be deduced from the authorities:

"'1. That the legislature cannot forbid or wholly prevent the sale of a wholesome article of food.

"'2. That legislation intended and reasonably adapted to prevent an article being manufactured in imitation or semblance of a well-known article in common use and thus imposing upon consumers or purchasers is valid.

"'3. That, in the interest of public health, the legislature may declare articles of food not complying with a specified standard unwholesomeness and forbid their sale.'

"It further held as follows:

"'Nor is it a legislative determination in the interest of public health that preservatives, other than those specified, are unwholesome adulterations of dairy products, since it does not make the introduction of a foreign substance into them, however deleterious an adulteration, nor an adulteration illegal, except where the substance is introduced for the purpose of preserving them, which is a proper and lawful object in itself; the provision is, therefore, unconstitutional and void, because it absolutely forbids the use of articles of food when they contain any other preservatives than those specified, even though they are not rendered unwholesome by the use of such ingredients.'

"Thus the statute which was intended to allay all the evils resulting from preservatives, was lost, the good parts with the bad, simply because in drawing it its advocates had gone too far.

"With the thought in mind superinduced by the experience above quoted, I would counsel conservative progress on the part of dairy and food commissioners in demanding legislation in the interest of the people to the end that they do not make the mistake of getting results that are against those interests. Careful and earnest research should be made before launching a statute to see that it is well within the lines or limits of the courts' decisions to the end that when it once has been enacted it may stand with no reactive influence.

"Elsewhere in this paper I have stated, as I see it, the province of the dairy and food commissioner as an executive officer. In making that statement I was not, however, unmindful of the fact that too often his opinion is asked as to what legislation should be enacted on the ground that his experience is probably such as to equip him with extraordinary knowledge of what should be the statutory requirements. Therein lies a temptation to take advantage to advise possibly extreme action to cure some particular evil and possibly without due thought as to the effect of such statute upon other and possibly greater questions. Such advice is usually personal in its nature possibly based upon experience of an official character and while it may be wise from all points of view that have come under the observation of the commissioner, it may not meet public approval, in which event it becomes a matter for public criticism and to just that extent is a violation of the principle that law should be the crystallization of the will of the people.

Enforcement of Laws.

"In enforcing the food laws there are three questions which must receive careful consideration:

"1. Are the goods to be considered an adulteration within the meaning of the statute?

"2. If they are such, is the adulteration a permissible one, that is, one which will not prevent the sale of the goods and

"3. If so, are they properly labeled under the requirements of the statute?

"These questions are to be determined by the findings of the chemists or other scientists employed by the executive. There is usually little or no difficulty in determining the first, namely, as to whether the goods are an adulteration within the meaning of the statute, but the second proposition as to whether their sale is permissible is quite different, that is, the question resolves itself into the proposition: Is any ingredient in the product offered or to be offered for sale poisonous, deleterious or harmful? The determination of this question will determine whether the goods can be sold.

Must Rely on Chemist.

"Here the executive reaches a point in his work in which he must rely absolutely on his chemist or bacteriologist for determining fact. It must be borne in mind that the executive officer cannot stop or forbid the sale or recover a penalty for the selling of goods upon the market until he has first proven that their sale is within the prohibition of the statute. It is a matter for proof on his part. He cannot accuse the defendant and thereby make him presumptively guilty, forcing him into the defensive position in which he must prove that his goods are not poisonous, deleterious or harmful, but he must prove affirmatively that his goods are. In such a case, if we are proceeding civilly, we must have a preponderance of evidence; if criminally, our evidence must be beyond a reasonable doubt. Therefore, if the chemist or chemists who are passing upon a given sample of goods disagree, the case becomes doubtful. If the number taking opposite sides are equal so that the evidence on both sides of the case is equally balanced as to numbers, reputation with subject and situation, all governmental out doubt falls. Certainly such would be the result where the preponderance of evidence is on the side of the defense.

"Not long since in a discussion I presented this view of the case before a large audience and was answered by a gentleman who has had sufficient experience to have made a better distinction than he did, to the effect that if men refuse to act in this world because other men disagree, nothing would be done because men have disagreed or failed to agree from the beginning of time. This is a good illustration of an attempt to blind men's eyes to real facts and he who uttered it is evidently not aware of the fundamental maxims underlying the prescriptive constitution, the organic law of antiquity, and they are the necessities of a constitutionalism, of governments that are accusatory and not inquisitorial and confiscatory."

Some Legal Maxims.

"The maxims to which I refer are as follows:

"'Favorabillores rei potius quam actores habentur: Defendants are rather to be favored than plaintiffs.'

"'Actore non probante reus absolvitur: If the plaintiff does not prove his case the defendant is absolved,' or in other words:

"'Semper praesumitur pro negante: The presumption is in favor of him who denies,' or in other words:

"'Actori incumbit onus probandi: The burden of proof lies on the plaintiff,' or in other words:

"'The burden of proof depends on him who holds the affirmative.

"'The principal maxim and its cognates are the datum posts of numberless rules, discussions and cases.

"'This of itself is a criticism without warrant yet effective in producing dissatisfaction that is damaging to the cause and discouraging to the executive officer. It matters little how much men disagree either on essential or unessential points so long as that disagreement affects the views of no one except those who entertained them, but when that disagreement is of such a vital nature that legal conclusions depend upon it, it is quite a different matter and to hold the two up as similar or analogous is to utter that which acts as a self-reflecting criticism which will be recognized by the earnest, discerning mind although it may become the cause of criticism which will ultimately produce in the mind of some a belief that there exists official inactivity. Such sophistry as this should be indignantly criticised and rebuked by earnest, honest officials whereever met and it should be insisted that the enforcement of the features of any food or drug law upon the question of the healthfulness, wholesomeness or harmfulness of the commodity or an ingredient thereof, must primarily rest upon the shoulders of the scientific or expert. If he fails in his duty, either through lack of knowledge or otherwise, the work is crippled. If this work is so done that the experts agree in their conclusions, then the facts can be presented to the court unequivocally and with confidence for its consideration. Otherwise the case will have elements of doubt in it, and it is a well known principal that the benefit of all doubt is given to the defendant, which probably would spell out defeat, and defeat when once heralded in the papers is a great encouragement to the would-be violators and leaves a department in worse shape than as though no prosecution had been undertaken.

Respect Decisions.

"When a decision has been rendered by the court it should receive due respect, which means that you must either abide by its decision or take the appeal that the statutes provide to the higher courts, in which event, when a final decision is reached, you have then ascertained in full and complete the meaning of the statute of your state as applied to the given state of facts. If the facts are not right, it then behooves us to start the next case on a different state of facts or call the attention of the legislative body to the weak spots or defects in the statute as pointed out by the court, remembering at all times that our courts are our arbiters of last resort and should be and are above suspicion."

ORIGINAL PACKAGES

Right to Regulate Labeling of Food Is Powerful Weapon.

National Food and Drug Law Is Bringing Uniformity Among States.

"Original Importers' Packages and the Labeling of Packages in Intrastate Traffic That Have Been Imported Into the State as Part of the Original Package," was the subject under discussion at this afternoon's session of the Association of State and National Food and Dairy Departments. Alfred H. Jones, food commissioner of Illinois, read the paper on the subject, a general discussion following. Mr. Jones spoke as follows:

"There are no questions before the American people today of greater importance than those relating to the federal and state control of foods.

"Power was granted to congress to regulate the sale of foods by the importers in the original package and the labeling of packages for intrastate commerce that may be, or have been, imported into the state as part of the original packages, as a safeguard against commercial hostilities and reprisals between the states, as well as which power has been delegated to the congress of the United States and that body can, by law, determine what shall, or shall not be permitted to be imported. With the right of importation follows the right of sale in original package, and therefore, the states cannot prohibit the sale of articles of commerce within their borders. The states cannot, under the guise of inspection, or under their reserved police powers, prohibit the importation into their jurisdiction of sound meat, under the pretense that it may be diseased or decayed, or spirituous or malt liquors for fear that they may intoxicate, or oleomargarine for fear it may be adulterated."

Prosecutions.

"Hundreds of prosecutions have been brought under this national food and drug law covering nearly all phases of legitimate food and drug control and no serious defect has yet been discovered.

"This law so far as it relates to foods cover all articles in the original package used for foods, drink, confectionery or condiment by man or other animals. Its terms are broad and comprehensive. It provides against all adulteration, the use of harmful substances and false labeling. It provides opportunity for the injured party to be heard in defense of its products before court procedure or seizure. It provides a means for co-operation between state and national food officials by requiring the national authority, administering the law, to examine and report upon any specimen of food submitted by the health officer of any state. It is the only present basis for uniformity on this subject throughout the various states of the union.

"The best evidence of the strength and completeness of this national food and drug law lies in the fact that it has been substantially adopted by the legislatures of thirty-five states.

"The national food and drug law has also received the highest commendation and approval of the commissioners on uniform state laws, appointed by the governors of the various states.

"Mr. Chairman—I wish to state that the subject assigned me, 'Original Importers' Packages and the Labeling of Packages in Intrastate Traffic That Have Been Imported Into the State as Part of the Original Package,' should be the study of every state food commissioner and food control official—for back of it is the strong arm of the national government reaching out into every state, territory, the District of Columbia and our insular possessions, and saying to them, 'Here is provided a way by which these may be determined under our interstate commerce laws in foods, not only as to the kind and quality of the foods, but whether they are properly prepared and labeled, as required by our national food laws.'

HARMONY OF PURE FOOD CONVENTION MAY BE MARRED

ed out the difficulties which the administrative departments of the government are encountering in handling the diversified laws. The governor expressed a hope that the convention would avoid technicalities and political discussions and confine itself to work for betterment and more uniformity in legislation. His statement that it has been the policy of the Minnesota executive for some time to appoint men removed from politics to its dairy and food department was greeted with hearty applause from the convention. He said that if he got another chance to send a message to the legislature he would be very grateful for a set of resolutions from the body before him to incoporate in it.

Mayor Cullum then in a few well chosen words extended to the visitors the welcome of the city, and argued briefly in favor of their making this a permanent convention point.

Hon. R. L. Cochran, dairy commissioner from Colorado, was on the program for a response, but he was unable to be present and his address was read by R. N. Allen of Kentucky.

Starts Fireworks.

Dr. Charles D. Woods of Maine started the fireworks soon after the close of the addresses of welcome and response by a request from the committee on revision of the constitution for instructions as to what kind of an organization the association wished to effect. Dr. Woods had some ideas on the subject and put them forcibly. There has been a feeling for some time that the association was becoming unwieldy and it is generally felt that either a division into a number of sister organizations which are to meet at the same time but separately for discussion of their separate problems and join in discussion of general topics, or a considerable limitation on its membership should be effected. If it is decided to limit the membership it is probable that all except the state and national executives will be excluded and there will be a hot fight on such a proposition. By motion discussion of this point was put over until tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock.

The Wiley Question.

James Foust of Pennsylvania put the Wiley question up to the association in a resolution. "That it is the sense of the association that it is unfitting that questions pertaining purely to the administrative actions of any of the governmental controls of which this association is composed shall be made matters of discussion in its proceedings." The resolution was referred to the committee on resolutions, though G. L. Emery, representative from Wisconsin protested that this was practically putting a gag on free discussion in the meeting if will be reported for vote later in the meeting. The general sentiment seems to favor the resolution, for though the friends of Dr. Wiley claim to have a big majority at the meeting they believe that agitation at this time would hurt rather than help him at Washington. If the Wiley affair is discussed it will be at the instigation of those opposed to him.

President George L. Flanders of New York delivered his address this morning, which appears elsewhere in The Herald.

He also announced the appointment of the following committees:

Credentials, H. F. Potter of Connecticut, James Foust of Pennsylvania, and J. H. Fitz-Randolph of New Jersey; resolutions, L. Davies of Washington, Dr. Edwin De Barr of Oklahoma, William Frear of Pennsylvania, . H. Wallis of Idaho and A. H. Jones of Illinois; finance, W. Bailey of Oregon, C. H. Billingsby of Alabama and W. B. Barney of Iowa.

STATEHOOD BILL IS SENT TO TAFT

People of Arizona Are Prepared to Celebrate Its Signing.

Washington, Aug. 21.—The new Arizona-New Mexico statehood resolution was signed by Vice President Sherman today and sent immediately to President Taft for his approval.

Ready to Celebrate.

Phoenix, Ariz., Aug. 21.—Arrangements have been completed for a big statehood celebration here today upon receipt of word that President Taft has signed the statehood resolution. Orations will be made on the future of the new state, the scheduled speakers being Republicans, Democrats and anti-recall men.

LOYAL ORDER OF MOOSE MEETS IN DETROIT, MICH.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 21.—Thousands of members of the Loyal Order of Moose are gathered in this city for the twenty-third international convention of their order, which officially opened today. Politics early began to play an important part in the proceedings of the convention. William N. Henning of Milwaukee is one candidate for the office of supreme prelate. The nomination of officers was a part of this afternoon's program. The election is scheduled for tomorrow.

SITUATION IS NEAR NORMAL

End of British Strike Brings Rapid Return to Regular Service.

Trouble Over Seniority Has Started—Peace at Liverpool.

London, Aug. 21. — The railroads were rapidly restoring normal service today, and the managers confidently expected that by evening all lines would be operating almost as smoothly as before the general strike on the roads of Great Britain was ordered last Thursday night. There were some hitches, but these were believed to be but temporary obstacles to a formal pact assuring a better working arrangement between employers and employes, satisfactory to both sides.

The settlement brought about Saturday evening through the good offices of the government and the board of trade, provided for the appointment of sectional conciliation boards representing both parties, and which shall undertake to adjust all immediate differences. Tomorrow the membership of a special commission of inquiry will be announced. This commission will assume the burden of working out a permanent agreement.

Expect Bigger Pay.

The men expect an advance in wages, concessions regarding the consideration of future grievances and recognition of their unions.

The companies have been assured that at the next session of parliament the government will propose legislation providing that an increase in the cost of labor due to an improvement of conditions will be a justification for a reasonable advance of railway rates within the legal maximum.

Midland railway employes returning to work this morning found that in some cases they were not to be reinstated exactly in their old positions, to which men who had remained loyal had been promoted.

When the strikers discovered that they had lost their seniority they refused inferior positions pending a reference of the difficulty to the union executives.

At Manchester the porters, carters and freight handlers remained out. Additional troops were sent to Manchester to assist in relieving the congestion of freight at the railway stations.

Peace at Liverpool.

Liverpool, Aug. 21.—The local dock troubles were settled at a conference between the ship owners and representatives of the striking dock men at the Cunard line offices this afternoon. The carters and coal heavers will return to work with the dockmen.

AVIATOR'S EAR PUT ON AGAIN

Member Lost in Train Wreck Grafted Into Place.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Aug. 21.—R. B. Russell, youthful aviator, whose shoulder was fractured and who sustained internal injuries in the Pennsylvania flyer wreck here a week ago, will leave the hospital soon with a good left ear which was severed from his head in the accident. The flesh was picked up and grafted back by a deft operation which has proved entirely successful. Other wreck victims who still are in the hospitals are recovering, including Engineer Malone, at first thought fatally hurt.

GRAND ARMY WEEK OPENS IN ROCHESTER.

"UNCLE SAM SPECIAL" PASSENGERS JOLTED.

Chicago, Aug. 21.—Twenty-five passengers of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul passenger known as the "Uncle Sam Special" were shaken up today when the train ran into a switch engine in the local yards.

The train, which left Minneapolis at 2 p. m. yesterday, was late, and the switch engine was on the main track by mistake. The special was running at reduced speed, as is customary in the yards.

TWO BROTHERS DIE IN ST. LOUIS FIRE.

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 21. — Two brothers, Anthony and Edwin Braun, were burned to death last night in a fire which destroyed the home of the former. When the firemen arrived the building was a mass of flames and it was with difficulty they were able to save the wife of Anthony Braun and her children.

Minnesota Scribes Guests at Hurried Banquet in Duluth.

Invited to Spend Next Vacation Camping in Zenith City.

Although the members of the Minnesota State Editorial association did not have a long stay in Duluth, they were given a royal welcome by Duluth newspaper men and members of the Commercial club, Saturday evening, immediately before their departure down the lakes on the steamer Hamonic.

They arrived in the city Saturday evening about 7 o'clock and were escorted to the Commercial clubrooms where they were the guests at a banquet. Plates were laid for sixty. Owing to the early departure of the boat, the usual after-dinner speeches were passed by, but nevertheless it was a merry gathering. The Hamonic was held until 8:30 in order to give the editors more time. The Duluth men at the banquet found time to extend to the visitors, through C. S. Mitchell, an invitation to spend the next vacation camping in Duluth.

The evening was an ideal one for the beginning of the trip down the lakes. The boat will make the usual stops along the lakes, where the party will make short visits. After the boat arrives at Sarnia, Ont., the party will leave by train for Detroit, where several hours will be spent. They will return on the Hamonic next Wednesday, arriving in Duluth at noon, Saturday.

The editorial party is composed of the following: J. H. Johnson, wife and daughter, Winona; H. G. White and wife, Winona; N. H. Ingersoll and wife, Brainerd; W. H. James, Breckenridge; J. R. Landy and wife, Olivia; W. T. Duffy, Shakopee; D. Roy Johnson and W. B. Olson, Svenske Folkets Tidnung, Minneapolis; E. F. Rogers and wife, Winona; Julius Thorson and wife, Benson; Miss Donna Lycan, Bemidji; Miss Louise Beare, Brainerd; Louis Sommers, New Ulm; A. J. Halsted and Leslie Halsted, Brainerd; J. S. Arneson and wife, Chisholm; J. M. Freeman and wife, Olivia; Asa M. Wallace, Fairfax; S. E. Farnham and wife, Madison; Edgerton Brooks, Brainerd; C. J. Buckley and son, Delano; H. M. Wheelock and wife, Minneapolis; C. C. Whitney and wife, Marshall; D. Ramalay and wife, St. Paul; Mrs. A. E. Schroeder, Hector; George Authier, Minneapolis; E. Holdale, Minneapolis; Frank M. Eddy, Sauk Center; Mrs. G. H. Meeker, Olivia; Herman Roe and wife, Northfield; S. A. Gordon, Brown's Valley; W. F. James, Breckenridge; I. A. Caswell and wife, St. Paul; Mrs. Sallie M. Moses, Mrs. P. E. Hansen, Frank J. Meyst and wife, Ernest C. Pratt and wife, Minneapolis.

In addition to these were the following Duluth people: L. M. Willcuts, Charles S. Mitchell, News Tribune; Stillman H. Bingham, The Herald; J. C. P. O'Donnell, Fred A. Hills and wife, and C. J. Townsend.

The itinerary of the trip after leaving Duluth in brief, is as follows:

Aug. 20—Arrive Port Arthur at noon; leave Port Arthur 3 p. m.

Aug. 21—Arrive Sault Ste. Marie, 9:30 a. m., passing through locks; leave Sault Ste. Marie 10:30, St. Mary's river to Lake Huron.

Aug. 22—Arrive Sarnia and Port Huron 6:15 a. m., leave Sarnia for Detroit, St. Clair Rapid railway, 8 a. m.; arrive Detroit, 11:30 a. m.; leave Detroit, Grand Trunk railway, 4:20 p. m.; arrive Sarnia, 6:30 p. m.

Aug. 23.—Leave Sarnia, 3:30 p. m. on steamer Hamonic.

Aug. 24—Arrive Sault Ste. Marie 9 a. m.; leave Sault Ste. Marie, 11 a. m.

Aug. 25—Arrive Port Arthur and Fort William, 7 a. m.; leave Port Arthur, 11 p. m.

Aug. 26—Arrive Duluth 1 p. m.; dinner on boat; leave Duluth, 1:30 p. m; arrive St. Paul in time for evening trains outward.

MAKING IT HARDER TO FLEECE FAIR PATRONS.

At least one "booster" for the Minnesota state fair will be pleased with the improvements and new rules made by the management this year. One of the things insisted upon by Secretary Simpson was the installation of a large number of new park benches, new comfort stations and a thoroughly equipped rest cottage for women and children. All of these will be ready for visitors before Sept. 4.

A rule made by the superintendent of concessions was that this year every restaurant and refreshment stand proprietor must post a complete price list of everything he has for sale at the entrance to his place of business.

The following letter received by Mr. Crickmore a few days ago is proof that the innovations will be popular.

"Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 7, 1911.

"Supt. of Concessions, state fair: I often think of what a magnificent institution our state fair is and will continue to be and the great benefit and knowledge gained therefrom. But I would like to make a few suggestions that possibly might add to the comfort and pleasure of the vast throngs which make our fair a success in every way.

"First: I would like to see placed around the grounds, resting places for the weary.

"Second: Is it not possible to compel the owners of various refreshment and lunch stands to display a price list of their various wares so that the public can plainly see them?

"Last summer I witnessed a scene that made me feel ashamed. An old farmer asked for a glass of lemonade, not inquiring the price. After drinking the same he was asked to pay 15 cents. He refused to pay, saying it was too much. He was then threatened with bodily harm unless he 'dug up.' I know not if they are allowed to fleece the public in this summer, but it seems hardly right. Wishing the fair much success in 1911, I beg to remain yours truly,

"....."

In discussing this letter Mr. Crickmore said: "I am very glad to hear of any such cases as this. I only wish that I had heard of it at the time. My correspondent should have notified me at once. It was a simple duty that he owed the fair. Such conduct will not be countenanced and if any such is reported to me I shall immediately take away the man's license. I most earnestly request that any one having any fault to find with fair employes or concessionaires this year report it at once to the office of the superintendent of privileges in the grandstand. If every one will do this our work will be made much easier."

GIVE DINNER FOR FORMER COMMANDER.

Col. Charles E. Johnson was the guest of honor at a banquet given last night at the Commercial club by a number of his friends. Col. Johnson commanded the Fourteenth Minnesota Volunteers during the Spanish-American war, and some of the men present at the banquet last night served under him. Don Carlos W. Musser was toastmaster and addresses were made by the following:

Lieut. Milton L. Mead, Thirteenth Minnesota volunteers; Lieut. C. D. McCoy, United States hospital corps; City Comptroller W. C. McCormick; Capt. Briand, Fourth cavalry; John P. Brunette, M. J. Murray, L. S. Larson, Lieut. R. M. Weaver, Alderman J. B. Gibson, W. C. Kimball and F. G. Hanson.

You can prepare a delicious, nourishing meal with Shredded Wheat Biscuit and Triscuit without building a fire in the kitchen. Place two Biscuits (whole or crushed) in a deep dish and cover with berries of any kind—raspberries, blackberries, huckleberries or other fresh fruits—and then pour over them milk, adding a little cream and sugar to suit the taste. Serve Triscuit instead of ordinary toast with butter, soft cheese or caviar. It is a crisp, delicious snack for the Summer days.

IRON AND STEEL REVIEW

New York, Aug. 21.—The most interesting development in the steel trade last week, was the increased activity in structural and fabricated steel and the larger orders for equipment released by the railroads.

The principal building contracts disposed of include 4,000 tons for a hotel in Philadelphia; 2,000 for one in New York and 5,300 tons for a new insurance building in Milwaukee. The principal bridge orders secured include 4,900 tons for the Alleghany bridge at Pittsburg, 7,000 tons for the approaches for East St. Louis bridge, 1,750 tons for the bridge on the Boston & Maine railroad and 1,100 tons for the Washington street bridge at Chicago.

With the numerous small orders placed the dispositions for the week call for about 40,000 tons of fabricated material. In addition new business has developed for about 5,000 tons, making the total contracts pending 75,000 tons. Among the principal contracts for which bids are in are 14,000 tons for the Kansas City terminal and 10,000 tons for the field museum in Chicago. Competition is keen and prices continue low.

The most important railway contracts for equipment were 20,000 tons of rail for the Oregon short line, 10,000 tons for the Wichita Falls railway, 4,500 cars and 60 locomotives for the Erie railroad, 1,200 cars and 20 locomotives for the St. Louis & San Francisco railroad, 35 locomotives for the Pennsylvania railroad, 15 engines for the Missouri Pacific, as well as a number of export orders for rails, locomotives and track supplies.

Mill and blast furnace operations were increased and greater activity is expected this week. A larger amount of marine work is pending which will require from 30,000 to 50,000 tons of plates. Pig iron was also more active, contracts placed in all distributing districts aggregating between 90,000 and 100,000 tons.

POLITICS WILL BE TAFT'S THEME

Coming Trip Will Be Devoted to Campaign Work.

Washington, Aug. 21.—Plans for President Taft's coming trip through the West and to the Pacific coast practically are completed. The journey will be almost as extensive as that taken by the president on his famous "swing around the circle" in 1909, when he traveled more than 13,000 miles and visited thirty-three states. He will break ground for the Panama canal exposition at San Francisco, make several scores of addresses and attempt to scale the 14,000 feet of Mount Ranier's precipitous slope.

According to the present arrangement, the president will be gone six weeks. In that time it is expected he will make close to 200 speeches. Republican leaders look upon the trip as the most important, politically, that the president has mapped out since he entered the White House. He will go through all the states in the West in which they recognize the domination of the Progressive Republicans, who are counted on to oppose his nomination next year.

The route eastward on his return will allow him to stop in Idaho, Montana, the Dakotas and Minnesota.

SHANGHAIED BOY NOT IOWA WOMAN'S SON.

New York, Aug. 21.—Mrs. Edith Dunham, formerly of Sioux City, Iowa, was disappointed last night in finding that George Allen, who was committed to the care of the Children's society recently, after telling a story of being shanghaied on a Porto Rican steamer, was not her missing son. Mrs. Dunham, when she saw Allen's picture and heard that he claimed Sioux City as his home, was convinced that he was her 17-year-old boy, who disappeared eight weeks ago in this city. Mrs. Dunham saw the boy and found that he was not her son, although she declared that the resemblance was striking.

Nature Colors Its Products.

History and science tell of colored rainfalls which have fallen in different parts of the world, and some people have doubted the claim. It is a fact, however, that sometimes bright red rain falls, although it is very uncommon. The color is due to the presence of most minute little scarlet organisms—animal life—which permeates the whole condensation. This fact shows how difficult it is to get pure drinking water, when even the clouds contain germs. Golden grain belt beers are the only drink that is absolutely sure to be germless. WAUKESHA BANKERS IN FATAL AUTO SMASH.

Batavia, N. Y., Aug. 21.—Orrin Smart, banker, of Waukesha, Wis., was fatally hurt in an automobile accident at Byron Center, near here, yesterday. John Shur, also a Waukesha banker, and his two sisters were less seriously injured. All are at the Batavia hospital. Smart's lungs are punctured by broken ribs and the surgeons say he will probably die from hemorrhages.

ALL COUNTY RECORDS IN FIRST CLASS ORDER.

The records in all the offices at the courthouse are in first-class shape. The books balance and the system and the work of the officials and the clerks are of the best. The state board of public examiners has just completed the work of inspecting all the books and this is their verdict. The work has taken about three weeks. The board consists of Col. C. E. Johnson of Mankato and J. O. Cedarberg of St. Paul. The report has not been put into writing as yet, but Mr. Johnson says that it will be completed in a few days. He stated last night that all records at the courthouse are in the best possible condition.

CLOSER WATCH FOR BURGLARS.

Following the reports of more than the usual number of holdups, burglaries and attempted burglaries the last month, extra precautions are being taken by the police. Two men are being held at headquarters to answer emergency calls, in addition to the regular detail, and plain clothes men have been detailed to work along lower Lake avenue and Michigan street. Two street car conductors have reported losses of money at the point of revolvers and there has been some talk of arming them.

REVENUE OFFICER IS FATALLY PUMMELED.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 21.—Lieut. Whittier, executive officer of the United States revenue cutter Androscoggin, died at the relief hospital Sunday from injuries received at the hands of thugs Saturday night. Lieut. Whittier, with another officer of his ship and two friends, was returning to his vessel from the theater when he was set upon and beaten while passing through North street. A small crowd gathered, but the assailants escaped.

The murderer adds one more t oseveral of like nature, which have occurred in the North end during the past seven years, the victims being in almost every case connected with some department of the navy. It is believed that slung shots or clubs were used in the assault.

Lieut. Whittier had a high reputation in the service for character and ability.

GOOD ROADS WILL RESULT

New Plan of Improvement Inaugurated By Mandan Automobile Club.

Farmers and Members of Auto Club Co-operating in the Work.

Mandan, N. D., Aug. 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Mandan Automobile club, recently organized, has launched a new plan of road improvement work that bids fair to become unusually popular and which will result in the best kind of road work on the highways leading out of this city. The plan is one in which competition plays an important part and forms the basis for what the club believes will result in a successful road campaign.

Seven roads have been designated on which the club will do work, and on each of these roads committees have been named to take charge. Then will come the competition for the best work, and as a result the work throughout the district that will be covered will be decidedly good.

Auto Owners With Farmers.

Evidences of co-operation between the automobile owners and the farmers in the matter of road work is found in the experience of W. A. Lanterman, a prominent Mandan man who had been assigned to a stretch of road south of the city. On his way out he pulled out all the stones that were in the road, and was surprised on returning back over the road to find that farmers along the way had gotten the spirit of the thing and had filled all the holes, leaving the road in good shape.

Some day this week will be set aside by the club for general road work, and on that day all the road committees will go out.

The manner in which the club membership has been divided for the road improvement campaign provides for fourteen members for Mandan to Flasher road with seven members each for the McBratney, Center, New Salem, Fort Lincoln, St. Anthony and the Northern Pacific main line road.

NORTH DAKOTA BARLEY BRINGS $1.10.

Devils Lake, N. D., Aug. 21.—The first thrashing in this section shows that the grain thus far is the finest ever brought into Devils Lake. The highest price ever paid for barley in North Dakota and probably the entire Northwest was received by George Locke today when he received $1.10 a bushel for what is termed a load of absolutely perfect grain. Despite the rains, the barley was bleached perfectly. It was purchased at the Baker elevator and will be shipped to Milwaukee for malting. The yields are showing up above the average.

HEAVY WINDSTORM ALONG BOUNDARY

Several Bottineau County, N. D., People Are Reported Killed.

Devils Lake, N. D., Aug. 21.—A terrific wind storm last night at 6 along the international boundary line blew houses down on the heads of their inmates and whipped crops in places into shreds, according to reports received here. A number of persons are reported killed at Antler, in Bottineau county. It is reported that two cyclones collided head-on at Sherwood. Heavy property loss is reported at Sherwood, Loraine, Mohall and Souris. At Souris one person was killed. The tail-end of one of the cyclones smote Winnipeg, across the border, doing some damage. Reports are that property in Saskatchewan and Manitoba suffered in varying degrees. A destructive hail storm was visited upon Perdu, Sask. Wind destroyed many farm buildings in the Elmore district of the same province. One person was seriously injured there. Two fatalities are reported at West Hope.

The extent of the damage cannot be known until today since the storm has put most of the telephone and telegraph wires out of business. The meager reports obtainable, however, indicate that the damage is in spots and not general.

It is reported that most of the physicians of Westhope, N. D., and other towns near Antler have been rushed to the relief of the storm victims at Antler.

Six-Year-Old Child Killed.

The tornado also struck the towns of Souris, Sherwood, Loraine and Mohall. The 6-year-old child of Elmer Carlson, living near Sherwood, was killed and several members of the family were injured.

Several persons were injured when the storm struck the home of James Kanz northeast of Sherwood.

The farm buildings of Ole Johnson were demolished and several farm hands were injured.

Members of the family of Ingemar Nelson, southeast of Sherwood, saved their lives by lying down in the wheat fields. The buildings and personal property were scattered.

Killed Near McClusky.

McClusky, N. D., Aug. 21.—Olaf Lee is dead and his wife and baby are in a critical condition with little hope of their recovery as the result of a storm almost of cyclonic proportions which visited this section Saturday. Lee was found 300 feet from his wrecked home with his skull fractured and suffering from other injuries. He lived but a few hours. Mrs. Lee and the baby were caught in the wreckage of their residence.

Crop Loss Near Harvey.

Harvey, N. D., Aug. 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—Practically a total crop loss was meted out to several farmers in this district by a storm which struck a few miles north of the city. Outside of the hardest storm area farmers suffered partial losses of crops by reason of the beating ice storm.

Among the principal losers are Lucas Held, Stephen Held, Casper Thomas, Carl Beckler, Joseph Miller, Anton Candl, C. J. Nytrint, K. Berg, V. Wiest, Anton P. and Peter Wentz and Paul Beck.

Hail Storm Losses.

Towner, N. D., Aug. 21.—In two hail storms which traversed portions of this section farmers suffered heavy crop losses. The first storm covered a strip about three miles wide along the river bottoms north of here and the other covered a stretch just south of the first district, being more damaging than the first also. German farmers on the Copperdahl hill were heavy losers in one of the storms.

RICH TERRITORY WILL BE TAPPED

Great Northern Line From Stanley to Wild Rose, N. D., Being Pushed.

Stanley, N. D., Aug. 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—Territory that is abundant in natural resources and rich in prospects for a bright future will be tapped by the extension of the Great Northern railroad that is being constructed from Stanley to Wild Rose, Williams county, and which will later be extended clear across Williams county into Montana. This will make the eleventh of the remarkable system of feeders maintained by the Great Northern in North Dakota, and it will be placed in operation this fall, acording to present indications.

Recently C. H. Hickman, engineer in charge of the construction work on the new branch, said the grade had been constructed as far as Wild Rose, a distance of fifty-two miles from Stanley. The grading was done last year, the extension being abandoned by the company when the crop failure occurred. Resumption of activities this year followed a favorable report on the project made by J. H. Griffin of Grand Forks, division freight agent, who made a trip over the proposed line for the purpose of determining the question of whether there would be sufficient business this fall to warrant the laying of the road.

Track Laying Pushed.

Track laying is being pushed at a rapid rate, and the construction gang has reached the town of Lunds Valley, eighteen miles distant from Stanley. The track laying work at the several stations is somewhat slower on account of the laying of sidetracks.

Just where the Great Northern anticipates the construction of this line after it passes Wild Rose is uncertain. It will either be carrired in a westerly direction, almost parallel to the main line, or it will be carried in a northwesterly direction to the Canadian boundary just about at the boundary between North Dakota and Montana. Recent activities of the surveyors of a Canadian railroad may have some bearing upon the local extension, as they were working in the territory that may be entered by the Stanley extension.

RIB SAVES BOY'S LIFE.

Deflects Bullet That Would Have Killed Him.

Thief River Falls, Minn., Aug. 21. (Special to The Herald.)—Two sons of A. G. Holmgren of this city went hunting near town and, on leaving their buggy, accidentally discharged the .22-caliber rifle which they carried. The bullet entered the breast of the older, 14 years old. He at once got into the rig and returned to town, visiting a doctor's office. He was not excited over his experience and suggested to the doctor that he find the bullet. It was discovered that it had struck a rib and had followed it around his body, thus preventing its going through his heart. Had it struck him a little lower it would surely have penetrated the heart. After being treated he walked home and appears none the worse for his narrow escape.

GOVERNOR DEPLORES PRESIDENT TAFT'S VETO.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 21.—Governor Eberhart would have preferred to see President Taft sign the wool bill instead of vetoing it. The governor is of the opinon that the veto will hurt Mr. Taft's chances in Minnesota unless the tariff commission can report before the next election and prove that the schedule should be reduced even more.

"It seems to me that it would have been better for the president to have signed the wool will," said the governor. "The people of the Northwest want revision downward and are entitled to it. If the tariff commission can make a report before the next election and the tariff is again revised on a scientific basis the present veto will have no effect."

KILLED NEAR WARREN.

Riley Kezar Crushed to Death By Hornless Bull.

Warren, Minn., Aug. 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—Saturday occurred the funeral of Riley Kezar, who was killed by an angry bull at the Dan Wolfe farm, north of town Thursday. Kezar went into the cattle shed to let out the bull tied there. When he had untied it he stepped around into the next stall and expected the bull to pass out through the door. Instead the beast lowered his head and rushed at Kezar, who was taken unawares, and had only time to give utterance to a startled cry before the bull was upon him. His son, Albert, who was in the adjoining barn, hurried to the scene with a pitchfork, but the bull had then already left the shed and Kezar was lying mortally wounded on the floor. The bull having been dehorned had not hooked him, but had crushed him against the wall. He died a short time latter. He was 70 years old and had been a resident of Warren and vicinity for thirty years. He leaves a widow and six children.

CARLTON PIONEER DIES.

David J. Smith Falls Victim to Bright's Disease.

Carlton, Minn., Aug. 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—Funeral services will be held at Odd Fellows hall here Tuesday at 1:30 p. m. for David J. Smith, one of the pioneers of Cloquet and Carlton, long engaged in the saloon business here and in Cloquet, who died Saturday night of Bright's disease. Rev. F. C. Coolbaugh of the Episcopalian church of Cloquet will officiate, and interment will be made in the Cloquet cemetery.

David J. Smith was born in Christiania, near Stockholm, Sweden, April 8, 1857, thus being 54 years of age. He came to this country at the age of 10 years, and lived at Taylor's Falls until 15 years old. He then moved to North Branch, where he lived for several years, and thence to Hinckley and later to Cloquet. He lived at Cloquet eighteen years, and then came to Carlton and lived here seven years. He was married to Miss Annie L. Johnson at Taylor's Falls on Oct. 13, 1884. The widow survives him. Six children had been born to them, two of whom are dead. The others are Mrs. George Winters of St. Paul, Jennie Smith of St. Paul, Mae Smith of Carlton, Minn., and Peter, aged about 12 years. Mrs. Winters and Jennie came up from St. Paul Saturday and were present at his death.

BERTHOLD DOCTOR HURT IN AUTOMOBILE COLLISION.

Berthold, N. D., Aug. 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—Dr. A. A. Husser of this city has two broken ribs and was seriously bruised from head to foot, while his automobile was entirely destroyed by fire as a result of running into a telegraph pole about a mile and a half from the city. Dr. Husser had to crawl out of the machine on his hands and knees after the accident and barely escaped with his life as the gasoline feed pipes sprung a leak and there was an explosion when he got only a few feet away.

Six-Foot Iowan Registers.

Minot, N. D., Aug. 21.—Cleus Huer of Everly, Iowa, is the tallest man to register at the opening of the Berthold Indian reservation. Huer is 6 feet 6 inches tall. Huer says that he is most favorably impressed with conditions in the Flickertail state.

MINNESOTA BRIEFS

Thief River Falls—The Anderson Land company which opened up for business here recently closed up their affairs and suddenly left for other points. The reclaiming of the wet lands under the great drainage projects northeast of the city has caused an influx of settlers to this section and real estate companies are taking advantage of the rush to do business.

Brainerd—Julius Reuter has returned from an extensive trip through Germany and in his travels he visited Berlin, Bremen, Havre, Hamburg, Ehrensfriedersdorf and various other places of interest.

Dilworth—The election for the choice of officers for the village of Dilworth will be held on Saturday, Sept. 2, at the Dilworth hotel. There will be elected on that day a treasurer, two constables, two justices of the peace, an assesor, and a village council consisting of a president, a clerk and three trustees.

Moorhead—President J. A. Aasgaard of Concordia college left Friday for De Forest, Wis., to finally close up his affairs at his old home preparatory to moving with his family to Moorhead. He will be at De Forest for about two weeks and will then return to Moorhead with his family.

Save the Babies.

INFANT MORTALITY is something frightful. We can hardly realize that of all the children born in civilized countries, twentytwo per cent., or nearly one-quarter, die before they reach one year; thirtyseven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five, and one-half before they are fifteen!

We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save a majority of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium, or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity they stupefy, retard circulation and lead to congestions, sickness, death. Castoria operates exactly the reverse, but you must see that it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. Castoria causes the blood to circulate properly, opens the pores of the skin and allays fever.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. A. F. Peeler, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria in many cases and have always found it an efficient and speedy remedy."

Dr. Frederick D. Rogers, of Chicago, Ill., says: I have found Fletcher's Castoria very useful in the treatment of children's complaints.

Dr. William C. Bloomer, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: In my practice I am glad to recommend your Castoria, knowing it is perfectly harmless and always satisfactory.

Dr. E. Down, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have prescribed your Castoria in my practice for many years with great satisfaction to myself and benefit to my patients."

Dr. Edward Parrish, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I have used your Castoria in my own household with good results, and have advised several patients to use it for its mild laxative effect and freedom from harm."

Dr. J. B. Elliott, of New York City, says: "Having during the past six years prescribed your Castoria for infantile stomach disorders, I most heartily commend its use. The formula contains nothing deleterious to the most delicate of children."

Dr. C. G. Sprague, of Omaha, Neb., says: "Your Castoria is an ideal medicine for children, and I frequently prescribe it. While I do not advocate the indiscriminate use of proprietary medicines, yet Castoria is an exception for conditions which arise in the care of children."

Dr. J. A. Parker, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Your Castoria holds the esteem of the medical profession in a manner held by no other proprietary preparation. It is a sure and reliable medicine for infants and children. In fact, it is the universal household remedy for infantile ailments."

Dr. H. F. Merrill, of Augusta, Me., says: "Castoria is one of the very finest and most remarkable remedies for infants and children. In my opinion your Castoria has saved thousands from an early grave. I can furnish hundreds of testimonials from this locality as to its efficiency and merits."

FATAL FALL OFF HIBBING BRIDGE

Hibbing, Minn., Aug. 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—John Savola, a miner living on Penobscot hill, died early yesterday morning at the police station from acute alcoholism. Earlier in the night he had presumably fallen from the Great Northern viaduct about half a mile west of here and adjacent to the Dale-Uno pit.

Savola was found lying across the railroad tracks by a switchman, who notified an Oliver policeman. The officer obtained a stretcher and the unconscious man, who had several cuts in his head, was taken to a local hospital. Here his wounds were dressed and they being pronounced not dangerous, he was locked up at the police station to sleep off his drunk.

In less than an hour after his arrival at the station Night Sergeant Sam Bowden, on going to his cell to ascertain how Savola was faring, found him dead.

The accident, coming as it did when excitement occasioned by the Buffalo-Susquehanna pit disaster ran high, caused all sorts of rumors.

The dead man was known to have started for his home early in the morning. He had been drinking heavily, and it is presumed that he fell from one end of the bridge nad rolled down the embankment onto the track.

Savola was married and leaves a wife and several children.

Killed at Longyear.

Pasquel Mariel, aged 18, married, employed at the Longyear mine stripping, was run over by a dump cart Saturday night, receiving injuries that proved fatal.

THREE LIVES ARE CLAIMED

Whole Crew and Steam Shovel Buried, Many Wild Reports Resulting.

Hibbing, Minn., Aug. 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—The sliding down of a huge bank of earth into the open pit of the Buffalo & Susquehanna stripping, work carried on by the Winston-Dear company at the mine, which is in town, just back of the ball park about 10:40 Saturday night, buried all but one of the shovel crew of eighteen, claiming three lives and badly injuring a third.

The dead:

PAUL BALTO, aged 28, married.

JOHN DONJONTICH, aged 20, married.

MATT RADOVICH, aged 30, single.

The most seriously injured was Peter Devandich, who has a broken leg, and was removed to the Rood hospital.

Several others sustained body bruises, but were able to return to their homes after being treated at the hospital. The shovel and engine were completely buried and are being dug out today.

Earth Slides Seventy Feet.

There were really two slides Saturday night, the earth and rocks slipping down about seventy feet upon the men working below. There was a third cave-in Sunday that did no worse damage than to more completely cover the shovel. The cave-in created general excitement at first as it was reported that seventeen men were crushed to death. Rescuing parties were soon at work extracting the men caught in the slide. A great crowd, estimated at 2,000, gathered on the bank of the pit and watched the proceedings. The police had hard work keeping the crowd back as it was feared another slide would result causing additional loss of life.

Spectator Is Arrested.

Louis Mallet, a jeweler when ordered back refused and is said to have called the officer names that resulted in his being arrested for interferring with an officer. He was arraigned in municipal court this morning and will have a hearing this afternoon.

The work of rescuing the men imprisoned under the earth of rocks proceeded all night until 2 a. m., yesterday by the light of lanterns the slide having destroyed the electric lighting wires, and there was great relief on all sides as man after man was dug out and was taken to the hospital. Doctors were also on hand and tried to bring back to life the three victims but they were too badly injured.

The first men out who were able to tell what had happened were the members of the shovel crew. Ed. Edwards, shovel runner, was unhurt and could have made his escape. He, however, was pulling out one of the laborers who had sought the shelter of the shovel when he himself was struck by a boulder and pinned to the ground by its weight. Gust Strovich, dump foreman, and Axel Palmer, craner, went to Edwards' assistance and in a short time all five were in a place of safety.

Officials on Hand.

General Manager N. C. Hanson for the Winton & Dear Stripping company who were doing the work for the Susquehanna company and Frank Dear, a member of the firm, were on the ground shortly after directing operacurred and remained directing operations until the work of rescue was complete, the dead bodies recovered and a roll call of the employes made to ascertain that no more were missing.

KENNEDY HELD FOR KILLING

Coroner's Jury Found He Beat James McDonald to Death.

Nashwauk, Minn., Aug. 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—Albert Kennedy, who is in jail at Grand Rapids, will have to answer for the death of James McDonald, who was beaten to death at Crooked Lake Thursday night, as the coroner's jury that looked into the killing found that McDonald came to his death through blows inflicted by Kennedy with a gun barrel.

The jury was composed of James Aiken, George A. Lindsay, W. A. Gordon, Charles Erickson, Oscar Johnstone and George Young.

The autopsy disclosed that almost every bone in his head was broken. Six ribs were broken, three of them being broken in two places. One had penetrated the liver and another one had been forced into the lungs.

Meant to "Get" Others.

The evidence further revealed that there was a third witness to the murder, John Arsenenu, a boy who drove out with Hayes and McGuire. He was in the shack during the entire time and while Hayes and McGuire were at the edge of the lake being watched by Kennedy with a gun, he says that Kennedy made the statement to him that he meant to "get" the other two.

He charges that during a spree with the deceased one that McDonald stole $9 from him.

"McDonald and I have had trouble before," said Kennedy, "and while he deserved to die a long time ago, I'm sorry I did it, for I suppose it will be me for a life sentence. You see, I have known McDonald for a long time and he often came out to my shack. We got drunk together many a time, and one time, while I was asleep, he took the keys out of my pocket and stole $9 ,that was in my trunk."

Pending Further Developments in Murder on Bois Fort Indian Reserve.

Virginia, Minn., Aug. 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—Tom Fisher, the mail carrier on the Bois Fort Indian reservation at Nett Lake, who is alleged to have beaten "Billy" Brown, a young half-breed, to death, is being detained in jail here pending further developments.

A coroner's jury that looked into the killing found that Brown was killed Aug. 8 by being beaten on the head with a blunt instrument by parties unknown. Meanwhile it was deemed advisable to hold Fisher.

Body Found in Ditch.

The murder occurred on a long stretch of corduroy road, at one side of which were evidences of a scuffle. Brown was found lying in a ditch, half submerged in water. In one spot were six 12-gauge shells, all loaded, a whisky bottle and a piece of a broken shotgun, which it is thought was the "blunt instrument" used. The rest of the gun, however, cannot be found.

It was plain that Brown's body was quite battered up, although it was much decayed also, the murder having occured so long ago. There was an ugly hole in the forehead, the top of the skull was bruised and one eye had been knocked out of its socket and hung down on to his cheek. The knife thrusts were several long, deep gashes on the back of the head, while the body was covered with smaller punctures.

About $17 were found in the clothes. The deputies are still out after more suspects, but there is little evidence against anybody else to date.

ELY EAGLES HAVE ENJOYABLE PICNIC.

Ely, Minn., Aug. 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—Yesterday the Eagles, Erie No. 541, held their eighth annual picnic at the park pavilion, which was a success. All day the people came, and in the evening especially, an unusually large crowd enjoyed themselves. The parade started from the lodge rooms at about 10 o'clock and proceeded to the pavilion.

The city band furnished the music, which added to the pleasure of the crowd, and in the afternoon played in the dance hall to a large crowd of young people who came to enjoy themselves. Besides the music, refreshments and lunches were served.

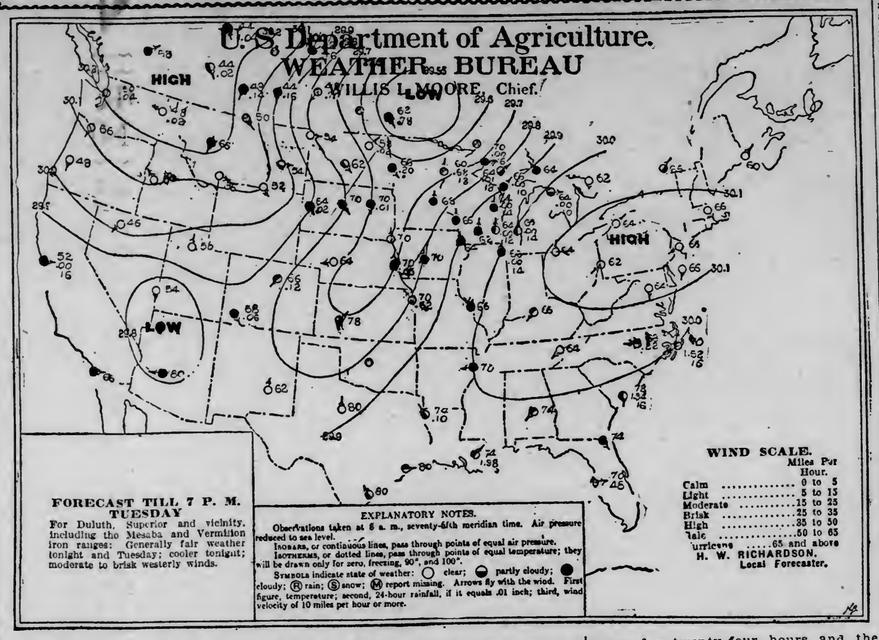
OFFICIAL MAP OF THE WEATHER



FAIR

With an official high temperature of 84 deg. and a temperature of about 90 deg. in the down town district, yesterday was one of those warm, sticky days on which one stays close to the shade in his own front yard. The air cooled late in the afternoon and the evening was beautiful. 'Twas some electrical storm we had this morning, and that hour's sleep that the timid lost while the lightning flashed and the thunder rolled is missed today. Fair weather is billed for tonight and tomorrow.

The sun rose this morning at 5:13 and it will set at 7:09 this evening, giving thirteen hours and fifty-six minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"The low pressure centered over Manitoba has caused light to heavy rains over Western Canada and the greater portion of Northwestern states during the last twenty-four to forty-eight hours. Showers also fell in the meantime over South Atlantic states, the lower Missouri and lower Mississippi valleys and Colorado. Somewhat cooler weather attends the high pressure condition that extends from Montana northward. This turn to cooler will reach the Head of the Lakes tonight. Occasional showers may occur in this locality today but no rain of consequence is expected during either tonight or Tuesday."

General Forecasts.

Chicago, Aug. 21. — Forecasts for twenty-four hours ending at 7 p. m. Tuesday.

Upper Michigan—Showers tonight or Tuesday; cooler tonight in west portion; cooler Tuesday.

Wisconsin—Showers this afternoon and tonight, with cooler in west portion; Tuesday general fair and cooler.

HOT WEATHER VAUDEVILLE

Orpheum Presents an Exceptional Bill of Summer Entertainment.

Belle Adair, the embodiment of the 1911 girl—that svelte, bewitching type, with almost a dress on—breezes along at the head of a stunning bill at the Orpheum this week, and canters under the wire at the finish, the hit of the show, although she is closely pressed by at least three other excellent acts.

Miss Belle is not the headlined feature this week, but she is the best of the English singing comediennes the Orpheum has yet presented, and a very refreshing feature of an ideal hot weather bill. She has the last word in striking looking costumes, and her bright, vivacious face and winning smile set them off to good advantage. She also knows how to sing a song, and she managed to capture probably the greatest amount of applause at last evening's performance. Personality is everything with a vaudeville performer, and Miss Adair bristles with personality. She is certainly good to look at and good to hear, and last night's audience was not slow about showing its appreciation.

Something new in the line of a musical act was attempted in "The Courtiers," the headlined attraction this week. The producer has provided a little story for the musicians to tell. It is something in the line of an abbreviated comic opera, with the exception that musical instruments are used in addition to the vocal numbers. It is the biggest and best musical act at the Orpheum has yet given here. The costumes are most elaborate; the stage setting very attractive, and the performers most versatile.

The comedy hit of the bill is provided by Howard and North, who present a sketch called "Back In Wellington." A New York bookmaker, who has made a fortune in the city, returns to his little home town to look up a sweetheart of his younger days. He finds her married to his former chum, who has remained behind in "Wellington," and has been the tortoise in life's race. Both the tortoise and his wife appear content, however, and the smart looking, well dressed city man leaves without instilling any discontent into the mind of either. It is a pretty little story well told, with plenty of comedy relieved by just the right touch of sentiment. The rube is played by Mr. Howard in a most capable manner. He gets away from the usual "rube" type, and is funny without burlesquing the part.

"The Little Stranger" is a rare little dramatic sketch. The scene is placed on a race track. An old time trainer plunges his last $5 on a long shot, hoping to secure enough money in this manner to provide comforts for "The Little Stranger" expected at his home. The name of the horse is also "The Little Stranger." It loses, but the old time trainer wins his bet, thanks to the kind offices of a chance acquaintance he forms at the track—the son of an old time employer. The sketch is full of real sentiment without being sentimental, and it is played by a most capable trio of actors. Paul Dullasi, a character actor of no mean reputation in "the legitimate" has the role of the broken down race track plunger, and handles it wonderfully well. A serious dramatic sketch rarely scores very heavily with a vaudeville audience, and it must have something out of the ordinary to recommend it in order to do so, but "The Little Stranger" was one of the real hits of yesterday's performances.

The Four Floods add just the required dash of the rough and tumble. The bill up to the last act is decidedly "classy," and the audience is ripe for just such a slapstick specialty as the Four Floods put on for a closing feature. It is acrobatic comedy of the most pronounced type, but not vulgar, and it is just the dash of spice needed to round off the bill.

Eddie Redway and Gertrude Lawrence of "Babes in Toyland" fame are back in Duluth, appearing on this week's bill in a unique and clever little song, dance and dialogue turn. They call it "lovealogue" whatever that is. The name probably comes from the manner in which the diminutive Eddie vocalizes his passion for the statuesque Miss Lawrence. They give a very entertaining fifteen minutes.

The opening act is Louise Stickney's Little Circus. The circus consists of a well trained dog, a pretty little Shetland pony, and a grotesquely costumed man who appears on stilts and does a unique dance. The dog and pony perform some clever tricks, and the act makes a very pleasing novelty for an opener.

The kinodrome and the concert orchestra complete a remarkably well balanced, entertaining bill, which will continue all week with a daily matinee.

ACT OF MYSTERY AT THE EMPRESS

Aris Act, as the Headliner, Pleases Three Large Sunday Audiences.

With two carloads of special scenery, twenty people and an act that for beauty and its mystifying features is the best presented at the Empress in some months the Aris Mysteria, the headline attraction of this week's excellent vaudeville bill, which opened yesterday and pleased three large audiences, is new, novel and entertaining.

The act is a turmoil of excitement and one sensation rapidly follows the other. It is a succession of rapid-fire scenes of much beauty and such an air of mystery surrounds the whole that the audience is left breathless from one scene to another. Before one can hardly realize the scene before him, another has been arranged and the whole act is over too soon to suit many.

There are beautiful girls arranged in poses which represent famous paintings and acts of mystery running through the whole which leaves the spectator confused as to just what he has seen. Everyone interested in old and famous paintings but who has never seen them should by all means see the Aris act at the Empress this week. It is an act that young and old can enjoy alike.

Leaving the feature act out entirely, the bill at the Empress this week is as strong as any presented at this popular theater in some time. From the selections of the orchestra down to the moving pictures which wind up the performance, the amusement provided is of the clean and wholesome sort that everybody enjoys.

The Cliff Bailey trio present an acrobatic knock-about act that for fun and difficult stunts performed in a humorous manner is the absolute limit. No attempt is made at the serious work although if some of the stunts were put on in this way, people would be more apt to realize how very difficult some of them are. They seem to be content to make fun. Their act is one of those happy, something doing every minute acts that pleases everybody.

Most performers insist that their names shall be printed on the program in large black type. There are two modest young women on the bill this week who contribute good entertainment and who are seemingly too modest to have their names used. Yesterday everybody was wondering who they were. They call themselves the "Singing Girls." They sing popular and classic songs—sing them well and their numbers were greatly enjoyed.

"A Business Proposal" is the title of a breezy little sketch well done by Irene Hobson and Charles De Land. The principals were late of the "Beauty Spot." The scene is laid in a Buffalo hotel. The sketch is fast moving and entertaining throughout.

"A Fight for Fame" is the musical number contributed by Quinn brothers and Rossner, three gifted young men, who have the faculty of amusing audiences with but little effort on their own part.

There will be three performances dally, one each afternoon and two each evening during the remainder of the week.

Lyceum Notes.

The Forbes Stock company will open an engagement this evening in "Charley's Aunt" the farce which was such a success last season. The only week day matinee this week will be on Wednesday. Performances will also be given Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, and Sunday afternoon and evening.

Joseph M. Gaites, the owner of "Bright Eyes" and "The Three Twins" sent the following telegram to Charles A. Marshall, owner of the Lyceum, regarding "Bright Eyes" which will open at the Lyceum Thursday evening:

"You can recommend 'Bright Eyes' with Lean and Holbrook to your patrons as it is one of, if not the best attractions playing your theater this season. New novelties have been added since the New York, Boston, and Chicago runs, and the whole original cast intact is coming. The performance goes with snap and sparkle from beginning to end. Return dates are being asked in every city this happy combination has played and it comes to you with my personal guarantee as one of my strongest attractions.'"

Will Test Lignite.

Hebron, N. D., Aug. 21.—(Special to the Herald.) — Tests for the purpose of determining accurately the cost of producing and placing on the market of lignite coal briquettes will be conducted at the North Dakota experimental station during the coming year and additional equipment is being secured by Prof. E. J. Babcock of the state university for that purpose. The tests that have been carried on so far have revelled that the briquettes can be manufactured successfully, but the question of actual cost has not been fully inquired into.

SURGEONS PROVE EASY

White Sox Take Second Game of Series By 5 to 1 Score.

Worman Holds Doctors to Five Hits—Sox Won Saturday.

Yesterday the White Sox met the Rochester Surgeons for the second game of the series, registering the second win of the series by the score of 5 to 1. Red Robert was on the mound for the locals and allowed but five hits, while eight blows were gathered from the benders of Hannifan.

In the very first round the Sox got to the slants of the opposing twirler, bringing four runs over the pan and sewing up the game right from the barrier.

In the first round McGraw and Olson singled. Leber doubled to the paling in left field, sending McGraw over. Miller went out, but Michael Angelo Kramer tripled to deep center and two more runs were over the plate. Nye booted the hit the Orator sent down to him and the fourth run of the inning was over the platter.

One more run was added in the third inning, though this run was not in the least needed.

The lonely run of the Surgeons came in the ninth frame. Nye walked and Brown singled and Roy came through with his third hit of the day, sending Nye across with the only Rochester score of the matinee.

Weather permitting the Surgeons will finish their stay in this city this afternoon, this being their last appearance here for the present season. La Crosse follows the doctors, while the Rochester bunch will journey over to Superior and are expected to help the Red Legs climb the percentage ladder.

Saturday the Rochester aggregation were beaten by the Sox in a free hitting game by a score of 7 to 5.

SUPERIOR JUMPS INTO THE LEAD

Superior climbed into the league leadership by defeating LaCrosse yesterday by the score of 3 to 2 while the Eau Claire team was winning from the Pirates. The game was played before one of the biggest crowds that ever witnessed a ball game in Superior.

Both Jensen and Rhodes were on the mound for the home team, Speiser and Brenton working for the Outcasts. The game was one in which brilliant fielding plays occurred, Bancroft making a spectacular one handed catch and Kernan pulling down a liner from Lippold's bat that looked like a double. LAFITTE BLOWS UP AND TIGERS LOSE AGAIN.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 21.—Lafitte walked three men in the seventh, filling the bases. Then Chase cracked out a two-bagger, sending two runners home and putting the visiting team in the lead. In the ninth inning Chase knocked another run, enabling New York to win 5 to 3. Remarkable base running by Cobb gave Detroit two runs. DOPE FAVORS SUPERIOR AS THE PENNANT WINNER

(BY BRUCE.)

Good morning, sir, have you picked a pennant winner in the Minny league?

Here we are on Aug. 21 and on Sept. 4 the league season will end. This bright and cheery morning finds Superior back in the lead for the flag, where Kid Taylor's gang is very liable to remain.

Here is the situation in one of those nut shell things. Superior has thirteen games at home, counting the contest of this afternoon, and but three abroad, the last three games of the season, which will be played over at Athletic park.

Winona has sixteen games on the schedule, not counting some postponed games that may be played. Of these games ten are abroad and the remaining six will be played on the Winona grounds.

With Superior at the present time actually playing better ball than the Pirates and thirteen games at home against the six the Pirates have in their own park, and taking into consideration the fact that Winona will be obliged to play both of the Head of the Lakes teams up in this country, it looks like a flag for the Red Legs.

If you have a minute to spare, hang up your hat and draw your chair up to the library table—we would have speech with thee.

Our Hated Rival.

Superior in the past has been our hated rival. The Minny league is now three seasons old. In the first season of the existence of the league the Superior team was a joke. It was out of the race all season and yet the fans and one newspaper over there stuck to the team and rooted all through the discouraging year of baseball.

Last summer the case was very different. Artie O'Dea had a team that looked like a winner most of the season. Injuries put the Red Legs out of the race when the chances for taking the lead and cutting out the running was the very best.

Now we come down to the present season. Winona has held the lead all of the season, right up to the past week. At times it looked as if the race was all over, so far were the Pirates in the lead. Superior kept coming, rallying after a slump in mid season and for the past month playing some of the best minor league ball that the fans of this circuit have ever had the privilege of watching.

The town across the bay has been a good baseball city. Last season it outdrew Duluth and it will probably do the same thing the present summer. The fans are enthusiastic and pull for their team all the time. A win is coming to Superior and those fans who have followed the team all season, are also plugging for the success of Taylor's crowd.

If there is a change in the Minny league next season, and it is high time there was a change, it is a cinch that Superior will be in whatever organization is formed. That much can't be said of Winona. For that reason alone it would be to the best interest of baseball at the Head of the Lakes to have Superior win the pennant the present season.

Right here is where we say au revoir to bush league baseball for this town. We want Superior in the movement that is going to give us better baseball than we have had in the past, and for that reason, if there were no others, it is to the best interest of the future of baseball here to have Superior bring home the bacon.

During all of the present season the Red Legs have played fast and snappy baseball. The team has been filled with pepper and that is really what makes the game interesting and draws the crowds to the ball park. Taylor's men have played an up hill game all through the race and have finally been rewarded by catching the leaders, right near the finish line.

The race to the end of the season is short. Will Superior be able to hold the lead? The Red Legs should not only hold the lead, but also increase it. They have all the better of the going from now until the closing game, and if Kid Taylor doesn't pilot his bunch home in the lead, there will be a lot of surprised fans in this section of the woods.

The Duluth White Sox have their work cut out during the remaining games of the season. One of these duties is to take three straight from the Pirates, when Uncle Joe Killian brings his team here, Aug. 25, 26 and 27 for its last appearance of the season.

We're with you, Superior. Go it and do your "durndest."

ROWING RACES WELL CONTESTED

Close Finishes Mark Saturday Contests at the Boat Club Regatta.

A large and interested crowd watched the second series of summer rowing races which were held at the Duluth Boat club last Saturday afternoon. The holding of the Northwestern international regatta in this city has evidently done much to stimulate interest in water races.

In the doubles Long John Quinn and Jimmy Ten Eyck, the coach rowing in the place of Flynn, had rather an easy time with Lathrop and Longton. The winning pair rowed a smooth and even stroke and held the lead from the start.

In the four-oared event Tronson, Longton, Thorburn and Quimby won from L'Estrange, Paddock, Slack and O'Donnell. The winning crew led from the start and had the race all the way down the mile course.

Bill Longton won from Liggett in the singles, the race being a pretty one all the way down.

In the eights the contest was close from the start, the winning eight nosing out by about four feet.

The two boats lined up as follows: Michaud, coxswain; Bronson, stroke; Grimm, 7; Mahan, 6; Quinby, 5; Puck, 4; Flynn, 3; L'Estrange, 2; Longton, bow; against this crew: McKenzie, coxswain; Thorburn, stroke; Paddock, 7; Kent, 6; Liggett, 5; Dougan, 4; Quimby, 3; Anderson, 2; Heimick, bow.

LAST SUNDAY FOR TROUT

Open Season for Speckled Beauties Will Close on Aug. 31.

Sportsmen Getting Ready for Opening of the Bird Season.

Next Sunday will be the last Sunday of the present trout fishing season, which closes the following Thursday, Aug. 31.

The summer has been a most successful one, from the viewpoint of the fishermen. The streams have been in excellent shape practically the entire season and many fine catches have been brought into the city.

Every Sunday has seen the trains going towards the ranges as well as west of the city, loaded with the disciples of Izaac Walton. Every stream within a radius of forty and fifty miles, which has a promise of containing the speckled beauties, has been visited by men and women who have sought them with bait or enticed them with artificial flies. Many parties living hundreds of miles away have come to Northern Minnesota in quest of the trout which abound in the north country.

The last few Sundays the trains have not been as packed as they were the first weeks, but all of them have been well filled. Yesterday the coaches of the Iron Range train carried close to their capacity, all seats being occupied and a few being compelled to stand for short distances. Early in the season the aisles were jammed.

The coming of the bird season is heralded by men on the trains running out of the city. They have their hunting dogs with them, and are brushing them up on their training and getting them in shape. Dozens of bred dogs were out in the woods yesterday, their masters generally dividing their time between them and the catching of enough trout to furnish a mess for breakfast.

The indications are that there will be plenty of birds this fall. Conditions have been favorable for all kinds of game, and men who have been outdoors considerably say that the birds will be as plentiful, if not more so, than they were last fall, which was one of the best seasons in years. The stricter enforcement of the game laws is partially responsible for this, as well as the weather.

Besides giving their dogs a run and sizing up the bird situation, some sportsmen were also looking over the country for signs of deer, already planning for the fall hunt. Most of them also carried fish poles. It is stated that the deer have had as good a season as the other kinds of game, and it is expected that many will be killed within comparatively short distance of Duluth. The partridge season opens Oct. 1 and the deer and moose season starts Nov. 10.

BIG DULUTHS WIN CLOSE GAME

Jeffersons Lose by 2 to 1 Score—Games in Duluth-Superior League.

The Big Duluth team of the Duluth-Superior league was the winner of one of the best games of the year yesterday, when that aggregation was on the top side of a 2 to 1 score the contest being with the Jefferson team. Both Knox and Wiggins pitched giltedged ball and there were but four clouts during the entire game, two for each side. The hits by the Big Duluth players came at a time when they meant runs, however.

BILLY PAPKE,

Who Is Training at Bath Beach.

Billy Papke, who is now training at Bath Beach, N. Y., for his match with Sailor Burke, denies that he said he can't make 158 ringside, the American middleweight limit. Billy says that he would not have taken on Burke if he had not understood that the Sailor has improved a lot since their last meeting. After he beats Burke he expects to take on the winner of the Klause-Thompson meet.

SAMPSON AFTER FINNISH LION

Karl Lehto May Also Return and Challenge Giant Wrestler.

Locally the appearance of the Finnish Lion, Pilakoff, has already done much to stimulate the interest in the wrestling that lies ahead. From here at home and from far off Finland, there comes the growl of future contestants.

Already Ole Sampson has issued a challenge to the Finnish Lion. "Huh, I throw him like that," and here Pilakoff makes a motion like bending a baby gently but firmly over his knee. Lehto and Tuomisto, the men claiming the championship of Finland, and who was defeated by Lehto this summer, may also challenge the strong man.

There is an intimation that Karl Lehto may be home this winter and will seek a match with Pilakoff. As to Sampson, Pilakoff will insist that the match be wrestled for the entire purse to go to the winner, and as to the others, the Finnish Lion says he is ready to meet any man in the world.

In Europe he met Lurich and won after a great match. When the giant shows his record of victories, he asks what he has to fear from a man like Sampson, good as Sampson may be.

Negotiations are on at the present time for a meeting in Duluth between Charles Cutler, the former Bemidji boy, the same man who defeated Henry Ordemann last winter and made a wonderful showing against Hackenschmidt, and Pilakoff.

This will probably be the first of the big matches held at the Lyceum this season. The Cutler match will, probably come some time next month, and will be the first to introduce some of the great stars of the mat. It is expected that Cutler will be followed by Zbyszko, Ordemann, Hackenschmidt Westergaard and Gotch.

TENNIS STARS OF NATION MEET

Over 200 Entries in National Tennis Tournament at New York.

Newport R. I., Aug. 21.—More than 200 of this country's best or most ambitious tennis players start today in an elimination tournament for the honor of challenging William A. Larned, a six-times champion and present holder of the national honors.

The entry list is the largest assembled since the first title was won by Richard D. Pears of Boston, thirty-one years ago. There are few names in the long roll of club, sectional, state and divisional champions that are missing in the list. H. W. Slocum of New York, Beales C. Wright of Boston and William J. Clothier have entered to try to regain the national title which they won in 1888, 1905 and 1906, respectively. It will probably require ten days to reduce this long list of players to the semi-final stage.

LEGG AN EASY WINNER IN OMAHA TOURNEY.

Omaha, Neb., Aug. 21.—Harry Legg, Minikahda club, Minneapolis, Saturday won for the third time the championship of the Trans-Mississippi Golf association, when he beat Ralph Ryder, Hyperion Country club, Des Moines, 11 up and 10 to go. The match closed what probably was the greatest tournament in the history of the association so far as high quality golf was concerned.

Saturday's championship match, which closed the tournament, was a disappointment to the followers of Ralph Ryder, the brilliant young Des Moines player, but all admitted that his opponent played superior golf.

It was a hard uphill fight for Ryder all the way. The mighty drives, fine approaches and excellent putting of the Minikahda club man were too much for him all the time. Legg never faltered and was never careless. Twice he missed what looked like easy puts, but in reality were hard ones, because of the undulating surface of the green over which the stroke was made.

ZANESVILLE OUTFIELDER SOLD TO BROOKLYN.

Zanesville, Ohio, Aug. 21.—Outfielder "Red" Farrell, of the Zanesville club has been sold to the Brooklyn club of the National league for $1,200, according to an announcement here yesterday. He joins the club at the close of this season. Farrell's batting average is .308. He was purchased several seasons ago by the New York Americans from Marion, Ohio, but turned back for seasoning.

FAST BOATS TO COMPETE

Race for Edwin Ross Thomas Trophy Scheduled for Next Month.

Famous Dixie IV and Hoosier Boy Listed Among the Starters.

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 21.—A motor boat meet which will bring together the fastest racing boats in the United States and Canada and is expected to be the biggest power boat contest ever held in this country will take place on the Niagara river opposite Motor Island under the auspices of the Motor Boat club of Buffalo on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Sept. 14, 15 and 16. The big race will be for the $2,500 Edwin Ross Thomas trophy, which will carry the International Interlake championship with it. The club will leave nothing undone to make this meet a hummer which should not be a difficult matter since the regatta will determine the American supremacy.

The directors of the Motor Boat club who met at the club house on Motor Island last night to prepare for this big event, were enthusiastic over the big event and from letters received from owners of the world famous racers the event which is being planned should touch a high mark in boat racing. The committee in charge of the affair has arranged Sept. 14, 15 and 16 to suit the convenience of the power boat owners. It is now planned to hold one big race each afternoon of the meet, in which there will be a large field of contestants.

The first race will be for the Great Lakes championship or better known as the Thomas race for the international interlake championship. The next race will be for the championship of the United States and will be a free-for-all, while the last will be a race for speeders of the 32-foot class or under. All boats entered in any of the races will have to show better than twenty-five miles per hour to be eligible.

The Chamber of Commerce and Manufacturer's Club of Buffalo has donated a beautiful trophy for one of the events and a number of other costly trophies will also be donated by Buffalonians. Harry Kelley, fleet captain of the Motor Boat club, has charge of the arrangements and entry blanks will be forwarded to owners of high power craft. It is the intention of the committee to bring together at this meet the speeders of the West and those of the East and to fight out the championship on neutral waters. This meeting is expected to surpass that of the gold cup challenge race which was contested on the St. Lawrence last week and the big regattas which were held in July at Peoria and Dubuque.

Among the boats that are almost certain to come to Buffalo in September are: Dixie IV., owned by Frederick Burnham of New York; Red Top II., owned by Commodore Hughey of Dubuque, Iowa; Kittie Hawk II., owned by Lee Counselman of Detroit, Mich.; Reliance, owned by J. J. Ryan of Algonac, Mich.; Eph 9th, owned by Carl Fischer of Indianapolis, Ind.; Zipp II., owned by Thomas Hutchinson of Woodbury, N. J.; Disturber II., owned by James A. Pugh of Philadelphia, Pa.; Mit, owned by J. H. Hayden of New York; Hoosier Boy, owned by J. W. Whitlock of Rising Sun, Ind.; Wasp, owned by J. M. Tousey of Clayton, N. Y.; Furlong, owned by J. Harris of Newark, N. J., and Pee Vee Hoo, owned by P. U. Hoy of Trenton, N. Y.; Skezicks, owned by A. Morris of Pen Yann, N. Y. The local craft La Truda II., owned by Harry T. Vars; Courier II., owned by W. J. Connors; U. U. II., owned by Theodore and Ward Wickwire, while the North Tonawanda speeders will be the H. S. III., owned by E. O. Spillman and the Dolphin II., owned by Eugene de Kleist.

Christies Win.

The Christie Lithograph and Printing company baseball team took the J. J. Le Tourneau printers into camp, yesterday morning at the Thirty-second avenue west grounds by the score of 7 to 3. The Le Tourneaus claimed that they would show the Christies how to play ball, but failed to accomplish such a feat. The game was very exciting from start to finish. Forgziak did the slab duty for the Christies and ptiched fine ball, only allowing four hits. Hon did the receiving. For the Le Tourneaus, Johnson, Mueller and Baker were the battery.

CITY WILL BE ADVERTISED

Trade Excursionists Sure to Be Recognized Along the Line.

Banners, Pennants, Badges, Booklets and Band Are Provided.

The wholesalers' committee of the Commercial club at its meeting at noon today made final arrangements for the trade excursion, which will start from the Soo depot at 8 o'clock tomorrow morning for a three days' trip over the Soo line.

The special train, which will be furnished for the excursionists by the railroad company, will be decked with banners lettered so that he who runs, or he who stands while the train runs, may read that the Duluth jobbers and manufacturers are making friendly calls to the towns in Duluth's natural trade territory.

So that the people in the towns where stops are scheduled may know who their visitors are, the Duluth men will wear badges and will be plentifully supplied with Duluth pennants. Special literature descriptive of Duluth and its advantages as a market for the Soo line towns has been prepared and the Duluth travelers will flood the Soo line territory with the booklets.

What the Duluth visitors do not do in advertising by a display for the vision of those they visit, they will supply by having the Third Regiment band, which will reach the sense of hearing by pleasing melody. At each stop, the band will play—on the station platform, where the time is short, and on the streets of the town where time enough is allowed. People who will not have heard of the proposed visit of the Duluth men will soon be apprised of their presence when the train arrives.

Duluth jobbers and manufacturers are enthusiastic over the excursion. They believe that Duluth is inaugurating a policy that will be of great benefit to the city. Duluth is going to cultivate the friendship of its neighbors and strengthen trade ties that are already formed. A trade excursion each year will be an evidence to the towns visited that Duluth is interested in them as towns and interested in holding their trade.

The territory to be visited on the excursion this week is new territory. The Soo line has opened up a region that is destined to support scores of prosperous towns. The country is natural trade territory for Duluth, but trade does not always flow in natural channels, and the Duluth jobbers and manufacturers are anxious that it do so in this case. They will seek to clear the channels this week and establish relations that will endure when the towns grow out of their present infant proportions.

Duluth Horseshoers Charter Steamer and Will Go After Trout.

The Horseshoers' union of the city has planned a rather unique outing. Instead of the regular picnic, common to the summer months, the entire organization is going on a fishing trip. They have chartered the Mayflower for next Saturday and Sunday and will spend their time seeking the wily speckled trout. They will leave Saturday for Encampment river, which is recognized as a first class stream by disciples of Izaac Walton. It is expected that about fifty members of the union will make the trip.

ONE CHILD'S CASE IS SETTLED; ANOTHER IS COMMENCED

BOTH WANT CHILDREN

Former Mrs. George E. Budd Has Petition in District Court.

Two Harbors People Are Having Legal Battle for Children's Custody.

The evidence bearing on the petition of Mrs. Alexander H. Montgomery of Peewaukee, Wis., formerly Mrs. George E. Budd of Two Harbors, who seeks to obtain the custody of her two minor children, Manola, 11 years old and Myrle, 9, from her former husband, Dr. George E. Budd, was heard by Judge William A. Cant in district court this morning.

Dr. Budd is fighting the case for he, too, wants the custody of the children. They were in court this morning. They are bright looking children and in spite of their tender years they listened attentively to the evidence presented.

Mrs. Budd was on the stand the greater part of the morning. By the terms of the divorce which was granted in November, 1909, the husband and father was to have the children during the school year and the mother during their vacation periods. They are at present in her charge. Dr. Budd was given the divorce on grounds of simple desertion.

Mrs. Budd was at the time fulfilling an engagement as an actress. She played, according to her evidence, with a road company which was touring the country. At that time she admits that she had no proper abode in which to properly care for the children, but now that she is married and has a home, she claims to be financially able to care for them.

She claims that the father does not properly care for the children and states that when she took charge of them some months ago she had to buy them entirely new outfits of clothing.

Judge Hughes granted the divorce about two years ago. Mrs. Budd gives her age as 34. They were married during the month of January, 1900.

She stated on the stand that while Dr. Budd is financially able to care for the children that he does not attend strictly to minor details and that the attention that they get from him is not of the best.

She says that while living with Dr. Budd she was not properly supported and that in order to provide for herself and children she had to teach elocution at a local school of music and undertake the putting on of entertainments for various institutions.

Dr. Budd claims that he is able to care for the children and that he is willing to do so. His side of the case has not been heard as yet. It is probable that he will take the stand and tell his side of the story tomorrow morning.

DECIDES FOR BERGTOLDS

Judge Ensign Refuses to Have Home of Bertha Neal Changed.

Fight for Adoption of Child Ends With Decision of Judge.

Judge J. D. Ensign of the district court has decided that to change the home of little Bertha Neal would be to do the child an injustice. He has decided that for the best interests and happiness of the child the Bergtold home is the place for her. The decision was handed down and filed with the clerk of the district court this morning.

Two families were fighting for the custody of the child. Both George W. Bergtold and Samuel A. Johnson wanted the child and both had filed petitions in the district court for her.

After hearing the evidence in the case which was tried before him some weeks ago, Judge Ensign decided that the Bergtold home is the place for her.

The case was begun in the probate court and carried to the district court. The Bergtolds took the child from the Bethel home when she was in a very serious state of health and gradually nursed her back to health and strength. Judge Ensign decided that for the care and because the home influences are of the best, she should remain there.

In his findings Judge Ensign calls attention to the case as one of the most peculiar that he has ever handled. Both families are of the best. All are christian people and both homes are suitable for the child.

Both families have the greatest regard for the other, and nothing but the most pleasant relations exist. Their only point of difference was that both wanted the little child, Bess Neal.

The Johnsons are the next of kin, but the Bergtolds have had the care of the child for a number of months.

The judge states that the child is legally alone, and that no one has more right to her than another.

The memorandum written by the judge is most kindly toward both families and toward the little child who was the unfortunate victim of the dispute.

He states that both families are good and that the child would receive the best of care at either. It is his opinion, however, in view of the care and attention she has received at the Bergtold home that it would be unwise to separate her from the people who have come to love her by close association with her.

SORRY SHE WAS CAUGHT

Girl Who Attempted to End Life at Bethel Home Regrets Failure.

Says Nobody Cares for Her and She Doesn't Want to Live.

"Nobody cares for me," said Alice Burnell, when asked why she had tried to end her life at the Bethel home Saturday night, "and I didn't think it any use to live."

The girl is but 17 years of age and doesn't seem to feel that she was doing anything wrong when she attempted to commit suicide. She has been confined in the woman's department at the city jail since Saturday night. When asked about herself this morning, she smiled and talked freely. She has been at the Bethel home since she was taken into custody several months ago. The authorities think that she is slightly demented, and it is probable that she will be taken before the probate court for an examination as to her sanity.

The girl said that she got the chloroform with which she tried to kill herself out of the medicine chest at the home. "I was a fool because I got caught," she said. "I swallowed three or four spoonfuls of it. I should have waited until late at night when nobody was looking."

She said that she has a brother living in Duluth, but that he doesn't care for her any more than anybody else. She would not tell where her folks reside.

MANY CASES TO BE TRIED

September Criminal Calendar Will Be the Heaviest in Years.

Two White Slave Cases Will Be On for Trial.

The criminal calendar for the September term of the district court will bo unusually heavy, according to information at the county attorney's office where the calendar is now being made ready for the opening of the term.

There will be at least forty cases for the consideration of the grand jury when that body meets on the first Wednesday in September.

But few of the prisoners are held for the more serious crimes. The charges include grand larceny, attempted robbery, burglary, simple assault, the selling of liquor without a license, the keeping of disorderly houses and other offenses.

There are two white slave cases on the calendar. One of them is against Robert Levine, who is accused of taking money from Theresa Ray, who is said to be an immoral woman.

The calendar will be the heaviest in some time. This is due to the fact that there has not been a criminal calendar since the May term of court.

At the last session of the legislature a number of terms were taken from the yearly work of the district court. The long interval between May and September has allowed the cases to accumulate until the next term will be the heaviest in some time. As a general rule the cases average about twenty each term.

FARGO'S POSTAL BANK.

Announcement of Another in North Dakota Surprising.

Fargo, N. D., Aug. 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—Fargo has three national banks, two state, three savings, two trust companies and two building and loan associations and this morning was designated as the location for a postal savings bank. There had been ten established in the state, the first being at Wahpeton last March. One was open two months before receiving a deposit. It had been generally understood that neither Fargo nor Grand Forks were to have postal banks for some months and today's announcement came somewhat as a surprise.

MARINE

BOATS WILL HOLD GRAIN

Many Freighters Now in Ordinary to Be Used for Storage.

Nearly All Vessels Will Go Into Commission in Next Few Weeks.

Nearly all of the twenty-five freighters now in ordinary in Duluth will be put into service before the season ends, it is reported, although some will not make more than one trip. It is said by grain men that most of the boats will be chartered for grain storage.

Business on the lakes has been so quiet this summer that many vessels have been tied up. But now the grain season is about to open, and it means the shipment of many millions of bushels to the lower lakes. Every year the elevators at lower ports are filled and the boats are used for storage.

The elevators will be filled to their capacity at Chicago, Buffalo and other ports, and, as is usual, they will be unloaded during the winter months. With the grain stored in the boats, which will be tied up at the docks of the elevators, it can be removed as wanted.

The boats in the Duluth harbor will be inspected by the local United States vessel inspectors before leaving the harbor.

At the present time there is very little grain in the elevators at the Head of the Lakes.

SAYS PACT WILL BE RATIFIED

Northern Navigation Company Official Believes Reciprocity Will Be Adopted.

"Reciprocity will be adopted by the Canadian government, I am sure, for the sentiment in its favor is strong in the western part of the dominion, while in the East, with a few places excepted, it is about evenly divided," said H. H. Gildersleeve, manager of the Northern Navigation company, which operates the steamers Hamonic and Huronic, between Duluth and Sarnia, Ont.

Mr. Gildersleeve, was in Duluth, Saturday and left for Sarnia, on the Hamonic. He has been touring the western part of Canada, and has familiarized himself with the conditions there and the attitude of the people on the question before the two nations.

"Our people are not afraid of you over here," he continued. "In the States there are many Canadians, and the relations between the two nations are most congenial."

Mr. Gildersleeve stated that there is considerable rivalry between Port Arthur and Collingwood, for the construction of the new 500-foot passenger boat which the company is planning for service next year. The boat will be the largest passenger vessel on the Great Lakes, and will be fitted out in the most up-to-date manner. She will be of solid steel, with the finest interior finish, mostly mahogany. The passenger capacity for first-class list will be 600, while the second-class accommodations will take care of 200 more.

The shipbuilding concerns of Port Arthur and Collingwood are anxious for the business, but it is intimated that the job will go to the Collingwood plant because many of the stockholders of the Northern Navigation company are also stockholders in the shipbuilding concern of Collingwood, while the plant at Port Arthur is a branch of the American Shipbuilding company.

Mr. Gildersleeve reports that the business in both the passenger and the freight lines, has been excellent this year, and the increase has been so heavy and the prospects for even greater business in the next two years, that the need of another boat has been felt.

LIKE "OLD TIMES" IN DULUTH-SUPERIOR HARBOR

For the twenty-four hours ending at noon today the port of Duluth has been a scene of activity almost rivaling the days of old. During this time there were forty-six entries and thirty-eight departures. Of the departures there were twenty-six vessels loaded with iron ore for the lower ports, carrying about 180,000 tons, there were three passenger vessels and four mercantile boats. Of the arrivals, nineteen carried coal, four merchandise, eighteen were light for ore and three light for lumber.

ARMSTRONG IS CHAMPION

Defeats John Adams, Former Champion, in Three Straight Sets.

Winner Easily Disposes of His Old-Time Rival and Partner.

Joe Armstrong won the state tennis championship Saturday afternoon by taking three straight sets from John Adams, former state champion, each set being won by a score of 6 to 2.

In former contests there has been little to choose between the two players. Victories between the pair have alternated with regularity. For that reason those who observed the play last Saturday are of the opinion that Adams was off form. This is not said to detract in any way from the victory of Armstrong; but merely as an explanation of the easy victory of the winner.

In every phase of the game the former champion was outplayed. Armstrong played the best tennis he showed during the entire week, and it will be remembered that this means better tennis than he showed in disposing of Dinwiddie and Wheeler, matches that brought out some of the best playing that it has been the fortune of Duluth enthusiasts to witness.

The fine playing of Armstrong far surpassed any of the other exhibitions he gave in Duluth of accurate and clever placing. Time and time he placed Adams' drives within a few inches of the side lines, making returns that the champion found it practically impossible to play on.

Also the net play of Armstrong excelled that of any previous exhibition he had given here and was clearly above the net play of Adams. The former champion found it hard to pass Armstrong, while many of the returns of the challenger got by Adams for points.

Many times during the contest Armstrong would draw Adams to the net and would then play a beautiful drive to the lines, scoring many points in this manner.

In telling of the winning of Armstrong it is only necessary to say that he excelled in every department of the game; that his back court play was superior to that of Adams, and that his drives were more accurate. Adams seemed erratic at times, many of his returns going wild.

Colton of Duluth was defeated in the finals of the consolation by Fred Weinhagen of St. Paul. The latter player is a mere "kid," and is playing his first tournament. The St. Paul player won in two straight sets, 6-4; 6-4.

In the consolation doubles Davis and Gardner will meet the winner of the Amundson - Colton - Graff - Dickerman match. The fact that all of the players left in the final play for first place are from this city, made it unnecessary to play the finals last Saturday.

HACKETT WILL ROW DURNAN FOR $1,000.

"Eddie" Durnan of Toronto and Jack Hackett of Rainy River will be opponents in a sculling race to be held at Rainy River on Sept. 9.

The distance will be three miles and the stakes will be for $1,000 a side.

W. C. Lucy of the Riverview hotel, Rainy River is backing Hackett.

There is a good deal of interest in the race as Hackett was at one time champion of America at this game and Durnan is also a well known sculler.

EVELYN D. WINS HANDICAP RACE.

The Evelyn D owned by S. W. Richardson won the handicap motor boat event at the Boat club Saturday. The various boats entered in the race were started on handicaps based on the time the boats had made during the season. The Nance, Frank Wade's boat, captured the second prize.

The Spike, owned by R. B. O'Dell, won the scratch race, C. E. Brown's Spitfire coming in second. Harry Coney's Edward C took third prize. Dr. D. H. Day was judge and George Burns the timer.

TURN DOWN OFFER OF $1,000 FOR BANCROFT.

Superior, Wis., Aug. 21.—President W. J. Sommer and Manager Taylor of the Superior club of the Minnesota-Wisconsin league team, deny that Shortstop Dave Bancroft has been sold to the Cleveland Americans. Cleveland is understood to have bid $1,000 for the league's star infielder, but Bancroft may be sold to another big league club along with Cy Dahlgren, pitcher; Biddy Dolan, first baseman, and Clarence Lippold, third baseman, an offer having been made for the four men. The deal has not been closed.

FIGHTERS MEET WHILE SHERIFF IS AWAY.

Davenport, Iowa, Aug. 21.—Harry Trendall of St. Louis and Ernie Rander of Chicago fought ten rounds to a draw on a barge on the Iowa side of the Mississippi river Sunday afternoon. Sheriff Bruner's deputies of Rock Island county, Ill., followed the barge in a motorboat to see that the fight was not fought in his jurisdiction. Sheriff Eckhardt of Davenport was out of the city.

Wright Wins First.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 21.—One of the first matches to be completed in the national tennis tournament here was that between Beals C. Wright of Boston, a former champion, and J. G. Alexander of New York, Wright winning in straight sets.

The summary all-comers tournament first round (begun):

McLoughlin beat Nettleton, 6-2, 6-4, 6-3; Wright beat Alexander, 6-0, 6-1, 6-0; Waldner beat Hobbs, 6-1, 6-0, 6-2; Ames beat McLane, 6-0, 6-2, 6-2; Fall beat Noblitt, 6-2, 6-3, 6-4; Josephs beat Thomas, 6-3, 6-3, 6-3.

They pleaded not guilty in police court this morning and their trials were set for this afternoon.

Three Are Arrested.

Steele Report Not Ready.
The council meeting this evening promises to be rather short, with only routine business coming up for consideration. The report of the special committee which has been investigating the "paving scandal", will probably not be presented for at least two weeks. It will take some time for the court reporter to transcribe his notes, and before preparing its findings the committee will go over considerable of the testimony.

New Land Company.
I. Jenson is president of the Farmers' Home Land company, which has just been incorporated. E. Lindgren is vice president and treasurer. Offices have been opened in the Manhattan building. He claimed that he went into the cloak-room to sleep.

Teamster Arrested.
Adolph Olson was arrested Saturday afternoon on a charge of obstructing the street. It was claimed that he allowed sand to run onto the street from his wagon. He pleaded guilty in police court today and sentence was suspended.

COPPERS HOLD THEIR OWN WELL

General Tendency of Other Stocks Is Downward Affecting Coppers.

The copper market showed some losses today and trading was dull. This was true both at Duluth and in the Eastern markets. There was nothing wrong with the coppers themselves, but the news that kept coming from the stock exchange of New York was decidedly bearish. The coppers held up remarkably well under the circumstances. Many of the important stocks of the New York exchange fell heavily. Union Pacific was something of a leader in the downward tendency. The news of the Union Pacific laying off men had a bad effect on that stock and pulled down many others and the market in general.

There was one piece of news, however, that counteracted the prevailing bearish influences. That was the announcement of the settlement of the English strike. Were it not for that the declines might have been much more marked.

Butte Coalition lost 50 cents from the asking price at Saturday's close; Calumet & Arizona the same; Giroux, 12½ cents; Greene-Cananea, 67½ cents; North Butte, $1, and Amalgamated 25 cents.

On the Duluth exchange, the total number of shares that changed hands was 550. This is considered a dull day, though not so bad as general stock conditions might have made it.

* * *

Paine, Webber & Co., wired from New York: "The most important news of course, is the setlement of the English strike. We call the attention to the point that the railroads are to be permitted, under the present plan, to advance charges sufficiently to cover the advanced wages, etc.

"Quite different from the conditions in this country, where wages are already high, and yet when raised, instead of permitting corresponding increases in revenue, the interestate commerce commission not only refuses to sanction higher figures, but actually reduces rates in many cases.

"The moral effect at this time of the spectacle afforded by the settlement of the English strike may be beneficial here. If the public finds that higher wages must be paid by it, the clamor for corporation persecution may drop to a lower key. Attention is directed to the fact that congress will soon adjourn, probably in the next two or three days, and there may be a demonstration of bullish character to celebrate it. It is noteworthy that the Saturday reduction in the bank loans makes a total of $90,000,000 for the last few weeks, which certainly puts New York in a sound condition."

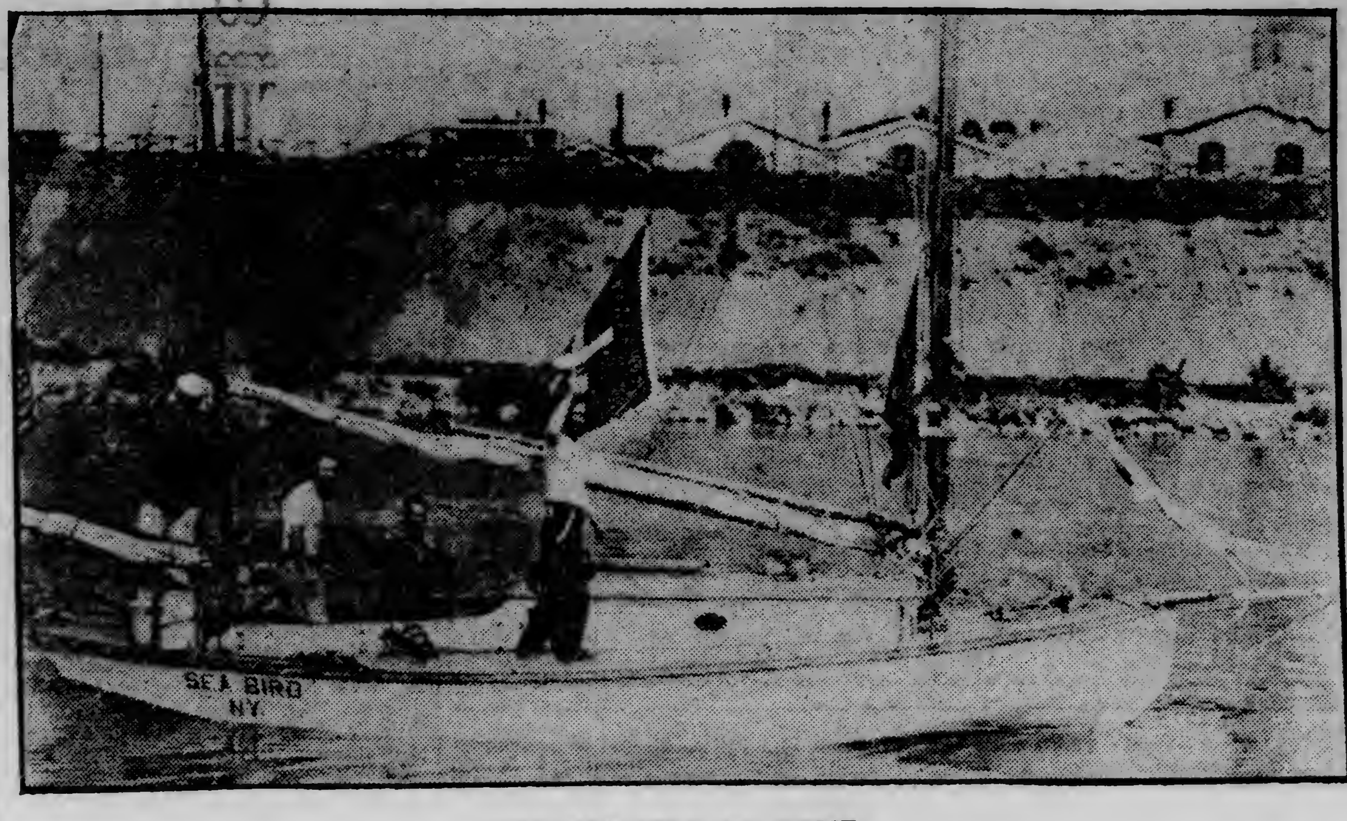
LITTLE CRAFT AND CREW THAT CROSSED ATLANTIC



THE SEA BIRD AT ROME.

When Thomas Day and his associates started across the ocean in the little Sea Bird, nobody doubted that they would get to their destination, which was the Roman capital. They crossed in safety and fulfilled their mission, when they presented to the king of Italy letters with which they had been charged. Their voyage was filled with danger from the beginning, but no very serious unlooked for incident occurred. The privations of the journey, however, were so great that they have arranged to ship the Sea Bird back to Providence and are coming back on a regular ocean liner.

BRINDLEY NO RECORD BREAKER

Beaten By Parmalee and Later Beachey Takes Honors.

Chicago, Aug. 21.—Official announcement of an error in the calculations of the Oscar A. Brindley baragraph reading has been made today and the height of his flight above sea level is placed at 5,768 feet instead of 11,726 feet, with which he was credited last week.

It was announced after the error was discovered that Philip O. Parmalee's flight, 10,800 feet above sea level, would stand as a new American record.

Later Lincoln Beachey, in a Curtis biplane, rose 11,578 feet. This is positively a world's record.

IS PAYING FOR WHITTIER TRIAL

Governor's Contingent Fund Drawn on for Wheelock's Lawyer.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—Governor Eberhart has paid to E. P. Sanborn, attorney for Ralph W. Wheelock, complainant in the Ring Wing investigation, $375 for expenses and services, out of the governor's contingent fund. One voucher for $75 was audited by State Auditor Iverson Aug. 4. This read "expenses Whittier trial." The other voucher came from Governor Eberhart's office Aug. 9 and it read "services Whittier trial, $300."

There have been about fourteen hearings since July 6, for which Mr. Sanborn has received a remuneration at the rate of a trifle more than $21 a hearing. Governor Eberhart's contingent fund is $5,000 and is given by the legislature for his use as a state official.

The question which has been raised is, whether the use of this fund for paying the attorney of his private secretary in an action to which the governor is not directly a party, is legal. Mr. Iverson, in auditing the vouchers, each of which bore the O. K. of the governor, said today there might be a question as to the legality of the expenditure, but that it has always been the custom of the auditor's office to audit without question vouchers of the chief executive drawn on this fund.

GOVERNOR OFFERS $250 REWARD FOR MURDERER.

NATIONAL LAUNDRYMEN MEETING AT ST. PAUL.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—The convention of the Laundry Men's National association began here today. A precedent of twenty-eight years may be broken if supporters of the present administration are successful in re-electing the national officers. Since the organization of the association it has been the custom to retire the national officers after one year of service. But a campaign of publicity formulated by the present administration, and just begun, is the reason for wishing to continue it in office.

To meet the expense of greater publicity it is planned to raise the assessment upon each member from the present $3 a year to sums varying between $3 and $25, according to the size of the laundry operated.

AUTOMOBILE PARTIES FROM TWIN CITIES.

There were an unusually large number of automobilists in the city yesterday, many people from the Twin Cities making the run up here. At the McKay hotel alone was a party of ten people, including George O. Hart, George Nesbit, G. G. Fageros, Robert Utter and J. Robb, all of Minneapolis. Some of them were accompanied by their wives.

At the Lenox, Holland, St. Louis and Spalding there were also some tourists who made the trip up in machines. Yesterday brought about the biggest crowd of automobilists of any single day of the present season.

No steps have been taken in reference to the Cobden State bank. The depositors there will be paid in full and it is believed a reorganization will be effected.

A FIT OF THE BLUES.

Youth's Companion: There are certain individuals who seem to take pride in the fact that they are the slaves of their moods, especially of their dark ones. They will tell you with a resignation that touches complacency that they are subject to "black fits" or "the blues" or "days of melancholia,, or whatever may be the pet phrase for their deplorable lapses from the normal. Such people never seem to realize that these moods are only another outward and visible sign of an inward disgrace and that unhealthy minds are rarely found in healthy bodies.

It is a hard saying, but the "blues" may generally be traced to one or both of two horrible qualities—greed and laziness. Nine times out of ten the low spirited person is suffering from autotoxication—from too much food taken into the body and too little attention paid to elimination or to proper exercise.

The human mechanism can take care of only a certain amount of food. After that point has been passed it seems to turn sullen in its efforts to ignore what it cannot help, and although it is a wonderfully conducted chemical laboratory up to the limits of its own needs it is not at all amiable about working overtime. The result is that all superfluous products sent to it are permitted to lie around and become poisonous. This poison is promptly taken up by the blood and carried to all parts of the body, including the brain. The brain, which needs a plentiful supply of clean blood to enable it to do thinking, is naturally indignant at finding poor and impure blood supplied to it, and although not actually going on strike it refuses to be either pleasant or reasonable.

You who read this are perhaps 19 or 20 and under the impression that the condition described is an inseparatable part of the "artistic temperament;" that it is "Bryonic" or "poetical," and that a mind capable of making its owner so uncomfortable must be a great mind. You are in error. When there is a riot in the palace even the king upon his throne is made miserable. If you are the victim of recurring fits of depression rest assured that you are sacrificing the greater to the lesser, and the reason for your trouble is to be traced to some mismanagement of the daily regime. It is possible that you must conquer your pet weakness—and for some of us even a pound of candy can harbor a thousand "blue devils."

HEDGEHOGS AS HUNTERS.

The Scotsman: When the rabbits in a burrow in my locality have come out to feed in the evening lately they have shown a nervousness and uneasiness quite unusual among that peaceful colony, and a continuance of this unrest raised my curiosity. The rabbits' attitude did not suggest that their alarm was caused by a weasel in their vicinity, and failing all else, I suspected the presence of some poacher's lying up ferret.

Ultimately I discovered that a hedgehog was the cause of the trouble. I first observed it as a small speck in the dim light moving a good distance away, and as it approached I saw that it was coming in a straight line for the burrow. Without hesitation it entered one of the holes, and then several rabbits emerged, looking frightened and bewildered, while not long after I heard a muffled rabbit scream which told me that "prickles" had drawn blood. The sound came from what was apparently a shallow cul-de-sac, and, marking the spot, I took a spade next day and dug into the hole. There I found the remains of a mutilated half-grown rabbit, and, continuing digging, I came across what had evidently been a nest of young ones.

One has only to keep hedgehogs in captivity to know how fond they are of flesh, food and eggs, and there is no doubt that they take a fairly heavy toll from the nests of ground building birds. I have had tame chickens killed by hedgehogs, and one evening last summer a hedgehog caught a frog on my garden path and killed it. The faith in hedgehogs hitherto entertained by a friend who was with me went out like a snuffed candle.

Frogs, I am inclined to think, are rather a bonne bouche in hedgehog menu, as when a friend of mine introduced some into a marshy pond on his place, he had numbers of them killed by hedgehogs, and immediately the hedgehogs were destroyed the frog murders ceased. Leverets, too, seem to be as great a dainty to the hedgehog palate as the hare is to the fox's.

The people your property would appeal to are, almost surely, readers of Herald real estate advertising.

MOROCCAN SHEIK IS AFTER AEROPLANES

SHEIK HASSAN BEN ALI.

Sheik Hassan Ben Ali arrived in New York on the steamship Olympic. He is here to buy aerophanes to take back to Morocco for the use of his people. He was met on the pier by Curtis, Moissant, Wright and other aviators. The former sultan of Morocco was deposed by his people because he wanted to introduce into Morocco automobiles, gramaphones and other modern inventions, which the Moroccans resented. Perhaps another revolution will be started when Sheik Hassan Ben Ali takes back with him some flying machines.

WHEAT BULLS IN CONTROL

Reports Favor a Bulge of the Market and It Comes.

September Wheat Gains More Than a Cent and a Half.

Duluth Board of Trade, Aug. 21.—This was another decidedly bullish day. The result was due to weather reports, which indicated that the elements were decidedly in favor of a rising market. The weather reports from all over the Northwest and from many parts of Canada caused much anxiety for the wheat and other crops, and fear prevailed that the Canadian yield would be disappointing. The effect was apparent on the local board as soon as the trading commenced. Wheat opened strong and shorts immediately took alarm and took every opportunity to cover. Other grains followed more or less in sympathy. Corn and rye, however, lost a little from Saturday's closing prices before the session was over.

Reports of heavy rains in many parts of the Northwest, and unfavorable weather in Canada, caused the wheat market to open very strong, and though there were some fluctuations, the general tendency was steadily upward. September opened at ⅞c over the close of last Saturday, but this was but a feeble indication of what was to come. Before noon the bulge had gone to 2 cents. Shorts were very nervous through the morning session and took every chance to cover.

For many days wheat dealers have been looking forward with keen solicitude to the outcome of Canadian crop conditions. Indications of today caused the bears to lose heart, for it is feared that the warm, dry, sunny weather, which is needed for the harvesting, will not decline in the price of wheat.

A factor that had a great deal to do with the bulge in wheat on the Duluth board this morning was the lowness of the stocks of grain in the Duluth elevators. This was plainly shown by today's weekly bulletin. All the wheat in the elevators was shown to be only 192,321 bu., or 94,594 bu. less than a week ago. A year ago today the total amount of wheat in the Duluth elevators was 1,860,303 bu. or nearly ten times as much as today. All the wheat that these elevators contain now could be shipped anway in one good-sized lake boat.

Broomhall wired from Liverpool: "Wheat market opened with a steady undertone although values were ⅛c lower to ¼c higher. The firmer American cables on Saturday were offset here by the heavy American shipments and especially liberal American shipments to Liverpool. Following the opening the market became extremely nervous and advanced ⅛c to ⅝c with the principal covering in October. This buying was stimulated by private bullish cables from America. Later a decline occurred with profit taking and the advance was lost. Selling was prompted by heavier world's shipments than expected; better reports from Russia and a settlement of the railroad strike here. There was, however, a very small inquiry for forward shipments. At 1:30 p. m. the market was nervous and ⅜c to ½c off from the highest of the morning and unchanged to ⅛c higher than Saturday.

"Corn—The market opened unchanged and later declined ¼c to ⅜c notwithstanding the light world's shipments there was heavy American shipments to Liverpool and European offers were liberal. There was a quiet demand."

CHICAGO MARKET.

Outside Firmness Influences Wheat at the Opening.

Chicago, Aug. 21.—Outside firmness influenced the local wheat market at the opening today. December opened ¼c lower to ⅛c higher, at 94¾c to 95⅛c and on professional buying advanced to 95⅝c. September advanced to 91c early, but soon sold off to 90⅝c.

The close was firm with December ⅝c over Saturday at 95⅝c. In view of the sharp upturn at Minneapolis, the comparatively small gain here was a matter of comment.

The corn market was weakened by increased offerings following recent rains, by the fact that Kansas City is selling September 4c under Chicago, and reports that St. Louis traders are trying to resell Illinois corn. December opened a shade higher to ⅛c lower, at 62⅛c to 61⅞@62c, and dropped early to 61½c. September dropped ⅝@¾c, on early sales, to 64c.

The close was easy December ¼@⅜c down at 64¼@64⅜c.

Oats were quiet but firm on light offering and scattered buying of September, which is now practically on a cash basis. December opened unchanged at 44¾c, and advanced to 44⅞c.

Provisions opened firm with lard leading. January pork started 2½c up, at $16.60; October lard, 5c higher, at $9.25 to $9.27½; and October ribs, 15@17½c improved, at $9.25.

MINNEAPOLIS MARKET.

Wheat Prices Advance on Light Offerings and Some Support.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 21.—Moderate support and light offerings caused wheat prices to advance. Light thrashing returns and unfavorable weather for harvesting in the Northwest favored bulls. Minneapolis was relatively stronger than outside markets. September closed 2c higher than Saturday; December 1⅜@1⅞ higher and May 1⅜@1½ higher. Local elevator stocks of wheat decreased 125,000 bu. for two days. Minneapolis today received 330 cars of wheat against 654; Duluth 13 against 47 and Winnipeg 75 against 77. September opened $1.02½ @$1.03, high $1.04⅜, low $1.02½, closed $1.04⅛. December opened $1.03½@$1.04⅜, high $1.05¼@⅜, low $1.03½, closed $105. Cotton Market.

New York, Aug. 21.—The cotton market opened firm at an advance of 4 points on August and of 10@13 points on later months in response to higher cables, reports that English labor troubles had been practically settled, and the failure of the weather map to show any further rains in the Southwest Sunday. Business was quite active at the advance with scattering shorts and the leading bull brokers buying, while there was considerable selling from Southern sources, supposedly against the new crop movement. Prospects for cooler weather in the Southwest encouraged some local pressure and after new crop positions had shown a net gain of about 14@15 points, fluctuations were irregular.

Spot closed quiet, middling uplands, $12.50; middling gulf, $12.75. No sales.

The cotton exchange will be closed Sept. 2, the Saturday preceding Labor day.

Futures closed steady. Closing bids: August, 12.29; September, 11.31; October, 11.27; November, 11.27; December, 11.36; January, 11.31; March, 11.39; May, 11.48; July, 11.49.

Stock Prices Show Some Disposition to Become Harder.

Liquidation Drives Union Pacific Back to Low Point.

New York, Aug. 21.—Prices at the opening of the stock market reflected a degree of heaviness, all of the leaders recording declines. Reading was off 1¼, Union Pacific ¾, United States Steel, Atchison and Southern Pacific ⅝, with substantial recessions elsewhere. The few gains in the initial trading were among the less important issues.

Further recessions were made directly after the opening with weakness most prominent in the Harriman issues, which were doubtless affected by announcement of proposed drastic retrenchment of the Union Pacific-Southern Pacific system. Union Pacific fell 3 points, Lehigh Valley, 2¾, Reading, 2½ with numerous other declines between 1 and 2 points. United States steel which fell almost two points was under heavy selling pressure. Trading was not extremely active but bore the marks of further liquidation.

Foreign advices received this morning intimated that the British labor troubles had taken a turn for the worse, and this, together with reported uneasiness at continental points over the Moroccan deadlock, provoked selling for European account. Aside from the policy of curtailment to which the railroads and other corporations seemed to be committed, home news had little market influence. Trading slackened but the list manifested a further reactionary tendency, Union Pacific declining 3½ points from which it later made slight recovery. Bonds were steady.

The market closed heavy. Prices showed some disposition to harden in the last hour, but not until Union Pacific had been again driven to its previous low price of the day. The ground regained probably resulted in part from short covering. An abrupt decline of over 9 points in Texas company was almost the one feature of the final dealings.

FIRST AID TO POOR FIGURES.

New York Sun: "Lessons in figure building are worth all they cost and more," said a woman whose figure seemed to be all that it ought to be. "I used to have a poor figure, but now no one could accuse me of lack of symmetry. I lay it all to my lessons in figure building.

"You can't have a big waist this year. Even though you wear an Empire gown with a belt line that has started for your armpits, you must still have a little round waist. And your shoulders have got to be right; for the sleeves are queer. Then the kimono line is trying to the woman whose shoulders are not of the same height, and it is surprising how many of us err in that direction.

"When I put on my first new gown of the season I surveyed myself in the hand mirror and tried not to burst into tears. The gown was made to measure, but it was contrived by a dress artist who knew nothing about physical culture; and the result was that it fitted my figure—and here was where the trouble lay; my figure was poor.

"I went to a figure builder, one of those persons who take you and give you lessons in first aid for bad shape, and I explained my trouble. She surveyed me.

"'It's your shoulders,' she said. 'They're too sloping for the kimono sleeves.'

"She illustrated her point by slipping something into my sleeves to build them out on the shoulders and give them the right lines, full and almost square, the very lines one must have for these sloping waists.

"'If your shoulders are what you call drooping, though I call them round, you must build them out with cotton pads,' she said.

"'But the pads will show,' I cried, 'for many of my waists have sleeves through whose texture the shoulders can be seen.'

"'Not if you cover the pads with chiffon,' she declared.

"She produced two shoulder pads shaped to fit the top of the shoulder and tied them on with ribbon fastened under the arms. Each pad was covered with chiffon of flesh color.

"'But surely these pads will show,' said I, 'and I shall look stuffed like a manikin.'

"'Don't you believe it,' she declared 'They will not show, and if they do the effect will be that of a charming skin.

"I tried them and found that they worked out as the physical culturist said. Several persons congratulated me on my handsome figure and more than one told me that I carried myself so well that it was a pleausre to look at me.

"Chiffon covered pads are doing wonders for women these days. You make your pad and put it where it is needed; you try it on and work with it until it is right in size and shape, and then you cover it with chiffon. Hollow-backed women find that the pads work capitally. They can be put between shoulder blades, and if not too big and not too plump they will fill out the lack of flesh.

"There are other articles for those whose figures are not just right. Some of them approach the domain of the complexion and the skin specialist. Now, I'm not opposed to skin specialists, but I say that if a woman wants to be her own skin specialist she can do a great deal for herself.

"While visiting my physical culture teacher, who, by the way, calls herself a figure builder, I asked her what I could do for my neck, which is not as plump as it should be.

"'Eat all one thing and meanwhile fill in your hollows,' was the reply.

"By the advice to 'eat all one thing,' she referred to the neck cures practiced in England.

"'Eat all one thing at luncheon or at any one meal a day and your neck will grow plump,' she said, 'but the rest of your body will stay slim.'

"The all one thing food recommended in London is the salad food. It can be made with anything green, perferably a mixture, but it must all be green. Over it is spread a mayonnaise dressing, and with nothing else, unless one likes a cracker for the teeth, one makes a meal. This fattens and whitens the neck, but does not build up the figure.

"'But are there not quicker ways?' I asked, for at the best one cannot do much with a diet unless one waits a few weeks for it to work.

"'Oh, dear, yes,' said she. 'There's something that takes only a few minutes and does no end of good. That is the paraffine treatment, not the old paraffine method, but the new. By it the paraffine is used on the outside instead of under the skin. You fill up the hollows with paraffine and you put plenty of powder over it and finally the yoke of pale pink chiffon.'

"'And then?'

"'Why, then, you slip on your lace waist, or your waist of any thin stuff; and, if your neck shows at all, it is merely to display its own very charming color.'

"I asked this figure builder and form moulder what else she did for the figure of the season.

"'Women have reduced their weight,' she said, until the arms and legs are merely skin and bone; and now we figure builders are reaping a harvest in giving an appearance of plumpness. We pad the tops of shoes, a necessary trick in view of the short skirts. We pad the shoulders to make them broader for the kimono sleeve and arm; and we also do back shaping, whether the back is too round, too narrow or too hollow. There is a remedy for everything.

"'We supply arm pads to be tied on when the sleeves are long. These are, necessarily, very delicate, being little more than half a dozen layers of flesh colored chiffon, but they do their work.'

"She also told me about the new idea of flesh building by suggestion. The woman who is of a nice figure but is thin in spots can make those spots look plump by using a certain amount of suggestion upon them. Thus yellow is always a plumping color. The woman whose throat is skinny will make it appear skinnier if she puts on any of the slimming tones, but if she clasps something yellow around her neck she will make the throat look fatter.

"If your neck is poor don't wear your hair high; few women look well with the hair on top of the head, although it is the universal style. It exposes the poorest part of the figure, the back of the neck, and makes a woman look old before her time.

"Dress your hair low, the figure builders tell you, if you want to make your neck look nice. But they add that few women will take the time, or the trouble, to do the hair full and fluffy, low and soft, at the back of the neck. It is easier for them to pull it up to the crown and to twist it into a knot up there out of the way.

"If your figure has a bad spot, don't put a bow on the spot to hide it. The woman with a bad neck should not wear a sash to bring out the evil more conspicuously. Bad places should be dressed with a plainness that is almost brutal in its severity; that is the only way to conceal the trouble."

HIS TONIC.

Chicago News: "It's easy to see, ma'am," said the man with the ancient plug hat, "that you are all run down. Your eyes are dull and heavy and your skin resembles old parchment. I have no doubt that you have ringing noises in your ears and distress after eating and all those symptoms which indicate a deranged condition of the digestive apparatus. No doubt you are completely discouraged after having tried a dozen advertised remedies without relief. But there is still hope, madam. There is a balm in Gilead. Fifty cents will buy a bottle of Dr. Jamwinder's pokeberry tonic—"

"Now, you get away with your pokeberry tonic," cried Mrs. Curfew, indignantly. "I'd rather die of ringing noises after eating than spend a cent with a man who has the impudence to tell a strange lady that her complexion is like old parchment. I don't see what the world is coming to when the mother of a family can't step to her own door without being insulted by such a figure of a man as you. The idea of making a tonic out of pokeberries is too ridiculous, and when you see your Dr. Windjammer you can tell him I said so.

"If you want to sell your pokeberry medicine you should go into the country and see Mr. Sparks. After you go six miles east anybody will tell you where his house is. He's a substantial farmer and has plenty of money to spend with agents, and he'll be sure to give you a warm welcome. Two or three weeks ago Mr. Sparks was a very sick man, having all the symptoms you spoke of and some others. He had to go to bed, he was feeling so poorly, and my daughter, who boards there while teaching school, says that his groans kept everybody awake night after night. Mrs. Sparks wanted to send for the doctor, but he wouldn't hear of it. He has a great prejudice against doctors.

"Finally, she was so worried that she telephoned to a neighbor. Mr. Smallbox, and asked his advice. Mr. Smallbox said he had the very remedy that would put Mr. Sparks on his feet. He had bought it of an agent, and I have no doubt that the agent wore a disreputable plug hat like yours. So Mr. Smallbox hurried over to the Sparks residence, and on the way he met two or three farmers and took them along, and so in a little while there were four or five men in Mr. Sparks' bedroom, watching his contortions, with tears in their eyes. Then some of them held Mr. Sparks down while Mr. Smallbox gave him a generous dose of the medicine, which, if my memory serves me, was made of pokeberries.

"Mr. Sparks lay quite still for two or three minutes after taking the dose and they thought it had given him instant relief and he would drop off into a soothing slumber and be all right in the morning. Mr. Smallbox was just telling, in an undertone, about the wonderful qualities of that medicine, which was made of buds and leaves and barks, when Mr. Sparks gave a heartrending cry and sprang out of bed like a steel spring.

"My daughter says the scene that followed beggared description. Poor Mr. Sparks seemed to be out of his head entirely. He picked up a chair and assaulted his guests like a madman. Mr. Smallbox jumped through the window and landed on the lawn, and then the watchdog attacked him, no doubt thinking he was a burglar, and he was bitten in a dozen places. He sat in a flower bed and cried as though his heart would break. The visitors were all so crippled up that they had to be hauled home in a wagon.

"Next morning Mr. Sparks was very feeble, but in his right mind, and he couldn't remember anything that happened the night before, but that didn't save him, for all those men have brought suit against him and he may have to mortgage his farm before he is done. So you see that he's the man to buy your pokeberry bitters, and you'd better call on him."
